Sabicas Potted – Almost

The most amazing thing about Sunday's performance by Sabicas in Memorial Hall was not his breathtaking mastery of the guitar, althought it in itself was amazing.

Nor was it the fact that the audience roared for three encores and three curtain calls.

It was the upside - down cement flower pot he used for a foot rest.

Trustees Put Speaker Rules In Hands Of Administration

Rules Tested By Invitation To Speakers

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

Paul Dickson, student body president, said yesterday afternoon that he is re- inviting Communist Herbert Aptheker and Frank Wilkinson, chairman of the committee to abolish HUAC, to speak here.

Dickson said, "If we can get the situtation, — if one of them is denied the right to speak here, we will certainly take it to court."

Dickson, who is also chairman of the Committee For Free Inquiry, called a meeting of CFI for tonight at 7:30 in Howell Hall.

According to Dickson, the purpose of the meeting is to discuss the decision of the board of trustees and what actions should be taken.

The invitations are being extended jointly by Dickson, as president of the student body, by the Carolina Forum and by Students for a Democratic Society.

Shortly after returning from the Raleigh meeting Dickson said the invitations would be sent out late last night or early this morning.

Wilkinson, who speaks tonight at Duke, will be invited to speak here tomorrow. Aptheker is being invited to speak Wednesday, March 9.

Chancellor J. Caryle Sitterson said he had no comment as to whether he would accept or reject the speakers since he has not yet been formally notified.

Dickson said he expected the trustees' decision. "I was most disappointed. I think the trustees have compromised freedom, but under the circumstances, I feel it was the best we could expect."

Sitterson said he was gratified that the board of trustees adopted the procedures and regulations recommended by the Executive Committee.

"I realize there are differences in opinion over this and we respect those differences," Sitterson said.

"Under the circumstances," Sitterson said, "I feel this was the best decision possible."

Gary Waller, vice chairman of Students for a Democratic Society, said he was upset that the trustees had diluted academic freedom and had not taken a firm stand for the first amendment.

"Regardless of what the present administration will do with it, any future administration can supress free speech under the existing rules.

"I think Gov. Moore's statement yesterday that free speech had not been interfered with was sheer nonsence," Waller said.

The newly elected chairman of SDS, Stu Matthews, said the decision was unacceptable.

"It doesn't matter whether it's the legislature, the board of trustees or the administration which is exercising prior restraint as far as speaker regulations go for a particular group of people. It is still censorship," Matthews said.

Panel To View Board Decision

Consolidated University President William C. Friday will be one of several panelists today who will disucss the topic "Implication and Outlook— The University of North Carolina After the Trustees' Decision."

The discussion will be in the UNC Law School Courtroom beginning at 3:15 p.m.

Other panelists will include George Watts Hill, member of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees; Dr. Corydon Spruill, chairman of the faculty committee of the University; Frank R. Strong, law professor and former dean of the College of Law at Ohio State University; and Henry Brandis, Kenan professor of law and former dean of the Law School here.

Demonstrators Meet Moore

By ANDY MYERS
DTH News Editor

When Gov. Dan K. Moore came to Chapel Hill Sunday for a dinner honoring Morehead Scholar candidates he was met by about 60 demonstrators at the Carolina Inn, mostly from the political science department.

Moore stepped from a black limousine, shaking hands and in good spirits. He accepted a petition, signed by most of those present, from William Fleming, political science instructor.

"I have nothing against them, but . . . I would like to see them use a little more restraint in the presentation of ideas."

Demonstrator placards read, "We Are Concerned," and "Free Speech Now." Two police officers attempted to remove the picketers from the entrance of the Inn, but another, a highway patrolman, convinced them the petitioners could stay. The orderly group broke up soon after Moore arrived.

Students Will Test Rules Immediately

By ERNIE McCRARY
DTH Editor

RALEIGH—The University of North Carolina board of trustees wrote another chapter in the speaker ban history book Monday when it accepted the administration-suggested rules governing on-campus speakers.

Student Government President Paul Dickson has called for an immediate test of the rules.

He said Frank Wilkinson, chairman of a national committee to abolish the House Committee on Un-American Activities, will be asked to speak here Mar. 2.

Communist Herbert Aptheker, head of the American Institute of Marxist Studies, will be re-invited to give a Mar. 9 speech.

Both were barred by the trustee executive committee Feb. 7.

The regulations adopted by the trustees give the UNC administration final authority in handling invitations and appearances of speakers who would have been covered by the old speaker ban law.

UNC President William C. Friday's reaction to the board's decision was, "They did just what we hoped they would."

Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson said, "We got through as well as could be expected."

Friday and Sitterson withheld comment on the new invitations to Aptheker and Wilkinson until they receive official requests to let them speak.

Invitation Sponsors

Dickson said the invitations, sponsored by the Carolina Forum, Student Government and Students for a Democratic Society, will be issued this morning.

Under the procedures approved by the trustees, the chancellor will submit information about the invited speaker to a joint student-faculty committee which will advise him about whether the speaker should be allowed to appear.

Dickson will recommend that Women's Residence Council Chairman Penny Scovil, Student Legislature Speaker Pro-Tem Hugh Blackwell and State Affairs Committee Chairman Bob Powell represent the Marines, CARE Collect Funds

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

A booth will be in Y Court tomorrow for the collection of contributions for the Marine Corps Civic Action Fund to be given to CARE to the aid of the people in South Viet Nam.

Morgan "Spike" Mitchell, a member of the Marine Corps Reserves said that the booth will be manned by campus leaders. Mitchell is a senior from Rye, N. Y.

Consolidated University President William C. Friday said yesterday he would give "full support to CARE and the Marine Corps Reserve in their joint effort to give aid to the Vietnamese people who have been displaced by the Viet Cong.

"This is a worthy effort that merits our full support," he said.

Governor Dan K. Moore issued a statement to urge all North Carolinians to render their support by contributing to the Marine Corps Reserve Civic Action Fund through CARE."

Mitchell said, "the money collected here at Carolina will go to CARE to buy goods needed by the people in Viet Nam in order to live. The Marines there will distribute these goods and help the people to build a better life.

Sonny Pepper, president of the MRC, and Brit Bordan, vice president of the student body, will be aiding in the collection of contributions at the Y Court booth.

"I have a brother over there and I feel like I have a personal obligation, Pepper said.

Student Centers Attempting To Fill Religious Vacuum

By PEYTIE FEARRINGTON
DTH Staff Writer

Chapel Hill is bristling with new religious student centers.

What goes on behind these expensive doors? Are these extravaganzas serving their purposes, and if so, what is it students find here?

To find the answers to these questions we tracked down the directors of the six major religious centers in town — Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Jewish and Episcopalian.

The overwhelming answer was yes, the students come. Harry Smith, Presbyterian campus pastor, said over 250 come to the films shown once a month. The Baptist Center finds 60 attending Friday night gatherings. These figures fluctuate with the day, but all the directors agreed students are coming.

Yet each hastens to add not enough students are being reached. What is the problem? Rabbi Rabinowitz sums up one major difficulty, "I am the only Hillel director for Duke, State, UN and Carolina. It is humanly impossible for one man to do it all.

Father Monk revealed his solution to this, "We have planned a chain system. There are some regulars around here who live in the dorms and fraternities and can encourage other Catholics to come over. I would go myself, but I've tried that.

"My collar alone stymies the situation."

Smith and Rabinowitz agree a student reaction against religion is a reaction against all authority.

Smith says, "One of the best ways to strike out against parents is to quit going to church or to flunk out of school.

Rabinowitz confirms this adding, "A move away from religion is part of growing up and asserting one's privilege to make independent decisions. Most people return after marriage and children—especially children.

Banks Godfrey of the Wesley Foundation had a bit different attitude, "We've just got to face it. There are not as many professing christians as there used to be, and it's a good thing. We cleared all the Church — that bunch who went to church every Sunday and endorsed segreation."

When asked about a general moral breakdown accompanied by apathy, there rang a unanimous "no."

Herbert N. Tucker, of th Episcopal Church, asserts, "Students are not as apathetic as they are puzzled. Too often the new morality turns out to be no morality. One student told me it was not the strictness of his parents that bothered him, but it was their vagueness. They had never made any demands on him."

Godfrey hit again when he said, "Carolina is neurotic. No one is setting the tone of life. There is a vacuum here with a phony idea of maturity. People talk to each other, but there is no real meaningful conver-

What Do You Think?

The Daily Kansan, student newspaper at Kansas University, carried this story last week:

"Housing regulations for women students will be changed beginning with the 1966 summer session, Provost James R. Surface announced today.

"Senior women or 21-year-old undergraduate women may elect to live in off-campus housing at KU, with the permission of their parents.

"Women may also elect to live in either University housing or University-approved housing. Presently all women are required to live in either of these two types of accommodations. The present approved list in the dean of women's office will accommodate only 55 women in 15 apartments.

"Surface approved the policy on the recommendation of the Student Personnel Council, which advocated the new rule last Friday . . .

"The vote of the Council to submit the recommendation to the chancellor came as a result of a questionnaire completed by all KU women and sponsored by the Status of Women Committee, Dean (of Women Emily Taylor said."

* * *

This story appeared in the Purdue University Exponent last week:

"A system of no hours for sophomore, junior and senior women, while retaining the present hours for freshmen, has beeen given approval by the Dean of Women's office . . .

"According to Helen Schleman, dean of women, upon final approval of the proposal by the (Associated Women Students) Judicial Board, efforts will be made to attempt a trial period of the new system later this semester.

"Although the Judicial Board must render its approval to the plan, this step is being viewed as more of a formality since little or no opposition is foreseen. Diane Smith, AWS Judicial Board chairman, believes 'this is the best hours system for all students.' Diane Todd, president of AWS, feels 'the Judicial Board will be very enthusiastic about the Dean's decision and I can discern no problems in receiving approval from AWS. . .'

"Dean Schleman expressed the hope that the proposal will be found to coincide with the student's best interests as well as their desires. 'I believe this plan comes very close to meeting the needs and wishes of students as they have expressed them over the past months. The Office of the Dean of Women believes that students would respond to such a system as this with a great sense of personal responsibility.' "

* * *

They have been scoffed at.

The Rules Committee of the Women's Residence Council is now holding weekly meetings to determine what changes, if any, ought to be made in housing and closing hour regulations for Chapel Hill coeds.

Thus far the committee members have turned down off-campus housing and no closing hours for seniors.

They rejected a 2 a.m. closing hour for weekends, but approved the extension of the weeknight closing from 11 to midnight.

Most students are apparently unaware of these proceedings, but the DTH thinks both male and female students are sufficiently concerned about the situation to want more open discussion of it.

Any opinions?

Muhammad Causes Trouble

Elijah Muhammad, the Black Muslim leader who convinced Cassius Clay to resist the draft, regularly broadcasts his message of hate and intolerance over television station WOOK in Washington, D. C.

Every Sunday afternoon, Washingtonians with UHF TV sets can watch Muhammad urge his race not to support the government and society of the "white devils."

He carefully avoids making statements which might get him arrested, but that doesn't matter; Negroes, who compose most of the Capital's population, can tell what he means. Like Clay, they know they are being told: Do not fight any wars "unless they are delcared by Allah." Like Clay, they realize that Muhammad is instructing them not to worry about the white man's society — supposedly because a black nation, to which they can flee from their slums, lies just around the corner; in other words, don't go to Viet Nam for LBJ.

Presumably, most of WOOK's listeners are loyal Americans willing to die in the Asian jungles. Most of them probably ignore the message of this black Ku Klux Klansman who is just as eager as Robert Shelton to segregate himself away from the Great Society.

Yet it is surprising that Muhammad's bigotry, so incompatible with a racially harmonious America, is allowed to travel over the public airways, especially when his diatribes are indirectly aimed against the war effort. And what about the ones he can influence—the Cassius Clays, for example?

The Black Muslims consider themselves a religious sect; and, as such, they would put up a stiff fight if told by the Federal Communications Commission that their teachings could not be broadcast by television because of being against the public interest. (The public interest is the standard by which the FCC judges the worth of TV programs.)

Undoubtedly they would point to the Bill of Rights' guarantees of freedom of speech and religion. Whether the group is a religious sect remains to be seen. But it quiet possible that the Black Muslims' case —at least the free speech part— would hold up in court; banning even someone like Muhammad shows the intolerance he constantly champions.

Can something be done?

Perhaps one solution is an advertiser-boycott of WOOK and other stations carrying his "sermons." To be sure, this would curtail the extremist group's freedom of speech — but then the federal government (that is, the FCC) would not have to become involved.

Muhammad's followers already harbor enough hate against Uncle Sam, and any injustice committed against them by an official government agency would intensify this bitterness, particularly since the injustice for once, would really be an injustice. Yet the withdrawal of advertising from WOOK would have the same effect as FCC action curtailment of basic freedoms. Futhermore the advertisers (which include several national companies) might not want to participate in the boycott; using WOOK as a profitable means of selling products intended for the Washington Negro market.

Another possibility is that public opinion — both white and Negro — might force the television station to cease spreading Muhammad's near - traitorous opinions. But this would also represent a de facto violation of the Bill of Rights.

Thus, a nasty choice remains: Come out against free speech or let Muhammad persist in denouncing the society which so graciously permits him to champion intolerance.

Meanwhile, Muhammad continues to perform deeds like convincing a heavyweight champion he should fight for no one but Allah.

Speakers Are No Problem At Iowa

By JUDY SURRATT
The Daily Iowan

Rumbling has been heard across the nation in recent months concerning the freedom - of - speech policies on many university and college campuses.

The administration at Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, last April denied Herbert Aptheker, a known Communist, the right to speak there. Sandor M. Polster, G, Columbus, Ohio, a former editor of the student newspaper there, said, "The Lantern was among the leaders in opposing the University's guest speaker policy."

He added that the speaker rule there was changed by the University's board of trustees in September and that Aptheker returned to the campus and was allowed to speak.

North Carolina College, Durham, N. C., recently was forbidden by the state Legislature to have "questionable" speakers.

The Michigan state Legislature last week said known Communists could not speak at state schools in Wisconsin. Authorities at Wayne State University, Detroit and Michigan State University, East Lansing, allowed a known Communist to speak within hours after the resolution was passed by the Legislature. The spokesmen for the colleges said they knew of the ruling, but willingly went against it.

These incidents and other similar ones have raised in the minds of college students and administrators questions concerning free speech policies on campuses throughout the country.

Iowa, in the opinion of the administration and many of the students, has a very liberal policy regarding speakers. Miss Helen Reich, assistant director of student affairs, says she cannot recall a single incident of a speaker being denied the right to speak on campus when the proper procedures were followed.

The procedure for a speaker to come to campus is very simple, Miss Reich said. The organization sponsoring the speaker must file an application with the Office of Student Affairs. The office will then schedule the speaker and the place for the speech.

The main concern of the Office of Student Affairs is that the speaker is properly sponsored and a faculty member or adviser is on hand to handle the program.

"If the topic is controversial, we ask that the speaker submit to questions at the conclusion of his speech," Miss Reich said.

"There is no censorship of the speaker or the topic, as such," she said, "but we like to think the organization will use proper judgement before inviting a speaker."

A topic which has come under fire in recent weeks is Soapbox Soundoff. Peter Grundfossen, Union program director, said he has talked to the Soapbox committee in regard to non - students using a "disproportionate" amount of time in Soapbaox.

"As of right now, there is no stated policy that says Soapbox Soundoff is limited to students," he said, "But it seems non - students are taking up more than their share of time at the sessions. I feel perhaps there should be some sort of limitation on non-students.

"I don't want to say they should be eliminated, but perhaps they should be there only at the request of the Soapbox committee or at least with the committee's permission.'

Grundfossen said no policy has as yet been established. There is absolutely no intention, however, of abolishing the sessions, Grundfossen said.

In terms of freedom of speech, Iowa comes close to being the ideal school. We have one of the most liberal policies concerning all phases of speech on campus, said Grundfossen.

"I have never heard a student or prospective speaker complain that our rules concerning speakers are too rigid," Miss Reich said.

This is a comment which can be elicited from few campuses, in light of problems in the rest of the country.

"I really don't see where there could be much improvement in our policy," Miss Reich said.

One of the main contentions by students on other campuses where freedom of speech has been curtailed is that lack of freedom to say what they feel leads to such things as violent demonstrations.

"I believe it would be reasonable to assume that when students are able to hear the speakers they want and express themselves through such things as Soapbox Soundoff, they don't feel the need for more violent outlets," Miss Reich said.

The policy for inviting speakers has not been changed since it was established, and Miss Reich said she could foresee no need to change it. It seems to work pretty well, she said.

The Student Speaks

Judge Aptheker On Merits

By CHARLES MILLER

I have been dismayed by an attitude which has been repeatedly expressed by many student leaders in the Aptheker controversy. These sentiments reached their most auspicious moment in Paul Dickson's closing remarks at the Feb. 24 CFI rally, when Dr. Aptheker was decried in no uncertain terms.

Aptheker is a scholar respected in many quarters. He is considered one of the foremost American authorities on the Negro in America. Notwithstanding Dickson's reputation as a scholar, Aptheker does not deserve to be uncritically dismissed.

If Dickson (or anyone) is prepared to totally reject Aptheker before he speaks in Chapel Hill, if he will in his own mind use what could be considered "prior restraint," there is little need to fight for repeal of a ban law.

Dickson is no less anti-intellectual than Dan Moore. Both have prejudged Aptheker instead of providing him an open forum. One has the power to ban him from campus; the other can only lead his fellow students in the directions dictated by his own ignorance. We must not seek to convince trustees or anyone else who attempts to infringe upon our right of free inquiry that we can be free because we can be trusted.

I still choke when I recall Dickson's pledge that we are all Tar Heels (i.e., safe.)! I am not a Tar Heel, and I am not to be trusted to follow established Tar Heel traditions. I will listen to Aptheker (at Duke), and in the anti - intellecutal environment of Chapel Hill I will judge the merits of Aptheker's position without having it chewed for me by anyone else.

I hear the University of North Carolina referred to as a free institution, in the past if not now. The ban law did not, in my opinion, make the University significantly less free, for in 1963 we saw only another voice added to what was already a chorus.

UNC is much more complacent than free, if we must describe it. I am gratified by the leadership and truly free spirit promoted by a few alumni and faculty, but we are mistaken if we assume that these few men represent either a tradition of yesterday or a pervasive attitude today.

It is time now for students — not only a few of them — to act to insure a freer university. Free inquiry will perhaps be as unpopular in the state as the concept of racial equality, but we must realize the serious lack of free spirit at UNC and in North Carolina to begin the fight.

I doubt that a battle will even begin. Students do not regard academic freedom for themselves with the same intensity that Negroes in North Carolina have felt the need for an egalitarian society.

I can be proud of those Negro North Carolinians who have fought for their rights, for if North Carolinians can be proud of their state's race relations, the greatest measure of our pride must fall upon the shoulders of the Negroes who waged the war.

I cannot be proud of UNC as a free institution because those who have fought for academic freedom have been as unsuccessful as they have been exceptional. Paul Dickson, as he prejudged someone he knows too little about, is one of the younger examples of what is the tradition and reality of UNC.

Letter

Ban Communists

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

As a parent of a UNC student, a former North Carolinian and a non - member of the so-called extreme groups, I would like to comment on the controversial speaker ban law.

Do the students think that the Messrs. Aptheker and Wilkinson are interested in promoting Americanism? Why should hospitality be shown to anyone who openly advocates the overthrow of the government of the United States and yet never fails to hide behind its Constitution when it will serve his needs? Their purpose in visiting any college or university is to pick up "diciples" and believe me, if they were able to brainwash one in following their line of deceit and trickery they would consider it worth their time and effort.

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover told a Masonic group recently that the American Communist Party has made its greatest strides in the last two years simply because of the hold they have gained on college campuses Let's wake up to the fact that the Communists want the brains of the youth in this country and the lack of speaker ban laws is what has given them a great advantage Communist activities and results speak for themselves, look at Berkely, California and many other campuses where our liberal minded educators have let them in.

If we must demonstrate, why not demonstrate for our own country? Why should we demonstrate for Moscow inspired activities? How marvelous it would be if the same energies and efforts were channeled into promoting PATRIOTISM to the point that whenever one looked upon Old Glory he would thank God he lives in an imperfect country under an imperfect system but the best in the whole world.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Fred C. Vaughn

Part Four

THE CYCLE OF POVERTY

"This is my briarpatch," says John H. McInnis, 46-year-old principal of Ashley Chapel School. Here he has worked for years in a place called Mizpah, where the sandhills run into the red clay of the Pee Dee.

It is an unusually impoverished Negro settlement where the soil is so weak that most of the residents do not even try to have gardens. The prospects for farming are so poor, they will tell you, that "you have to stand knee-deep in a sack of fertilizer to raise your voice."

The Mizpah Improvement Association wants to raise not voices but the income of the community residents. There are jobs in nearby Rockingham, if you have a skill. There is a new Technical Institute between Hamlet and Rockingham where vocational skills are taught.

But a person without the ability to read and write will find it difficult to enter, and impossible to keep up. And many of the Mizpah residents are illiterate. McInnis sent his teachers out to find these people, then set up special classes to teach them to read and to show them the way to the Technical Institute.

All this is a small part of a project called Tri-County Community Action, which, along with ten other generally similar community projects, sprang from the sponsorship of a new organization named The North Carolina Fund.

The Fund was started because we were looking for ways to help the children of blighted places like Mizpah. And now, as it turned out, the parents were involved in schooling, too. Mizpah discovered that parents had to be helped in order to help the children.

Didn't Know ABC's

Later we were to find whole neighborhoods of children who had never even heard a nursery rhyme. They didn't know Cinderella and had never sung about the mulberry bush. They came to school without the advantage of being able to count even a few numbers. They came without knowing their ABC's, and as often as not, without knowing there were any ABC's.

They might be Negro, white, or Indian, living on the farmland of the coastal plains, or the mountains, or in the crowded housing areas of the Piedmont, the children of decent people, or irresponsible people, or criminal people. They were everywhere and anywhere. They were caught in a cycle of poverty, condemned to remain in poverty, and destined to raise their children in poverty.

I think I was justified in saying, "These are the disadvantaged children, and this is the largest and most difficult group needing our special attention."

How to go about it? Improvement of school wasn't enough. Not nearly enough. If school was to have any meaning for them, these children first had to be put in a position to understand why learning was important, to comprehend what school was all about. This was the only way they could break out of the cycle of poverty in which they were entrapped.

The place to start, it seemd to us, was in the first grade and even before that.

I had begun to realize that I had stumbled into the whole confusing pattern of poverty in America while trying to find better ways to educate the children of the disadvantaged.

Many Ideas

We had numerous ideas, concepts, doubts, and approaches floating around the Capitol. Now we needed precipitation to get them down to earth.

Joe Fleishman, John Ehle, and I went to New York to call on the president of the Ford Foundation, Henry Heald. With him were Clarence Faust and Paul Ylvisaker.

I requested that Ford send down a group of its staff to visit around the state with us, and to seek the answers, and to tell us what they thought we might be able to do.

"After that, if we see how it can be spent beneficially, we might ask for a grant. And we might not."

They came. Clarence Faust, Paul Ylvisaker, and a half dozen others. We flew them from the Appalachian counties of Watauga and Avery to Winston-Salem, to Charlotte, and down east to Greenville for conferences with countless people.

They then came to the Governor's Mansion to recuperate.

The idea of state action to break this cycle of poverty was beginning to take shape. It would be a matter of specialized education. We would have to do some experimenting to design it.

We wanted an answer to the question: How do you use education to destroy the forces that condemn so many children to lives of poverty?

We concluded that it could be done, and that the burden should be carried by local leadership. We thought the role of the state was to make its service agencies more efficient and to encourage local leadership.

On the basis of the conclusions we incorporated, on July 17, 1963, a private and nonprofit organization, "The North Carolina Fund."

This approach was taken, rather than the establishment of a state agency, because we would need the flexibility to gather in private funds and to experiment with the greatest possible degree of freedom.

On Aug. 12 we presented a formal proposal to the Ford Foundation. We told them, "We want to concentrate on experimental action programs . . . to encourage comprehensive community projects . . . to encourage experimental projects by State agencies . . . to encourage local governments and community agencies to re - examine critically what they are doing and determine how new ideas and new approaches can produce better results. . . ."

FUNDS GRANTED

Ford made the grant of $7 million, which was announced in September, 1963. Reynolds granted $1,625,000 and Babcock $875,000, and with matching community support we had available some $14 million for five years of experimental action.

We intended always that the Fund should be an educational organization. True, we were describing an unusual and unorthodox kind of education, but nonetheless education. That the Fund was to strike at the cause of poverty in many ways is simply a manifestation of our belief that the children of poverty need special breaks if they are able to compete in our school system. It is also an expression of belief that education is the best instrument for breaking the cycle of poverty.

The children caught in the cycle of poverty have found little success in our public schools. It is not a valid explanation to attribute their failures to stupidity, or ineptness, or inherent slothfulness. There are too many of them.

We could not very well continue to overlook these children when we had declared a policy of educating all children, wherever they might live, whoever their parents, no matter how much money they might have, regardless of their color, and whatever their limitations.

In reality, it is not poverty we have set out to fight. It is the causes of poverty.

CONCEPT OF FUND

In announcing our assault on the causes of poverty, and the establishment of The North Carolina Fund, I expressed our concept in this way: "I have come to believe that charity and relief are not the best answers to human suffering, that the schools are not the answer so long as only half our students finish school, that the wealth of America is not the answer if many families have fifty - some cents a day per person for all expenses; that it is not enough to have here the most powerful nation in the world and then to admit that we are powerless to find ways to give all of our young people training and job opportunities."

In North Carolina we wanted to say to the community leaders: Let's see if we can show how education, combined with welfare, health, employment, and other public and private services, can be used to stop wasting lives and burdening American society with a handicap it need not carry.

Two guides were prepared.

One, drawn up by The North Carolina Fund, described how community leaders might go about planning a comprehensive community action program.

We received over 50 proposals, covering 65 of our 100 counties. The ideas had come from the local leaders. We confirmed the need in every spot across the state, and we confirmed our confidence in the initiative, originality and concern of our local community leaders.

Selected Projects

After the evaluation and visits to every community by staff and Board teams, we selected the projects, ultimately 11, which we hoped would be representative of the experiments we expected to carry forward.

To help in all these communities, the Fund organized the "North Carolina Volunteers," a program with a Peace Corps flavor. In the first year, the summer of 1964, we had 100 college students. More than 750 applications, on short notice, were received from 60 college campuses.

These students were paid $22.50 a week and their keep. They worked in the preschool readiness projects, the boys' clubs, drove the bookmobile, served as welfare caseworker aides, all with zest and vitality.

To help year - round in the communities, the Fund set up a program of recruiting and training young people sensitive to the difficulties of the people we sought to help. These are known as CATS, Community Action Technicians. They provide trained staff assistance, generate enthusiasm, and approach the problems as skilled technicians.

Human Beings

For the first time, in many instances, the hazy, dimly seen figures who move about the shanties in a dreary pantomime suddenly were brought into clear focus as human beings whose mode of life made an ironic mockery of the Chamber of Commerce sign at the city limits: "A Good Place to Live and Work."

Our second guide described the reading - writing - arithmetic project — "The Comprehensive School Improvement Program." This furnished information to the school superintendents, and advised them how they might enter the experiment covering preschool and the first three grades. In the third year it has some 400 participating schools.

The North Carolina Fund was our expression of determination that education should reach all children, even if we had to fight through the ramparts of poverty in order to rescue, liberate and teach them.

In describing our poverty program I said, "Some of this poverty is self-imposed and some of it is undeserved. All of it withers the spirit of children who neither imposed it, nor deserve it.

"These are the children of poverty who tomorrow will become the parents of poverty.

"We hope to break this cycle of poverty. This is what The North Carolina Fund is about."

UNC-G Theatre Will Present 'Li'l Abner' Here Sunday

Graham Memorial will present the European Touring Company of the UNC-G Theatre in a production of "Li'l Abner" Sunday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. The show will be free for students and the general public.

The UNC-G Theatre will make a seven-week tour of this country's European Command beginning March 15. According to Dr. Herman Middleton, head of the Department of Drama and Speech, the musical comedy, "Li'l Abner," by Norman Panama and Melvin Frank will be performed for American servicemen.

While the exact itinerary is currently being worked out, it is Middleton's understanding that most of the performances will be given in Germany, Italy, and France.

The American Educational Theatre Association's Overseas Tours selections committee tapped the local University group as one of eleven in the nation to participate in this unique program operated jointly by AETA, the Department of Defense, and United Service Organizations, Inc.

This is the same committee which selected the Theatre of UNC-G for a 24,000 mile tour of the Far East in 1959 when they performed Clare Booth's comedy, "The Women," in Japan, South Korea, Okinawa, the Phillipines, and Hawaii.

The AETA-Defense-USO program began in 1958, and the Greensboro Theatre was the first in the south to be selected when it was invited to tour the Far East.

Included in the cast of 17 who will perform in Chapel Hill will be Sandra Hopper of Charlotte in the role of Daisy Mae and Barry Dudley of Danville, Va., as Li'l Abner.

In 1962 the Theatre of UNC-G was invited for its second overseas tour to present "The Pajama Game" in the Northeast Command. Travelling 15,000 miles over snow and ice and during the "Cuban crisis," they were enthusiastically received in Greenland, Iceland, Newfoundland, and Labrador. At that time they were the first travelling entertainment unit ever to play the Thule, Greeland, base theatre twice. A second performance was necessary due to audience demand.

LI'L ABNER HAS decided reaction when he first comes face to face with Appasionata Von Climax in the smash hit musical comedy, "Li'l Abner," which the UNC-G Theatre will perform in Memorial Hall Sunday at 8 p.m.

Wilson Calls For Election; Gambles On Labor Victory

LONDON (AP) — Britian will choose a new government in national elections March 31. Prime Minister Harold Wilson named the date last night in a calculated gamble to keep his Labor Party in power until 1971.

The announcement from No. 10 Downing St. ended weeks of speculation and mounting pressure on Wilson from his own backers to call an election while labor seemed likely to win. It also brought the Conservatives — underdogs in the betting — out fighting.

"I'm delighted the fight is on," said Conservative leader Edward Heath. "We will attack Labor's record of misgovernment and failure to solve the nation's fundamental problems."

The opinon polls and the betting odds predict a Labor victory. Wilson will run on his record, and the Conservatives against it.

The main campaign theme probably will be a replay of the 1964 race, when the chief issue was which party could do the better job of modernizing Britian. By electing a Labor government 15 months ago with a tiny margin, British voters appeared to indicate they hadn't really made up their minds. Politicans on both sides of the fence hope this election will yield a clear-cut result.

Parliament will be dissolved March 10 and the new House of Commons will meet April 18. Queen Elizabeth II, who proclaims the dissolution formally, gave her approval by telegram and then by letter from the West Indies, where she is on tour. She will return March 7 to complete the formalities.

Wilson's government has a working majority of only three votes in the present House of Commons. The lineup is Labor 314, Conservaties 302, Liberal 9 and 3 non - voting members of the speaker's panel. Two vacancies, one from each party, fill out the complement of 630 seats.

After 15 months of walking a political tightrope anchored to this fragile majority, Wilson probably feels he has pushed his luck far enough.

Pressure for a new election began inside the Labor Party last fall. A Labor member died, cutting the Party's majority temporarily to two. He was succeeded by another Labor man in the January special election in hull, where Labor multiplied its victory margin five times.

High Court Hears Plea By Sheppard

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Ohio's attorney general asked the Supreme Court yesterday to reject Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard's contention that newspaper publicity prevented a fair trial in the 1954 salying of his first wife.

The former Cleveland Osteopath was shown to the jury as an absurd liar, unworthy of belief," atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe told the high court.

"I submit this was a trial by the book, it was a good trial," the Ohio official declared.

The balding Sheppard sat with his German - born second wife, Ariane, and his son, Samuel Sheppard Jr., 19, in the first spectator row in the Supreme Court chamber. The courtroom was jammed with attorneys and spectators.

Sheppard's attorney, Lee Bailey of Boston, in opening the arguments said that Sheppard was tried unfairly.

Bailey said the trial should have been moved to another locale because of an unfavorable atmostphere created in the community by editorials and newspaper articles.

Bernard A. Beckman, Cleveland attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union asked the high court to set down specifically the kind of publicity that could be "inherently prejudicial" in such trials.

North Carolina News Roundup

Missing Men Probably Dead

DURHAM (AP)—A deputy sheriff said yesterday the chances of finding alive the two men believed abducted by two recaptured mental patients "are very, very slim."

The mental patients already have been charged with murder in the fatal shooting of a Durham taxicab driver found 54 miles away at Greensboro Saturday night.

Durham County Deputy Sheriff C. R. Lynch said the 300 National Guardsmen and officers searching for Andrew Roberts, a 60-year-old Durham County storekeeper, and Fred Fonville, 28, a Raleigh realtor, have "almost eliminated the possibility they are alive."

They have been missing since Saturday from Roberts' store at Bahama, 10 miles north of Durham. All-day land and air hunts Sunday and Monday failed to find the two men.

"If they were alive they would have gotten in touch with us," Lynch said. "With all the people in the area someone would have seen them."

The two mental patients, Joseph Eugene Spence, 26, and Glenwood O'Neal Williams, 28, escaped from Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh Saturday and were captured at a Raleigh grill early Sunday morning.

The body of taxi driver Alton Maynard, 35, was found in his cab in Greensboro, 64 miles to the west of Raleigh. He had been shot in the head.

Shrine Bowl Suit Dismissed

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Federal Judge J. Braxton Craven yesterday dismissed a suit against the Shrine Bowl charity football game after both sides agreed on desegregation of the competing teams.

Shrine Bowl officials last week adopted new procedures for player selection which opened the game to pupils of both predominantly white and predominantly Negro schools.

A group of Charlotte Negroes filed the suit last Nov. 12, charging that Negro players were excluded because of race.

The new procedures holds that "The coaching staff of each . . .team shall select 33 football athletes who are senior students in a senior high school from nominees submitted who, in their opinion and best judgment represent the best qualified players for the different positions on the teams that will give the coaching staffs an all-star well balanced team."

Schools To Have Soap Day

WAYNESVILLE (AP)—Thursday, March 3, will be Soap for Viet Nam Day for Haywood County schools.

The day was set aside by the PTA after Glenn Stevenson, Haywood County native now in the armed forces, wrote one of his former teachers that he was trying to teach English to the children in the village of Hoa Dong and he had a problem.

"The children are always filthy dirty, and some of them are a mass of sores as a result of filth. . .Maybe you could get a soap drive started among the students. I am sure it would help the situation if this could be done. . .

Africans Trained For Sabotage

ACCRA, GHANA, (AP) — The new revolutionary regime yesterday showed newsmen a secret "freedom fighters" camp it said was fin-Kwama Nkrumah with Chinese Reds as instructors.

The camp was said to have trained 133 Africans for sabotage in South Africa, Rhodesia and other Africa countries. Reporters visiting the camp 130 miles north of Accra found a handful of trainees plus a dozen insructors, most of them Ghanaian soldiers.

"About 13 Chinese came here to train Africans," said the camp commandt, Sgt. Maj. Fuseimi Bazabarini of the Ghanaian Army.

The instructors said they were paid by the Bureau of African Affairs, run person ally by Nkrumah.

Nkrumah, who was in Peking when he was overthrown Thursday, left the Red Chinese capital, presumabley for Moscow, vowing to crush the army and police that deposed him.

In nearby Dahomey, an Accra broadcast was heard saying Ghana's airport was closed to all planes of the Soviet Aeroflot Airline. This apparently was on the basis of reports that Nkrumah was headed for Moscow and may try to return to Accra. Another broadcast quoted LT. Gen. J. A. Ankrah, president of the National Liberation Council, as saying if Nkrumah "dares to come back to his country he will be tried for the crimes he has committed."

The National Liberation Council issued a proclastitution and announcing it would rule by decree. It will set up comittees to administer affairs.

Hiding AWOL Soldier Kept Careful Records

AUGUSTA, GA. (AP) — A 19-year-old soldier, accused of hiding out in a supermarket storage room for nearly two months, kept careful records of his ordeal, and penned his hopes for peace throughout the world.

The youth, Pfc. Jerry Allen Mettler, was taken to Ft. Gordon by military police Saturday. He had been found clinging to rafters in an upstairs room at the supermarket in Ahtens, Ga., where police said he had been living since Dec. 20.

There wer hundreds of neatly printed notebook pages, police said. Most of them condemned mankind for waging war, and there were hopes that man would eventually find peace throughout the world.

Indonesians Riot In Jakarta

SINGAPORE (AP) — Police firing machine guns in the air broke up a melee yesterday between Pro - and Anti - Communist students in Jakarta, reliable sources in Singapore reported.

The Pro - Communist students went from a rally presided over by President Sukarno to try to break up a demonstration at the University of Indonesia by KAMI, the Anti - Communist student group banned by the President last Friday.

Jakarta Radio said the President told the students at Bung Karno (Sukarno) Stadium that Indonesia "will soon return to its original leftist track." He warned his opponents would be crushed.

Sukarno declared the only people who would be able to stop Indonesia's revolution from turning to the left "are people who can stop the sun from rising in the east."

Informants in Singapore gave this account of the clash:

About 300 KAMI students, wearing yellow shirts, were demonstrating outside the University denouncing Sukarno for firing his Anti-Communist Defense Minister, Gen. Abdul Haris Nasution.

The Pro - Sukarno students began stoning the demonstrators, who were quickly reinforced from inside the University. About 2,000 students in all were involved in the fighting before police, firing machine guns over the demonstrators' heads, arrived and broke up the melee. Whether any students were arrested was not known.

Action Heavy In Viet Nam

SAIGON, (AP) — U. S. Marines and South Vietnamese troops battled the Communists close to North Viet Nam last night in separate operations against hard - core enemy units. U. S. warplanes — B52s and compact F5 freedom fighters — hammered northern and southern ends of the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

Closer to Siagon, out numbered South Vietnamese defenders smashd back a stiff Viet Cong assault on a refugee resettlement center near Vo Dat — one of the areas where allied economic and social programs have been in progress.

U. S. infantrymen moved back into the Michelin Rubber Plantation, the scene 45 miles northwest of Saigon of bloody fighting in November, in search of Viet Cong stragglers and graves of Americans killed in the battle.

From Seoul came word that the South Korean cabinet had approved the dispatch of 20,000 more troops to South Viet Nam. In Manila, students demonstrated in favor of sending Philippine combat troops into the war against the Viet Cong.

The fighting in South Viet Nam's northern most province centered near Guang Tri, 17 miles south of the frontier, and near Phu Bai, 55 miles south of it.

It covers parts that could turn other cars with shorter warranties into expensive propositions: vital drive train parts, vital engine parts. And it pays for both replacement parts and labor.

No other economy import's warranty on these parts lasts even half as long as the warranty on Simca 1000.

What kind of car rates this protection? A family car with sports car features: Porsche synchronizers; 4 forward speeds; 4-wheel independent suspension; a 50-hp rear engine. And more.

*HERE ARE THE FACTS: Chrysler Motors Corporation warrants all of the following vital parts of the Simca 1000 for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever comes first, during which time any such parts that prove defective in material or workmanship will be replaced or repaired at an Authorized Simca Dealer's place of business without charge for such parts or labor: engine block, head and internal parts, water pump, intake manifold, Trans-Axle parts and rear wheel bearings.

HERE'S ALL YOU MUST DO: Give your car this normal care—change engine oil and retorque the cylinder head at first 600 miles, and thereafter change engine oil every 3 months or every 4,000 miles, whichever comes first; clean oil separator every 6 months (spring and fall); clean carburetor air filter every 6 months and replace it every 2 years; and clean the crankcase ventilator valve oil filler cap and change Trans-Axle lubricant every 6 months, or 8,000 miles, whichever comes first; AND every 6 months furnish evidence of this required service to an Authorized Simca Dealer or other Chrysler Motors Corporation Authorized Dealer and request him to certify receipt of such evidence and your car's mileage. Simple enough for such important protection.

Coin-Toss Clears Muddled ACC Conference Standings

By GENE RECTOR
DTH Sports Editor

The muddled ACC standings. which saw twoteams tie for third and three for sixth, were finally cleared in a Sunday coin-tossing session at the Sir Walter Hotel in Raleigh.

The confusion came when North Carolina and Clemson tied for third with identical 8-6 conference records and Wake Forest, Virginia and South Carolina deadlocked for sixth with 4-10 conference marks.

North Carolina lost their toss with Clemson. The Tigers were awarded the third position with the Tar Heels taking fourth.

South Carolina came out on top in the sixth-place confusion. The Gamecocks won sixth place with Virginia seventh and Wake Forest last.

The resulting pairings forced Clemson against South Carolina in Thursday's opening-round action at 1:30 p.m. N. C. State plays Virginia at 3:30. In the evening action, Duke faces Wake Forest at 7 o'clock with North Carolina playing Maryland at nine.

The groupings left home-standing N. C. State an easier road to the finals than top-seeded Duke. In State's bracket are Virginia, South Carolina and Clemson. If State wins their opener against Virginia they play the winner between South Carolina and Clemson.

Duke, on the other hand, finds itself bracketed with Wake Forest, North Carolina and Maryland. A victory over the Deacons throws them with the North Carolina-Maryland victor.

This year's ACC Tournament field promises to be the strongest in the conference history. No less than four conference champions throughout the nation have fallen to the hands of ACC opposition this season.

South Carolina defeated Pennsylvania — currently leading the Ivy League. Duke defeated Michigan, who appears to be the Big Ten champion. The University of Kansas, who leads the Big Eight, fell to Maryland at home. Then Davidson, who won both the Southern Conference regular season and tournament championships, fell twice to the Deacons of Wake Forest.

Duke's top seeding also does not guarantee the Blue Devils the championship. Both of Duke's ACC defeats came against the last-place clubs. Losses came to South Carolina and Wake Forest. The Duke-Wake Forest encounter offers the Blue Devils the chance to avenge the lossto the Deacons.

State, on the other hand, will be defending their ACC championship won last season by upsetting the Blue Devils in the tournament finals.

FINAL ACC STANDINGS
Listed according to draw for tournament pairings.)

Kentucky Holds Lead In AP Poll

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Kentucky Wildcats, needing only two more victories to complete an unbeaten regular season, have strengthened their lead in The Associated Press college basketball poll. Texas Western, also undefeated, replaced Duke in second place.

The Wildcats, 23-0, collected 38 first - place votes and 396 points in the voting by 40 regional experts based on games through last Saturday. Kentucky, which defeated Mississippi and Tennessee last week, faces Tennessee again this Saturday and Tulane in its final game on March 7.

Texas Western has 330 points on a basis of 10 for a first, nine for second, etc. The Miners advanced on notch after defeating West Texas and Colorado State for a 22-0 mark.

Duke, which trailed Kentucky by 48 points a week ago, slumped to third. The Blue Devils lost for the third time this season, 99-98 to Wake Forest in overtime.

There were no changes in the next four positions as Chicago Loyola held fourth, followed by Vanderbilt, Kansas and St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania. The four were unbeaten last week.

Providence switched places with Nebraska, the Friars climbing to eighth and the Cornhuskers slipping to ninth after losing to Kansas, 110-73. Providence lifted its record to 21-3 with victories over New Orleans Loyola and Holy Cross.

1. Kentucky (38)	23-0	396
2. Texas Western	22-0	330
3. Duke	20-3	311
4. Chi. Loyola (1)	21-2	244

Carolina Rushes To Second Position In Indoor Track

Maryland continued to dominate the ACC Track scene as it ran away with team honors in the 13th Annual ACC Indoor Championships which were held in Woollen Gymnasium before a sell-out crowd on Saturday evening.

North Carolina, behind superb prformances by Jon Levin and Mike Williams placed second with 32 1-2 points. This was far behind the 85 which Maryland gathered N. C. State nudged out Duke by a point, 16-15, for third place.

Rod Stewart of Duke won the shot put with a new ACC record. Stewart tossed the shot 56'10 1-2" to beat Maryland's Hearon Nonnenberg and Buonviri. The previous record for the shot was 56'-3¼" set by Guesswein of Duke in 1963.

In the broad jump Ed Marks of Maryland won with a leap of 22'5" far from the record of 24'6 1-2". In second place was Carolina's Gary Iverson, who continued to jump over 22 feet and beat out Maryland's Smith with a jump of 22'2¼".

Maryland's highly touted Frank Costello won the high jump easily with a leap of 6'8". This was short of his record of 6'10". Carolina's John Harper finished fourth in this event.

Maryland's Peter Kowzun vaulted 15' 4 1-2" to break the ACC record in the pole vault set by Belitza of Maryland in 1963. Ed Homer of Duke was second followed by Stu Corn of N. C. State.

Carolina and Maryland dominated the running events: In the two - mile run Carolina's quartet of Kurth, Janowitz, Bassett, and Carpenter placed second behind N. C. State.

However, Jon Levin gave Carolina its first win of the day in the 60-yard dash. Levin blasted out of the blocks and ran away from a trio of time was 6.3".

The most exciting race of the evening was the mile run, in which Mike Williams ran the race of his life. George Henry of Maryland, who had run a 4:12 indoors this season was about the favorite.

With two laps to go, USC's Taylor sprinted past Henry and Williams. He opened up a ten yard lead.

Then, Williams responded. Henry tried, but couldnt' stay with Williams. With half-a - lap to go, Williams was five yards behind Taylor. As the two rounded the last turn they were even, and stayed that way down to the wire.

The 600-yard run say Maryland take the first two places. John Warfield won over teammate Jack Bickley in the time of 1:13.6. UNC's Ed Daw was third and USC's Mike McGuinness, who was the premeet favorite, finished a distant fourth. Daw led for the first 550 yards, but could not sustain the kick needed to win.

Another exciting race was the two-mile. The record of 9:18 set by Jerry Nourse of Duke in 1962 was in jeopardy. The field was lead by David Starnes had a comfortable placed second in the ACC Cross Country Championship, Paul Rogers the fine soph runner for Duke, and co-captain Jim Meade of Carolina, who had run the fastest two-mile of his career the week before against South Carolina.

The pace was fast for the first mile as all three of these runners passed that mark in 4:35. Starnes then began to step up the tempo and lengthened his lead to about twenty yards. With three laps to go Starnes had a confortable lead. However, Rogers and Meade then started to gain on him.

With a lap to go Rogers closed the gap to ten yards. Meade followed Rogers by five. However, Starnes had enough to win and finished in 9:18.1. Rogers and Meade followed in 9:19 and 9:20 respectively.

The 1,000-yard run was a heartbreaker. Edison of South Carolina led the race until the last turn. Then, Al Viehman of Wake Forest accidently tripped Edison. Viehman practically stopped and let Milton Matthews of Maryland go by to win. The judges disqualified Viehman and Carolina's Tom Carpenter gained a second place medal as a restult.

Several ACC champions gone gone on score in the NACC tournament. The most notable is Bob Kopnansky, now assistant coach for the Terps, who last year became the Conference's first NCAA Champion when he won the 157 pound weight class. The Ter-Dauberman (177) and Tim Geiger (167) finish fourth and fifth in 1964, while Heavyweight Mike Sandusky captured fourth place honors in 1957. Also in the 1957 Tournament, Henry Jordon, Virginia Heavyweight, defeated University of Oklahoma's defending National Champion on the way to the finals.

Five of the six returning champs in this year's Championships are Terrapins. The lone outsider is North Carolina's Roy Hagerty who won th e147 pound crown last year. This year he will be in the new 145-pound division. Incidentally, Hagerty is not only Carolina's captain but also their first returning ACC champion ever.

The five Maylanders are Tom Norris (115), Jim Arnoult (123), Kent Webster (137), Bob Karch (181), and Olaf Drozdov (HVW). Karch will be at 177 this year.

State Takes First In ACC Swim Meet

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

North Carolina's Phil Riker won two first places, but the Dolphins could not cope with the depth of North Carolina State or Maryland in the Atlantic Coast Conference swimming championships.

State won the title with 548 1-2 points, Maryland was second with 444, Carolina third with 397 and South Carolina fourth. Fifth was Wake Forest, sixth Virginia, seventh Duke and last Clemson.

Riker added the 100-yard butterfly to his 200 fly title on Saturday with a time of 52.6. John White of State was second, Phil Denkevitz of Maryland third, Pat Gavaghan of State fourth, Peter McGrain of State fifth and Red Lipp of UNC sixth.

In the 1650 freestyle, Bob Hounsell of State set an ACC record of 17:35. Bill Nullmeyer of Maryland was second, John Lawrence of State third, John Sheldon of UNC fourth, Milt Ackerman of Wake fifth and Mike Harris of State sixth.

Steve Rerych of State won his third event by capturing the 100 freestyle on Saturday in 47.8. Jeff Herman of State was second, Denkevitz third, Russ Sleeper of UNC fourth, Bruce Alston of Maryland fifth and Pete Worthen of Carolina sixth.

Ron Wirth of State won the 200 backstroke in 2:00.4 with teammate John Calvert second. Alex Alexander of South Carolina was third, Dick Mercuri of UNC fourth, Larry Hannibal of State fifth and Bruce Phillips of Maryland sixth.

Maryland's Doug Springer broke State's monopoly long enough to win the 200 breaststroke in 2:18.5, Wayne Pawlowski of Maryland was second, Bill Muller of South Carolina third, Bill Doheny of Maryland fourth, Joe Lea of UNC fifth and Bill Dranginis of Maryland sixth.

Drew Taylor of Wake Forest won his second diving title by beating South Carolina's Chic Langnehs in three-meter competition. Pat Morgan, Jack Jordan and Jim McCaslin, all of Maryland, were third through fifth and Lee Jones of State was sixth.

State finished the festivities by polishing off the 800 freestyle relay in 7:27.9, with Carolina second, South Carolina third, Virginia fourth, Wake Forest fifth and Clemson sixth.

Lane Verlenden Is Example Of Top Athlete And Student

By JIM SCHLOSSER

Forget about the "Duh" musclebound athlete who can hardly find his way from the fraternity house to the practice field.

Take a look instead at Lane Verlenden and see an example of a new kind of campus athlete, one who can toss off an "A" paper just as easily as he can gain a strangle-hold on an opponent in a wrestling match.

Lane, who combines a 3.8 grade point ratio with an equally good record as a member of the University of North Carolina wrestling team, doesn't think it strange he's chosen wrestling over more scholarly pursuits such as chess.

The 152-pound junior is a member of the largest wrestling program in the South with 25 undergraduates. Lane is one of six on the team to hold a Morehead Scholarship, one of the University's most coveted academic scholarships.

Verlenden is both philosophical and practical about his interest in wrestling.

"Wrestling is a sport of excellence," he says. "It requires discipline of the body and 100 per cent effort in training. It is also an outlet for the many frustrations of college life."

He finds time to devote three hours a day, six days a week to the wrestling mat.

"A wrestler has to spend this much time on the canvas every day in order to keep his muscles toned up," Lane says.

Besides the three hours of practice daily, Lane has to abide by other rigorous training rules. The hardest of these rules is the diet which he must follow.

"Dieting is very important. It took me a couple of years to figure out how to diet effectively. The purpose of the diet is not merely to lose weight, but to get down to the right weight level where you can wrestle most effectively," he says.

Lane keeps a constant watch on his weight. He eats a light breakfast, usually skips lunch, and in the evening eats a supper that consists mainly of meats. On Saturday, which is usually match day, he eats only one meal.

All this hard work seems to be paying off for Lane. So far this year he has an individual record of five wins and two defeats.

Lane ranks West Virginia and Appalachian St. as the toughest teams the Tar Heels have met this season. "Both pour a lot of money into wrestling," says Lane. "They give five scholarships, and we don't. This definitely puts us at a disadvantage. For example, take Maryland, they stress wrestling, they get the best wrestlers by offering them scholarships. The result is that they have won every wrestling championship since the ACC was founded."

But the fact that UNC does not give scholarships does not discourage Lane. "Wrestling is gaining interest here. We are getting more experienced wrestlers. Right now at Carolina we have a strong nucleus of dedicated boys who want to wrestle and who have brought with them excellent records as high school and prep school wrestlers."

Lane started wrestling when he was in the seventh grade at the Baylor School in Chattangooga, Tenn. He made the varsity grapplers when he was in the ninth grade. During his four years of varsity wrestling he lost a total of three matches. The team itself never lost a match. In his senior year he was voted the Middle South Prep Conference's oustanding wrestler.

During his freshman year he went undefeated as a member of the Tar Baby team. Last year he was a member of a predominately sophomore team that finished third in the ACC.

Right now Lane is pointing toward the ACC championship tournament. "The team record means litt,e" says Lane. "The tournament decides the representative to the NCAA championship which this year will be held in Ames, Iowa, during the latter part of March.

Lane credits much of his success on the mat to Dr. Sam Barnes, his coach. They have much in common. Dr. Barnes is an English scholar as well as a wrestling coach. He is the only wrestling oah in the nation who holds a Ph. D. de- in English.

The Chattanooga grappler will complete the necessary pre-med requirements this year, and next year will finish his work toward an AB degree in English. After graduation he hopes to attend medical school.

Lane Verlenden is proof that brains and physical excellence are a good team. He proves it from October to March every year. During this time he disciplines himself to the rigors of training, keeping up with fraternity life in the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, and maintaining an incredible 3.8 quality point average.

Why does he do it? "I just love wrestling," says Lane.

Maryland Terps Host 12th ACC Wrestling Tournament

Cole Field House on the University of Maryland campus will be the site of the 12th annual Atlantic Coast Conference Wrestling Tournament. Participating ACC Schools are defending champs Maryland, runner - up team from last year University of Virginia, University of North Carolina, North Carolina State University and Duke University.

Friday evening at 7:00 p.m. will be the Semi - final round. The Consolation Finals will stats at 7:30 p.m. on Saturdy with the Championship Finals beginning at 8:30 p.m.

After the Finals on Saturday there will be an award ceremony for the presentation of trophies; and the Tournament, Outstznding Wrestler award.

The results of the first ACC Tournament, held at Chapel Hill in 1955, fostered the hope of balanced competition within the Conference. No team score was kept, but while Maryland led the way with three individual crowns against two championships and two seconds for Virginia, top spots also went to Duke, North Carolina, and North Carolina State. Two weight classes (115 and 191) were added in 1956 as the first team title was awarded, and by copping seven of the 10 classes the Terrapins served notice that they would settle for nothing less than a complete monoply, khich goal they temporarily achieved in 1961

DTH All-ACC

The Daily Tar Heel Sports staff with some help from Ed Freakley and Pat Stith have picked an All - Atlantic Coast Conference team that will appear in Wednesday's paper.

Three teams were picked with 5 points for first tam, three for second, and one for third.

Players were chosen according to the five best without concern for position.

Three first team selection were almost automatic but there was much disagreement over the other two selections.

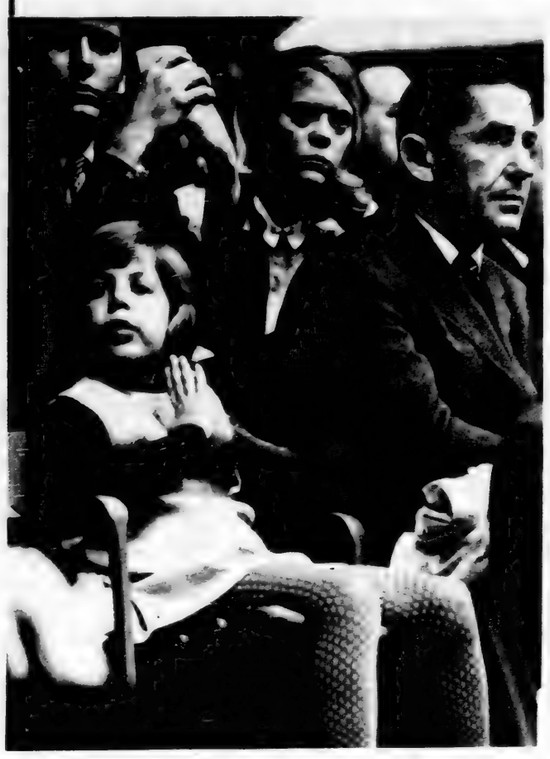
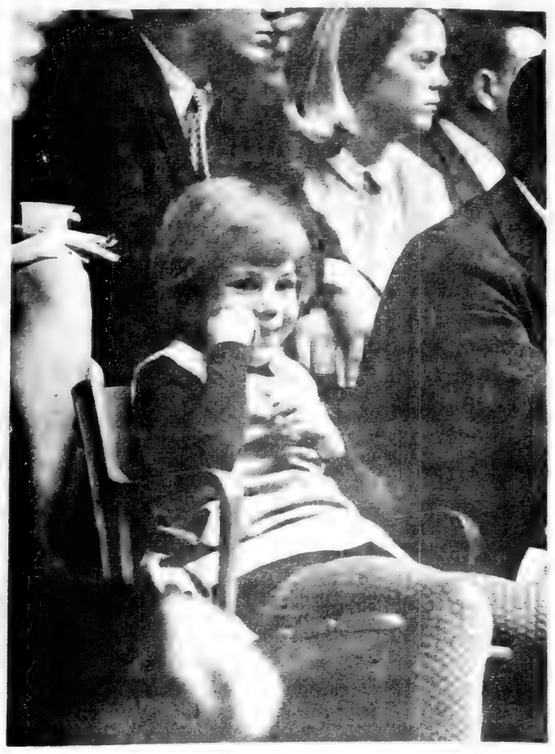
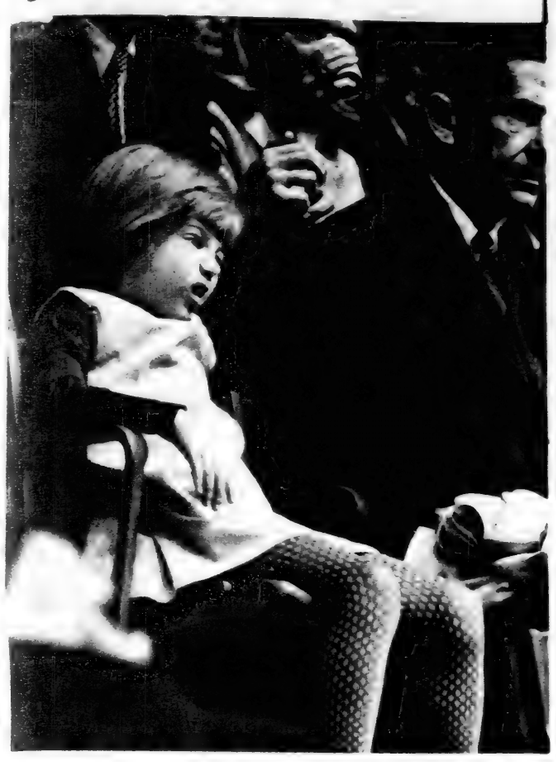
The Three Faces Of Lynn: Profiles Of A Little Fan







ANY BALLGAME WITH Duke is taken seriously by the Jim Hickey family. In this series of pictures taken at the Jan. 8 UNC-Duke game Lynn Hickey first prayerfully watched the action, then broke into a hopeful grin as Carolina rallied and finally sagged in disgust as the game ended. Meanwhile, placid pappa's expression remained characteristically stony. The same game story was repeated this Saturday afternoon in Durham. Legal Action

"If the administration says Aptheker and Wilkinson can't speak here," Dickson said, "we'll have them come to the campus anyway. Then when the speech is stopped we will have a clear case of injury when we take this to court."

Loud applause from the board members greeted statements by Friday, the four UNC chancellors and trustees who spoke in behalf of their proposals.

Sen. Tom White of Lenoir County made the strongest statements against adoption of the rules, which take direct enforcement away from the trustees.

"If we try to wash our hands of this responsibility it will be just the same as Pontius Pilate trying to wash his hands of the blood of Jesus Christ," White said.

"The matter of freedom of speech and thought is not before the board today. We've been whipping that old dead horse long enough.

"The question is whether communist speakers will be sought after by the University and who will say if they can come," White said.

When the proposals were put to a voice vote at 1:30, White's was the only audible "no."

Victor Bryant of Durham made the motion to accept the speaker regulations proposed by the administration.

"We cannot . . . suffer further erosion of the University's reputation. That it has already been damaged by the premature action of unhappy elements must be acknowledged," Bryant said.

"Today you have an opportunity to reverse this erosive process," he said.

Gov. Dan K. Moore, chairman of the board of trustees, also urged the adoption of the proposed regulations.

After the session, the DTH asked Sen. Tom White if there were any plans to introduce new speaker ban legislation at the next session of the General Assembly.

"Well, that depends on the antics over there in Chapel Hill," he said.

Student Opinions

By MIKE JENNINGS
DTH Staff Writer

Should there be hours on weekends when boys and girls could visit in each others' dorm rooms, if supervisors are in the halls, with doors open and lights on?

UNC students say this:

John Guy, junior, Psychology, Charlotte—"Yeah, I'd go for it. But I think you'd be defeating your real purpose if you had to keep the lights on and the door open."

Betty Jo Gray, junior, History, Kinston—"Oh, yes, I think so. I attended a school last year where we had what was called 'open house.' It made for better relations."

Kathleen Kirkwood, junior, Psychology, Charlotte—"I just don't see the sense in it. It would make as much sense to sit in the parlor or out in a car."

Howard Riddick, sophomore, Business Administration - Political Science (double major), Belhaven—"I'd be in favor of it. I think it would be pretty hard to set up. The people in this state would really raise hell when they found out about something like that."

Marian Davis, senior, Education, Winston-Salem — "The only reaction I would have against it would be that it would be inconvenient for those girls who didn't have guests on a particular night."

Perry Carroll, freshman, Business Administration, King —"I don't think there's any need for that. If people are going to date, they should be able to go somewhere besides the boy's room."

Ann Lewis, freshman, Music, Fairmont—"It seems like it would be a lot of trouble. I know I wouldn't want to bring my date up to my room and I don't think I'd want to go up to his."

Conversely, Smith believes students are more concerned about religion than they have ever been. "Students are interested in religious questions, but not in institutions. They are fed up with phoniness, hypocrisy and legalism."

Each of the six directors is making efforts to stop this division. Students are becoming less and less surprised to see Monk or Godfrey milling around with Coke-in-hand at Y Court or holding a bull session at Chase.

The four other directors seek similar goals, and as Godfrey says, "When students come here to talk, they can be assured we enjoy what we are doing. We can be more objective, and the interviews can be come openly with care and insight. There are no pat answers over here."

The first car
at the bottom of the world.

They wanted a car that "any member of the party could hop into and drive off without a moment's hesitation."

And the Volkswagen just happens to fill the bill.

The big trick is the VW's air-cooled rear engine. It has no radiator. It uses no water or antifreeze. It just goes.

(Antarctica #1 stood for days in 40° below zero weather and started without a tremble.)

The rear engine gave the VW so much extra traction it climbed "straight up and down the slopes." (But they cheated a little; sometimes they put chains on the back wheels.)

Another reason the VW went where even the dogs wouldn't is the sealed bottom. It took an awful beating, but that's what it's there for: To protect the works inside against the weather outside.

The conditions got so fierce that one man said, "Now we know what it'll be like when Hell freezes over."

So if it ever does, you know what car to buy.

Help End The Viet Nam War By Giving To CARE

"Give and help end the war in Viet Nam. That would mean fewer Carolina Gentlemen would be drafted," said Morgan "Spike" Mitchell.

He is head of today's drive to collect funds for CARE's use in Viet Nam.

He said a booth will be maintained in Y-Court from 7:45 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"Funds collected will be used to build a worthwhile friendship between the Vietnamese and our soldiers," Morgan said.

Morgan said the collection would last today only.

He said this is an excellent chance to better the University's relations with the state, nation and world.

Consolidated University President William C. Friday said Monday he would give "full support to CARE and the Marine Corps Reserve in their joint effort to give aid to the Vietnamese people who have been displaced by the Viet Cong."

House Votes War Funds

Senate Supports President

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate overwhelmingly upheld yesterday a resolution supporting President Johnson's authority to wage war with American forces against Communists in South Viet Nam.

And the House, in a swift, one-sided vote, approved $4.8 billion in new war spending.

Johnson himself aimed a new peace appeal at Communist North Viet Nam. "Negotiate peace and let war stand stand aside . . ." He said, "while the people of Viet Nam choose their government."

In the Senate, cockpit of the great congressional debate on war and peace in Viet Nam, five lawmakers backed a move to repeal the 19 - month-old resolution approving the use of armed force against Communist aggression in Southeast Asia.

Johnson's allies said the decision put the Senate squarely behind the President's policy in Southeast Asia.

But some senators who have questioned Johnson's position declared in advance that their opposition to repeal the resolution was not an endorsement of administration policy.

There were four house votes against the bill to authorize new appropriations — for use in the next four months — to buy weapons and military supplies for U. S. forces in Viet Nam.

The dissenters, on both sides of the capitol, were Democrats.

The Senate vote was 92-5. The House count was 392-4.

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., sharpest critic of Johnson's Asian stand, proposed repeal of the resolution.

Morse made the move as an amendment to the war money bill, which has been before the Senate for two weeks.

The resolution declares that Congress "approves and supports the determination of the President, as commander in chief, to take all necessary measures to repeal any armed attack against the forces

Wilkinson To Appear; Approval Not Official

By ERNIE McCrary
DTH Editor

Frank Wilkinson is scheduled to speak in Chapel Hill today, but no official decision has been made on whether or not he will be allowed on the campus.

The new joint student - faculty committee to advise the chancellor on visiting speakers met more than two and a half hours yesterday, but Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson refused to allow its recommendations to be made public.

"As far as I'm concerned, the matter is closed until tomorrow," he said last night.

"The function of this committee is to advise me, not make its decisions public," he said.

"I intend to consult with others Wednesday before making my decision. I don't see how any institution can go through these procedures within 24 hours."

Student Body President Paul Dickson said Wilkinson, head of the committee to abolish the House Committee on Un-American Activities, will speak in Chapel Hill regardless of Sitterson's decision.

"If they say he can come on campus he will speak in McCorkle Place in front of Graham Memorial at 1 p.m. and in Carroll Hall at 7:30," Dickson said.

"If he is banned he will speak from the sidewalk near Graham Memorial Wednesday afternoon — off school property. His night speech will probably be in the Hillel House," he said.

Eight student groups offially notified Sitterson Tuesday morning that Wilkinson was being invited to speak Mar. 2 and Herbert Aptheker had been asked to speak Mar. 9.

Wilkinson spoke at Duke University Tuesday.

The letter was signed by Dickson, George Nicholson III and Bob Powell of the Carolina Forum, Jim Medford for the YMCA, Eunice Milton for the YWCA, Ernie McCrary for The Daily Tar Heel, John Greenbacker for the Di-Phi, Gary Waller and Stu Matthews for Students for a Democratic Society and Eric Van Loon for the Carolina Political Union.

The background information on Aptheker and Wilkinson required by the speaker rules was also given to the acting chancellor.

Sitterson appointed the three faculty members to the advisory committee on speakers Tuesday. They are: Corydon Spruill, chairman of the faculty; George E. Nicholson Jr., chairman of the Faculty Advisory Committee and Arnold Perry, chairman of the Established Lectures Committee. Perry was out of town Tuesday night and could not attend the committee's first meeting, which began at 5 p.m.

Gebeaux Steps Out Of Editorship Race

By CAROL GALLANT
DTH Staff Writer

Howard Gebeaux, candidate for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel, announced his withdrawal from the race yesterday.

Gebeaux, who failed to receive endorsement from the publications board for the editorship last Wednesday, says he is withdrawing for personal reasons. He did not say he would support any of the remaining three candidates, Alan Banov, Ray Linville, and Fred Thomas.

Banov said "Howard is a personal friend and I was surprised at the announcement of his candidacy, but in a sense, I am disappointed at his withdrawal."

Banov failed to receive the endorsement of the pub board but said he has the 145 required names on a petition to place his name on the ballot.

He plans to keep circulating the petition til he receives several thousand names.

His campaign plans include visiting each dormitory, fraternity and sorority house on campus. "I plan to conduct a fair and energetic campaign."

Fred Thomas, endorsed by the pub board, says he will not start naming people for the staff. "I don't want it to appear that I am bartering for votes by offering jobs. I want qualified people regardless of who they support."

Thomas's campaign plans also include speaking at dormitory meetings. "I intend to conduct the campaign fairly, on a day to day basis.

Ray Linville also received the endorsement of the pub board. When asked his reaction to Gebeaux's withdrawal he said, "I feel that someone, in order to run for editor of the DTH, should have the endorsement of the pub board. This is the purpose of the board — to see that candidates are qualified to run."

Linville plans to visit each dormitory and each fraternity and sorority house on campus during his campaign. "I think it is the obligation of a candidate to meet the people he will be serving if elected."

Linville has a "few, brief mental notations" regarding staffing, but will not announce them til after the election. "I would not want someone to feel obligated to support me."

Cyclone Fence To Be Hidden By Shrubbery

The four feet high cyclone wire fence being constructed across the drive from Carmichael Auditorium will be covered with ivy to help beautify the campus and hide the fence.

J. A. Branch, University Business Manager, said "We wanted to cover the fence on the drive side with some type of hedge or shrubbery, but the fence posts have already been put into the ground in cement.

"We thought about moving the fence posts back in order to plant the hedge, but ran into conflicts."

O. K. Cornwell, director of the Physical Education Department, said, "The fence cannot be moved back because it would take part of our intramural fields. We need every inch of ground we have since some of our fields were taken in by the new Carmichael Auditorium."

John A. Bennett, head of the Buildings and Grounds Department said, "They ivy will be planted as soon as the fence is completed so that it will be well on its way to covering the fence by this spring.

The fence is being constructed to keep intramural players and activities from running into the drive.

Four wide openings are being left in the fence to permit cars to park on the field during functions at Carmichael. These openings will be chained off except when the fields are needed for parking during these activities.

Wilkinson Talks At Duke, Hits Speaker Ban, HUAC

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

DURHAM — Frank Wilkinson told the Duke Bar Association yesterday the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) stands in direct violation of the First Amendment, because its mandate from Congress limits it to investigations of ideas and opinions.

Wilkinson, chairman of the National Committee to Abolish HUAC, has been invited to speak at UNC tonight by the Carolina Forum.

Wilkinson said, "I am planning to speak at UNC if permission for my appearance is given. The reputation of UNC has been seriously impaired by the actions of the speaker ban law. I hope this will be changed."

Wilkinson told of the great amount of damage done to the prestige of Ohio State because they temporarily banned him from speaking there.

"I hope this same loss of prestige will not happen to UNC if I am prevented from speaking there," he said. "I feel that my speaking there would increase knowledge of students on HUAC."

Wilkinson said the mandate given to HUAC by Congress is limited to investigations of ideas and opinions and should not include investigations of overt actions.

He said, "Activities of such organizations as the Communist Party and the Ku Klux Klan should be investigated by the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives which is qualified to investigate overt acts."

HUAC has the right to the compulsory demand of answers by persons summoned before the committee. Wilkinson feels, "Part of the freedom of speech is having the right not to speak."

Wilkinson said one of the main charges he has against HUAC is the mockery it has made of the Fifth Amendment. (Wilkinson was sentenced to a year in prison after he pleaded the Fifth before HUAC, and the Supreme Court ruled HUAC had the right to demand his testimony.)

"I would have no objections to answering questions of the Judiciary Committee concerning overt actions," he said. "I am against answering any questions asked by HUAC, because its actions violate the First Amendment."

Trustees' Decision Within Law Friday Tells Panel

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

University officials discussed the many aspects of the decision of the Board of Trustees concerning the visiting speaker policy yesterday.

Consolidated University President William C. Friday, George Watts Hill, member of the Executive Committee, Corydon Spruill, faculty chairman, and Frank Strong, UNC law professor, made up the panel. It was moderated by Dr. Henry Brandis of the UNC Law School.

Friday said the speaker regulations adopted by the trustees Monday were required by law and they met the legal requirements set up by the N. C. Legislature.

Spruill told the group the University is better off with the law amended but responsibility should be exercised in actions of students and faculty concerning visiting speakers in the future.

"It is possible to have highly controversial speakers on campus, but we should investigate the circumstances before an invitation is made," he said.

Spruill said the University has been badly damaged by the Speaker Ban Law but he added it has also shown what a free university must be and what it means. He said the speaker policy adopted by the trustees has almost the force of law and is to be followed.

"There will be some difficulties that may be somewhat serious. We may lose some faculty members. I hope we won't, but we might," he said.

He also noted securing future faculty members may be more difficult.

"We have a chance to make the situation better," he said. "We must tell the state what the University is and try at the same time to understand the state."

Strong, former dean of the Ohio State University Law School, pointed out results of a speaker ban at that institution from 1951 to 1965. He said the psychology department was

Dean Okays Late Hours

By BRIAN RAY
Special to DTH

Dean of Women Students Katherine Carmichael said yesterday she approves the extension of closing hours, but there is the problem of staff changes and allocation of money.

The Women's Resident Council last week extended the closing hours for upperclassmen from 11 to 12 p.m. Monday through Thursday effective next fall.

Carmichael stated that the extension requires all dormitory staff members to stay four hours longer each week. This requires more money. At the moment there is no money readily available.

Penny Scovil, chairman of the WRC, said the extension had been discussed for three months. It was one of many recommendations of the Judicial Reform Committee, established by student body president Paul Dickson.

On the question of an extension on Friday and Saturday nights from 1 until 2 a.m. Carmichael was negative. "There is no reason for such an extension. The women may get late permission if needed. It is not consistant with other schools' closing hours in the North Carolina area."

The 2 a.m. extension was discussed and rejected by the WRC last Tuesday night.

SP Passes Final Slate

The Student Party calmly completed its slate of candidates for the March 22 election Monday night and adjourned to where the action was—the UP convention.

Legislative candidates endorsed were Bob Dornbush—Men's District I, Rene Clark and Linda Lauder — Women's District I, Carrie Rouse—Women's District III, and Janet Privet—Women's District VI.

The party endorsed Judy Fletcher for secretary of the student body and Don McPhaul for treasurer. They were also endorsed by UP.

Although the party did not endorse a candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, Alan Banov asked for the support of the 20 members present.

"My newspaper will be open-minded. It can be an exciting media," he said.

O'Toole Captures UP Endorsement

By STEVE LACKEY
DTH Staff Writer

Teddy O'Toole captured the University Party nomination for student body president Monday night in what chairman Neil Thomas called "one of the closest votes in the history of the UP."

O'Toole beat Sonny Pepper by a delegate vote of 184 to 175.

Pepper received a majority of votes in all but four fraternities. O'Toole carried all residence halls and sororities except eight.

Other students recieiving UP nominations for campus offices are:

These students were unopposed in seeking nomination.

Pepper is undecided as to whether he will seek the presidency as an independent.

In accepting the nomination, O'Toole emphasized he alone could not win the election or have a successful administration, but it would take the effort of each member and student.

He said, "I pledge to you my utmost energy, experience and effort to make our student government one of the students, by the students and for the students."

Pleading for unity and help, O'Toole quoted John Donne who said "no man is an island entire unto itself."

'O'Toole outlined a seven point program he plans to follow:

1. Reorganize the interview procedure for student government positions because there are many students who would like to serve but are not at present able to do so.
2. Strengthen the communications between the president and the legislature.
3. Expand efforts by the student administration in behalf on the residence college system.
4. Reaffirm the independence of the IFC and Pan Hellenic Council.
5. Initiate a "Majors Week" in which all students could obtain information from professors on majors available.
6. Bring the student government back into the hands of the students.
7. Establish a responsible but dedicated approach to the "Paradox Crisis."

According to O'Toole, the "Paradox Crisis" involves North Carolina's present controversy over speaker policy.

He said "legally the board of trustees 'owns' the University" and has authority over who speaks here, "but it does not own you and me who have rights to listen under the First Amendment."

He feels students are united against the ban, but that the state's citizens are in favor of it. He said that the answer which will be reached "lies in dedication and determination, whether in the short run or the long run."

UNC Computer Works Slower

UNC's computor has less "brains" than N. C. State's.

This, according to UNC Central Records "Top Honcho" Ray Strong, is the reason UNC student's quality point averages broken down into residence groups aren't available yet. A comparable report was released at State on Feb. 18.

It takes State's "Super-Brain" IBM 1401 only 30 minutes to compute this data. With UNC's "Bat-Brain" Univac 1105, it takes a week.

UNC's "retarded brain" requires the assistance of a tutor — one of "Top Honcho's" coolies — to teach it the necessary material relative to making a decision. State's "Super-Brain," on the other hand, does this instantly on magnetic tape.

Floyd McKissick Is CORE Director

NEW YORK (AP) — Floyd McKissick, a 44-year-old native of North Carolina who has moved to an apartment in New York's Harlem, became national director yesterday of the Congress of Racial Equality.

In recent years McKissick has served as CORE's national chairman.

Both McKissick and Farmer say CORE is moving into a new field and is deemphasizing protest parades, picket lines and fiery speeches about "freedom now."

"The dramatic action we used before is not as dramatic today," McKissick said. "Our sights have got to be set on the economic structure . . . It will take a much more sophisticated approach."

After completing high school in Asheville, McKissick attended Morehouse College in Atlanta and North Carolina College in Durham. The day after he was graduated from N.C. College a federal court directed that he be admitted to the University of North Carolina.

Later he filed the suit that opened the university's graduate school to Negroes, and after that brought the suit that ended public school segregation in Durham.

North Carolina News Roundup

Factory Payrolls Are Up

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. reported today that North Carolina's factory payrolls in 1965 climbed 9.5 per cent to a record $2.3 billion.

The bank said the increase of an estimated $200 million stemmed from higher wages and expanded employment.

"Job and wage gains in both manufacturing and non-manufacturing businesses were major factors in the Tar Heel economy's strong advance during 1965," said a bank economist, "and the gains have continued this year."

"The unusually rapid expansion of the North Carolina economy in the last few months has given rise to concern over inflationary pressures," the economist said, "but our economy is basically sound and well balanced, and the outlook for 1966 is favorable."

Redistricting Suit Delayed

GREENSBORO (AP) — Unless special action is ordered, legal procedures are likely to delay a decision in a new North Carolina congressional redistricting of the 11 congressional districts would have to be redone, but allowed present districting to stand through the May 28 primaries.

But on Monday, a legal team headed by attorney Renn Drum of Winston-Salem petitioned the federal court to overturn its decision in the light of a U. S. Supreme Court decision of last Friday.

The three-judge panel's ruling last month called on the General Assembly to change the district boundaries at its 1967 session.

Routine procedure on Monday's petition would allow the state 20 days, plus three additional days for service, to answer. Under this procedure the state's answer would not be due until March 23, five days after the filing deadline.

Textile Union To Expand

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Textile Workers Union of America will expand its activities in North and South Carolina and Georgia, General President William Pollock said yesterday.

Pollock made the statement in an address to members of the southeastern regional staff of the TWUA, who met in Charlotte.

He said the increase in union activities will be made "in response to mounting appeals from southern textile workers saddle with low wates and deprived of modern fringe benefits . . ."

Pollock said the textile industry "is reaping record-shattering profits," but is failing to share them with production workers. This situation is "inexcusable," he charged.

Johnson Sends Congress Health-Education Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — A multibillion dollar health-education program aimed at the aged-old problems of "pain and ignorance" was sent to Congress yesterday by President Johnson.

The emphasis was on such thing as modernizing obsolete hospitals, providing balanced luncheons for poor school children, a start in serving meals to needy aged, liberalized financial aid to college students, facilities for the group practice of medicine, and an attack on the disease of alcoholism.

First reaction on Capitol Hill included several approving comments, and some critical questions.

Rep. Carl Albert of Oklahoma, House Democratic Leader, commended the President for what he called "the next logical step toward our goal of the best possible health and medical care for every man, woman and child in the United States."

Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., called the message "worthy of intensive study" but questioned the making of new recommendations "when the administration is cutting down on the school lunch and school milk programs which have proven to be of such tremendous benefit to national health."

No cost total was placed on the program, but officials said the hospital modernization alone would run into billions of dollars over the years.

Johnson said one-third of the country's general hospitals, with 260,000 beds, are obsolete, and noted that the need for beds will grow as medicare for the aged begins operating July 1.

He called for a loan-grant program to revitalize such hospitals. High officials said this would involve costs of $6 to $8 billion over 20 years, about 40 per cent of which would be federal money.

of the United States."

It declares the United States prepared — "as the President determines" — to use armed force in the defense of Southeast Asian freedom.

The House dissenters were Reps. Philip Burton and George Brown of California, William F. Ryan of New York and John Conyers of Michigan.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N. Y., answered "present" when his name was called.

As the Senate argued about Presidential authority for the American stand in Viet Nam, Fulbright suggested that the United States seek neutralization of all of Southeast Asia.

Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the Vietnamese war could be permanently settled only with an understanding between the United States and Communist China.

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., said defeat of the Morse move put the Senate "solidly behind the President."

Senate democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the action kept in effect "Whatever constitutional force" is in the resolution, adopted on Aug. 10, 1964, after Communist Naval assaults on U. S. ships off Viet Nam.

"To that extent," Mansfield said, "the issue is clear even though this is not the appropriate way, in my opinion, to consider this matter."

But Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., opposing the Morse measure, insisted he was not voting to reaffirm the resolution. He said Johnson should come to Congress for a new declaration of support.

"What we are trying to do is to get on with the serious business in Viet Nam," said Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, "and supply the American troops with whatever is necessary to do a complete and final job."

But Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., said when he backed the original resolution, the American mission in Viet Nam was one of aiding and advising the Vietnamese, not fighting. Nelson said he was assured at the time that the resolution involved no change in the U. S. role.

Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., opposed the Morse amendment — but insisted he was not endorsing Johnson's policy.

"I haven't the slightest in-Fulbright, said unless the United States is prepared to fight a general war in Asia, "we have no alternative but to seek a general accommodation. . .

". . . It seems to me that the crisis in Southeast Asia can only be resolved on a lasting basis by the neutralization of the entire region as between China and the United States," Fulbright said.

He said the United States should offer to remove all American military power from Southeast Asia in return for a similar Chinese withdrawal.

At this point, Fulbright said, China hopes that Americans will eventually find the cost of the Vietnamese war intolerable and force U. S. withdrawal.

He suggested a policy that would entrench American forces in powerful bases along the Vietnamese coast.

Bob Lewis, ACC's Best

UNC, Duke Leading DTH All-ACC Team

By BILL ROLLINS
DTH Sports Writer

Carolina's Bobby Lewis was named Player - of-the Year and joined teammate Larry Miller and Duke's Jack Marin as unanimous choices on the 1966 Daily Tar Heel All - Atlantic Coast Conference basketball team selected by eight pollsters yesterday.

Lewis — who received all eight votes for the POY honor — and Marin were the only first team repeaters from the 1965 DTH selections. Each polled the maximum number of 80 votes as did sophomore Miller, who made the team in his first year of eligibility.

Bob Verga and Mike Lewis — also a soph — of Duke also placed on the first team, as the Blue Devils teamed with Carolina in monopolizing the unit. Verga polled 68 points and Lewis 45.

The voting was done by six members of the DTH sports staff, along Pat Stith and staff writer Ed Freakley, both of whom serve as statistiof Sports Information. cians for the UNC Office

Each voter listed 20 players on four units, without regard to positions. Points were counted on a basis of 10 for a first team vote, five for second, three for third and two for fourth.

Led by Bob Lewis' 28.4 average, the first team shows a scoring total of 103 points per game. Miller is second at 21.4, then come Verga (19.5), Marin ($9.0) and Mike Lewis (14.7).

A number of different combinations would have given this team a high-points per game. Miller is second at 21.4, then come Verga (19.5), Marin (19.0) and Mike Lewis (14.7).

A number of different combinations would have given this team a higher scoring total, but the idea was to name the five best players in the ACC.

In Mike Lewis and Larry Miller, the team has the two top rebounders in the league, Lewis averaging 11.0 per game, and Miller 10.4.

Besides the unanimous triumverate, Verga was also a hands - down first team selection, getting six firsts, a second and a third. But Lewis, Duke's 6-7 center, garnered just one first place vote but took seven seconds, to finish slightly ahead of a strong contingent of guards for the fifth spot.

Jim Connelly of Virginia and Paul Long of Wake Forest were Mike's closest pursuers, on a second team composed entirely of guards. Connelly nabbed a pair of first team ballots and tied Long with 43 points.

Steve Vacendak was the fourth Blue Devil named to the top ten, and tied for points at 41 with Wake's Bob Leonard and N. C. State's Eddie Biedenbach to complete the second unit.

Pete Coker of the Wolfpack was the only other player to receive a first team vote.

A major change in the 1966 team is that Bob Leonard of Wake Forest lost his first unit standing of a year ago. He was in the company of Marin and Lewis, and also UNC's Billy Cunningham and State's Larry Lakins.

Maryland's Jay McMillen, the only other player of 1966 mentioned among last year's first ten players, dropped to 22nd in the voting his time.

Duke placed all five of its starters in the group, with Bob Riedy rounding out the full team membership with his fourth team spot.

Charles Smith Takes The Cue

Physical Education Might Get Billiards

By JIM COGHILL
Asst. DTH Sports Editor

"Billiards need to be taught in our physical education program."

This statement was made by a UNC graduate student in physical education who instructs in the department and who has just recently become billiard champion of district five (which includes schools in North and South Carolina and Tennessee) in Knoxville, Tenn.

His name is Charles Smith and recently under the sponsorship of Graham Memorial and the University of North Carolina, he eliminated contenders in Knoxville from the Universities of Tennessee, South Carolina, Clemson and East Carolina College. It was double elimination play of straight pool and Smith emerged as champion and will now represent the district in the nationals to be held in Tampa, Fla. sometime during April.

Smith became the campus champion on Sunday, Feb. 13, and this was the second time for him in doing so. Just prior to Christmas, Graham Memorial sponsored a billards tournament and Smith won this event, but due to the fact that this tourney did not meet regional specifications a new tournament became necessary in order to find North Carolina's representative in Knoxville.

This game is described by Smith as one of "concentration, co - ordination and nerves." He further elaborated that billiards requires "a lot of stretching, strain on the back and tremendous pressure" while playing.

Dickson appointed three students to the committee Monday. They are: Hugh Blackwell, speaker pro tem of Student Legislature; Penny Scovil, chairman of the Women's Residence Council and Bob Powell, chairman of the State Affairs Committee.

About 120 students attended a meeting of the Committee for Free Inquiry in Howell Hall Tuesday night. Dickson, chairman of CFI, said, "We just want to talk about the situation."

Having played billiards since he was able to see his way ever the table, Smith has been able to bring the game down to a real science and an art within itself.

A native of Henderson and graduate of East Carolina College, Smith received his master's degree in physical education at Carolina last year and is now working beyond the master's level. He teaches weight lifting in the physical education department and is advisor to the weight lifting club on campus.

Coach Smith, as he is known to many students in the physical education department, would like to inaugurate a program of billiards in the department hopefully this spring. As yet, no classes have been taught at UNC.

Knowing that billiards requires skill and the ability to concentrate, Smith would like to enable other people to become skilled at the game of pool. With this in mind, he is working on a program in physical education that could be initiated in the very near future.

Billiards or pool as it is known to many is a good game to play. The Carolina champ said, "back in the 1930's billiards got a bad name due to the places and atmostphere in which it was played.

"This was during the depression and many people shied away from such establishments," he continued, "but the attitude has changed in the last 20 years since it is played by both men and women for recreational purposes."

Smith received a trophy here for his championship effort effort and brought back a plaque for the university as well as himself from Knoxville.

A desire is there on the part of Charles Smith. All he needs is the interest from the department as well as the students.

Dean Rusk Lauds Davidson Team

DAVIDSON, N. C. (AP) — One of Davidson College's most illustrious graduates, Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Tuesday sent his congratulations to basketball coach Lefty Drisell and his team for winning the school its first Southern Conference basketball championship.

Rusk, an outstanding center on the Davidson team during his college days, told Davidson President Dr. Grier Martin by telephone from Washington that he hoped his schedule would permit him to be a spectator when the Wildcats play in the first round of the NCAA Eastern Regionals in Philadelphia March 7.

Bob Lewis Becomes Ninth ACC Player To Score 700

GREENSBORO (AP) —Bob Lewis scored 59 points in his last two regular-season games last week, and became only the ninth basketball player in Atlantic Coast Conference history to pass the 700 mark during a season.

Lewis has the '66 season's individual scoring average title safely tucked away with 712 points in 25 games for a 28.4 average going into the ACC tournament at Raleigh. He has a chance to further distinguish himself in the ACC record books.

If his Tar Heels survive to the Saturday night finals he needs only to surpass his average by a fraction of a point a game to join the 800-point club as only the fifth man to reach that lofty level.

And if Lewis can keep his scoring average at 28.4 or better to the finish of this season he will post the fifth best full-season mark in conference history.

ACC Service Bureau figures through all regular-season action show that the conference field goal accuracy record of 60.0 per cent set by Duke's Jay Buckley in 1963 is almost certain to fall. Rick Wise of Maryland and sophomore Mike Lewis of Duke are both running ahead of the record mark with respective averages of 62.5 per cent and 60.2.

Paul Long of Wake Forest, closest challenger to Bob Lewis in scoring average at 24.3 points a game, is the pacesetter in free throw accuracy with 86.5 per cent. He leads a remarkable total of 10 players making better than 75 per cent from the foul line. Only six did as well a year ago in the ACC.

Jim Sutherland of Clemson, 84.6 per cent, and Pete Coker of N. C .State, 83.9 per cent, are close on Long's heels.

Mike Lewis tops a still-undecided individual rebounding race with 11.0 recoveries a game. Larry Miller of North Carolina is second at 10.4 followed by Randy Mahaffey of Clemson and Frank Standard of South Carolina at 10.3 and Coker at 10.0.

North Carolina owns the best field goal and free throw shooting averages, having hit an ACC record-pace 51.7 per cent from the foul line. Duke is second in both categories at 49.2 and 72.5 per cent and also tops team rebounding with 51.1 recoveries a game.

Bob Lewis of North Carolina tops the conference in individual point - making with 712 points and a 28.4-average. Paul Long of Wake Forest is second with 607 points and a 24.3-point average.

Rick Wise of Maryland is first in field goal accuracy at a record-pace 62.5 per cent. Long leads free throw shooting with 86.5 per cent and Mike Lewis of Duke is No. 1 in individual rebounding with 11.0 recoveries a game.

Several Unbeaten Teams Seek Mural Championship

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

As the time for league playoffs approachs in about two weeks, several undefeated intramural basketball teams will seek to preserve their unblemished records.

In fraternity division League 8, the PiKA Plummers completed their schedule with a 5-0 mark. The Phi Gam Fijis and Phi Delt White are both 3-0 in League 10. The Phi Delts have racked up 132-24, 116-25 and 65-30 victories.

The ZBT Zebes top League 9 with a 3-0 record and the Phi Delt Chi Pills lead League 11 with a 2-0 slate. The Sig Ep Bisons are 3-0 in League 3, Phi Delt Black 4-0 and Pi Kap Phi No. 1 3-0 in League 1, DKE Red 3-0 in League 12, and Zete I 3-0 in League 6.

Unbeaten in five games is DKE Blue from League 2, while ATO I in League 7, Beta Stilts in League 5 and TEP Tops in League 4 are all 4-0.

In the residence hall division, Morrison sports several undefeated teams in its various leagues. The Morriosn D Ponies are 4-0, Morrison F Falcons 3-0, Morrison H Rebels 4-0 and Morrison C Cavaliers 3-0.

In the Morehead College leagues, the Graham Bells are 5-0, Lewis White 5-0, and Everett Rogah 5-0. In Scott College, the Teague Trojans are 4-0 and the Teague Toughs also have a 4-0 mark.

In the Connor Area Leagues, the Connor Animals are 4-0, Joyner Supporters 3-0, Joyner Jokes 3-0 and Connor Vikings 3-0. The Maverick C Stars are 4-0 and the Craige C Alkacelties 3-0 in their leagues.

The Upper Grad leagues sport the Ruffin Roadrunners at 4-0 and the Mangum Mugs at 4-0.

Among the graduate division teams, the Med School Blue is 3-0, Peacocks 4-0, Med School Yellow 4-0, Fellowship of Christian Athletes 4-0, Law III Blue 4-0 and Law Blue I 3-0.

"desecrated," seven professors of the law school there left in two years and many left from the English department. But he added that "they didn't leave for just one reason."

Hill said the trustees are "caught between the general public and the university faculty and students." He said the public does not understand the law and some people "don't want to understand it."

In explaining the actions of the trustees, he said, the trustees are to make "broad policy decisions for the good of the University."

Hill said the Students for Democratic Society "did not do the University a 'service' when they invited Aptheker."

He then added, "I was sorry to hear of the reinvitation of Wilkinson and Aptheker. It's not smart."

Pep Rally

A send-off pep rally for the UNC basketball team will be staged 6:45 p.m. tomorrow at Carmichael Auditorium.

Rick Kramer, president of the Carolina Athletic Association, said the team, coaches, cheerleaders, and pep band will be on hand for the rally.

The team will leave immediately after the rally to journey to Raleigh to meet Maryland for the ACC Tournament.

JOHNNY MATHIS has been invited to sing on campus next Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Carmichael, and though he does not come under the speaker ban, Graham Memorial urges Carolina students to take in the show. Plenty of tickets remain on sale at GM for $1, and $1.50 for date tickets. Price will be $1.50 at the door.

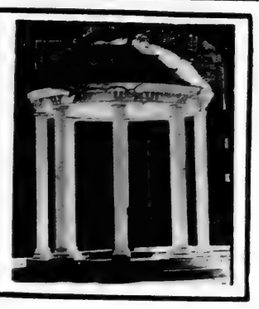
CAROLINA STYLE

with Ed Freakley



They'd Rather Switch

"Hello . . . This is the DTH. We are conducting a survey on whether women should be drafted. What do you think?

"Are you kidding? What's the matter, don't you believe in motherhood?"

And so it went yesterday. We called every girls' residence hall and sorority on campus and talked to almost 50 coeds. Some of them didn't want to give their names, others had nothing to say, some just hung up and one young lady astounded us by saying yes.

Faryl Sims, history, Senior: "I think women should be drafted. Men are too chicken to be on the front lines and they want to push the women out in front."

One coed said women could never be drafted because "there aren't any midwives on the battle field."

Another when asked said "No!" We asked why and she replied, "Because I'm not dressed." We asked the question again and explained it but she gave the same answer.

Nancy Raley, journalism, Junior: "I'm against it. If you were a girl would you want to be drafted?" If you were a man would you want to be drafted?

Nancy Olson, English, Senior: "Unless they have a purpose for drafting women I don't see how they could use them. It isn't practical. The program is definitely geared for men right now."

Sally Ivey, English education, Junior: "I couldn't shoot a gun. I wouldn't be of any use to anybody."

Carol Smith, sociology, Junior: "I'm one of those ole foggies that still believes that a woman's place is in the home."

I guess women don't want equal rights, or at least they would rather switch than fight.

Sitterson Backs Up Trustees; Wilkinson Locked Off Campus

YESTERDAY'S APPEARANCE of Frank Wilkinson drew nearly 1,200 students and faculty at the north end of the campus. Flanked by two radio newsmen, Wilkinson applauds one of his own statements. He spoke on the sidewalk just off campus, separated from the crowd by a sign reading "Dan K. Moore's (Chapel Hill) Wall." Wilkinson is the head of a committee in favor of abolishing the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Suit Might Be Filed By Sponsoring Groups

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson refused Frank Wilkinson campus speaking privileges yesterday and provided student leaders grounds on which they hope to base a court case.

Student body president Paul Dickson said last night that he was in contact with various lawyers across North Carolina seeking advice on what action might be taken.

"As far as I can tell this will result in a court case," Dickson said. "As soon as lawyers advise me of what grounds we have, I will file suit."

In a statement yesterday afternoon Sitterson said that he did not feel he could grant Wilkinson permission to use University facilities to speak.

"The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees on Feb. 7, 1966, cancelled the scheduled appearances of Mr. Frank Wilkinson and Mr. Herbert Aptheker," Sitterson said.

"Consequently, even though prior to the executive committee action I recommended that the earlier invitation be allowed to stand, I regard their action as in effect binding in these two instances," Sitterson said.

The chancellor has not yet ruled on the invitation of Aptheker who is scheduled to speak next Wednesday. The student-faculty advisory committee will meet Friday afternoon at 4 to discuss the Aptheker invitation.

Dickson said that if a suit is filed he will be a plaintaiff. Wilkinson will join him in bringing the suit and so may some of the inviting groups.

He said he thought the suit would probably name the Governor, as chairman of the board of trustees, the board itself, President Friday and Sitterson as respondents.

At 7:30 last night, even though Dickson and Wilkinson knew of Sitterson's decision, they walked to Carroll Hall to attempt the speech.

Campus Security Officer Arthur Beaumont would not permit anyone to enter the building. He told Dickson that Sitterson had instructed him not to let the building be used for any purpose.

Dickson asked the crowd of 200 students if they wanted to hear Wilkinson, who is chairman of the committee to abolish HUAC. They roared back "Yes."

Several students in the group yelled for Wilkinson to speak right on the steps, which would have violated Sitterson's decision.

The group then moved to Hillel House to hear Wilkinson speak on HUAC.

Almost 350 people attended the speech. They applauded loudly when former SDS chairman Jim McCorkel said that a test case was being planned.

At the speech, which was sponsored by SDS, ADA, the Carolina Forum and the YMCA, Wilkinson said the case would be developed immediately and would probably name seven or eight plaintiffs.

"They will be arguing for their right to hear and I will be arguing for my right to speak," Wilkinson said. "Don't let the Governor get away with this for one more day."

Wall Separates Speaker, 1,200

By PAT STITH
DTH Managing Editor

Frank Wilkinson, one of two men who have recently been banned from speaking on the campus of the University of North Carolina, talked to a crowd of students here yesterday from a sidewalk on this town's main street.

Students vigorously applauded him when he said, "I believe the situation in which we find ourselves here assembled is a disgrace to a great university. I don't think we should attempt to dignify this meeting even if we were to carry on a dialogue."

A knee-high rock wall separated Wilkinson from the crowd of students, estimated by Chapel Hill police chief William D. Blake at 1,200. The students gathered on McCorkle Place on University property.

Wilkinson was forced to yell much of his 10 minute talk in order to be heard above the noise of traffic. He spoke without the aid of a microphone because of a town ordinance prohibiting the use of amplifiers on sidewalks.

In introducing Wilkinson, student body President Paul Dickson said, "I feel this is a responsible way of demonstrating the ridiculousness of the procedures we have to follow."

On the wall separating Wilkinson from the students was a plywood sign which read, "Gov. Moore's (Chapel Hill) Wall."

The sign referred to a statement Tuesday by Dickson in which he said that Wilkinson would speak here separated from students by Moore's "wall of repression."

"This is the 131st university at which I have been invited to speak and this is the first place where I have been banned," Wilkinson said.

"I have come here in good faith to state my point of view. I hope that out of this effort we will be able to restore academic freedom to this university and to this state." Here, Wilkinson received his longest applause.

He expressed hope that Sitterson would allow him to speak and then said, "I refuse to stand on a sidewalk and shout over a wall with the message I have for you."

Wilkinson, chairman of the Committee to Abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee, was invited to speak here, along with Communist Herbert Aptheker, by the Students for a Democratic Society.

Both were refused dates to speak by the Executive Committee of the UNC Board of Trustees Feb. 7, pending the full meeting of the Board Feb. 28.

At that time the trustees adopted speaker regulations suggested by Consolidated University President William C. Friday and turned the problem over to Chancellor Sitterson and his student - faculty advisory committee.

Pep Rally Set For Tonight

A send - off pep rally for the UNC basketball team will be held tonight at 6:45 in Carmichael Auditorium.

Rick Kramer, president of the Carolina Athletic Association said the team, coaches, cheerleaders and the pep band will be on hand for the rally.

The team will leave immediately after the rally to journey to Raleigh to meet Maryland in the last game of tonight's opening round of the ACC Tournament.

"Since only a few students will be able to attend the tournament, they can again show their appreciation and support for the fine job the coaches and team have done this year," Kramer said.

Last night the team practiced in Raleigh. Last year they lost in the opening round of the tourney to Wake Forest.

Renovation Begins On Davie Project

By GLENN L. MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

The $1.5 million project to renovate Davie Hall got underway yesterday and some of the work has already brought protests.

The project, when completed, will add a modern look to the center of the campus and the building will house the University Psychology Department.

Allen S. Waters, director of construction and engineering at UNC, said yesterday the first part of the project will be to build a restraining fence around the construction area to keep people away and out of danger of falling bricks or debris.

The front part of the present building will be torn away and the wing on the north side of the building, constructed in 1925, will be remodeled.

The part of Davie Hall which is being torn away has been condemned, Waters said.

The unit will contain about 71,000 square feet of floor space. About 7,700 square feet of that area will be contained in the old wing of the building.

The project is expected to be completed in about 18 months. The entire cost is being financed by a National Science Foundation grant and through state appropriations.

Several trees were removed in the construction area which aroused comments from several persons. The level of the sidewalk which will be put in front of the new building is being lowered to the street level which made it necessary to remove the trees.

Eugene Brown, assistant to the director of planning, said several trees will be planted along the sidewalk when the construction project is finished.

Waters said he anticipated comments about changes being made on the site.

He said about 10 feet of the arboretum will be taken up by the new building but he said that everything that can be moved will be saved.

Election Meeting Called

A compulsory candidates meeting has been scheduled for 7 to 9 p.m. Monday in Gerrard Hall. Election laws will be explained to the candidates.

Any candidate who is unable to attend must contact Jerry Wagner at 942-3285 or face automatic disqualification.

Year In France

A rising junior or senior with at least two semesters of French will have the opportunity to spend a year in Paris on scholarship as part of a UNC exchange program with the Ecole Superieure d'Electricite in Paris.

Applications can be found in 261 Dey Hall or the Information Desk of G.M. Applications must be in to 216 Dey Hall by noon March 5.

Invitation Orders

The Order of the Grail has announced that personal orders for graduation invitations and personal cards will be taken today and tomorrow in Y-Court.

Prepayment for the orders is requested.

YWCA Interviews

Interviews for YWCA Executive Committee will be held March 7-11, in 203 Y Building from 3-5 p.m.

Interested girls should sign for an appointment and secure an application in Y Court.

A slate of nominees will be chosen, and final selections will be made by a campus-wide women's vote planned for March 24.

Exam Location

Anyone scheduled to take the National Teachers Examination outside Chapel Hill may arrange to take it in Chapel Hill, according to J. W. Little, director of the Testing Service.

Anyone wishing to do so should leave their name and registration number at the reception office of the Testing Service in 019 Peabody Hall or call 933-2175 by 12:30 p.m. Saturday, March 5.

Morehead Scholars

A record number of 102 boys has been named winners of Morehead awards to study at UNC.

The awards are worth $5,800 to in - state students and $7,500 to out - of - state residents for four years of undergraduate study.

If all the winners accept their awards, there will be a total of 247 undergraduate Morehead scholars enrolled in Carolina next fall. Last year 67 awards were presented.

Anthropologist

Dr. Michael Coe of Yale University will speak to the Carolina Anthropology Club and the Anthropology Department on "Olmec Culture at the San Lorenzo Sit in Veracruz, Mexico" today.

Dr. Coe will speak in the Faculty Seminar Room in Carroll Hall 8:30 p.m.

Art Students

Five Carolina students have been selected to represent the UNC art department in the First National Exhibition at State University College, New Platz, N. Y.

The exhibit of paintings and drawings will be open April 7 to May 4. 13 leading art schools have submitted works. A purchase award and cash prizes will be given the winners.

WRC Recommends Late Permission For Jubilee

By PEYTIE FEARRINGTON
DTH Staff Writer

A recommendation for campus - wide late permission of 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday nights of Jubilee was approved unanimously by the Women's Residence Council Tuesday night. This petition was introduced by a Daily Tar Heel staff member Steve Bennett.

The administration had asked the Council to reconsider a recommendation for senior late permission. This recommendation was discussed and voted upon unanimously to stand as is.

A proposal to extend freshman closed study until spring vacation was offered. Suggestions to abolish the program all together were also advanced. Both of these questions will be reviewed again next week.

Mrs. Fulghum again proposed a stumbling block for senior late permission, "With the extra hours a house mother would have to work, the Dean of Women's office feels it is only fair to give the house mothers one night off a month. A substitute would have to be hired and paid. The graduate counsellors would have to be paid more for their extended service. A total of $25,000 per year is envolved."

She added, "If the money is available, the change will be made anyway, because of the increased enrollment of women and a desire to free the house mothers from some of their extensive duties."

The Council questioned the necessity of the house mother staying up every night when graduate counselors and trained members of House Council are present.

Four extra two - o'clocks on the third, sixth, ninth and twelfth Saturdays of fall and spring semesters passed by total consent.

Carol Ann Shaffer, who consulted with Dean Carmichael, proposed a plan to keep freshmen women in closed study until spring vacation.

A second proposal before council was a recommendation for total abolishment of closed study.

Brently Claris asserted, "I found closed study an opportune time to rearrange furniture and roll my hair."

Conversely, Mary Ann Fulton debated, "Dr. Lehman, freshman advisor for the General College, strongly urges closed study from her own studies and experience."

At this point discussion of closed study was postponed until next week.

Pledge Averages Wane With The School Year

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

The list of over 400 fraternity pledges and overall pledge class average of 2.605 was released yesterday by the Dean of Men's office.

The overall pledge class average is .055 higher this year than last. Last year the pledge class average was 2.550 the semester before pledging and dropped to 2.1 the semester after pledging.

Bob Kepner, assistant to the Dean of Men, said "I think it is a pity that the fraternity pledges performed so much worse in the spring last year than in the fall before they pledged.

"I think the higher overall averages should make the fraternities challenge themselves to help the pledges this year to perform just as well in the fall if not better."

The two reasons thought to be the greatest factors in the .45 drop in pledge class averages last year are the following;

1. It was the first year of deferred rush. Many fraternities tried to squeeze the usual sixteen - week pledging period into ten weeks resulting in some adverse effects.

2. The residence college system was not in effect during the fall of last year to offer social activities and therefore many pledges became involved in too many social activities during the spring semester.

4,003 Cars And 2,508 Spaces

There are no plans for increased campus parking spaces within the next few years. The present number of spaces is "adequate."

Since there are 4,003 student cars registered on campus (excluding T sticker holders, who can't park on campus) and only 2,508 student parking spaces, this raises a couple of interesting questions:

If you are one of the 379 students with an H sticker and you don't find a space open in one of the 335 spaces allocated to you, what do you do?

Go to Ramshead parking lot.

Either go to one of the other student parking areas which is already full, or—go to Ramshead parking lot.

And how many spaces does Ramshead have?

CARE Drive Collects $357.33, Prayer

Money and prayers were given in yesterday's drive to collect funds for CARE's use in Viet Nam.

The $357.33 collected were divided in this manner: $956 in ten and five dollar bills; $75 in ones; $28 in dimes; $139.75 in quarters; $14.65 in nickels; $4.93 in pennies; and a nun's for the success of the drive.

The largest single contribution was a $10 check.

Morgan "Spike" Mitchell, head of the drive, expressed thanks to those who helped in the drive: Bill Scott, Britt Gordon, Sonny Pepper, Honey Volkwein, Peggy Paul, Brenda Ballard, Nancy Mclean, Vickie Roveano, Sara Nash, Gail McGregor, Alice Graham, Pom Harris, Christie Rucker, Bob Klein, Flossie Collins, Hunter Jordan and The Daily Tar Hel.

Morgan said the funds would be used to "build a worthwhile friendship between the Vietnamese and our soldiers."

He said the drive would better the University's image in the state and nation.

Answer Was "No," But Verdict May Be "Yes"

The immediate reaction is indignation.

"How can he do this? I thought he was on our side."

Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson has barred Frank Wilkinson from speaking on the campus.

More than three weeks ago Sitterson had, along with the rest of the UNC administration, gone on record as supporting appearances here by Wilkinson and Herbert Aptheker.

Perhaps they have been. It all depends on Sitterson's motives.

* * *

He conferred with the joint student-faculty committee, which was reportedly split in its recommendations about permitting Wilkinson to speak. He conferred with the Faculty Advisory Committee.

But, as Sitterson said, "The decision is entirely my own."

He has been shrewd enough, however, to shift at least part of the burdem for the decision back to the executive committee of the board of trustees.

The committee ruled Feb. 7 that Aptheker and Wilkinson could not appear on the UNC campus.

"Even though I have the power to do so," Sitterson said, "I will not override the executive committee's decision because I consider it to be binding."

* * *

On the surface, about the best thing that can be said for such logic is that it is expedient.

Sitterson's other thoughts, if any, are his own business, but it is somewhat more comforting to look at the effect of his action.

More than anything else, this denial has strengthened a court test of the issue. The question of injury will be much easier to prove than if Wilkinson had been allowed to speak.

Approving his appearance would have settled this particular problem, but would still have left unresolved the possibility of future restrictions, although it seems likely that if Wilkinson and Aptheker would be allowed to speak, anyone would.

In any event, an affirmative statement by Sitterson, while superficially attractive, would have done little more than buy time.

Perhaps that would have been sufficient.

* * *

But the lines are clearly drawn now. There can be no uncertainty. A man was invited to speak on this campus, but he was denied that privilege because he has exercised his constitutional right of pleading the Fifth Amendment.

Student Body President Paul Dickson asked permission to use University facilities to play a recording of Wilkinson's speech, with Wilkinson himself sitting silently on the stage.

Sitterson refused to approve this.

It was also requested that someone else be allowed to read Wilkinson's speech for him.

This was also refused.

The stage is set. Act I, scene one, will be at Carroll Hall; scene two at the Hillel House.

Act II will be in a courtroom.

Coups Keep Sculptors Busy

As everybody knows, the busiest people in the underdeveloped countries are the painters and sculptors, especially after another Great Leader comes to power.

"I'm sick and tired of all these revolutions," said one sculptor living in a certain West African nation.

"At first," he said, "we sculptors kept asking the military to participate in our program of planned obsolescence by overthrowing the government every now and then so we could earn extra money working on new statues.

"But this is getting ridiculous — 15 coups in the past ten months. I enjoy overtime wages; but nowadays, my country's leaders never stay in power long enough to pay their bills.

"Of course, sometimes this doesn't matter. For instance, when there's a bloodless revolution, the deposed dictator frequently suffers pangs of conscience and sends us money from his Swiss bank account.

"Right now, we're appealing for American technical assistance. We hope to invent a statue whose right arm won't have to be replaced after each coup. You might say, then, that it will be revolutionarily different when compared with present designs.

"Models of this type, we suspect, will be outstandingly popular in countries like Algeria, Turkey, Uganda and Iraq. Presently, we are awaiting orders from Cuba and Indonesia — though I must confess that we're a bit behind production schedule due to last year's Viet Nam commitments.

"It's good that General Ky is faring so well; otherwise, we might not have time to develop new models, we'd be so busy building statues of Vietnamese prime ministers as they came and went.

"By the way, the United States very badly wants different statues erected in China and North Viet Nam. But Mao Tse-tung and Ho Chi Minh aren't so enthusiastic.

"Mao, incidentally, wonders how long the statues already built in his country will last. Lately, he says he regrets developing the atomic bomb, with which he claims the new generation of Chinese could greatly damage his image.

"Yes — lack of permanence is a big problem. Our products somehow are not as durable as they should be in countries with restless army leaders.

"There are many ways of making statues last. In the pro-Western countries, politicians turn to U. S. Marines. As for the socialistic nations — they most often use goon squads and secret police.

'I also notice that statues don't last long when Great Leaders leave their countries in diplomatic missions.

"If they'd stay at home, the power base on which the statues rest might be more permanent.

"Statues, you see, easily crumble unless they're supported by the people."

Only Social Reform Can Eliminate Ku Klux Klan

We have just witnessed another effort on the part of good Americans to rid the South of its perennial villains — the Ku Klux Klan. No effort was spared in portraying them as tiny, timid and terrible merchants of violence and discord. Their methods, ideas and ambitions were stripped of any legitamacy.

President Johnson urged men to get out of the Klan. Southern governors lamented at the extremes to which Klansmen had gone to attempt to bring about "state's rights" in the narrow sense. Most of the churches denounced the Klan as a travesty of Christianity and Negroes pleaded for federal help to stay the evil hand of these hooded bigots.

To get at the whole truth, the House Committee on Un-American Activities organized investigations and held hearings. It subpoenaed wizards, dragons, cyclops, kludds and other members of the Klan hierarchy. Government officials on all levels, as well as victims of Klan violence, disclosed fantastic plots that the hooded group had carried out or planned.

The only judgment that we can make of the hearings now is that the Klan is exposed in its wickedness and the publicity has, for the time being, caused it to lie dormant. No one can predict, for sure, what will happen to the Klan, but it is obvious that the hearings did not the destroy the Klan.

A less dramatic, but still persistent, effort must continue to rid the South of Klan-caused violence and intimidation. When Peter Young, formerly of WRAL, spoke here, he labeled the Klan as "indigent leaders" of a "white ghetto" who had little confidence in the government and who were left out of the move for social reform from which the Negro is benefiting so greatly.

I find little to argue with in this part of Mr. Young's argument. Indeed Klansmen are leaders in the poor white community from which most of them come. Their pleas for help from the government have been blunted by Southern politicians who tell them that the fact that the "uppity" Negro who is stepping out of "his place" is the real reason for their misfortune. They are told that it is their duty to protect the "white race" and the "American way of life" from the Negroes and Jews who seek to change it.

The element of religion, along with the injection of ritual and organization, lends "status" to the group. It is little wonder that they do what they do. The central point, then, is clear that the Klan's ways cannot be entirely harrassed or legislated out of existence.

A new way of life will have to be given them so that they no longer feel that the Negro is a threat to their security or that the government is not on their side. All poor and angry people need help — black and white alike.

To be sure, Klan violence and terror must be stopped. Law, alone, is not the answer. Since the force Acts of 1871, legal efforts have failed. What is needed is a "New Deal" to help the people. Klansmen who have the "gift of speech" or "administration" should be included to plan community development programs.

Klansmen and civil rights workers should join to unseat any politician who runs on the traditional Southern platform of "God, Mother and State's Rights." Racial friction in the South is more a matter of fear than hate. And if fear can be transmuted to fairmindedness, then there will be no Ku Klux Klan as we know it today.

In our vilification of the Klan, we must not forget that they have rights too. They have the right to free speech and free assembly. They have a right to believe in the segregation of the races. We must be careful only to see that they do not interfere with the rights of others and insure that they stay within the law. We must not, in affirming our case, censor another man's.

Finally, we must beware lest we not get at the central issues of poverty and lack of participation in decision-making roles. To these, our action must be directed. Every citizen should be allowed and encouraged to participate in the shaping of policy that affects him. The lack of participation is one of the reasons for the origin of the civil rights movement and the KKK. The South must respond to the legitimate demands of both of these groups if the friction in our region is to end.

The Klan represents a corn on the South's foot. This corn is caused by a tight fitting shoe that does not allow a fully interacting society. Today, the South must make a choice. It can cut the corn off (i.e. outlaw and repress the Klan) or it can apply a mild ointment (i.e. temporarily embarrass the Klan into inaction).

Both of these have been tried in the past. Both have failed. The best solution, I think, is to cut off the corn and put on a shoe that fits. This will allow a free society with plenty of room for healthful and fearless interaction among all strata of society.

Commission Is Working On Check Problem

By GWYN BRANNON
Secretary, Student Credit Commission

There is some clarification necessary concerning Steve Lackey's article last Friday on the Student Credit Commission. As a member of the committee under chairman Ralph Grosswald, I commend the DTH for bringing this problem of bad checks before the students — something our committee was to do in the near future (we meet next week).

However, if the students are to be well informed, it should not be by a misinformed or perhaps slanted point of view. Therefore, I wuld like to fill in the gaps in Mr. Lackey's research.

As for the failure of this year's committee, it is important to note that Ralph Grosswald was given this committee with nearly full liberty. Because student body President Paul Dickson had no file or records whatsoever on past proceedings of the committee, he was relying on Mr. Grosswald to bring this committee to life from the oblivion of student legislation.

Therefore it was necessary to set goals and objectives, but the four meetings were not all concerned with defining our purpose, as Lackey misquotes Grosswald as saying. The meetings were also concerned with ways to strengthen bonds between merchants and the students, and with a project which Mr. Lackety obviously felt was not worthy of further clarification.

This is what he refers to as "a downtown sale in which students will participate," and he criticizes this for not being authorized by the bill. The bill he refers to is a few sentences which provide for the committee as a liaison between the city of Chapel Hill and the University, besides the handling of bad checks.

This project is a sale with campus wide publicity for the merchants where a percentage would be donated to "Campus Chest" — thus benefitting both merchants and students. No, this is not specified as such in the bill, but it is certainly within the eleasticity of the role of the committee, and it has been reviewed and approved by Paul Dickson.

In pursuing the position of liaison between the University and the city, Ralph Grosswald has met with Merchants Association President Doug Powell. Mr. Powell informed Ralph of a city "Solicitations Control Board" which is supposed to hear all requests for donations or class sales before the merchants are approached. This is to keep merchants from being badgered for a handout by every organization on campus.

As a result the three newly elected class presidents have been sent letters by the committee informing them of the Solicitations Board.

In further steps, Mr. Grosswald and others on the committee attend the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen meetings, so that if legislation comes up concerning the students (such as zoning in fraternity areas, or parking laws on city streets) they can notify the student body. Therefore, it is obvious that positive steps are being taken on this count.

Concerning the bad checks, it is true that in past years nothing has been done, but this year the committee is trying to find a concrete procedure for handling them. Mr. Lackey also omits the fact that John Ingram, the Attorney General, has been consulted twice, and has concurred with Mr. Grosswald's plans.

The Lenoir Hall problem with bad checks is a big one, and Mrs. Margarite Bou-Raad of Lenoir Hall is working closely with the committee. She turns over to the committee the names of those people that she cannot contact, or the names of flagrant violators.

Though Mr. Lackey seems to mock the committee's decision to hold off on the entire city's bad checks, to "decide whether we can handle this," maybe he should be informed that Lenoir Hall alone gets more than 40 bad checks a week.

It is obvious that we cannot handle all bad checks. Therefore we will go on the counsel of John Ingram and Ralph Grosswald in deciding on a policy at the meeting next week.

What is being done with Lenoir Hall is that students who have more than one violation or a violation for a large sum of money, are contacted and informed that they have 30 days to correct this or they can be tried under the Honor Code.

This has appeared to bring results — now that these students are aware of the seriousness of this offense. We will evaluate these steps at the meeting and try to expand on them to include uptown.

Mr. Lackey's article begins with the thesis that the present commission under Ralph Grosswald has failed, but as I have illustrated, the committee has taken positive and significant steps in both areas of its concern, and deserves some commendation for successes with a previously unfunctioning part of Student Government. We have laid the foundations for continued progress in relations with the merchants and also for dealing with bad checks, a serious problem on this campus.

Symposium Speaker

Algren Will Discuss Myths

American novelist and short story writer Nelson Algren, spokesman of the "hep - people," "Tarts," and "Drifters of no trade whose voices, unremembered, speak in the city wires overhead," will speak at this year's Carolina Symposium.

Algren's brutally frank yet undeniably compassionate nature is expected to furnish the Symposium with one of its most dynamic and vividly sensitive speakers.

In accord with this year's "Man, Mind, and Myth" topic, Algren will deliver his April 19 address on "Myth and Mores."

Algren spent most of his childhood in the slums of Chicago. The bars, slums, and brothels, and the violence of the Polish immigrant community serve as background for most of his novels and short stories.

He attended the University of Illinois and received a degree in Journalism, but preferring more creative work, Algren spent only three weeks doing newspaper work. After receiving his degree in the middle of the depression, Algren drifted about the South and Southwest for several years working first as a door - to - door salesman and later as a migratory laborer.

He wrote his first short story, "So Help Me," while stranded in an abandoned Texas gas station in 1933. He sent it to a friend who had it published in "Story" magazine. This early success gave Algren the impetus he needed to embark upon a career of writing.

Algren's first novel, "Somebody in Boots," was published in 1935. It was virtually unnoticed, and failed to see more than 750 copies. "Never Come Morning." published in 1942, repeated his previously unsuccessful theme of poverty and crime in the Polish slums of Chicago, but achieved mild success in the literary world.

In 1949, The Man with the Gold Arm was published, establishing Algren at last as a significant post - war writer. His sharp definition of the characters in this story of the Chicago crime syndicate led the New York Herald Tribune to label Algren's style as "reminiscent of Thomas Wolfe." Time Magazine called it "one of the finest works of that year." The book became a best seller and received the National Book Award as" the most distinguished American novel of 1949."

A shy man, Algren served in the army from 1942 to 1945 "I went in the Army a private, stayed three years, and came out a private," he says.

He is married and lives in Gary, Ind., where he is known as "the poet of the Chicago slums."

Emotional Problems Don't Destroy Student's Chances

Is the high school student being treated for emotional problems going to be a poor risk when he enters college?

Not necessarily, according to the director of psychiatry for the University of Rochester's Student Health Services.

"A more or less successful adjustment to college does not seem to bear any consistent relationship to previous psychiatric treatment," Dr. Alex Braiman said in an academic lecture here at the UNC Psychiatric Center.

"The important thing to know about freshmen," he added, "is that they have completed preparation for college successfully and that their academic and social performance in high school was within the acceptable range for our college."

These things, he said, tell more about the mental health of an entering freshman than psychological tests or doctors' reports about psychiatric treatment.

As far as Dr. Braiman is concerned, the main question is whether the new freshman can function in a college situation. "At this point, I know no other way to resolve this question except to give him a chance."

The Student Health Service at the University of Rochester has handled entering freshmen two ways: it has looked at records to identify students with previous emotional problems; and, on other occasions, it has chosen not to know which students have recrds of psychiatric treatment.

"After trying it both way,s" Dr. Braiman reported, "our experience tells us that as far as the entering freshman is concerned, we in the Student Health Service need not possess his psychiatric history before a student demonstrates inability to function."

He hastened to explain that the policy is different for the student who experiences his problems while in the college situation and has to leave for medical reasons.

"We then feel we must make the judgment as to when he can return and resume his studies," he said. "We ask to see the student and interview him to judge his capcity for coping with our college environment."

Should the college student with emotional difficulties be allowed to drop some of his courses, skip classes or be excused from routine homework?

Dr. Braiman's experience has been that manipulating a student's school environment to fit in with his neurotic or psychotic disorders usually backfires.

"The therapeutic impact of a college environment," he said, "is not synonymous with motherliness and acceptance of all behavior."

Dr. Braiman cautioned that no uniform treatment exists for all students. "Clearly," he said, "Advocating one approach fitting every student is beyond the art and science of present - day psychotherapy."

'Ideal Theater' Now At Ackland

"The Ideal Theater: Eight Concepts," a pictorial exhibition of new theater designs, will be on view in the north gallery of the Ackland Art Center through March 19.

Eight new theaters were created by designer - architect teams selected and subsidized by the Ford Foundation Program in Humanities and Arts.

In collaboration with the Department of City and Regional Planning, a pictorial exhibition entitled "Calcutta — Textures of a City" will be on view through March 19 in the south gallery.

GIVE TO HEART

Heart and blood vessel diseases strike in many ways, UNC President William C. Friday, State Heart Fund Chairman, says that one effective way for Tar Heels to strike back is with a gift to the Hearth Fund.

Swanson Wins Fellowship

David M. Swanson of Pilot Mountain has been named by the University to receive the coveted $5.000 Corning Glass Works Foundation Traveling Fellowship.

Announcement of the winner's name was made by Dr. Claude George of the UNC School of Business Administration, chairman of the final selection committee.

The only stipulations by Corning Glass is that the student plan to follow a career in industry, be single and a citizen of the United States.

Dr. George pointed out that the scholarship cannot be used for study in an institution of higher learning, but must be used for travel.

Swanson's plans are incomplete at present, but his tentative schedule calls for visits to South America, the European Common Market countries and India.

"I'm most interested," Swanson said today, "in studying the market potential and production facilities in underdeveloped nations."

A senior at UNC, he will receive the B.S. degree in business administration in June. This summer he will work for Corning Glass Works, Corning, N. Y. This period will be used to acquaint fellowship winners with problems and opportunities facing American industry.

Four other current fellowship winners are from Harvard, Vanderbilt, the University of Kentucky and Yale.

After a summer at the Corning plant, each fellowship winner will leave in September for his one - year world tour. Each will return the following September.

When Swanson returns to the United States in 1967 he plans to begin work toward a Ph.D. degree in economics. For the past two summers he has been a management trainee for Burlington Industries in Greensboro where he has specialized in data processing and operations research.

The UNC senior is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Swanson and a graduate of East Surry High School in Pilot Mountain.

On campus Swanson is president of Beta Gamma Sigma, business honorary fraternity, is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national scholarship fraternity, Phi Gamma Delta social fraternity and as a freshman was a member of Phi Eta Sigma, honorary freshman fraternity.

FAT INTAKE

North Carolinians should lower their dietary fat intake. A diet high in saturated fats increases the risk of heart attack, says the North Carolina Heart Association.

WUNC HIGHLIGHTS

THE ARTS: USA — MUSIC — 8:00 p.m. — "Jazz: The Experimenters" Taped at the "Villiage Gate," a New York nightclub specializing in contemporary jazz, this program features music by pianist-composer Cecil Taylor; the Cecil Taylor group plaing "Octagonal Skirts and Fancy Pants;" bass player Charles Mingus and his group playing two Mingus compositions, "The Arts of Art Tatum and Freddie Webster" and "Don't Let it Happen Here." Novelist Ralph Ellison, host for this program, is joined by jazz critic Martin Williams — for comment on this controversial music known as experimental jazz, considered by some critics a new flowering of jazz and by others as a dead end of the art.

Traffic Deaths Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson asked Congress yesterday to create a cabinet-level Department of Transportation and give it command over a $700-million, six-year traffic safety program.

"The carnage on the highways must be arrested," Johnson said in a special message. He proposed the merging of a dozen agencies having nearly 100,000 workers — including the Coast Guard — into what would be the fifth largest cabinet department.

The 17-page message placed heaviest emphasis on land, sea and air safety. It jolted the auto and rubber industries with requests that Congress promptly:

1. Authorize the Secretary of Commerce to prescribe mandatory nationwide safety standards for all motor vehicles if, after two years, the industry has not adopted voluntary standards which the secretary finds satisfactory.

"He would be also authorized to prohibit the sale in interstate commerce of new vehicles . . . which failed to meet those standards," Johnson said. The safety-equipment rules also would apply to foreign cars sold in this country.

2. Enact the pending Tire Safety Bill. This would empower the secretary to fix compulsory minimum standards for tires. Most tires sold in America are safe, Johnson said, but:

"Nevertheless, evidence has shown that increasing numbers of inferior tires are being sold to unwitting customers throughout the country.

Marines Battle Viet Cong

SAIGON (AP) — Khaki-clad Viet Cong sought yesterday to halt U.S. Marines lancing up a peninsula 12 miles southeast of Hue. A hard-core battalion identified as the 810th battled two leatherneck companies for ground long held by the Communists.

Heavy fighting was under way at last reports from that area, 400 miles north of Saigon, but Marine headquarters at Da Nang said Marine casualties were light. Viet Cong losses were not known.

Down the coast troopers of the U. S. 5th Cavalry regiment captured 33 guerrilla suspects who ducked into caves when they were surprised on a beach near Bong Son, 300 miles northeast of Saigon. Another man, who chose to try to swim away, vainished at sea after spurning efforts of helicopter gunners to herd him back to shore. The caves yielded a cache of carbine ammunition.

Vietnamese rangers and militamen cooperated in smashing two Viet Cong ambushes in the central highlands near Pleiku, 240 miles north of Saigon. They killed 50 and picked up two dozen weapons, including three U.S.-made Browning automatic rifles.

N-Bombs Blown Apart In Air Crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two nuclear bombs were blown apart by their conventional explosive charges when a U. S. B 52 bomber crashed near Palomares, Spain, Defense Department officials said yesterday. But there was no nuclear explosion, a spokesman said.

The Defense official made their report after the State Department acknowledged yesterday that some plutonium and uranium — elements of a nuclear bomb — were scattered over the ground around the crash scene.

The State Department's announcement was the first acknowledgment that some nuclear material was scattered in the crash 44 days ago.

A Pentago official said four nuclear boms were aboard the craft.

The Pentagon spokesman reported no serious health hazard has been found. Nevertheless, he said, the Atomic Energy Commission is preparing to remove hundreds of tons of Spanish soil around the crash site for shipment to the United States and eventual disposal.

The impact of the crash, defense spokesmen said, touched off conventional detonators in two of the bombs, blasting plutonium 239 and uranium 235 materials over an area estimated by the Pentagon of around 100 feet.

U.S. Forces Not Extended

McNamara said he issued that pronouncement lest there be miscalculation of America's ability — with 300,000 men in Southeast Asia — to cope with crises elsewhere.

McNamara also announced he has authorized an increase in U. S. forces in South Viet Nam to 235,000 men. He said this strength could be boosted to over 350,000 without calling reservists to active duty.

He told a news conference another 20,000 troops have been ordered to Viet Nam, on top of the 215,000 already there.

This was the first public disclosure that U. S. armed strength in Viet Nam already had reached as high as 215,000.

McNamara also said the United States has the capability to send 21 more battalions to Viet Nam within the next 90 days, if such action should be required.

The Defense Secretary said however, that based on his present assessment, such action is not likely.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey argued the administration's case on Viet Nam in another forum — the Senate Foreign Relations committee, which has become a focus of dissent about the war in South Viet Nam.

Flanked by two advisers, Humphrey faced the Committee and a handful of other Senators behind closed doors at the Capitol.

"I don't think there is any fighting," Humphrey said as he entered. "My name isn't Cassius Clay."

House Republican leaders —denying they seek to make the war in Viet Nam a political issue — called on President Johnson to disavow Democrats who state "divisive debate" about the U. S. commitment.

McNamara denied that the U. S. stand in South Viet Nam — which has sent 205,000 American troops to that embattled land and posted thousands more nearby — has overextended the U. S. military establishment.

"Far from overextending ourselves, we have actually strengthened our military position," the Defense Secretary said in a seven-page rebuttal to military analysts he did not name.

McNamara said newspaper accounts have given the impression that because of the war in Viet Nam, the United States "is now militarily overextended and would not be able to meet other contingencies. . .

"It is not true," he said.

Pentagon sources said McNamara's report was prompted by a Feb. 21 article by Hanson W. Baldwin, military analyst of the New York Times. In it, Baldwin said U. S. forces are spread dangerously thin in Viet Nam and elsewhere.

McNamara said that is not so.

ACC Tourney Begins Opening Rounds Today

GENE RECTOR
DTH Sports Editor

Play for keeps begins today in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball race as all eight clubs battle in the opening round of the 13th annual ACC Tournament in Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum.

Clemson and South Carolina open the action at 1:30 p.m. N. C. State plays Virginia at 3:30. Duke and Wake Forest play at 7 p.m. with North Carolina against Maryland following.

The winner of the three - day tournament will represent the conference in the NCAA Eastern Regionals later this month.

The North Carolina - Maryland contest, matching the fourth and fifth seeded teams, promises to be the opening - round headliner. The two clubs split their two regular season games—both winning at home.

North Carolina, with an 8-6 regular season record, finished in a tie with the Clemson Tigers for third place in the final standings. A post - season drawing between the two clubs placed the Tigers in third and UNC in fourth.

Maryland finished in fifth place with a 7-7 record.

The contest will boast four of the top 12 scorers in the conference this season. North Carolina's offense centers around Bobby Lewis and Larry Miller while Maryland depends on Gary Ward and Jay McMillen.

Lewis led the conference in scoring this season with a 28.4 average. Miller finished fourth with a 21.4 average. Ward is the leading Maryland scorer — averaging 17.6 per game. McMillen follows with a 15.6 average.

"If we can get by Maryland, we have a good chance to win the tournament," said UNC coach Dean Smith. "There's one advantage in playing a tough team such as Maryland in the opening round —there is no danger of looking ahead to the second game.

"This is the same Maryland club everyone picked to finish second in the ACC this season," said Smith. "Of course they lost some close games — to Clemson and State — and then blew a 15 - point second half lead over Duke.

"But don't forget that Maryland beat us twice last season and all five of those starters will play tonight.

"Maryland has a strong rebounding club," he continued. "McMillen, 6-7; Ward, 6-5; and Rick Wise, 6-8 give them the advantage."

The Duke Blue Devils, who finished first in the ACC with a 12-2 record, can not afford to rest against the Deacons of Wake Forest. The Deacons, led by high - scoring Bob Leonard and Paul Long, handed the Blue Dvils one of those two defeats — 99-98.

Of course the Blue Devils, top - seeded in the tournament, have a tradition to uphold. The regular season winner has won the tournament championship seven of 12 times.

Defending champion and home-standing N. C. State leads all clubs in total tournament championships with five. Duke has won three, Wake Forest two and UNC and Maryland one each.

Wake Forest has reached the finals seven times, Duke six and N. C. State five.

Five of the eight clubs in this year's tournament have winning records this season. Duke, third ranked in the nation, leads with a 20-3 record. N. C. State is 16-8; Clemson, 15-9; Carolina, 15-10; and Maryland 14-10.

One interesting area concerns last year's all - tournament selections. Steve Vacendak and Bob Verga of Duke, Larry Lakins and Larry Worsley of N. C. State and Wake Forest's Bob Leonard were on that all - tourney team. Four of those participants return this season. Only State's Larry Lakins is gone.

Bubas Feels Blue Devils Can Win Tournament

By REESE HART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — "I made up my mind weeks ago, we've got to be great three days in a row to win the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament," Duke Coach Vic Bubas said Wednesday.

"We realize we've got our work cut out, but I believe our boys can do the job," said Bubas, whose top-seeded Blue Devils are ranked third nationally in the Associated Press Poll.

"I think this definitely will be the greatest tournament in conference history," said N. C. State Coach Press Maravich, whose team defeated Duke 91-85 in last year's finals.

"The pressure will be heavy on opening day," said Maravich. "This is an eight-cylinder tournament this year. Last year it was a five or six-cylinder job."

Duke and N. C. State are favored to reach the finals. The Blue Devils have defeated the Wolfpack twice this season. Their only conference losses were to South Carolina and Wake Forest.

The tournament was a sellout before tickets went on public sale and for the first time in history, the eight ACC schools sold all the tickets sent them.

South Carolina Coach Frank McGuire picks N. C. State to win the title. "They've got the home court and I can't emphasize that advantage enough," he said.

Maravich opined: "I hope McGuire is a good prognosticator. We sure would like to win the last time here." He was referring to the fact the tournament moves to Greensboro next year and will be held in Charlotte in 1968.

Fauntleroy

By popular demand the kid's back on the job.

Now, I feel a little ridiculous about that sob story I wrote last Saturday. It was dripping with soap-opera sentiment. I'd had a few beers when I tapped it out on the ol' typewriter. I re-read it the next morning when it appeared in the papers across the nation. After scanning the sentences I cupped my hand over my mouth and made a sprint for the bathroom.

I've had a lot of mail coming in this week. About 80 per cent of it was from folks just begging me to return gloriously to the printed page. Well, its been a long season and I'm due for a long vacation.

What swayed me back into print? Did I hear your cry?

Well, to be honest, it was the letters I received from the ACC basketball coaches. It seems that many of them have developed cronic ulcer conditions. And those who haven't have bitten their fingernails and kept right on chewing 'til they got to their elbows. They say that they can't live through the tournament games unless they know for certain who's going to win what before the teams race onto the floor.

TODAY:
SOUTH CAROLINA over Clemson (Frankie the Fox)
N. C. STATE over Virginia (Shades of Ev Case)
DUKE over Wake Forest (Tourney point record?)
TAR HEELS over Maryland (Game-of-the-Day)

Parrish Scores 35 In Phi Delt Victory

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

Earley's 23 points led Kappa Psi Green over Pi Kap Phi No. 1, 63-46. Jim Henson scored 31 points in a vain effort for Pi Kap Phi.

The Phi Gam Fijis edged Phi Delt White, 42-40 as Titchener had 13 points. Harry Stovall tallied 16 for the Phi Delts.

Kap Sig Green defeated KA Blue II, 43-38, behind Dave Erisman's 19 points. Perry led the KA's with 14 points.

Robbins and Evans scored 14 each as DU Blue III dumped KA Red II, 49-27.

Leder had 19 points in Pi Lamb II's 56-12 slaughter of St. A. White.

Zeta Psi had a balanced attack led by Harrison with 14 as they beat ATO II, 47-27.

The ZBT Zebes got 18 points from Robert Kohn and Richard Gitelson in a 51-34 victory over ASPsi. Minisman had 10 more for ZBT.

Other fraternity scores: Chi Psi Blue 46, Beta Blue I 15; SAE Blue I 42, Lambda Chi Clowns 18; Delta Sig Rigs 29, Sig Ep Stallions 19; ATO III 22, Sigma Chi 19; Sig Ep Bisons 30, PiKap Phi No. 220.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes continued undefeated by completely demolishing the Baptist Student Union, 141-30. Bill Edwards hit 28 points, McLaughlin had 26, Mike Knowles 23, Frank Gibbs 23 and Jimmy Byrd 22. The Baptists, pardon the pun, didn't even have a paryer as the FAC sank 67 field goals.

Bucky Layton flipped in 22 points as Stacy beat Evertt, 64-30. Glen Brewer added 16 and Milvin Phifer 12 for Stacy.

The Joyner Supporters blasted the Joyner Lyons, 97-34, as Cochrane scored 27 points and White 20. Dawson and Carlton had 16 each.

Ronnie Funderburk had 20 points and Roy Alexander 19 as Old West slapped Old East, 77-59. Bill Davis had 17 and Kern Everett 16 more for Old West. John Clower and Allen Tew led Old East with 13 each.

Cosmopolitan Club Seeks More Cultural Exchange

There is at least one club on campus that is truly cosmopolitan in character. Three-fourths of its 80 members are from foreign countries — and nearly every nation in the world is represented from Afghanistan to Zambia.

The club is called, appropriately enough, the Cosmopolitan Club and its purpose is to help newly arrived foreign students learn of their environment and to further cultural exchange among students from various parts of the world.

Club membership is open to all foreign students and interested Americans. Members meet each Monday night upstairs in Lenoir Hall at 5:30 p.m. and anyone is invited to attend.

The program includes speakers from various countries talking about their homeland, or professors or students who have traveled in foreign lands. This Monday night's speaker will be Dr. Schwartz of the Political Science Department who spent a year studying at the University of Moscow.

X-Rays In Galaxies Found

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy scientists today reported discovery of x-rays coming from space far beyond the Milky Way.

And they said the discovery suggests that certain peculiar galaxies may pack vastly more energy than previously thought —and may be sparked by something in addition to hydrogen bomb - type energy that fuels the rest of the cosmos.

The discovery is so important, they told a new conference, that it would be fruitful eventually to try to erect a huge "fence" of 1,000 geiger counros as x-ray detectors on the moon — assuming man gets there — to study the strange emissions from deep in space.

The x-rays, detected by sensitive geiger counters in an Aerobee rocket, were found to come from two different galaxies — one of them 700 million light - years from the earth, the other one 35 million light-year away.

A light year is 6 million - million miles — or the distance travelled in a year by light moving 186,000 miles a second.

The toal x-ray energy generated in each source is estimated to be equivalent to the energy of tens of thousands of stars like our sun.

South Building Target

CFI Begins Picket; Sit-Ins Threatened

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

Members of the Committee For Free Inquiry will picket South Building today from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. protesting Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson's decision denying Frank Wilkinson and Paul Dickson speaking privileges in Carroll Hall Wednesday night.

Meeting in the absence of Dickson, who was in Greensboro conferring with lawyers about a prospective court case, the committee voted to picket South Building daily until Communist Herbert Aptheker's scheduled appearance next Wednesday.

The body also voted to stage a sit-in beginning the afternoon Aptheker is to speak. and enter the room before it can be locked. They will sit until they are asked to leave, which they will do without protest.

The meeting was controlled by the left wing after Bob Keiser a member of the steering committee, took the chair from Richard French who has acted as a moderating influence since the committee was formed.

Dickson who is chairman of the committee and president of the student body, is on record as being opposed to picketing.

After returning from Greensboro, Dickson said "Demonstrations are applicable only when all else fails."

Dickson said he talked with several lawyers yesterday and that their reaction was favorable.

Gary Waller, former vice chairman of SDS, said the picketing and signs should be directed toward Sitterson.

"He has already decided Aptheker cannot speak. By denying Dickson his right to speak the other night Sitterson went beyond what was necessary, purposely," Waller said.

1. "Why can't Aptheker come here?
2. "Why were students locked out of Carroll Hall?
3. "Why was Paul Dickson, neigher a Communist nor a Fifth Amendment pleader, banned from speaking?
4. "Why are we being treated like children?
5. "Why is this unconstitutional law being perpetuated in Chapel Hill?"

About 35 people volunteered to picket. They met after the meeting to discuss picketing plans. Booths will also be set up around South Building to explain the purpose of the picketing.

French said that as of now a possible suit would be based on the inequality of speaking facilities, students being locked out of Carroll Hall, and people being unable to get into the main hall to hear Wilkinson speak Wednesday night.

Letter Says Dickson Refuses Moderation

The following letter was pinned on the bulletin board in the social room of Manning Hall yesterday. A total of 93 signatures had been collected at that time.

At least one law student felt that it was put there by what he termed "a vocal minority."

To The Daily Tar Heel:

"We, the undersigned, wish to express our resentment at the immature and ill-considered actions of the student body President and those other so-called leaders who refuse to exercise the moderation and understanding that is indepensible to effective leadership.

"We deplore the dramatic little incidents which are conceived solely to inject new life into an irrational and emotional controversy. We feel that they serve only to solidify positions and prevent the implementation of a much needed compromise.

"We recognize and fully endorse the right to free speech; we differ however with the means being utilized in an effort to protect this fundamental right. We feel that under the present circumstances the only solution is restraint on the part of those who are in a position of respect. We earnestly request that these so-called leaders consider the fact that they occupy temporary positions at the University, but that the University must exist in a political climate which they in a large part will determine.

"We sincerely hope that those students who feel that the only solution is a "cooling off" period, with restraint and understanding on both sides, will use their influence upon those who would risk the destruction of this University."

Elephant Grass And Profs

Dear Faculty,

Congratulations on your ingenious efforts to send me to Viet Nam. With luck you just might succeed. In fact there is very little doubt, I've been . . .

Here it is March 3 and I haven't had a major test. But that will soon come to an end — and how.

YOU SEE this professor in the English department decided some time ago that we would have our first test on Thursday, March 10. That's not too bad. I've kept up fairly well, and with a little time for preparation I might have been able to do well.

But then the German department head heard that the English department was giving a test on Thursday, so they had to give their first test on Wednesday, March 9. Of course they wanted to twist the knife, so we'll have an oral test the same night.

Two tests and an oral all in two days . . . it could have been worse . . . and it was.

There's this nut in the geography department. Well, he figured with all the activity going on that Friday the eleventh would be ideal for our first major geography test about winds, clouds and all that good stuff. He's definitely out to get me—he will.

So, for the past few days I've made feverish preparations in a futile effort to get ready for my "now" three consecutive days of major tests and my oral.

BUT!! The political science department, always good for a laugh, figured that next week should bring a lull in free speech rallies. So they decided to try and catch all the "polisci-" students who haven't kept up with their reading with a major test on Tuesday the eighth—and they have.

So, it looks like a big weekend and an even bigger week ahead. It's either that or elephant grass and live ammunition. Those professors ought to be sent "over there." They shoot you full of holes better than anyone I know.

Just one request for those dear people who have my number — draft board number that is — please make those tests easy.

It's Nauseating

It's bad enough when Charlotte College has to steal our name and become part of the University of North Carolina.

That was a ridiculous move. But the most nauseating thing that has ever happened involved their new student newspaper The Carolina Journal.

In their edition of Feb. 23 they had the gall to steal our Trivia! They just took questions right out of the DTH and used them without giving the DTH credit. It's preposterous.

State's 'Brain' Not Best

Is Strong wrong? Is the central records chief mistaken when he syas NC State's computor has more "brains" than UNC's?

Yep, Ray Strong's wrong, said William Fisher, a programmer in UNC's computation department, in a concerned phone call to The Daily Tar Heel yesterday.

"Our computor," continues Fisher, is 100 times faster than State's. It also has a 15 times greater memory."

"In fact, our Univac 1105 completed the biggest data processing job ever attempted by anyone — the 1960 U.S. census report.

"I don't know why Strong gave you that information. The only thing we do for him on the Univac is the payroll."

Fisher was replying to Strong's statement Tuesday that UNC student's quality point averages broken down into residence groups were not available as soon as State's because they have a better computor.

Contempt Charges Brought Against Seven Klansmen

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sven Southern ers identified as Ku Klux Klan officers were indicted yesterday on charges of they did not submit Klan records subpoenaed by a House committee.

The seven, including Robert M. Shelton, imperial wizard of the United Klans of America, are expected to be arraigned soon. Prior to trailing U. S. District Court each is charged on one count of contempt and, if convicted, would be subject to a maximum sentence of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

The indictments trace to a recently concluded investigation by the House Committee on Un-American Activities during which the seven did not produce subpoenaed Klan records. Some declined to produce them, others said they had none.

They refused also to answer questions most Klan actions, invoking their constitutional guarantees against self-incrimination but they were not indicted for these refusals to talk.

The contempt citations were shaped by the committee, approved by the House and submitted to the Justice Department which presented the case to the federal grand jury which returned yesterday's indictments.

Charged by the Grand Jury are Shelton, 36, a former tire salesman from Tuscaloosa, Ala.; James R. Jones, 36, Granite Quary, N. C.; Robert Hudgins, 32, Cary, N. C.; Robert E. Scoggin, 43, Spartanburg, S. C.; Calvin Fred Craig, 37, Atlanta; Marshall R. Kornegay, 37, Raleigh, N. C.; and George Franklin Dorsett, 48, Greensboro, N. C.

In Tuscaloosa, Shelton said the indictment is "just further harassment of the federal bureaucracy" and came as no surprise. He added "when we get into court I'm sure the issues will be quite different."

The indictments are the only concrete legal result thus far of hearings started last autumn and concluded last week. The committee now is considering possible legislation to restrict Klan activities.

With nearly all of the scores of Klansmen - witnesses refusing to answer questions, the investigation record was built largely on reports of committee investigators who dug into Klan activities for months before the hearings began.

But Rep. Joe Pool, D.-Tex., said that the inquiry ended that the hearings established that the Klan is made up largely of "sneaky, cowardly men" filled with hatred and bigotry and given to violence.

MRC Adopts New Bylaws

By STEVE LACKEY
Dth Staff Writer

New By-laws for the Men's Residence Council were adopted Wednesday night. The rules were approved so that the MRC can function in accord with the Residence College System.

MRC members from each living unit shall now be "composed of the Governor, Academic Lieutenant Governor, Social Lieutenant Governor, and Speaker of the Senate (or a representative of the Senate) of each Residence College."

Residence officers no longer must have an overall 2.0 (C) average to be elected. The requirement now is that anyone elected to office must have at least a C average for the two semesters preceding his election.

Other business at the meeting included the establishment of two new residence awards: the Roger A. Davis Memorial Award for Outstanding Service to Residence Halls and an award for the Most Outstanding Residence Service Project.

Damage to residence halls has increased considerably since January, according to a report from the MR CCourt.

Some students have gone so far as to set fire to bulletin boards and doors, the report said.

The punishment for this offense under MRC Court rules is severe, ranging from probation to residence hall suspension.

Hey Buddy, Want To See A Coed Become A Bunny?

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

What has beauty, bare skin, and sometime sprouts long ears and a fuzzy tail?

First, says a Playmate qualification sheet, she must have beauty, figure, and background in this order of importance.

To prove she has beauty, figure and background, the young hopeful must submit several good photographs of herself in a bathing suit.

These pictures must be in sharp focus and must show her in full length and in close up.

If, after close inspection of the photos, Playboy decides the nymph has beauty, figure and background, she will be required to undergo further photographic sessions for the Playmate calendar and review and for a picture story and lead color review.

Payment upon completion of all photography is $1,500. Additional payment upon publication of the Playmate story is $1,000.

A minimum of $2,500 is additionally guaranteed if the girl is deemed eligible for the Playmate promotion contract, as over 90% of previous Playmates were. Merchandise gifts are also presented to the Playmate on publication.

Several members of The Daily Tar Heel staff have offered to help any interested coed decide which pictures to send. In fact, Ed Freakley has offered to take the photographs. You can't beat that.

Friday To Speak On Freedom

Dr. William C. Friday, President of the Consolidated University, will speak to the Student Forum at the University Baptist Church at 6:45 p.m. Sunday March 6.

Friday's topic will be "Freedom and the University." The University Baptist Church is located on S. Columbia St.

Fire Hits Phi Gam

A fire of undetermined origin damaged a room in the Phi Gamma Delta house on Cameron Ave. last night around 7:30.

The fire department sent one truck and put out the fire in less than half an hour. Fire fighters had to chop through a wall and window frame to bring the fire under control.

Li'l Abner

The Theater of UNC-G will present "L'il Abner" in Memorial Hall 8 p.m. Sunday. Admission will be free and no tickets will be needed.

The cast will make a USO tour of Europe with "Li'l Abner" in one month.

Debaters At Duke

Student debaters from 18 Southeastern colleges and universities, including UNC, will meet today at Duke for two days of arguments concerning effective law enforment measures.

The debaters will explore the topic "Resolved: That law enforcement agencies in the United States should have greater freedom in the investigation and prosecution of crime."

Theatre Symposium

The Carolina Dramatic Association will be host to a Theatre Arts Symposium for teachers, directors and administrators in North Carolina institutions of higher learning tomorrow.

The Symposium will be held in the faculty lounge of the Morehead Building. It will be divided into a morning session, beginning at 10 a.m., and an afternoon session beginnig at 2 p.m.

Mad Hatter's Party

The dance, featuring the Shadows, will be held 8-12 p.m. in the Faculty Club above the Monogram Dining Room. Admission and refreshments will be free. The dance will be open to couples only.

Sports Car Rally

The Piedmont Sports Car Club will hold a "Hare and Hound Rally", Sunday starting at noon at Lakewood Shopping Center on Chapel Hill Road in Durham.

The first first cars will leave the starting point at 1 p.m. Entrance fees will be $3.00 non - members and $2 for PSCC members.

Lederle Faculty Award

Dr. Harold R. Roberts, assistant professor of pathology and medicine at the Carolina School of Medicine, has been selected a recipient of a Lederle Medical Faculty Award.

Lederle awards, valued at up to $10,000 for each of three years, are to promote the abilities of young physicians in the U. S. and Canada.

Planetarium Program

This will be the last weekend presentation of the current program, "Zodiac," at the Morehead Planetarium.

ERNIE McCRARY, EDITOR

Ed. Note — The speaker ban controversy has drawn prolific editorial comment in North Carolina and other states as well. While the debate continues in this state, legislatures of many others including Georgia, South Carolina and Kentucky, have been or are considering similar speaker regulations. So far, all have been rejected and North Carolina remains alone as the "banning state."

These are two of the most recent examples:

Harming Orderly Solution

Durham Morning Herlad

Student insistence, at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, on inviting Herbert Aptheker and Frank Wilkinson to speak there, seems more intent on carrying a point than on helping the institution to resolve the speaker ban controversy.

Indeed the great storm which has raged over inviting these two persons, arose over precipitate action by a student group in proposing to invite them in the first place. For had the group waited until the university trustees adopted a policy on invitations to speakers in compliance with the speaker ban amendment, the matter could have been handled routinely, without the furor aroused by referring the invitations to the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees and the committee's action.

Neither the issue of freedom of speech at the university nor the issue of educational opportunity depends upon the immediate presence on the campus of Messrs. Aptheker and Wilkinson. Action by some student leaders, however, indicates that they think so. Agitation for extending these men an invitation to speak puts acting Chancellor Sitterson in a difficult and embarrassing situation, as noted elsewhere, which could have been spared him. He must now make a decision which will either reverse a decision by the Executive Committee of the trustees or which will leave him open to the charge by some of suppressing freedom of speech and of inquiry.

What the state-supported institutions, and particularly the university at Chapel Hill, need is the opportunity to settle the issues and problems raised by the speaker ban in a calm and orderly fashion. Impetuous and impulsive insistence at this time on inviting Messrs. Aptheker and Wilkinson will hamper the university in resolving the issue. There is the practical issue of keeping faith with the General Assembly, which rallied to the rescue of the university and other state-supported institutions from the jeopardy in which the speaker ban law placed them. The university stands to suffer from a continued agitation of the issue. It should be given time to resolve the issue. A responsible exercise of freedom would call for this.

Wrong Protectors

The Louisville Courier-Journal

On the page opposite this one today is a piece written by the editor of The Wall Street Journal arguing against a "speaker-ban" law the North Carolina legislature enacted. (The article by Veront Royster, was printed in the DTH Dec. 2.)

This law, banning Communists from speaking on the campuses of state-supported universities, was later changed and the trustees of the various universities were left with the discretion of ruling on campus speakers.

The arguments advanced in this article apply with equal force to a bill the Kentucky Department of the American Legion is pushing. In a way, it is worse than the original North Carolina law, which at least was specific. The Legion proposal is aimed at certain undefined "outside groups" and "insidious" speakers.

Kentucky's schools, an attorney for the Legion says, cannot "afford to allow their campuses to be invaded by persons insidiously motivated to create undesirable and obnoxious incitement of the student body and the community and attract degrading publicity to disrupt the orderly state of affairs."

Why is it that people who back this kind of legislation assume that the principles upon which this country was founded are so easily subverted? Why do they assume that our college students are so incapable of judging ideas on their merits? The answers might reveal an interesting psychological pattern.

In any event, proposals of this sort reflect a basic misunderstanding of the function of a university as a place where clashing ideas should be evaluated and where freedom of discussion is indispensable. The late Justice Brandeis once said: "The greatest dangers to liberty lurk in insidious encroachment by men of zeal, well-meaning but without understanding."

'Racial Balance' In Schools Unconstitutional

The racial pendulum began to swing toward integration in May, 1954. If Adam Clayton Powell's recent proposal is accepted, the swing will be complete. The New York Representative introduced a bill that would carry integration to its illogical extreme: enforced racial "balance" in the public schools.

Under Powell's plan, no school could have a racial mixture that varied more than 20 per cent from the average in the district. Thus, if San Francisco has a population that is half Negro, no school in the city could have less than 30, nor more than 70 per cent Negroes. Neighborhood schools would become a thing of the past; bussing of students from one end of a city to the other would become common.

Powell's proposal has little to recommend it, and there are many reasons, ranging from common sense to constitutional principles, why it should be speedily smashed. The only reason that could be advanced in support of the plan is that there is some therapeutic value in having whites and Negroes thrown together in suitable proportions. There may be something to this—no doubt associating with people of different races is an educational experience—but the arguments against this bill far outweigh this one argument supporting it.

In the first place, the bill would work unwarranted hardships on many innocent children. Harlem is not a pretty sight, and it is easy to feel sorry for the children who are forced to go to schools in such neighborhods. Many peple will applaud Powell's proposal as a way to get the poverty-ridden Negroes out of the slums and into better neighborhoods to go to school. But this plan has two sides. If Negroes are bussed out of Harlem, white children must be taken into that area to preserve the racial balance.

As far as these white children are concerned, the Powell plan is a form of coercion, not of liberation. Negroes may be allowed to go to the school of their choice, but whites will be prevented from having that same choice. In short, the proposal is unfair.

Powell's plan is also unconstitutional. In fact, it violates the very May, 1954 ruling that opened the doors of white schools to Negroes. In that decision the Supreme Court declared that race was not a legitimate criterion for classification of school children. That is, a child could not be assigned to a given school because he was a member of a certain race.

Yet assigning children to certain schools because of their race is exactly what Powell's proposal would do if it were made into law. Some children would be bussed across town to schools because they were white or because they were Negro in order to balance the school's racial distribution.

Let's bring it down to the individual level. Before 1954, Johnny Smith was told, "You cannot go to this school because you are a Negro. You must go to this other school." If Powell's plan is approved, Johnny Jones will be told, "You cannot go to this school because you are white. You must go to this other school." The latter ruling is no more just than the former; if one is unconstitutional, both are.

Proponents of integration may consider Powell's plan the ultimate victory. They will be wrong. It is closer to the ultimate defeat. Final success for them would be the elimination of race as a cause of conscious distinction. Men would not be categorized according to race; they would just be men.

Under the Powell plan race will be perpetuated as a method of classification. Information on the race of students will be essential if they are to be assigned to schools according to color. Children will be kept constantly aware of the difference in the races.

As long as the racial formula is an integral part of the school system, students will not be just students. They will be white or Negroes, too. In an atmosphere where race is of constant concern, racial prejudice will flourish.

Students Missed Chance To Learn

Last Friday night a group of about 25 persons drifted into Gerrard Hall to hear a lecture by Dr. W. H. Hutt of the University of Cape Town, South Africa.

Hutt, a libertarian economist and currently a visiting professor at the University of Virginia, was sponsored by the Carolina Conservative Club.

Those knowledgable in the field of economics might have found Hutt's advocacy of a complete free enterprise system interesting, but to many the question and answer period of the lecture proved the most significant in light of recent events on this campus.

As is usual at Conservative Club lectures, there were at least ten persons present in the audience who were leftists. They enjoy hearing and at times arguing with speakers from the opposite end of the political spectrum.

Unfortunately, several of them attempted to make Hutt appear like a segregationist, a believer in South Africa's apartheid system of national discrimination by race. They asked him if he was willing to live next to a Negro, possibly thinking that all South Africans, or at least conservative ones, were bigots.

There was some surprise in the body when Hutt told his questioner that he hadn't lived next to a Negro in South Africa, but had when he resided in Australia. He stated his firm adversity to apartheid, and cited an incident when he defied social custom to keep a Chinese student in his own home after the University of Cape Town's administrators refused to allow the boy a room in a dormitory.

Hutt's views on freedom of speech were next tested by the leftists. They asked for his definition of free speech, and argued at length that this basic freedom should be allowed to any and all speakers all of the time.

Hutt agreed with them that freedom of speech is vital to a democratic society, and particularly to a university. He denounced all restrictions on a university that prevent an open forum.

Hutt's only reservations on the subject came to light when he said no advocates of one particular point of view should be allowed to dominate a free platform all the time. Argument on this point continued for a short while before the lecture closed, but no one stopped to place the issue clearly in the context of the times, or to relate it to the University here.

As the small group broke up, a few gathered at the front of the room to continue their debate. Conservative Club President Wilson Clark Jr. disengaged himself from one discussion to note, "You know, I really respect these people (the leftists) They're sincere."

Then, as he scaned the darkened and empty hall, he said, "I didn't see a reporter here tonight."

Maybe it wasn't news that was happening in Gerrard Hall Friday night. It was only a sign of the times.

In spite of the blown-up furor over the Herbert Aptheker invitation, this campus is filled with the conventional-minded. It is filled with persons who place Ross Barnett and Hutt under the same banner, Aptheker and Norman Thomas in the same category.

Those who bothered to show up at the Hutt lecture, no matter what their beliefs, found themselves involved in a truly educational experience. Where was the rest of the study body? Where is the true intellectual inquiry of a great university?

Shackled by its own conventionalism to a tyranny of the center, the University is simultaneously engaged in a battle with the foolish state power structure for its greatest inherent right. Possibly in chipping its way out of the collective ignorance of North Carolina, the University and its students might stumble onto the apathetic ignorance lurking within its own midst.

Letters To The Editor

Save Our Trees

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

I want to most strongly protest against the destruction of trees now taking place on campus in front of New East and Davie. This needless desecration of our campus is occurring simply for the shortsighted reason that it will be easier to maneuver dump trucks and rebuild Davie Hall if the trees are torn down.

Of course! It would also be easier to park if we tore up the lawn and the Davie poplar for a parking lot! In a society as clever as ours it is absurd to admit that we can find no better way of doing things than by destroying everything that has been bequeathed to us.

The true beauty of this campus lies not in buildings, but in the overarching trees which line the walks. If these are destroyed, even a few, we shall end up with a campus as stark and barren as that of State. We shall have permanently diminished that which was ours in trust.

Sincerely,
Francis H. Parker

Why No Tickets?

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

I called the ticket office to find out when student tickets for the ACC Tournament would go on sale. I was told that there would be none available for us. Each of the eight schools in the ACC were supposed to get an equal share of tickets for student sale. If any were left, they were to be turned over for public sale.

Our tickets were offered to members of the Rams Club instead of the students, and therefore are none for us. I think that was pretty rotten of the people who were responsible for ticket distribution to do this. After all, should't we the students be able to go to the tournament to support our team?

I hope that in the years to come that the students will be able to watch their team perform and cheer them on. Those who have tickets will have to do a lot of yelling to match that which the students would be doing. Members of the Tar Heel basketball team: we won't be there cheering for you, but we'll be pulling for you from beside our radios.

Banov For Editor

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Most of us on campus welcome Alan Banov to the race for editor of The Daily Tar Heel. Why Banov was not given the endorsement by the Publications Board is hard to imagine. Certainly by the qualifications the Tar Heel listed when Banov announced he was running put him above all others running.

And many of us are excited by Banov's policies which he has had printed for the last few weeks and circulated on campus, something which has made us very enthusiastic. For in the past, as well as now, the other candidates have said early in the game little or nothing with depth about why they are running or what they plan to do upon election. Alan Banov had his platform, policies and a proposed staff lined up months ago.

True, too, Alan was the first candidate to announce (many weeks ago) that he planned to run independent of any party endorsement. Herein we can look forward to a paper without political bias or the kind of slanted viewpoint we have experienced of late.

Mr. Banov, please pass your petition this way

Famed Cellist

Pierre Fournier To Perform Here

By SUSAN ZARR

Celebrated French 'cellist Pierre Fournier will play in Memorial Hall on March 10 at 8 p.m. His recital will be the final and perhaps most auspicious musical event of the Chapel Hill Concert Series' 1965-66 season.

To call Fournier a French 'cellist is somewhat of an understatement as he is recognized on six continents as one of the very few great artists appearing before the public today. The public's demand for such artistiry for resulted in yearly tours averaging over 100 concerts.

In 1964-65 Fournier made his fifth tour of South America and South Africa, his tenth tour of the U. S., and his third of Russia, in addition to playing a solidly booked schedule of recitals and orchestral engagements in Europe.

During the summers Fournier's name can be found prominently displayed on nearly every major festival program on the continent and in the British Isles.

Peirre Fournier's choice of the violincello as a musical medium was the result of a near-tragic event. As a small boy he showed a prodigious talent for the piano, but at the age of nine an attack of polio left his feet crippled. Unable to use the pedals of a piano, Fournier turned to the instrument now practically synonymous with his name.

The artist now plays a Bergonzi 'cello, named "The Gudgeon," which was made in 1722 and is considered one of the most beautiful instruments of this master.

At 13 Fournier entered the Conservatoire Nationale in Paris and graduated four years later with highest honors. Following triumphant debuts with Europe's most eminent orchestras, he accepted for two years the post of Professor of Master Class of Cello at the Ecole Normale in Paris. In the same capacity he was associated with the Conservatoire Nationale from 1941 to 1949.

It was after the Second World War that Fournier's concert schedule expanded to global proportions, including debuts in Britain, the United States and the Far East; and in 1953 the French government made its distinguished native son a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, the title later being elevated to the coveted Officer of the Legion of Honor.

In the recording field, Fournier has won no less than four Grand Prix du Disque and has recorded more than 25 LP albums for Columbia, Decca and Deutsche Grammophon. The recorded works include all of Beethoven's 'cello compositions, the six solo suites of Bach and all the important 'cello concertos.

Tickets for Pierre Fournier's recital are now on sale at Danzigers Old World Gift Shop or may be ordered from the Chapel Hill Concert Series, Box 893, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Prices for individual reserved seats are $2 and $3. Students will be admitted to the balcony of Memorial Hall upon presentation of their I.D. cards.

Heathcote To Speak

Professor C. R. Heathcote of the Australian National University, Canberra, will be the speaker Monday at a meeting of the University Statistics Colloquium. His topic will be "Schroeder's Functional Equation in the Theory of Branching Processes."

Bonnie Bogle

GM Will Present Pianist

Bonnie Bogle, pianist, will be presented in Graham Memorial Lounge Sunday at 8 p.m. The performance is free and open to the public.

Miss Bogle's program begins with the Bach Prelude and Fugue in E Major, followed by the Beethoven Sonata, Opus 28 (Pastorale) and the Chopin "Schurze in E Major, Opus 54." Other works scheduled are two by Maurice Ravel (Forlane; Toccata,) three numbers from Schumann's "Forest Scenes, and the Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody, Op. 13.

Bonnie Bogle is a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music. Upon graduation in 1963, she was given the George Wade Prize for the highest average in the graduating class and the Juilliard Alumni Association of full tuition for the Master's degree course.

This is Miss Bogie's second appearance in Chapel Hill. She previously appeared as soloist with the Louisville Symphony, in a recital at the Currier and Ives Museum of Manchester, N. H., and in The New York Town Hall. Of this performance, The New York Times wrote: "Miss Bogle's playing could not be faulted . . . she indicated that she could communicate."

The Herald Tribune's comments were: "Miss Bogle provided some of the most relaxed piano playing imagninable . . . infused with a wealth of feeling and introspection . . . Every phrase in the Beethoven was beautifully shaped and the range of color in the Ravel was superb."

In Washington, The Evening Star called her: "A well-schooled young pianist of great fluency and poise . . . on her way to a significant career." The Post review spoke of her "High sense of awareness . . . a poetic sensitivity," and added: "The bravura went with spirit."

WUNC HIGHLIGHTS

SPECTRUM — 6:15 p.m. — This evening's science "magazine" articles deal, first, with the "split-brain operation" in which the two hemispheres of the brain are separated surgically; and second, with the efforts of scientists to isolate the chemicals and enzymes which produce light in the marine organism called the sea pansy. A third article focuses on the astronaut water survival training at the United States Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Florida.

ORIGAMI — 7:00 p.m. — "Goldfish" Japanese artist T. Mikami teaches, step by step, how to fold one of the more unusual subjects for "origami" — the goldfish. Completing the model, he adds a final touch with his brush to give the fish, called "kingyo" in Japanese, a staring, fishy eye, and he shows unique and delightful ways to use the fish for decorations or for toys.

THE DANCE THEATRE OF JOSE LIMON — 8:00 p.m. — The life and artistry of Jose Limon, whose unique talents have placed him as the most distinguished male dancer in the modern field, are examined during this hour-long program. The principal performances of the program offer two of the finest examples of Limon's own choreography — "The Moor's Pavane" and "Missa Brevis." The first, a dance treatment of the familiar Othello story, uses the figures of Desdemona, Iago and Amelia, as well as of the Moor himself—in a compelling blend of elegance and harsh emotion. "Missa Brevis," set to the music of the same name by the Hungarian composer Zolton Kodaly, shows a group of worshipers celebrating a religious service — in a moving conclusion, it affirms the hope of freedom for all men.

To any kid who'd like to leave home:

We'll pay half your fare.

The idea's not as crazy as it may seem.

Anytime we take a jet up, there are almost always leftover seats.

So it occurred to us that we might be able to fill a few of them, if we gave the young people a break on the fare, and a chance to see the country.

The American Youth Plan*

We call the idea the American Youth Plan, and what it means is this:

American will pay half the jet coach fare for anybody 12 through 21.

It's that simple.

All you have to do is prove your age (a birth certificate or any other legal document will do) and buy a $3 identification card.

We date and stamp the card, and this entitles you to a half-fare ticket at any American Airlines counter.

The only catch is that you might have to wait before you get aboard; the fare is on a standby basis.

"Standby" simply means that the passengers with reservations and the servicemen get on before you do.

Then the plane's yours.

The American Youth Plan is good year round except for a few days before and after the Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas rushes.

If you can't think of any places you'd like to go offhand, you might see a travel agent for a few suggestions.

Complete this coupon—include your $3.
(Do not send proof of age—it is not needed until you have your ID validated.)
In addition to your ID card, we'll also send you a free copy of AA's Go Go American with $50 worth of discount coupons.

President Johnson Signs GI Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) —President Johnson signed the new GI bill providing for education, housing and other benefits for veterans yesterday.

The President said the measure will cost more than he recommended but he noted that both the Senate and House passed it unanimously and said:

"I am going to resolve the doubt in favor of Congress. It just could be that the President was wrong."

Besides, he said it will reaffirm the pledge given by President Franklin D. Roosevelt after World War II that the American people never intend to let their armed forces down.

Johnson signed the bill at a ceremony in the White House East Room. He said its cost in the first year will be $245 million more than he had recommended, and $1.8 billion more over the next five years. The President's limited proposal would have cost an estimated $150 million a year.

The House passed the expanded measure 381 to 0 and the Senate vote was 99 to 0, and Johnson said "The President just must not ignore the unanimous vote of the Congress."

At the same time he served "most solemn warning" that future requests must be made with prudence or the budget may soon approach $130 billion. The figure for the fiscal year starting July 1 is a little under $113 billion.

Cost — $350 million during its first year; a total of $16.5 billion by the year 2000.

Eligible — people with six months military service and an honorable discharge after Jan. 31, 1955, when the Korean War GI program expired.

Major benefits — education aid ranging up to $150 a month, wit hone month of aid from eath month of service up to 36 months. Home loan guarantees of up to $7,500, and direct housing loans up to $17,500 if private financing is not available. Job counseling, employment placement, hospital care and civil service preference.

Sukarno Orders Closing Of University Of Indonesia

SINAPORE (AP) — President Sukarno ordered the University of Indonesia closed yesterday in an apparent attempt to halt anti-Communist student demonstrations against him.

A Jakarta broadcast announcing the closing of the University quoted Sukarno as saying: "Peace and calm must be restored so the studies of school children will not be interferred with."

But his target was Miami, the anti-Communist student group he ordered banned last Friday. This group has turned the University into a fortress and has staged anti-Sukarno demonstrations in Jakarta the past three days, say well-informed sources in Singapore.

In addition to banning KAMI, Sukarno announced the establishment Wednesday of a new group, the Indonesian National Union of Students.

Cancer Victims To Undergo Experimental Transplant

BUFFALO, N. Y .(AP) — Two cancer patients, strangers until Wednesday, began undergoing tests yesterday in preparation for an experimental tumor-transplant operation they hope will save them from death.

Robert L. Allen, 28, of Tucson, Ariz., and Harry T. Griffith of Flourtown, Pa., were taken to a room to be X-rayed after both had eaten breakfast that included fruit juice, soft boiled eggs, cereal, toast, milk and coffee.

Before the operation, tentatively scheduled for today, they will submit to physical examinations, blood-typing and numerous other tests.

Both were given mild sedation before retiring Wednesday night, in a room they share on the third floor of the 300-bed Roswell Park Memorial Institute, the state's cancer-research and treatment center.

Allen, an insurance executive and father of three, was told he will die in two to six months unless the operation is successful. Cancer has cost him his left leg.

Alabama Court Outlaws Poll Tax

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) —A three-judge federal court struck down Alabama's poll tax yesterday, ruling that the yearly tax was designed only to prevent Negroes from voting.

"The necessary effect of the poll tax as adopted in 1901 was to disenfranchise Negro voters," said the court in a 2-to-1 decision. "The history of the poll tax leaves no doubt that this was its sole purpose."

Concurring in the majority opinion were Judge Richard T. Rives of the 5th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals and District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., both of Montgomery. Dissenting was Circuit Judge Walter P. Gewin of Tuscaloosa.

Fire Damage In Thousands

WILSON (AP) — Fire Chief Tyrus Bissett was sipping coffee in a cafe yesterday morning when he heard an explosion.

"I figured it was another jet breaking the sound barrier," he said later, "But some fellow said, 'Look at all that smoke.' "

Bissett rushed outside and saw the smoke was coming from Wilson Aerosol Inc., a starch canning plant next door to the cafe.

He turned to run to a telephone, but by then firemen were at the scene.

They managed to keep the fire from spreading to the cafe and to an oil company on the other side of the factory, but the factory was destroyed.

John Bulla, the owner, estimated damage to his inventory and automatic equipment at $200,000. He said the 22,000-square foot building was leased and could not estimate damage to that.

Although the flames were fed by the explosions of thousands of the pressurized cans, the fire was controlled in 1 1-2 hours and there were no injuries.

5-Year Plan Announced

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Dan Moore announced yesterday that the State Board of Higher Education and the State Commission on Higher Education Facilities have been designated to administer provisions of the federal Higher Education Act of 1965.

Moore said the higher education board will administer provisions for a five-year program to strengthen financial resources of colleges and universities in providing such community service programs as continuing education, consultation, seminar, and research to assist in the solution of such community problems as housing, poverty, juvenile delinquency, government, transportation and land use.

Federal funds are authorized to cover 75 per cent of the program for the next three years. North Carolina allocation of funds for this fiscal year is $220,000.

The State Commission on Higher Education Facilities will administer the provision of the act to assist colleges in improving the quality of classroom instruction through matching grants for acquiring laboratory and other special equipment.

First Lady Gets Car

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's first lady Thursday received a new $7,200 Lincoln Continental automobile to use for personal errands and speaking engagements.

The car was presented to Mrs. Dan Moore at the Executive Mansion by Alex Marinoff of the Washington office of the Lincoln Division of the Ford Motor Co.

The black, sleek car has a "Standard interior," at least as standard an interior that comes in a $7,200 automobile.

The state is leasing the car from Lincoln under the same arrangement as the federal government rents the President's bubble-top limousine and the cars provided for Cabinet members.

The state will pay $750 annually. The fee covers all parts, service and a $1 million liability insurance package.

The mansion previously has borrowed a car from the Central Motor Pool for the convenience of Mrs. Moore. In the past she has used a Pontiac or an Oldsmobile.

A late model Buick Electra, now used as a second car at the mansion, will be retired to make way for the more plush Continental.

The new car will share garage space with Gov. Moore's No. 1, a 1966 Cadillac limousine that was delivered early last month.

Robert Gatling of the State Department of Administration, which handled the transaction on the Continental, said, "It was just too good a deal to turn down."

Duke Endowments Totaled

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Allocations totaling $14,419,315 were awarded by the Duke Endowment to North Carolina and South Carolina educationa, health, religious and child care institutions and programs last year.

A total of $213 million has been distributed by the endowment in the two states since it was established in 1924 by James B. Duke, North Carolina tobacco and electric power magnate.

Allocations to education in 1965 included: Duke University $7,575,250; Davidson College $627,183; Furman University $168,-269; and Johnson C. Smith University $470,867.

Hospitals received $3,704,704 last year and child care institutions were allocated $535,381. Rural Methodist churches were given $558,452 and retired Methodist ministers and their families received $6,244,290.

The report noted that "virtually all of the non-profit hospitals and child care institutions of the Carolinas" have received aid from the endowment.

In the 41 years since establishment of the endowment, those total payments have been allocated: hospitals $53,566,-784; child care institutions $8,544,688; educational institutions $142,489,034.

U.S. Will Match Buildup

Reds Boosting Forces

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said yesterday the Communists may boost their fighting forces in South Viet Nam by 50 per cent this year, and more Americans will have to go there to face them.

He told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he believes this will be the height of the Communist troop buildup. With U. S. warplanes attacking their supply lines, McNamara said, the Communists could not support a bigger force.

"I cannot say at this time precisely how many additional American forces will be deployed," the Defense Secretary said. He said any arbitrary manpower limit would weaken U. S. ability to press the Communists for a negotiated settlement.

McNamara's meeing with the Foreign Relations Committee took him to the eye of the stormy debate about U. S. policy in Viet Nam. At his own insistence, McNamara appeared behind closed doors. He was there for four hours and 20 minutes.

The Pentagon chief has rejected a committee call to talk in public, saying he could not do so without endangering military secrets.

But as he faced the Committee, McNamara made public his answers to some of the major issues Senate critics raised in lengthy — sometimes heated — public encounters with Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Presidential Consultant Maxwell D. Taylor.

In his statement, McNamara asked as well as answered the questions.

"There could be in South Viet Nam by the end of 1966 some 155 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese battalions, approximately 50 per cent above the Dec. 31, 1965 level," McNamara said.

"At that point and at the level of combat anticipated for the end of 1966, the enemy forces would require about 150 tons of supplies per day," he said, "and we believe our improved air interdiction efforts would prevent them from receiving much more than that amount."

The Pentagon estimates the strength of regular Communist units in South Viet Nam at 75,000 to 85,000 men at the end of last year.

McNamara estimated that South Viet Nam would add 70,-000 men to its forces by the end of this year. He said more U. S. troops will be needed, but did not say how many.

"Additional free world allied forces are also expected to be deployed," McNamara said.

And he said the United States is capable of boosting its troop strength as rapidly as new men can be efficiently used against the Communists.

Yarmouth Castle Fire Still Mistery

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Coast Guard said yesterday it was unable to pinpoint the cause of the fire aboard the cruise ship Yarmouth Castle last Nov. 13 but failure to detect the blaze early was a factor in the loss of 90 lives.

In a 27-page report on the disaster off the Bahamas, the Coast Guard attributed late detection of the blaze to failure of a security patrol to follow the proper inspection route.

A further contributing factor, the report said, was absence of a sprinkler system in a room containing combustible materials.

President Johnson, prior to release of the report by the Coast Guard, had said he would push for tighter safety rules in an attempt to avert similar disasters in the future.

The report recommended to the Coast Guard Commandant that he consider more than a dozen additional safety provisions while attempts are made to strengthen international rules governing safety at sea.

It recommended a study into possible federal legislation to require that all American passenger vessels built prior to 1936 conform to the safety standards on use of incombustible material in their structure which apply to ships built after that date.

It also urged the Commandant to seek amendments to the 1960 International Convention for Safety of Life at Sea (ICSLS) to require the upgrading of passenger vessels which contain large amounts of combustible materia, to obtain an acceptable fire safety standard.

In the report, the Coast Guard said that although the source of the fire could not be determined it could be attributed to any one of combination of the following:

1. A malfunction of the lighting system in room 610 on the main deck where the fire originated.

2. Sparks entering the room through the natural ventilation ducts during the blowing of boiler tubes.

3. Unintentional acts of persons entering room 110 such as failing to extinguish a cigarette or placing mattresses close to the lighting circuit.

The report said the room contained a number of combustible items including mattresses, discarded bulkhead paneling and broken chairs.

The report said that when the fire escaped from room 610, the wooden interior and inflammable paint together with a chimney effect of the forward stairway permitted a rapid spread of fire and smoke to the bond debt and forward passageways.

Contributing to the spread was a mechanical exhaust system connecting room 610 with lavatory spaces on the port side of the main deck.

The large loss of life, the report added, stemmed from lack of early use of a general alarm or a public address system warning, and failure to maintain windows and shutters of outside staterooms in a condition to permit easy opening.

No general alarm was rung during the disaster, the report added.

The report also criticized what it said was a lack of pressure at fire hydrants because more values were open throughout the ship than the fire pumps could service. Contributing to this was an open valve from the fire main to the swimming pool, the report added.

The board of investigation criticized the ship's master and officers, saying that when they arrived at the fire scene they failed "to take firm and positive action to organize the crew to isolate and combat the fire or to awaken and evacuate passengers in the area."

Nkrumah Made President Of Both Ghana And Guinea

ADDIS ABABA, Ethopia (AP) — Kwame Nkrumah, ousted by Ghana's army, has become President of both Guinea and Ghana, Guinea's Roving Ambassador Abdullaye Diallo claimed yesterday. The envoy asserted this was the wish of the people of Guinea.

Diallo said President Sekou Toure of Guinea had stepped aside to let the ousted president of Ghana take over the dual presidency. Toure welcomed Nkrumah to Guinea Wednesday on his arrival from Moscow and promised to help him return to power.

There was no confirmation of Diallo's statement from Conakry, Guinea's capital.

In any case, Nkrumah's authority in Ghana is gone. The Ghanaian army says he will be arrested and tried if he returns to Ghana.

In London, some British expressed doubt that Diallo was speaking with full instructions from Conakry. They noted that Tourne in welcoming Nkrumah said the two were equal now, and that Nkrumah may be taking the statement literally.

Doubt also was expressed in Washington. Ghana's diplomats there variously termed the report a "funny thing" and a "bluff." One Ghanian diplomat said the report could not be taken seriously.

Viet Cong Continue Terror

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong turned to terrorism again yesterday as a weapon of war. Three youth government workers assigned to New Life hamlets — a self-help project praised by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey — were among the victims.

Frustration of a Red effort to block a ship route to Saigon, limited clashes elsewhere and a U. S. announcement of the loss of three planes highlighted operational acitivity.

Bound and shot dead, the three government workers were found on a vacant lot in Saigon's outskirts. Friends said the three, ranging in age from 25 to 30, were kidnapped on their way home from nearby refugee centers Wednesday night.

Astronaut Rites

From the Associated Press

Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong,, and Air Force Maj. Devid R. Scott will fly from Raleigh-Durham early tomorrow to attend funeral services in Washinton for Elliot M. See Jr. and Air Force Maj. Charles A. Bassett.

Armstrong and Soott, who will be among pallbearers at the services in Arlinton National Cemetery, have been in Chapel Hill for study at the Morehead Planetarium.

See and Maj. Scott, the astronauts assigned to Gemini 9, were killed in a jet plane crash in St. Louis, Mo., Monday.

The problems is tickets to the ACC basketball tournament and Chuck Erickson has this headache every year.

"No one has the solution to this problem," said Erickson. "We can't fully satisfy students or alumni — so you are condemned either way you go."

The University receives one-ninth of the total number of tickets for the three-day tournament. N. C. State officials, who serve as hosts, receive two-ninths. The remaining seven schools in the conference each receive one ninth.

"As you can see," said Erickson, "we can't possibly satisfy either students or alumni. Our share is roughly 1200 tickets. Compare this to the 13,000 students we have and the more than 50,000 alumni in North Carolina and adjacent areas — and you see our problem."

"They receive priority because of service they render to the athletic program," said Erickson. "We have no means of getting financial support from the State—so we need help from outside. Even then we can't hope to supply tournament tickets to everyone who wants and deserves to go. We can satisfy them in football, but not basketball."

Of course all tickets are not made available to alumni.

Two tickets are given to each player. Several are given to each coach and certain administrative and athletic department officials.

Of course that list does exclude the student—as Erickson is well aware.

"Of course we are concerned about the studeent," he said. "Everyone in the conference has the same problem. There is simply no equitable means of distribution."

Several possible solutions are being studied. Closed circuit television is being considered. Duke University is using this for tonight's games.

Erickson offered a solution at a conference gathering this past week.

"The first-round games would be played at the home court of the higher-seeded team," he said. "This means the first, second, third and fourth-seeded teams would play at home the first round of the tournament. Then the winners would compete for the championship at some pre-determined location."

Since each school has or is building a basketball coliseum, a revolving tournament location is also a possibility.

Whatever the solution, the tournament will not be held in Raleigh next season. Greensboro Memorial Coliseum will host the tournament in 1967 with Charlotte taking over in 1968.

But, surprisingly enough, the tournament ticket headache has not always been a problem. Only in the last five years has the pressure really been applied.

"Before World War II," said Erickson, "there was very little basketball interest in this area. Of course the Atlantic Coast Conference, as such, did not exist in those days. We had a "Big" Southern Conference then and members stretched from Maryland to Tulane University in Louisiana.

"The conference tournament was held in Atlanta, Ga., and it was so far away that interest in this area was slight.

"Then the Raleigh JC's agreed to sponsor the tournament and it was held in the old Raleigh Auditorium. Seats were taken off the floor and placed on the stage. Fans sat on that stage, in the balcony and on the ends. Still there were not enough seats for everyone who wished to go.

"After the war,, Duke built their auditorium and the tournament was switched there for four years. Still fan interest was not enough to fill that auditorium.

"After that four-year period, the tournament was switched back to Raleigh—to Reynolds Colsiseum—and has been there ever since.

"Only in the lost ten years," said Erickson, "has demand for tickets really increased. Only in the last five years has that demand greatly exceeded the supply."

Tar Heels Down Maryland, 77-70 With Blistering Second Half Pace

Carolina Plays Blue Devils In Tonight's ACC Semi-Finals

By GENE RECTOR
DTH Sports Editor

North Carolina's Tar Heels hit a blistering 70 per cent of their shots in the second half to defeat Maryland 77-70 in the first round of the thirteenth annual ACC basketball tournament, in Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum.

The victory puts the Tar Heels against top-seeded Duke in tonight's semi-finals. Duke advanced to the semi-minals by slaughtering Wake Forest 103-73. N. C. State, who also defeated Virginia, will play South Carolina in the nightcap.

The Tar Heel victory was strictly an uphill victory. Trailing 51-45 with 14 minutes remaining, the UNC offense came to life.

Sophomore Larry Miller hit two baskets in a row to bring the Tar Heels within 51-49. With 10:32 remaining, a three-point play by center Bob Bennett cut the Maryland lead to one—54 to 53.

A free throw and basket by Miller pushed that lead to four, 58-54, with 8:48 remaining.

A three-point play by Bob Lewis made the lead eight points, with 6:51 to go. Larry Miller's basket with 6:25 remainnng gave UNC a 65-555 lead, the largest of the etvening by eitser team.

Maryland did manage to cut that lead in half with 3:36 remaining. Neil Brayton's basket made the score 68-63, in favor of the Tar Heels.

But the Tar Heels refused to wilt under the Maryland pressure. Bob Bennett's basket with 1:26 remaining made the score 75-67 and the Tar Heels were home free.

The Tar Heels led only briefly in the first half. Maryland outscored UNC 7-2 in the first two minutes af action.

With 17:40 to go in the half, Larry Miller hit the Tar Heels first field goal to make the score 7-4 in favor of Maryland.

Maryland's Rick Wise reclaimed that five point lead at 9-4 but two straight Lewis field goals brought the Tar Heels within one, 9-8, with 16:28 remaining.

A Lewis free throw with 15:18 remaining tied the score at 11-all.

John Yokley's field goal with 11:30 to go gave the Tar Heels their first lead of the game, 21-16.

Then Maryland began to take charge. Jack Clark's basket 7:55 to go made the score 26-24 in favor of North Carolina. With 6:30 to go Jay McMillen cut the lead to one point at 28-27.

Maryland finally went ahead with 2:40 to go as Gary Ward's basket made the score 34-33 in favor of the Terps.

Donnie Moe's free throw and a basket by Lewis returned the Tar Heel advantage.

USC, Wolfpack Move To Semis

By BILL ROLLINS
DTH Sports Writer

The upset factor which loomed so large in pre-tournament analogies wasted no time by making itself critically prominent in the afternoon session of the opening round of the 13th annual Atlantic Coast Conference basketball classic played yesterday in Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum.

Frank McGuire's sixth-ranked South Carolina Gamecocks began the three-day event by bouncing third-placed Clemson Tigers from contention by 60-52, and Virginia's gritty Cavaliers scared N. C. State almost out of its bright red pants before the Wolfpack took an 86-77 decision.

The most apparent result of the two thrillers—neither of which was decided until the absolute last minute — is that USC and State will meet in the second game of the semi-final round of play tonight at 9. But two other readily apparent conclusions which can be drawn are that a team cannot afford to take anything for granted when engaged in tournament play, and that the game is not over until the last man is out.

Clemson and State may have done a little of both in the two games. Frank McGuire's tough, disciplined team spelled D-E-A-T-H in USC-red letters for the Tigers, but the 'Pack was able to fall back on "the fastest hands in the league" to eke out its win.

Although at this stage of the season it is unforgivably repititious to remind that "the fastest hands in the league" belong to State's Eddie Biedenbach, that's the way it is, and that's what meant the difference in South Carolina's opponent for tonight. The All-ACC-guard engineered a couple of steals and scored eight straight NCS points more than three-quarters of the way through the final period to shoot his team to a 15-point lead which Virginia — hump though they may — could not dissolve.

USC-60, Clemson-52

In the kickoff game of the tournament, South Carolina overcame a seven-point Clemson lead which was established just two minutes into the second half, and rode the strength of some clutch foul shooting (7-8) down the stretch and a 22-point scoring effort from Skip Harlicka for their 60-52 triumph over state rival Clemson.

It was the 100th meeting between the two schools, and until the 'Cocks pulled away in the final minute on free throws, it was one of the closest. The match was tied seven times and the lead changed hands 13 times before USC was able to pull to its final margin.

Clemson scored the last five points of the first half to take a 30-28 lead, and then hit the first five points of the second period to establish a 35-28 lead. But Harlicka got seven-of-eight USC points to tie at 36-36. It was 46-all at 6:31 when Harlicka scored a three-point play to put USC into the lead for good. Garry Helms was high for Clemson with 17 points.

State shot 55.8 per cent in the first half to race to a seemingly insurmountable 54-32 lead, but Jim Connelly and Jerry Sanders led a tremendous Virginia comeback which forced NCS to strain every fiber of its second-seeded being to emerge as the victor.

The Cavaliers, seventh-rated, turned three 'Pack miscues into six points midway through the final half to cut their deficit to 70-60, but Biedenbach scored eight straight NCS points to shoot his team to a 79-64 lead. Then UVA hit a 10-1 streak to cut it to just 80-75 with 1:16 left. Connelly's basket made it 82-77 before State got the last four points.

Tom Mattocks and Biedenbach (23 each) were high scorers for State. Connelly and Sanders had 18 each, and were strongly supported by Mike Katos (17) and Buddy Reams (12).

Grapplers Ready For ACC Tourney

By JIM RANBO
Special to the DTH

UNC's matmen have headed back to College Park, Md., after a double defeat there last weekend.

Maryland has never lost an ACC meet and is heavily favored to preserve its record in the ACC Championships today and tomorrow.

"We can take second in the league," predicts Barnes. "At least we plan to improve our record. We got 'pinned' twice on our earlier trip. That won't happen again."

Barnes referred to a speed trap in the badlands of Virginia which won over UNC, two cars to nothing, en route to Terpville.

"The officer learned I was a professor and he said he had a special rate he could offer, a reduced price of $37.50," said Barnes. "Later I found out a student had paid $27.50. The moral to the story is to avoid reduced prices."

In all fairness to the Carolina group, the speed trap was on a downhill grade, a type of ambush one might expect from a rustler rather than a marshall.

Barnes and his wrestlers own a 6-6 record for the season and have high hopes of doing well in tourney action. Maryland, which has never lost an ACC meet, is heavily favored.

Dr. Sam Barnes, who teaches English as well as coaching wrestling, does not plan to get "pinned" on this trip to College Park.

"We're going up hopeful but we haave such a mysterious line-up that I don't know how we'll do," commented Dr. Barnes.

Every Tuesday and Wednesday the grapplers have challenge bouts to decide who will compete in each weight division that week. This week the tryouts produced some upsets and reshuffling of what has been a well established line-up.

Ken Galloway has wrestled as a heavyweight this year but will compete in the 191 division in the championship. There is no 191 division in dual meets.

Mark Manship will be making his first varsity appearance, filling the heavyweight spot vacated by Galloway.

Williams Takes First Step Toward Beatty's Records

By BOB ORR

Former UNC track star and internationally known miler Jim Beatty sat in the stands at the ACC Indoor Track Meet last week and watched a lanky, determined Tar Heel sophomore take the first big step toward erasing the name of Beatty from the Carolina record book.

Very few people expected Mike Williams to win the indoor mile run. After all, his best time indoors was only 4:20, and Maryland's George Henry had already run 4:12 indoors. Besides, four out of the top five milers from last year's race were back. But the young distance runner commented before the race, "I'll just have to try and stay close to them as long as I can. It's up to me to stick in there."

When the gun sounded for the final lap of the mile, Williams had "stuck in there." South Carolina's Bob Taylor pulled past Henry and took the lead. Williams went with him. The UNC ace stayed right behind him until the last 70 yards. Then applying the patented "William's kick," he edged Taylor at the tape for the victory.

The winning time was 4:17.3 on a track that the majority of the athletes considered slow. For the victory Mike won the Wiel Memorial Trophy, the third consecutive year a UNC miler had won. The last UNC sophomore to win this trophy was a short Jim Beatty. He won the trophy three years in a row.

From Tarpon Springs, Fla., Mike attended Dunedin High School where he made a name for himself in football, basketball and track.

His senior year he was running a 4:22 mile and won the Florida Class A mile run and the overall Florida State Championships. For his work in the classroom and on the track, he was voted Scholar-Athlete for Florida Class A Athletes.

To turn back the pages of track history, Jim Beatty's best time in the mile as a UNC freshman was 4:22.6. Mike ran 4:17 last year outdoors at the Florida Relays. Beatty's fastest mile as a sophomore was 4:16.6 in the With a 4:17 mile indoors, Mike still has the outdoor season to look forward to.

One thing marks a great distance runner — dedication. As one of Mike's teammates commented after Williams had turned down an offer to play basketball instead of working out, "You're just too darn dedicated."

But success comes with dedication and Mike Williams is determined to succeed. He has two and one-half years left to run for Carolina. Undoubtedly, a lot of miles will come and go in those two years plus.

On the bulletin board in the track dressing room the list of UNC track records is posted. One in particular appeals to Mike Williams. "Mile run — 4:06.2 Jimmy Beatty 1957."

Tennis Clinic Meets In Woollen

The first annual Women's Tennis Clinic will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. in Room 304 Woollen Gym.

Invitations have been sent to various interest groups throughout the state.

Included in those invitations were various women's tennis coaches, advisors to tennis clubs and Physical Education majors and graduate students.

UNC Tennis Coach Don Skakle will be the instructor.

"We will offer a lot of information in a short period of time," said Skakle. "The idea behind the clinic is to increase the number of women in the state capable of tennis instruction.

The Ruffin Rebels smashed the Ruffin Raiders in intramural basketball on Wednesday, 76-37. Bill Skeen led the winners with 21 points and got support from Ted Burns with 17, Dave Spencer with 16 and Dave Bowers with 14.

The Everett Rogah nipped the Aycock Aardwolves, 52-48. Johnny Biddle had 16 points, Ed Shields, Andy Denny and Tom Howard each had 10.

Ken Giles scored 21 points and Don Staley had 20 as the Alexander Mooses defeated the Joyner Jokes, 61-51.

The Parker Supporters edged the Teague Toughs 47-44 in a two-man show. Evan Watts pumped in 30 points for the Supporters while Colby Daughtery fired in 24 for the Toughs.

The Connor Vikings won a slow game from the Alexander Pharoahs, 31-25. Dennis Triplett was the game's high scorer with 12 points for the Pharoahs.

Shep Murray and Steve Bland had 13 points apiece in the Everett Grossmen's 39-36 victory over the Lewis Greys. Tom Suttles had 16 for Lewis.

The Navy Dolphins defeated the Geology Coprolites, 41-24.

Neil McKinnon scored 12 points as Stacy No. 3 beat the Graham Celts, 37-27.

In addition he gets to take any Angel out to dinner at the expense of the Angel Flight.

Loyalty Oaths In Schools Under Nationwide Attack

NEW YORK (AP) — The perennial battle against loyalty oaths — spearheaded as usual by public school educators — has flared again in the nation's courts and legislatures.

Oaths required by the laws of Arizona, Massachusetts, Oregon and New York are under fire in state and federal tribunals, including the U. S. Supreme Court.

Legislatures are under pressure to repeal similar laws elsewhere. Some oaths have been watered down or voided, largely as a result of protests by teachers.

An Arizona oath has been challenged in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Barbara Elfbrandt, 32, a Tucson teacher, who has worked without pay since 1961 rather than sign it.

The oath forbids membership in the Communist Party or any organization advocating the overthrow of the state government of Arizona by force or violence. Mrs. Elfbrandt's attorney argued before the Supreme Court Feb. 24 that the oath denied her freedom of speech and association and deprived her of due process of law.

An attack by the American Civil Liberties Union on a Massachusetts loyalty oath for teachers is due for decision by the state supreme court this year.

Gerald A. Berlin, Massachusetts attornev for the union, contended the oath is discriminatory and violates rights of free speech and association. A bill to repeal the oath is before the state legislature, but is given little chance of passing.

Teachers in Oregon have won a court ruling that a state oath of allegiance is unconstitutional because of vague wording. The decision has been appealed.

Senior Wins Scholarship

A UNC senior from Easton, Pa., has been chosen from five candidates for a $1,500 scholarship to the University of Chicago Law School.

Michael H. Tonry a history major is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha social fraternity and has served on the Inter-Fraternity Council. He is in the History Honors Program and will graduate in June with an AB Degree in History.

"I'm pleased to get the scholarship," Tonry said, "but I'm a bit surprised."

He will begin his studies at the University of Chicago Law School in the fall. Tonry said he plans to get a doctorate degree in law.

The award which Tonry won was the University of North Carolina Scholarship, given annually to a UNC student to attend the University of Chicago Law School.

"Tonry has made a very fine record here at the University," Cathey said. "We are very pleased that he won the award."

The scholarship is for $1,500 annually and is renewable for two years after the initial grant.—GLEN NMAYS.

Down By The Old Well

TODAY

Mutton and Shoats will meat at the Goody Shop at 5:30 p.m. on Thursday to discuss a feasting retreat on the Old Snipes Place.

The Hillel Speakers Forum presents Mr. Rafael Ruppin, Israeli diplomat and specialist in African affairs, speaking on the topic "Israel in Asia and Africa." Sabbath services will take place at 7 p.m. and Mr. Ruppin will speak at 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

The joint Duke-UNC-AROD Chemical Physics Colloquium, will feature Dr. Martin Pope from New York University speaking on "Charge Transfer Exciton States and Ionic Energy Levels in Organic Crystals." He will speak at 4 p.m. in 215 Phillips. Tea and coffee will be served one-half hour before the talk in the Lounge, room 277.

SATURDAY

Morehead Residence College and Cobb invite all couples to hear the Shadows play this Saturday from 8-12 p.m. in the Faculty Club room, (next to the "Circus"). The dance and refreshments are free.

COMING SOON

Morehead College will have a leadership conference Monday night in the Graham social room at 7:30 p.m. Several dorm presidents and college officers will explain the duties of all elected positions.

The Carolina Political Union will meet Sunday night, March 6, at 8 p.m. in the Grail Room in GM. Dr. Raymond Dawson will address the group. Guests are encouraged to attend.

SDX Will Meet

The UNC chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic society, will be hosting the spring regional conference of the fraternity on March 17 during Journalism Week on campus.

The Sigma Delta Chi chapter at Carolina was founded in 1958 and currently has twenty members. It is not a secret or honorary society, but a professional society for men in journalism, "dedicated to the highest ideals in journalism."

It is comparable to those professional organizations serving the professions of medicine and law. On "Sigma Delta Chi Day," national SDX President, Raymond Spangler will speak.

Spangler is publisher of the Redwood City Tribune in California. The day will also include a debate on "Free Press-Fair Trial" between Dr. Norval Neil Luxon and Dr. John Berry Adams, both of the UNC School of Journalism.

Honor Council Candidates Must Meet Requirements

Nine seats on the Men's Honor Council and six on the Women's Honor Council will be open for candidates in the March 22 election, according to Pat Taylor, chairman of the Honor Systems Commission.

Any person wishing to qualify for an endorsement exam to be given by the Commission has to meet four requirements.

All candidates must attend the candidates meeting Monday, 7 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

The contestants for the seats must be in good standing as defined in the election laws.

The districts with one seat open are men's districts, I, II, III, VI, IX, X and XI and women's districts I, II, III and IV.

There are two open seats in men's district X and in women's district V.

$4,650 For What?

The University allotted $6,000 to move and install three Victory Village Houses but it only cost $1,350 to transfer them. Is labor so expensive that it costs $4,650 to install the houses? Bob Harris asks the same question in his story on page two.

Official Protest Lodged By Harris

By GLENN L. MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

The Feb. 22 referendum on the so-called "slate amendment" has been protested.

Bayard Harris, told The Daily Tar Heel Friday that he filed a formal protest of the referendum on Friday, Feb. 24 with Student Body President Paul Dickson which was to be turned over to the chairman of the Elections Board.

John Winborne, then the temporary board chairman, resigned his post and no action was taken on the referendum protest. Dickson appointed Jerry Wagner as temporary Elections Board chairman but he has not yet been approved.

Harris said he later found out that the protest was to be filed with the Constitutional Council.

"In my opinion, the protest is valid," Dickson said Friday. "However, it's up to the elections board to decide."

Harris said he filed the protest on the basis that (1), "the polls were never opened in Alexander Residence Hall, which is a violation of the election laws;" (2), "ballot boxes at Y-Court were not manned properly, despite the usual popularity of that poll;" and (3) "debate was such that very few people knew what the referendum was about, if they knew there was a referendum at all."

Van McNair, chairman of the Constitutional Council, was not available for comment Friday.

Harris said he was not necessarily opposed to the constitutional amendment which provided for the election of the student body president and vice president on the same ballot. "These mechanical difficulties lead to a violation of both the spirit and the letter of the general election laws," Harris said.

He stated in the protest, "Until this situation is corrected by appropriate legislation, logic dictates that any election not involving candidates may be protested within a reasonable length of time providing that provisions of the question have not become effective. In this case we must hold that the so called 'slate amendment' is open to protest until an election has taken place under the amendment."

The amendment was passed in a light voter turnout by 1,283 to 657. However, Harris said he filed the official protest with Dickson at 4 p.m. Friday, Feb. 24. The 96-hour period following the final tabulation of the referendum in which any protest had to be filed ended at 9 p.m. the following day.

Harris said he hoped the council will invalidate the referendum of Feb. 22 and include the amendment referendum in th March 22 elections.

Poll Reveals 64% Oppose Ban Pickets

By ERNEST ROBL
DTH Staff Writer

An overwhelming majority of Carolina students are against yesterday's picketing of South Building by members of the Committee for Free Inquiry.

A poll taken by the DTH showed 119 students object to the action of the pickets, while only 46 said they approved of the action; 22 had no opinion.

Twelve CFI members marched with signs in front of the administration building for slightly over an hour yesterday to protest acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson's barring of leftist Frank Wilkinson and Communist Herbert Aptheker.

Typical student comments on the picketing included:

"I think the CFI no longer has the support of the mass of students due to the infiltration of the pseudo-beatniks who think they are saving the world, but actually don't know what they are saving it for." —Ed McDonald, senior, Reidsville.

"For one thing, it (the picketing) will bring the issue out in front of the students and combat student apathy." —Dave McFadden, junior, Asheboro.

"I don't see that it's going to gain anything." —Kenneth Steele, senior, Statesville.

"This isn't the right stage for picketing. We can still work things out." — Hank Barnes, sophomore, Bellair, Md.

"It's ridiculous! It has absolutely nothing to do with the whole situation. Everything that Paul's done could be destroyed." —Alvin Tyndall, senior, Wilson.

A number of those who voted no opinion told the DTH interviewers they thought they did not know enough about the picketing no comment on the situation.

Carolina Loses Keep-Away 21-20—Final Freeze Folds

By GENE RECTOR
DTH Sports Editor

But with four seconds remaining, Duke's Mike Lewis hit the second shot of a two-shot foul to hand the Blue Devils a 21-20 victory before 12,400 fans at the 13th annual ACC Basketb,all Tolrnament.

For the Tar Heels it was a cold, sad ending to a dedicated performance.

Duke held the ball with 0:16 remaining. Steve Vacendak passed to Jack Marin, got it back and hit Verga in the corner. At the same time, Mike Lewis broke for the basket and Verga flipped him the ball. Bennett fouled Lewis while the latter shot, and the big Duke pivot was on the line with a two - shot foul, the score tied at 20-all, and four seconds remaining.

Lewis missed the first try, but hit the second, and the Tar Heels were through.

A wild pass upcourt in a vain attempt to get off a shot for victory went out of bounds as the buzzer sounded.

A sellout crowd saw the Tar Heels take the opening tap and then play keep - away from the taller, stronger Blue Devils.

North Carolina's Larry Miller took the game's first shot with 15:45 to go in the first half, and Bob Bennett's free throw with 15:36 to go was the first point of the night.

Bob Verga's jump shot seconds later gave Duke a 2-1 lead.

Again UNC elected to sit on the ball — waiting for the good shot. That good shot came with 12:46 left, as Bob Lewis drove down the lane for a layup and a 3-2 UNC lead.

But a field goal by Steve Vacendak and a free throw by Jack Marin had the Devils back out in front, 5-3, with 11:42 remaining.

John Yokley — UNC's top scorer with six points and Tom Gauntlett sandwiched free throws around a Duke fielder by Bob Riedy, and the score was 7-5 in the Devils' favor at the half.

After controlling the second-half tipoff and missing two easy layups, the Tar Heels took command for most of the remainder of the game.

A driving shot by Yokley tied it at 7-7 with 18 minutes left to play, and with 15:47 to go, Johnny did it again to give his team a 9-8 lead.

Then Bobby Lewis' three-point play with 12:31 remaining shot the Tar Heels to a 13-10 advantage.

Verga popped one in from outside to slice Duke's deficit to one, but Lewis hit Bennett with a pass and the UNC center drove for a bucket. Then Larry Miller got his only field goal of the night to put Carolina in a good position — on top, 17-12, with 10:12 to play.

But here, Duke began its move, outscoring UNC by 7-3 in the next seven minutes.

Marin got a free throw off Bob Lewis' foul, and Vecendak hit from the outside right for 17-15, UNC. After Bennett scored again for the Tar Heels for a 19-15 lead at 8:11, Marin canned two free tosses.

Then Mike Lewis dropped a foul shot, and Miller got one of the same for Carolina, which now held a 20-18 lead with 3:21 to go.

But with 2:08 remaining, the

Ban Stand Of 1852

And you think this speaker ban situation is bad. Look brothers, don't yell too loud. Use your heads. Things could be much, much worse.

You don't believe it? Well the following letter was written by the University to parents of students June 6, 1852, and is clear precedence for another kind of ban which might be enacted any time.

Sir,

THE SECLUDED situation of this place is not without disadvantages, but they are believed to be more than counterbalanced by the safeguards which the Legislature and the Trustees have been thereby enabled to throw around us. Extensive inquiry, long experience and personal examination, have left no doubt on the mind of any one of us that our location was, on the whole, happily chosen.

* * * * *

TO MAINTAIN A tippling house within two miles of the University, or to sell within that distance wine, ardent spirits, or malt liquors, to be used by a student,without the consent of the Faculty, is an indictable offense. Gaming, horse-racing, and other kindred practices, within four miles, are prohibited in like manner. To give full sanction and efficiency to the provisions of the criminal law, the Trustees have ordained that any student who may be seen publicly intoxicated, or in whose room ardent spirits may be found, shall be forthwith suspended or dismissed, as the circumstances of the case may seem to require. This ordinance has been and will be faithfully carried into execution in every instance of its violation.

* * * * *

EXTRAVAGANT HABITS ordinarily tend to the hindrance of all improvement, intellectual and moral; and the deleterious effect is by no means confined to the individual who is subject of them. It is impossible to preserve young men in all cases from indiscretions of his character. So carefully have these evils been guarded against, however, that no parent can suffer from them, who is faithful to the college, the community, his son, or himself. The Rev. Elisha Mitchell, D.D., is bursar of the institution. It is his duty to receive all sums of money that young men bring with them, to "disburse the same in paying their board, tuition fees, college dues, and other necessary expenses" . . . to keep an account of the money thus received and disbursed, and at the close of each session to transmit a copy of such account to the parent or guardian of each student."

* * * * *

THE REVISED Statutes "concerning the University," (chap. 116.,) make it "unlawful for any merchant, shopkeeper, or other person at Chapel Hill, or within two miles thereof, to sell to any student of the University, goods, wares or merchandise, without the consent of the faculty, or some member thereof, in writing." Any contract for the sale of such article is "null and void, and no recovery can be had thereon." The parent is consequently absolved from all obligation to pay an account thus created, and it is very clear that guardian cannot discharge such a claim, without rendering himself liable to the estate of his ward for the amount. The ordinance of the Trustees, on the subject, requires the Faculty to dismiss a student, who may contract a debt without permission.

Approval Given To TV Measure

Color television for everyone?

That's right! Student Legislature passed a bill Thursday night to set up the means for every residence hall, fraternity and sorority ot have a color or black-and-white TV.

According to the author of the bill, Steve Jolly, this is how the set up will work:

If you residence hall's TV is from one to two years old, Student Government and the television maintenance fund will give it $60 toward a new TV, either black-and-white or color. If your residence hall TV is two to three years old, they will give it $120; from three to four years, $180; and more than four, $240.

The same applies to fraternities and sororities, only on a smaller scale. If you fraternity or sorority TV is one to two years old, it will get $40; from two to three years, $80; from three to four years, $120; and more than four, $160.

The money provided by Student Government is in addition to the trade-in value of the TV.

In the past Student Government and the Administration have provided residence halls with televisions. This bill extends this service to fraternities and sororities for the first time. Many legislators felt that the past practice had neglected a major part of the campus.

It will be up to the Treasurer of the student body to determine whether the residence hall, fraternity or sorority has a legitimate need for a new TV.

Under this bill, Cobb, Craige and Ehringhaus will be entitled to one extra TV, and Morrison will be allowed to get two more.

Jolly said it was his belief that "as soon as the sets are available through the University purchasing agent, every living area on campus will probably have a color TV. The cost of a color TV, bought through the purchasing agent will be $290, and a color antenna will cost $20."

In other action Thursday night, Rep. De Haven Cleaver resigned from the Legislature in protest to the Student Government administration's handling of the Speaker Ban controversy. He alleged that Pres. Paul Dickson has placed Student Government out on a limb from which it cannot retreat.

"Though I hold deep respect for Rep. Cleaver, I do regret those people who become disillusioned with Student Government and simply throw in the towel instead of staying in and fighting."

The Legislature refused to permit "A Resolution to Express Appreciation to Those Involved in the Amendment to the Speaker Ban" to be brought to the floor. A two-thirds vote was required to remove the resolution from the Ways and Means Committee in which it had been held since early February.

A resolution, authored by John Strickland, asking for an end to dormitory crowding was tabled.

Strickland pointed out the trustees had appointed a committee headed by Dr. A. K. King to study the question of increasing the size of UNC, and the resolution would state the students' position on residence hall crowding.

The appointment of Jrrey Wagner as chairman of the Elections' Board was turned down by an 11 to 8 vote.

Students Here From Germany

Studentenverband Deutscher Ingenieurschulen - Landesverband Berlin. That's pretty impressive, but since you probably understand it as well as I did when I heard it, I'll translate.

The "Student Association of Engineering Colleges" has a group of 18 students from Berlin traveling in the United States for 21 days and they were on the UNC Campus at Chapel Hill Thursday and Friday.

My German vocabulary is limited to "gesundsheit" but talking with three of the students was not difficult as they speak excellent English. (I couldn't help but wonder why engineers would be interested in The Daily Tar Heel office but I'm glad they wandered in).

The group spent the last 7 days in Raleigh with State College serving as host. They stayed in American homes and were amazed by the "Southern Hospitality. "They couldn't do enough for us."

They spent their first five days in New York. Juergen Hellenschmidt says he found New York "very expensive and interesting." From New York they traveled to Maryland where they played a soccer match. Proceeds went to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library to be bulit in Cambridge, Mass.

The trip is being made to promote understanding between the people of Berlin and the U. S. Only eighteen are selected from the fifty that took a technical engineering test.

Dean To Extend Women's Hours

The Dean of Women's office granted 2 a.m. late permission for all Carolina coeds for Saturday, April 30 during Jubilee weekend.

The Women's Residence Council, at their meeting Tuesday, March 1, unanimously passed late permissions for both Friday and Saturday nights during Jubilee.

The WRC late hours decision was recommended to Dean Carmichael, who has the right to over ride the decision.

Dean Carmichael referred the question of late permission to question of late permission to her assistant Mrs. Dorothy Fulgram who considered Carmichael's opinion in the final decision.

Sitterson OK's Two Reds, Not Aptheker

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

Communist Herbert Aptheker was officially denied use of campus speaking privileges yesterday, but two other Communists have been granted permission to give talks here.

Vladimir Alexandrov, a specialist on the history of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, and Hanus Papousek, a visiting professor at the University of Denver, have been invited by the departments of political science and psychology, respectively.

Neither of the two men have replied as yet to the invitations.

In granting the men permission to come here, Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson said, "The invitations issued by the two departments are clearly in accord with the policy on visiting speakers adopted by the board of trustees Feb. 28.

In a letter to Paul Dickson, student body president, explaining why he barred Aptheker, Sitterson said he had not acted on the question previously because the student-faculty committee had not given the Communist theortican's invitation consideration.

"Since then," Sitterson said, "I have consulted with the committee. I am denying permission to use University facilities for Mr. Aptheker's proposed speech on March 9."

Sitterson said the reason for his decision was based on the executive committee of the board of trustee's cancellation of Aptheker's scheduled appearance last Feb. 7.

"Even though prior to the executive committee action I recommended that the earlier invitation be allowed to stand, I regard their action as in effect binding in this instance," Sitterson said.

Dickson said, "The chancellor did exactly as we expected. It figured that since he turned down Wilkinson he would also turn down Aptheker."

In his letter to Dickson, Sitterson said he was "well aware of the difficulties before us all at this time. As soon as things quited down a bit and we both have an opportunity for a leisurely conversation, I would appreciate an opportunity to talk with you about these and related matters."

Prof. Frederic N. Cleaveland, chairman of the political science department, said that Pi Sigma Alpha, the political science graduate student organization, had invited Alexandrov.

Papousek was invited by the UNC Developmental Psychology Training Program which is headed by Prof. Halbert B. Robinson.

The communist scholars have been offered a choice of dates to speak here this spring.

Students Protest In Orderly March

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

Members of the Committee for Free Inquiry paraded in front of South Building yesterday for an hour and a half with signs protesting the denial of free speech at Carolina.

About 35 graduates and undergraduates attracted a curious crowd of more than 200 onlookers while they quietly circulated from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Some signs carried by the picketers read: "Why Were We Locked Out of Carroll Hall?" "Free Speech When? Free Speech Now," and "I'd Rather Be An Orphan."

A collection box was set up in Y-Court to receive donations for the activities of CFI.

Student Body President Paul Dickson refused to align himself with yesterday's actions by the CFI, saying "such action is not needed. It accomplishes nothing, and I do not at this time condone it."

Dickson, who is also chairman of the CFI steering committee, noted that Thursday's CFI meeting was called without consulting him, adding that it was "hastily-called and poorly attended."

A Sunday meeting in Gerrard Hall has been called by the CFI for 7:30 p.m. "We will discuss . . . recent developments and our plans for the future," Dickson said in a statement.

"All the students and faculty are urged to attend this meeting because decisions will be made which will affect the entire campus."

It is expected that Dickson will reveal the outcome of talks with lawyers in Greensboro Thursday. Smith, Moore, Smith, Shell, and Hunter is the law firm Dickson conferred with.

Little, also chairman of the Student Party, rejected the picketing action. "They have a right to picket," he said yesterday, "but I personally am not in favor of picketing for the sole purpose of picketing."

"I don't critize their picketing per se," Little said. What I do question is the fact that Stu Matthews called the meeting."

Matthews is not on the CFI steering committee.

Thomas, also chairman of the University Party, said, "I am dead set against (picketing)."

"You must consider how the people in the state will react to it," Thomas continued. "This reaction," he said, "will most likely be "adverse."

"You've got to consider the problem in two areas," he said, "in the shell of the campus and in the sphere of the state.

None of the steering committee members contacted said they would resign from the committee. "I'm going to stay in there and keep as much a moderating influence as I can," Thomas said.

Dickson said court action is still in the planning stage. He refused to comment on how the CFI will raise money to take the case to court, but indicated this matter would be discussed at the Sunday meeting.

Wasting Useful Energy

Picketing is hardly a new pastime in Chapel Hill. The only surprising thing about yesterday's performance in front of South Building was that it did not happen sooner.

But that makes it no less disgusting.

It has been amply shown in the past decade that protest demonstrations have a place in our society and can be an effective force for change.

An effective protest, however, must be necessary, purposeful and intelligent.

Yesterday's demonstration was none of these.

Members of the Committee for Free Inquiry should not fool themselves. Their actions have not influenced their opponents in their own favor in any way. The committee has, however, been useful because it has given students a platform for expression of their ideas, and so long as this line of communication remains open the student body can stay united in its opposition to prohibitive rules.

Despite any protestations to the contrary, this CFI action appears to be demonstration merely for the sake of demonstration. Motives are immaterial in this case because the picket lines are unnecessary and a vast majority of the student body realizes it.

Continued demonstrations, therefore, will have but one effect — they will build student opposition to CFI. The group will be split.

It will be destroyed.

Student Body President Paul Dickson, who has been giving the potentially chaotic CFI a sense of direction, had this comment on the picketing: "I do not at this time condone it."

From the chairman of CFI, that is not very committal.

He claims to be representing the student body in this vigil, and justifiably so. These students have a right to know if, when and under what conditions he intends to support demonstrations — if he expects to continue to speak for them.

If some students feel compelled to march, perhaps the University could reserve a street or sidewalk someplace where they can walk off their frustrations.

It seems a shame to waste all that energy, however. We urge these students to turn their enthusiasm, along with the DTH, to wholehearted support of a court settlement of the speaker question.

We might begin by starting a fund to pay for the expenses of the case.

It Cost How Much?

Would you pay $2,000 to move a house "valued at less than $2,000" across the street?

The University did. Or, according to UNC Business Manager J .A. Branch they did.

On the other hand, a look at records in the finance office reveals the University paid Blake Construction Company in Greensboro a total of $1,350 to move three Victory Village houses — that's only $450 apiece.

The other $4,650? "You must take into consideration," Branch says, "the fact the movers only do the moving. Our maintenance men have to install the facilities."

According to Victory Village maintenance chief John Hinson, his men spent "a few hours" installing the facilities.

These are difficult questions to answer. Most questions on the subject directed at Hinson elicit an automatic, "I don't know."

At any rate, trying to get complete inforation about funds involved in moving Victory Village units from University officials is considerably harder than shooting out a blinking 10-watt bulb with a slingshot at 400 yards on a dark night — the moment the bulb is out.

In other words, its impossible. University accountant Victor Bowles refers you to Branch. Branch refers you to the finance department.

Mr. R. L. Hardison, finance department head, gives you the cost of moving three units and tells you. 'I don't remember any other transactions."

You see Branch again. He tells you: "Our office doesn't do any detailed accounting with regard to Victory Village." He then says he got his $2,000 estimate from someone else.

The one thing they all agree on? No more Victory Villages will be moved — be the cost $2 or $2,000.

Are they needed? Check the waiting list in the Housing Department. "I'm interested in economics, not the philosophy of housing," Branch says.

"Reminds Me Of A Treadmill"

Bad Manners

Keep Elbows Off The Table

A student from a Journalism class came for an interview tonight. Among the questions he asked was why I had not been writing lately?

I answered that I was still whacking heads. that the student manners were terrible at Lenoir, but that most of the faux pas were ones that I had already written about, and I didn't want to bore people.

He said I should get back to writing, that there was always a turnover in the student body, and they needed to be constantly reminded.

A great many students are mighty sweet about making a point of holding doors for me, which I appreciate, but a lot of student manners leave much to be desired.

To cite a few recent examples—A student asked me if he could sit at my table. I was glad to have him. He immediately folded both arms on the table, parallel to his body, and proceded to eat, with his head bowed over his food. He put his knife on the table, resting on his plate.

I told him—Put you knife on your plate, don't use it as a gang-plank, and put one hand in your lap, and sit up! He did so, remarking that he didn't know much about table manners.

The next day, another student took the same position at my table and left his spoon in his cup. I told him to put his spoon on his saucer, to put one hand in his lap, and sit up. I won't let anone sit at my table with such a display of slouchy eating.

Recently I saw another student sitting on one leg while he ate. I stopped at his table and asked him what kind of job he thought he would get when he left here" He answered he hoped he would get a good one. I said I would like to see him try to get a good job.

This week, one student started to take a chair from my table, another started to put his coat on a chair at my table. another—his books; still another put two used cups and saucers on my table. I told them all, "You don't take anything from my table, or put anything on my table, or chair, without asking permission. I thought you all knew better than that by now!"

I saw another student pushing the spaghetti all over his plate with his thumb. I wanted to get up and swat him and tell him to push with a small piece of bread. or his knife, but never with his fingers

Last week I was asked to talk to the Maverick Club at Craige. This week at Teague. One student asked me if it was all right to put your elbows on the table when you were talking. I said I thought it was all right when you were talking, between courses, but never when eating. But I cautioned, when you are a guest, watch your hostess, and if neither she, nor her husband, put their elbows on the table, I wouldn't either.

Finally, the essence of good breeding is consideration for others. I am always chiding students about slamming doors People who slam doors are thoughtless Turn the knob and close the door, not slam it.

Women Students Deserve Equal Rights

With great surprise, those of us who prefer to brood over beer while wading in the murky depths of sundry theories have witnessed a rather prolonged affectation sweep over the campus. Of epidemic proportion, this malady has quickly swept away the crusty curtain of lethargy which normally shrouds our placid and remote Southern village.

While the scent of free speech and the bittersweet taste of battle lingers on, let me propose one project that should have been effected eons ago.

Our campus provides a microcosm, a testing ground for many academic projects. We have seen one such project gain momentum and eventually change the course of things. Yet, I contend that there are other battles just as worthy, even worthier.

Let us think back, and reflect upon one such battle whose antagonists have yet to be reconciled.

Long before the phrases "academic freedom" or "free speech" reached a prominent niche in American collegiate groves, this fierce battle raged. The campfires of the combatants still glow, but the flames only flicker. Perhaps 'free speech" is held in greater esteem, or considered academically chic, whereas this prior campaign has lost its glitter. I do not have the answer, only suggestions.

The campaign itself dates back several centuries, but the conflicts of note occurred mainly in our homeland.

Long before Abe Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation, our founders penned a document which theoretically recognized certain "unalienable Rights," including "Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness." Yet, even in this hallowed haven of democracy, where representative government has been best achieved, we American men have historically trampled the "unalienable Rights" of the largest minority group of them all, our natural partners.

The Negroes have been voting 100 years, but women had to wait for the constitutional guarantee another 60. This assuredly must be considered one of the greatest failings of governments since the Enlightenment, this prejudicial and insincere lip-service given the (albeit) sacrosanct term "Right."

To return to the microcosm, the immediate environs, let us peer at this selective, systematic discrimination in the Most Advanced Year of Our Lord 1966.

Specifically, I call to your attention, dear reader (especially male reader, since the female is only too aware of the following), the injustices a girl must endure in order that she may be granted the privilege of matriculation at the University.

For purposes of comparison, we must consider the male collegian a Demigod beside his counterpart. There are hardly any restrictions on him, whereas for her, it is hardly necessary to list the various inequities. Among the more flagrant, reflect for a moment on the meaning of capus "justice."

There is no penalty whatsoever for the actions of a peripatetic male carousing in the wee hours, yet for the lasses convicted of such a heinous crime, our impartial, "separate-but-equal" judicial system invariably prescribes what I suppose must be contrived as an adequate reward.

Let our young heroine arrive a few milliseconds behind schedule at her detention camp, more commonly dubbed dormitory, and the Iron Maiden beckons. Described in Mother Superior's Catalogue as "appropriate disciplinary action," this practice of campusing for any and all infractions of entrenched procedure amounts to solitary confinement.

Not only does the male have no such disciplinary blade posed over him, but he can escape dormitory life altogether. For a look at the ancient regime's prescription for young ladies, peruse the campus code someday. To continue, should the male wish relief from the cacophony and tedium of dorm life, he can move into a) an off-campus apartment, or b) a fraternity.

The female has only a vaguely similar choice. She can join a sorority, if she desires and is accepted, but the stone wall of peremptory authority still remains.

In the rarer cases, involving moral issues, Mother Superior reveals traits even the Marquis de Sade could not boast of. We find in our cherished little tomb, the University Bulletin, that the young ladies may not "spend the night in a hotel, motel, boarding house, or tourist home in Durham, Raleigh, or nearby towns for a University of North Carolina function unless accompanied by their parents."

Further, we find that women " students who will reach their destination after University closing hours must have special written permission for each trip before leaving Chapel Hill." Such trivialities are further detailed for several paragraphs, ad nauseam.

The salt is not doused into the wound, however, until the aforementioned disciplinary body (for women) meets, and decides what course should be taken. Fortunately, the reader of the bulletin is spared the gory details.

A simple indicator of what is yet to come appears under the heading "Dismissal From the University." This piece is of such interest, at least from a clinical viewpoint, I am inclined to quote it in full:

"After a (woman) student has been dismissed from the University, or if she has dropped out of classes with the expectation of severing her connections with the University, she is expected to leave her residence and Chapel Hill with 48 hours."

This passage literally screams—Banish the Witches, Destroy the Evil Plague with Godspeed! The Honor Code requires only 24 hours, but in 48, the University health squads can probably rid the wench's quarters (via fire, Holy Water, incantations, etc.) of any pestilential after-effects.

We have already witnessed the years Cause Celebre, e.g., the case involving the Student Body President. Now, months after the terminal decision, justice (after our fashion) has, of course, triumphed. The male is in good standing; the female has long since breathed her last academically free breeze.

Thus, before the dusty curtains of lethargy again are permitted to settle over Chapel Hill, let us rekindle the flame of freedom and banish yet one more obstacle in our course to free inquiry. Let us establish equitable conditions for free women as well as free men.

They're Demonstrating Young

Talk about "immature minds!"

Student demonstrators of high school age once limited themselves to championing such urgent causes as beatle haircuts and better cafeteria meals. But not anymore.

The high schoolers, having joined the fun and games at the Washington peace marches, now want to bring their World Saving ideas closer to home.

Led by a 17-year-old W.E.B. DuBois Club member, they protested "an invasion of our civilian lives by the military." In politer circles, this menance is known as an armed forces recruiting information campaign.

Four noncmissioned recruiters from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force were hissed by the Young Patriots.

Ronald Rivers, demonstration leader, pleasantly assured reporters that he isn't a conscientous objector "because I'm not opposed to all wars."

Rivers, it turned out, was showing how he chooses his causes with care. "I think that World War II was justified," the teenage Foreign Policy Expert profoundly declared, "but not Viet Nam."

Rivers, who can now brag he has had "Mister" placed before his name by The New York Times, said that working in the armed forces isn't a good and useful career.

The demonstrators represented a very small minority of the student body, but at a school whose students have a median I.Q. of 135, you'd think there'd be more political activity.

Principai Alexander Taffel described some of his other students as "William Buckley-type rightists," but cautiously added that none could be considered "violently oriented."

Many college officials are fond of saying that groups of political activists consist largely of immature freshmen and sophomores, and Dr. Taffel seemed to have similar feelings. Don't worry, he said. the troublemakers are "mostly 14 and 15 year olds."

State Sen. Robert Morgan undoubtedly would have a ball were he living in New York. Wearing his most solemn expression, he'd probably hold a press conference to warn Concerned Citizens about the effects of Communism on "immature minds"!

Most people at UNC have long since decided that college students can survive exposure to alien ideas. Educated in their political science and modern civilization classes (or, as a certain state senator would say, "brain-washed"), the students are presumably competent at spotting ideological wooden nickels, even if their home town teachers told them before they entered college that Columbus discovered the Hawaiian Islands after following a trail of coconuts.

But what about the ones who are still in the high schools—which, like UNC, are state-supported institutions, regardless of whether or not they fall under the speaker ban?

Tune in on our next chapter—Will Gov-Moore let Frank Wilkinson and Herbert Aptheker address the Chapel Hill H.S. safety patrol?

Botanical Irony; Davey At Davie

A Fascinated Youngster Watches Foreman C. E. Barney Handle The Saw

By JOCK LAUTERER
DTH Staff Writer

Pzzaaazzzoooonnnng!

Chips gush from the buzz saw like a stream of water as the tough hide of the felled Red Maple is ripped into pieces by the churning blade.

The renovation project at Davie Hall is a noisy enterprise, as nearby professors will lament. But such is the cost of progress.

"That's a black oak," foreman C. E. Barney says as he wipes his brow, waving his bright yellow hard hat in the vague direction of the prostrate tree.

"This project will take, maybe two years," said his companion, a burley foreman for the T. A. Loving Construction Company.

Barney heads the crew here now sawing down the trees in front of New West and Davie Halls. Ironically, the name of the tree crew is the Davie Tree Service. To make the irony even more bitter, Davie Hall was the old botany building.

Inside the skeleton of Davie Hall, demolition men are uprooting desks and tearing out the rotting boards. On one blackboard the final lecture is still scribbled.

A demolition foreman holds a bent cigarette in his heavily lined fingers and props himself on a knocked-out window, staring out at the almost visible noise of the two saws now engaged in a discordant duet.

"We'll have this place torn down by April 10 if the weather's good," said the foreman. Two workmen enter the sloping classroom dragging heavy window weights.

The inside sounds of scuffling, dragging, yelling and banging mixes in with the outside sounds of the saws chewing away, trucks lumbering over the smashed grass and the bulldozer munching into the red earth.

There is so much noise at one point the men with the saws must yell in each other's ear to be heard. Several campus dogs race across the new terrain, pausing to try to figure out where the old trees went.

The downed red maples were just beginning to bud. Foreman Barney rolls a slender, russet twig of the maple between two of his browned fingers, looking at the twig thoughtfully. He says something but his voice is drowned by the frantic whine of the chain saw.

From the black bark of one of the oaks grows sprigs of olive green, gay mistletoe. Cheery though it looks, the mistletoe is a parasitic plant feasting and dying with its host.

High in a lofty pecan tree a crewman from the Davey Tree Service begins lopping off the top branches, working his way downward until only the naked hulk of the trunk is left. Foreman Barney's clear blue eyes gaze upwards as he directs the removal of the tree.

And what becomes of the wood? One woman plans to use several multi-trunk chunks for "play-horses" for her children. "Kids love 'em" she said. She said she knew one friend who has a backyard full off such stumps.

A Black Oak Is Decapitated

Part of the building will be rebuilt with the same brick to house the Psychology Department. The whole project may cost as much as $1.5 million.

Would-Be Assassin Arrested By FBI

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 27-year-old New Jersey man who challenged the Federal Bureau of Investigation to find him before he carried out a plan to assassinate President Johnson, was tracked down, arrested and held in $50,000 bail yesterday for further hearing.

Oswald S. Pick of Clifton, N. J,. was taken into custody at 8:10 a.m. board a Washington-bound train.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington received a telephone call from New York at 5:45 a.m. (EST) from an anonymous caller who said he was going to Washington to kill the President. The caller challenged the FBI to find him.

Agents went aboard the train in New York, Newark and Philadelphia, looked over all the passengers, then took Pick into custody. In New York, Robert Morgenthau, the U. S. Attorney there said the anonymous caller had described himself.

Morgenthau said the caller told the FBI he would be carrying a 25-caliber Baretta pistol, that he had received an undesirable discharge after serving in the Air Force from January, 1956, to October, 1959, and had spent three months in mental institutions.

The FBI said about 200 persons were aboard the train, bound for Washington.

Japanese Crash Kills 63 Persons

TOKYO (AP) — A Canadian Pacific jetliner groping for a landing in fog hit the approach lights at Tokyo's international airport Thursday night and smashed up in flames, killing 63 persons.

Only nine persons, two of them Americans, were known to have survived the crash. Canadian pacific officials said the plane carried 62 passengers, nine crewmen and an off-duty stewardess. Six Americans may have perished.

Ripping out 15 landing lights in Tokyo Bay on the approach to the runway, the Canadian Pacific airlines DC8 hit a breakwater wall at the edge of the runway and then tore down the runway scattering wreckage for nearly a mile before coming to a halt.

Aboard the four-engine craft and resumed killed were Jesse Zoukmer, a Vice President of the American Broadcasting Co., and his wife. He was on his way home from Hong Kong, origin of the ill-fated flight.

Rescue squads worked in fog and rain pulling mangled and charred bodies from the twisted and smoldering wreckage of what once was a $6 million airliner. Searchlights piereced the early morning darkness.

Japanese authorities launched an inquiry into the disaster, the second to strike at the airport in a month. On Feb. 4, a Japanese Boeing 727 jet crashed into Tokyo Bay while trying to land, and 133 persons were killed. That was the world's worst single plane disaster.

Friday's crash came at the end of a suspense drama, with survivors reporting that the plane had circled over Tokyo for about 45 minutes waiting for the fog to lift.

On the ground, the airport control tower was in touch with the pilot, Capt. Cecil N. McNeal, 57, of Vancouver. Visibility was down to 1,000 yards. Had it dropped to 900 yards the plane would have been waved off. Airport officials said McNeal told the tower he could see the landing lights.

Moments later it happened. There were several explosions. A pillar of fire rose from the edge of the runway. Firemen and ambulance crews rushed off, sirens wailing.

Inside the plane, survivors related, the heat was unbearable.

Democrats' Senate Move On Viet Nam Squashed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Senate Democrats proposed yesterday that Congress declare its independence of President Johnson's course in South Viet Nam—and both moves apparently were quashed.

Sen. J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas, who sponsored one, conceded as much, although his Senate Foreign Relations Committee put off until Monday a formal decision.

Fulbright said as he "sensed the mood of the Committee," neither measure, sought as amendments to a $415-million emergency foreign aid bill, is likely to be adopted.

The new policy maneuvers by Fulbright and Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota came four days after the Senate-refused, 92 to 5, to rescind a 1964 resolution supporting the use of American forces against the Communists in South Viet Nam.

Meanwhile, the Senate went to work on President Johnson's $6-billion tax bill. Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., called it "the only responsible way to meet the expenses of Viet Nam."

Long, Assistant Democratic Leader and Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Congress could not cut civilian spending enough to pay the costs of war. He said President Johnson already has pared the budget to essential minimums.

"I think that unless we cut back on some of these Great Society programs," countered Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., "We are going to have a tax increase that will shock many people."

Williams said the administration wants to postpone major tax increases until after November's Congressional elections.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he hopes to see the Johnson tax bill, speeding income and corporation tax payments and reinstating some automobile and telephone excise levies, passed by the Senate next Tuesday. It already has passed the House.

Mississippi Death Toll Mounts In Tornado Wake

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—The death toll increased yesterday as rescue workers checked the tracks of a tornado that skipped across central Mississippi.

The highway patrol said 60 were known dead and 497 injured — 19 critically. The storm's final punch Thursday night killed one man in Alabama and injured 11.

Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin said damage would amount to at least $12 million. He called the track of destruction "one of the most horrible scenes I've ever seen."

Gartin — acting for Gov. Paul Johnson, who is out of state — said game and fish commission agents had been ordered to make a house-to-house tour in rural areas to check on people and conditions.

The rural tornado areas will be a major problem, he said, due to their isolation. "It's easier to get to concentrated areas in the city."

The twister touched down in a Jackson suburb at dusk. It was erratic. The deadly funnel would snake down from the tumultuous clouds for a short, destructive spurt, then lift.

shopping center here and a

Where it plowed through a nearby industrial section, the tornado left lanes of fantastic damage. In open farm country, it left herds of dead cattle and slashed swaths through timber.

The touch down in the industrial area, across Pearl River from Jackson in Rankin County, demolished three big industrial plants. Relatively few lives were involved because workers had been sent home early due to the severe weather warning issued by the weather bureau.

A warm sun shone on the rescue workers yesterday and small streams in the storm area, some swelled to overflowing by last night's torrential rain, subsided.

Student Group Defies Sukarno

They said several hundred students took part in each demonstration in defiance of Sukarno's ban on such acts. Most of the students involved were described as of high school age.

The biggest demonstration was staged outside the University of Indonesia, which was ordered closed by the government Thursday on grounds that the outlawed KAMI students organization was using it as a headquarters.

Troops and reinforcements were rushed to the University to join troops already on guard. The students shouted antigovernment slogans, but caused little trouble.

Johnson Flies To Texas For Weekend Visit

The Presidential plane took off from Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland at 3:27 p.m. (EST) for Randolph Field at San Antonio. A helicopter will carry the President from there to his home near Johnson City.

For the first time, members of the White House staff and reporters and photographers traveling with the President will stay in San Antonio. In the past, they had stayed in the Texas capital city of Austin.

LBJ Gives Rusk Added Responsibility

WASHINGTON (AP) —President Johnson has given Secretary of State Dean Rusk added responsibility for conduct of foreign affairs and provided two new high-level committees to help him.

Announcing this yesterday, the White House said the President's aim is "modernizing and streamlining the executive branch of government in the conduct of foreign affairs."

Johnson, the announcement said, has directed the Secretary of State "to assume responsibility to the full extent permitted by law for the overall direction, coordination and supervision of interdepartmental activities of the U. S. government overseas" outside of military activities.

White House sources said that by this action, Johnson is giving the Secretary of State some of the responsibility the President has shouldered in directing the many-fold activities agencies abroad.

Other regular members of this blue-ribbon group are to be the Deputy Secretary of Defense, the Foreign Aid Chief, the Central Intelligence Agency Director, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staffs, the Head of the U. S. Information Agency and the President's Special Assistant for National Security Affairs.

To any kid

We'll pay half your fare.

The idea's not as crazy as it may seem.

Anytime we take a jet up, there are almost always leftover seats.

So it occurred to us that we might be able to fill a few of them, if we gave the young people a break on the fare, and a chance to see the country.

The American Youth Plan*

We call the idea the American Youth Plan, and what it means is this:

American will pay half the jet coach fare for anybody 12 through 21.

It's that simple.

All you have to do is prove your age (a birth certificate or any other legal document will do) and buy a $3 identification card.

We date and stamp the card, and this entitles you to a half-fare ticket at any American Airlines counter.

The only catch is that you might have to wait before you get aboard; the fare is on a standby basis.

"Standby" simply means that the passengers with reservations and the servicemen get on before you do.

Then the plane's yours.

The American Youth Plan is good year round except for a few days before and after the Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas rushes.

If you can't think of any places you'd like to go offhand, you might see a travel agent for a few suggestions.

Complete this coupon—include your $3. (Do not send proof of age—it is not needed until you have your ID validated.)

In addition to your ID card, we'll also send you a free copy of AA's Go Go American with $50 worth of discount coupons.

Fauntleroy

It was an unprecedented and never-again-to-be-matched gesture . . . but they really shouldn't have done it. I was only doing my job, that's all.

All of you ballfans out there who instantly switched off your radios when the final game of Thursday's opening round of the ACC tourney expired no doubt missed out on the glorious bit of tribute-paying to which I refer. So in my usual ultra-humble manner, I'll let you in on it.

The buildup started back during the football season when the world discovered the peerless manner in which I presented big-game wins to desperate grid coaches. And when I so graciously handed out triumphs in the first month of the basketball campaign, well . . . that really started the wheels in the heads of the tourney supervisors to turning.

You see, since this season promised to produce the most evenly-balanced (I gave everybody a break this year) tournament in history, they figured it would be the opportune time to go all-out and bring to their loyal ticket-buyers the Most Distinguished Sports Personality in the world. So while I was filling my elasticized gut with banquet-table goodies on the post-New Year's Day football bowl games circuit, they sent out their first "feeler."

Since it called for me to stand when introduced and make a 15-second speech at the annual tourney, for the paltry offering of only $500,000, I laughed in their faces, spat on the bald-headed man's sweating dome, and booted them all out of my penthouse.

I was so disgusted with their ridicule that I didn't make a give-away for a week.

The ticket sales were progressing at a terribly slow pace, but when my decision was made known, they were more in demand than the last lady professional in a red light district.

Time passed through January and February, and with every week my volume of mail increased a thousandfold. The letters all said the same thing: "Let me sit on thy right hand on the night of judgment."

Peasants!

Finally the night came, and they poured into the ancient structure for the greatest show on earth. And all through the day's four games, they sat politely with only periodical applause for the action on the floor. They were waiting. They were holding back for what they had been awaiting for two long months.

C. A. Gillon Jr. took the mike and said:

"And now that the preliminaries are over we come to the main event of the eveining. William Neal Reynolds Coliseum is pleased to have as its guest tonight the only infallible being on the face of the earth . . ."

Then the tremendous roar from the crowd drowned out Gillon's voice and before I could rise from my seat, everyone in the place was on his knees and calling out things that are usually reserved for immortal beings.

And when the body-bountiful young lady in the seat next to me realiezd the importance of her station, she so fully swelled with pride that she pure-tee popped her buttons — Annie Fannie style!

But not one single person noticed her. They were dazzled by the sight of the one who had brought them such astounding profits in the betting pools.

The only infallible being on the face of the earth. . ..

Four men in the coliseum cheered loudest. That would be Messrs. McGuire, Maravich, Bubas and Smith, whose teams were the benefactors of my kindliness for the opening round.

Four other men bitterly cursed and stormed madly from the arena. But I had no pity for them. Maybe the next time they will know better than to try to trick the hand of fate which is guided by the Omniscient Fauntleroy!

However, being the perfectly honest and humble person that I am, I feel that I must make an apology to all of you ballfans — who were undoubtedly upset when my second-round selections didn't appear in yesterday's paper.

And just to make it up to you, I'll print — still too early to have any access to the final outcome (although I alone already know) of the two semi-final games — the choices from that round.

North Carolina State and Duke, of course.

Tonight? Duke, hands down.

Hanburger Makes Mark In Pro Ball

By GENE WHISNANT
DTH Sports Writer

I am sure that Carolina football fans remember Chris Hanburger, the spirited leader and defensive terror of the 1963 and 1964 UNC football teams. Well, Chris has begun to make his mark in the National Football League with the Washington Redskins.

The Hampton, Va. product came to Carolina as an end but Coach Jim Hickey switched him to center after his sophomore year. A switch which helped make Hickey ACC coach of the year in 1963 and the Tar Heels the 1963 Gator Bowl Champions with a 9-2 record.

Hanburger made All-Acc in 1963 and in 1964: Also, he was honorable mention All-American.

Hanburger is here at Carolina taking special courses. He has a major in History.

Chris said, concerning his switch from end to center and linebacker, "Sure, I am glad Hickey made the switch. At the time it was hard for me to make the adjustment to a new position but I don't believe I could have played pro ball as an end."

There were probably many doubts about Hanburger, who weighed only 197 in college, being big enough for professional ball. However his desire to play, his aggressiveness, and speed enabled Chris to become the Redskins' first string linebacker after the seventh game of the season.

Chris said, "I thought I would have a good chance with the Washington club because their linebackers were getting old."

"However I was worried until they traded linebacker Rod Breedlove to Pittsburg and that left only Jim Carr and myself at one corner linebacker position and I understood that the team usually carried two."

"I like the professional football player's life but I am getting paid and thus must look at it as a job. Although to play pro ball you must like football."

Another member of the North Carolina team's with Hanburger was also a freshman in the NFL this season — Ken Willard who was runner-up to Gary Sayers for the Rookie of the Year award.

Chris said that he did not play against Ken this year and has not seen him. But he plans to try to visit Willard who is at William and Mary Law school which is near Chris's hometown.

The Redskins open practice the last of July and Chris still wearing number 55 which he wore at UNC should be even better this year than last.

"I feel that I learned something each day last season, but I still have a lot to learn."

Chris said, "At first I was planning to stay in professional football only long enough to qualify for the pension which is five years, but now I want to stay as long as possible."

A Typical Spring Afternoon On Emerson Baseball Field

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer

It looked like rain. Heavy storm clouds swept across the sky. There was no wind. And there was a humid kind of heat.

The old field was deserted. The grass of the infield was grey instead of green. A ground crew had worked hurriedly on the infield and the dirt which stretched around the bases was smooth.

The hands of the bell tower clock instructed anyone interested that it was two-thirty.

Suddenly two young men walked onto the field. They wore rubber warm up jackets, grey practice pants and spikes. They loped over to the hitting cage beyond left field and began to work.

Minutes later Emerson Field was filled with ball players. There must have been about forty. While the manager took the slim bats out of an old canvas bag they tossed balls back and forth.

A big man walked to the outfield and collected his freshmen together. "Mountain-climbers," Bill Lovingood ordered and his boys shouted out numbers as their bodies bounced and churned.

A man with greying hair and a cheek bulging with tobacco picked up a fungo. His name is Rabb and he's one of the nation's most highly respected college coaches.

"We've got to take advantage of the weather this time of ayer," Rabb said. "Let's get in some hitting."

A net was rolled up to behind home plate. Shaw and Robbins took turns donning the catching gear and pitchers threw in fast balls.

"Bunt two and take five cuts," Rabb said and for about an hour Emerson resounded with the sound of an ash piece of wood meeting a horsehide.

Big Bill Haywood paced behind the practice mounds and coached the varsity pitchers. They threw with accuracy rather than with overpowering speed or stuff. It's a long season and control and confidence comes first. The rest will follow. That's what winning ball clubs are made of.

Haywood watched these men do their sit ups and then had 'em take a few sprints across the outfield. Then most of them walked to the showers breathing hard and hoping that the showers would be hot.

Coach Rabb organized a scrimmage. The team was divided and they played about four innings. The defenses looked tough and the hitters were meeting the ball and projecting it into Lovingoods' freshmen. Danny Talbott, Bob Hume, Gene Link and Bob Bonczec all hit triples. This team's got lots of power.

The bell in the tower struck five and the scrimmage broke up. There was more batting practice and Coaches Speight and Branch hit grounders to the infielders.

"Let's get out here at two-thirty tomorrow," Rabb said.

Speight and Branch took four swings apiece. The coach who hit the most balls past imaginary fielders won a soft drink. It was a tie and both of them left smiling.

A soft rain began to fall. And the manager picked up the balls and the catching gear and piled the bats back into the canvas bag.

Carolina Loses

cool Vancendak fired one in from the corner to tie the game at 20-all and set the stage for the dramatic Duke clinching.

No less than five ACC tournament records were set in the contest. UNC's final 20-point total was the lowest ever scored by a losing team. The 21-point total by Duke is the lowest winning score. The combined total of 41 points easily set records.

In additon, both Duke and UNC tied the lowest number of field goals scored by one team with seven each. UNC's six free throws in 10 attempts also set a record for fewest number of free throws made in a tournament game.

Airline Offers Reduced Rates To Young People

Special half-price "youth fares" for youngsters and young adults who are over 12 years of age but have not yet reached their 22nd birthday are now in effect over the domestic routes of Eastern Airlines, following recent approval by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

As explained by James W. Goodwin, Eastern's District Sales Manager for the Raleigh-Durham area, the reduced-rate "youth fares" are generally one half the price of regular one-way jet coach tickets, and are sold on a stand-by basis. That is, a student or other young person traveling under these discount fares may board one of Eastern's flights when space is available after regular revenue passengers and half-fare military personnel have been accommodated.

To qualify for the reduced rates, "youth fare" applicants are required to hold a special Eastern Airlines identification card, for which there is a nominal charge of $3. These are issued upon presentation of suitable proof of age, which may be through a birth certificate, passport, draft card, driver's license or other legal document. After March 21st, similar identity cards issued by other airlines will be recognized by Eastern on a reciprocal basis.

According to Mr. Goodwin, "youth fares" apply at all times and on all of Eastern's flights within the United States, including the "air shuttle" between Washington - New York or Newark and Boston, except during certain specified peak holiday travel periods. These are April 7, November 23 and 27, December 15 through 24 and January 2, 3 and 4.

Under the plan, boys or girls in the 12 through 21 age group do not need to be accompanied by their parents to qualify for the special fares. With the exception of the dates noted above, they may take advantage of the reduced fares in traveling to and from their schools or colleges away from home.

Examples of fares from Raleigh-Durham for one - way trips, taxes not included, are $13.10 to Atlanta, $10.50 to Baltimore, $21.50 to Chicago, $23.70 to Miami, $15.70 to New York and $9.40 to Washington.

Trotters In Raleigh

The Harlem Globetrotters pay their annual visit to the Raleigh Coliseum March 14 in Raleigh.

Large turnouts are expected for the Globetrotters and their special entertainers, the Bratislava Slovakian folk dances and performers. Critics have hailed the dancers in all parts of the nation. They have performed on the Ed Sullivan Show.

Good tickets are avilable to the game here. It will be the Washington Generals meeting the 'Trotters.

Grant Offered

Carolina will nominate a candidate for the N. C. Scottish Rite Fellowship for graduate study in the School of Government of George Washington University again this year.

The purpose of the grant, which is for $2,800, is to educate young people for leadership in state, local or federal government.

Westminster Fellowship Offers Three Seminars

By WILLIAM FESPERMAN
DTH Religion Editor

The Presbyterian Student Center, Westminister Fellowship, is offering three seminars in which participation is desired from interested students. The seminars are held in faculty homes.

Music and the Religious Tradition is led by Dr. Joel Carter, associate professor of music. The study deals with the changing forms of religious expression in the medium of music. Early masses, great masterpieces, and contemporary forms are investigated. The seminar meets at Dr. Carter's home at 601 Laurel Hill Road.

Changing Concepts in Science is led by Waldo Haisley, associate professor of physics. The seminar investigates Thomas Kuhn's controversial analysis of the nature, causes, and consequences of revolutions in basic scientific concepts. Meetings are held at 317 Burlage Drive.

Alternatives to War is led by William Geer of the history department. The seminar is a consideration of the main problem of modern civilization as viewed in a Christian context.

The seminars will meet on Sunday nights, March 6 and March 13, from 8:15 to 9:30. Cars leave from the Presbyterian Student Center at 8:00 for those needing transportation. Inquiries should be directed to the Westminister Fellowship at 967-2311.

THE CANDY OF THE SOUTH

Have astronauts made pilots old hat?

Sure, the boys who go off the "pads" get the big, bold headlines. But if you want to fly, the big opportunities are still with the aircraft that take off and land on several thousand feet of runway.

Who needs pilots? TAC does. And MAC. And SAC. And ADC.

There's a real future in Air Force flying. In years to come aircraft may fly higher, faster, and further than we dare dream of. But they'll be flying, with men who've had Air Force flight training at the controls.

Of course the Air Force also has plenty of jobs for those who won't be flying. As one of the world's largest and most advanced research and development organizations, we have a continuing need for scientists and engineers.

Young college graduates in these fields will find that they'll have the opportunity to do work that is both interesting and important. The fact is, nowhere will you have greater latitude or responsibility right from the start than on the Aerospace Team — the U.S. Air Force!

Interested? The place to find out more is at the office of the Professor of Aerospace Studies, if there is an Air Force ROTC unit on your campus. Ask about the new 2-year AFROTC program available at many colleges and universities. If you prefer, mail the coupon below.

British Jet Disintegrates: 124 (84 Americans) Killed

GOTEMBA, Japan (AP) —A British jetliner with 124 persons — at least 84 of them Americans — broke up in the freakish air over Mt. Fuji Friday and fluttered like a leaf down to disaster on the sacred mount's slopes.

Aviation experts, probing the wreckage, said yesterday freak air currents and sudden severe winds may have ripped the the British Overseas Airways, Corp., Boeing 707 apart minutes after takeoff from Tokyo's International Airport.

Japanese soldiers working under a full, predawn moon carried down the bodies of all 124 victims and placed them in wooden coffins in a Buddish Temple in Gotemba, 70 miles south of Tokyo.

Among the Americans were 75 persons on an Asian tour sponsored by the Thermo King Corp., of Minneapolis, Minn., a refrigeration equipment firm. Three top company officials and many of the firm's key dealers in the United States and their wives were among the dead.

A company spokesman said virtually every one of the company's top dealers in the U. S. was on the plane. "This has got to be the most disastrous thing a company could experience," he said.

All had attended a company convention in San Francisco last week and left last Saturday for Tokyo, honored for their sales work. For the last several years the firm has sponsored vacation trips for dealers showing the most improvement in their sales.

Last night Warren Trigg, Thermo King executive vice president, received a cablegram from Ralph V. Kerkin, comptroller. Kerwin referring to a crash the day before that killed 64 persons at Tokyo Airport, reported he was safe.

There was Charles Galbo, 52, of Cheektowaga, N. Y., who told a friend back home before he left, "I don't think I'll see you any more."

Japanese witnesses said they saw the plane break apart, then swirl down like a leaf, trailing fire and white smoke. Its wreckage scattered over wide area on the rugged slopes and set fire to trees and brush in some places.

It was Japan's second major air disaster within 19 hours and the third in a month. In history's worst commercial air disaster involving a single plane 133 persons perished in a Japanese Boeing 727 jetliner that plunged into Tokyo Bay

Ironically, as the doomed the wreckage at Naneda Airport of a Canadian Pacific DC8 jetliner that crashed while landing in a fog Thursday night, killing 64 of 72 persons on board.

The three crashes took a total of 321 lives.

Officials from Britain and Canada were en route to Tokyo to investigate the causes of the last two crashes.

Death still lingered over the scene of the Japanese airline crash. Officials reported that a helicopter in the continuing search for bodies plunged into Tokyo Bay, killing two of five crewmen on board.

Just minutes after the BOAC 707 took off at 1:58 p.m. for Hong Kong en route to London, reported severe winds over Mt. Fuji, noted for the freak air currents swirling around its 12,389-foot, snow-draped peak.

At noon, the weather bureau said the winds at Mt. Fuji were a sustained 70 miles an hour and three hours later a sustained 86 miles an hour, with gusts likely to be higher.

Officials at the scene said the winds and air currents could have overcome the plane, then braced its fall.

Vet's Bill Will Effect Housing

According to the Veteran's Regional Bureau in Winston-Salem the state has 191,822 men who now are eligible for benefits under the new GI Bill.

James E. Wadsworth, UNC director of housing, says that a large influx of married students to the campus could create a critical housing situation. He believes that single veterans can be accommodated.

I hope that this new problem will make us aware that there is an immediate need for more low-rent housing for married students," says Wadsworth.

He called attention to the disappearing Victory Village constructued in 1947 by the federal government to help meet campus housing needs of married veterans who flooded the campus after the war.

The 250-unit Village is scheduled soon to fall before bulldozers to make room for expansion of N. C. Memorial Hospital.

UNC Business Manager James A. Branch said recently no Victory Village apartments of the 50 scheduled to be demolished later this year would be moved to other areas on the University property.

A request for 300 additional married housing units will go before the General Assembly in 1967, but according to University officials, several more temporary units may fall by then.

Mormon Culture Talk

Red Denied Again

Church Officials Say No To Aptheker Talk

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

Speaking privileges have been denied Communist Herbert Aptheker in an off campus location — the Presbyterian Church on East Franklin Street.

The request, made by Student Body President Paul Dickson last Thursday to Rev. Vance Barron, was turned down by the Church Session in a majority vote after more than two hours' debate.

Aptheker would have spoken on 'The War in Viet Nam," had his speech been permitted.

The denial by the church came even before the Aptheker case has been considerd by Acting Chancllor J. Carlyle Sitterson. Aptheker is scheduled to speak here next Wednesday but no requests have been made to reserve a hall on campus.

The Session, during a regular meeting, was informed of the request only 30 minutes before it met. Rev. Barron issued a statement to The Daily Tar Heel yesterday commending the members of the Session for the seriousness with which they sought to consider the issues involved in this difficult decision.

"I believe the relevant issues were identified and expressed in the discussion," he said.

Rev. Barron said that the vote "was very close." About half the members present at the Session are members of the University.

Dickson was not available for comment yesterday.

A resolution was passed by the Session following discussion about Aptheker's appearance. The resolution stated, in part:

That this Session go on record as being in favor of inviting speakers representing opposing philosophies, provided that the format be that of a panel presentation which shall include a speaker representing the Christian point of view."

Rev. Barron stressed that his personal feelings to not occur with the vote of the Session.

It is my personal conviction that, by granting this request, we would have expressed our confidence in the power of truth to prevail in any open encounter," he said.

There were members of the Session who share these same concerns who do not think that our granting this request would further these concerns.

The Session has final jurisdiction in the use of the properties of the church," he said.

Aptheker will speak at Duke University Tuesday, one day before he is to speak here. Duke President Douglas McKnight granted permission to Aptheker to use speaking facilities at Duke.

No Pickets Show; CFI Plans Falter

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

There was no picketing around South Building yesterday although the Committee for Free Inquiry voted Thursday to picket from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily until Communist Herbert Aptheker's scheduled appearance Wednesday.

The picketing was to be held in protest of Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson's decision last week denying HUAC Abolishment chairman Frank Wilkinson and student body president Paul Dickson speaking privileges in Carroll Hall last Wednesday night.

Gary Waller, the only CFI steering committee member The Daily Tar Heel was able to contact, said picketing would be discussed again Sunday night at 7:30 p.m. at a Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) meeting.

Waller did not know why the picketing had stopped. Asked why picketing lasted only from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Friday, Waller replied," I think most of them were graduate students who had afternoon classes."

Thursday's CFI decision to picket was held in the absence of student body president Paul Dickson who was in Greensboro conferring with lawyers about a prospective court case.

Richard French, who chaired the CFI meetings until Thursday's picketing decision said he thought the picketing fell flat on its face.

I think it was a stupid idea to begin with," French added.

Bob Keiser took over CFI chairmanship Thursday after French, who had acted as a moderating influence on the CFI, stepped down.

The picketing decision was reached under Keiser's chairmanship.

Fauntleroy Is A Cheater

THAT RENOWNED prognosticator, FAUNTLEROY, has been charged with conspiracy to cheat.

Saturday night when Faunts heard that South Carolina was leading North Carolina State in the second half he became a bit worried.

Faunts had picked State to easily beat the Gamecocks. But when USC captured a six point lead with less that 15 minutes to go in the game the great one went back to change his story that appeared in yesterday's DTH. But State finally pulled it out, so Faunts didn't have to actually pull the switch.

Faunts' trial before the Honor Council will be coming up soon and the DTH will cover it in full.

Dogs Don't Even Fade Away

THEY CAN take away our rights of free speech, they can tear down our buildings, — they can do a lot of things.

But there is one thing "they" will never do. Chapel Hill dogs, like the two below, are here to stay.

Dogs, of any sort, are not the best things about the University. They aren't the worst either.

Who's In Charge Here?

The steering committee was informed that the last meeting was being called by an unknown party.

Yesterday Richard French, who chaired that meeting said he wasn't even a member of CFI.

French said he felt the committee had fallen flat on it's face. Those beards would make good brooms.

Chicken Dinner Planned

The dinner will be served 5:15 to 7:45 in the Tin Can. Tables and chairs will be set up for those who would like to eat in the Tin Can before attending Johnny Mathis.

Tickets are on sale at Y-Court at $1.25 per person.

WRC Calls Meeting

The Women's Residence Council has scheduled a series of meetings in the women's residence halls for the purpose of explaining rules changes and the WRC in the coming elections.

Attendance will not be compulsory. Meetings will be held in the date parlors on the following nights:

Monday—9 p.m., Cobb; 10 p.m., Winston.

Wednesday—9 p.m. Nurses' Dorm; 10 p.m., Whitehead.

Monday, March 14—9 p.m., McIver; 10 p.m., Alderman.

Wednesday, March 16; 9 p.m., Smith; 10 p.m., Spencer.

Pageant Interviews

Representatives from seven leading outdoor historical drama companies will audition actors, dancers and singers for summer employment March 18 through 20 in the Forest Theatre.

Performers over 18 years of age, who are available for the run of the season, are eligible to audition.

Sanders To Speak

UNC Institute of Government Director John Sanders was one of five experts in government invited as an advisor for a one-day seminar on in-service training of local government officials this week in New York City.

New York state does not have a university-based organization such as the UNC Institute of Government nor an overall plan for conducting such training.

Piano Recital Tonight

Robinson, a student of Dr. William S. Newman, was most recently heard in a performance of the last movement of Rachmaninoff's Second Piano Concerto with the University Symphony Orchestra in December.

AED And Nurses Collect $400 For NC Heart Fund

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

Over $400 has been collected by two campus organizations outside the Varsity Theatre as contributions to the N. C. Heart Fund.

Alpha Epsilon Delta, the international pre - medical and pre - dental honor society and the Student Nurses Association combined efforts during the past month to station several members outside the theatre every night to collect contributions.

Dwight Wait, president of AED, and Pat Dodson and Judy Bartlett of the Nurses Association were in charge of the "Ticker Flick" contribution campaign. Over 100 students from the two organizations took part in the drive.

The money will be presented to state officials of the N. C. Heart Fund within the next couple of weeks.

Wait said, "We want to thank the students at UNC and the citizens of Chapel Hill for their patience, understanding, and generosity.

The "Ticker Flick" program has been such a success in Chapel Hill that the N. C. Heart Fund plans to use this collection method all over the state next year.

Wait said that the contributions will go to help those with heart disease now and for future heart research.

The collectors told the people attending the movies that the money they give now could help to save their lives in the coming years.

A left - ventricular heart pump made of plastic has just been developed after three years of research at a cost of over $2 million, but the number of lives it will save is difficult to speculate.

The "Ticker Flicks" program is the last project to be completed this year by UNC students for the aid of the N. C. Heart Fund.

Last month Maverick House conducted the Hinton James Hike for Hearts to remind everyone that February is Heart Fund Month.

The residents of Cobb Dormitory presented the workers of the Heart Fund with a giant heart - shaped cake on Valentine's Day.

Davie Hall Will Employ 'Hollow Square Scheme'

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Editor

If you imagine the addition to Davie Hall resembles the State House in Raleigh, you're right. Because it was designed by the same firm, Holloway-Reeves Inc.

Davie Hall's new face will employ about the same basic design of the State House, called a "hollow square scheme" in architect lingo.

"The reason for this," Tuttle says, "is that offices need sunlight." Most psychologists like to be able to control as many conditions as possible in the lab, so the loss of direct sunlight to the center of the building is actually an advantage.

The David Hall addition will be attached to the "new" wing (circa 1925) of the present building.

The new building will form a "T" with the back of the present David Hall. Tuttle said the stone wall, now blocking passage across Cameron Avenue outside David Hall and New East, will be altered so people can cross the street outside the new entrance.

The modern appearance of the Davie Hall addition met with surprisingly little opposition, according to Tuttle.

"The design of surrounding buildings has been taken into account," he says. "Howell Hall, New East, and Carr Residence Hall all have deep, distinctive and repetitive door and window designs."

The addition will have white brick facing, offset by brown tinted vertical concrete slabs, but will be of a sharper, more contemporary style.

This will make it possible to "sweep out" any walls between rooms if needed. Citing psychology as a young science often advancing much faster than available facilities, Tuttle says new research projects and the discontinuation of old ones might make such internal changes necessary.

"If they want to build a special lab in any part of the central section there need be no worry about knocking out a 'supporting wall'," he said.

Davie will be finished two years from the beginning of construction. Complete occupany is expected about five years after that. Contractors will be T. A. Loving Co. of Goldsboro.

ARTIST SKETCH — The architect's drawing of the Davie Hall renovation project adds a touch of the modern to the center of the campus. The renovation project, which will cost $1.5 million, is expected to be finished in about 18 months. Spectators are urged to stay a safe distance from the construction project. Davie Hall will house the UNC Psychology Department.

The Weekend Rush

The student infirmary has a problem.

Dr. Ed Hedgepeth, director of the informary, told the DTH too many students are coming on weekends for treatment of "non-major illnesses."

And this creates a problem because there are no doctors on duty on Saturday and Sunday.

"I think it's a thing students have just slipped into as a matter of convenience," Hedgepeth said. "They might, for example, have a cold for several days, but they wait to come to the infirmary on weekends when they don't have anything else to do."

On a recent Sunday a student asked to be admitted to the infirmary — because the heat was off in his apartment.

The infirmary is open 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 2 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Hedgepeth and his staff of six physicians treat 275 to 300 students daily during these hours.

But after these hours, and on weekends, service "must be limited to emergencies and acute injuries," Hedgepeth said.

"But we just can't maintain a full staff to handle routine calls on weekends," Hedgepeth said.

If the demand is great enough, shouldn't doctors for students be available on weekends — even for non-emergency treatment?

"We might have to do that," Hedgepeth said. "But right now we can't operate seven days a week."

If you have one of those ailments "that can wait" for treatment, don't drag your body to the infirmary on Saturday or Sunday until further arrangements for service can be made.

DTH Awards Of The Week

Athletes of the Week: Motorcycle-owning University of Mississippi students who have been racing on campus intramural fields and golf greens.

The head of the Ole Miss physical education department called the bike riders "unthinking, stupid or malicious."

"The areas have been badly damaged and represent a physical hazard as well as a deterrent to good performance. A few people are ruining the pleasure of many students by their selfish use of these areas for their own momentary pleasure," he said.

* * *

Loser of the Week: Dr. David T. McCann of Chicago. The 32-year-old physician, father of seven, reported to Ft. Rucker, Ala., last Monday.

He got drafted.

* * *

The Week's Most Unpleasant Combination of Numbers: 21-20.

* * *

Bargain of the Week: The $7,200 Lincoln Continental limousine leased for Mrs. Dan K. Moore's "personal errands and speaking engagements" for $750 a month.

It will replace the late model Buick Electra which has been the First Family's second car.

* * *

Extremist Award : To Terry Meyer, 15-year-old Vista, Calif., high school student. He was suspended from school last week because his hair was too long.

He was suspended again this week because his hair was too short.

He had shaved his head.

* * *

Sermon of the Week: Tom White, Lenoir County state senator and UNC trustee; at Monday's trustee meeting in Raleigh: "If we try to wash our hands of this responsibility (for regulating speakers on the UNC campuses) it will be just the same as Pontius Pilate trying to wash his hands of the blood of Jesus Christ."

Buck Passed To Chancellor

Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson may be the victim of "pass the buck" tactics that began with Gov. Moore's refusal to take an immediate stand on the speaker ban.

Sitterson, now in the politically sensitive position of being a candidate for the permanent chancellorship, may have decided to ban Frank Wilkinson from the campus because of harsh pressure from the trustees.

Afraid of alienating friends in the state legislature — including I. Beverly Lake allies — Moore passed to the Britt Commission the nasty chore of coming up with speaker ban recommendations after learning that the law threatened the University's accreditation.

The Britt Commission recommended a set of ban changes that let the trustees decide who could speak on campus.

What a gift! The legislature then gave the trustees the "privilege" of catching hell from either the University or the American Legion (granted, though, that the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools had somewhat forced them to "pass the buck" in this case).

The executive committee of the board of trustees should have helped settle the speaker ban question in February by supporting Aptheker and Wilkinson's right to speak. But wait! The executive committee felt the entire board should make that decision.

And the executive committee, in effect, passed the mess to Sitterson, who must have the trustees' support to drop the "Acting" from his title.

So in the end, Sitterson became the one to receive the wrath of the faculty and students of this University.

Perhaps he went against his convictions of three weeks ago, but there was little he could do under these circumstances.

He was trapped — and he knew it.

He indulged in the understatement of the century when he declared: "Even though I have the power to do so, I will not override the executive committee of the board of trustees."

Call his actins inconsistent if you wish, but who would have acted differently?

By claiming that the decision to bar Wilkinson is his own, Sitterson, furthermore, is adversely affecting his campus popularity. True — he has a better chance of becoming chancellor now, but he has angered many of his friends. Thus, it would be unfair to say that Sitterson, whose desire to become chancellor is perfectly natural for a man of his high academic standing, took an easy path.

Suppose the trustees had not given Sitterson the agonizing "right" to let Wilkinson speak. Then, he would not have been faced with the decision he made Wednesday. Then, he would almost certainly be able to do what most of Chapel Hill thinks is desirable: oppose limitations on campus speakers.

But all this doesn't matter.

The decision has already been made. Whether he will reaffirm his ban on Communist Herbert Aptheker (now scheduled to come here) remains to be seen, but even if he doesn't, students and faculty should understand the immense pressure he has borne.

Dr. Sitterson, whether you're right or wrong; whether you genuinely felt Wilkinson should speak or whether you didn't; whether the trustees let you act independently or not, I'm with you!

Barry Jacobs

Don't Distort The First

In the furor over Chancellor Sitterson's refusal to allow Frank Wilkinson to speak on campus, little attention has been paid to what Wilkinson actually said when he did address a gathering at Hillel House Wednesday night.

Wilkinson is director of the National Committee to Abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee. Judging by what he said, though, his goal is really much broader. He attacked state committees patterned after HUAC and also singled out Mississippi Senator James O. Eastland, who obviously has no connection with any House committee, for criticism.

What Wilkinson and his friends really seem to be after is the end of so - called "witch-hunts," which usually are designed to ferret out Communists, but, as Wilkinson pointed out, can also be aimed at the Ku Klux Klan. Wilkinson claims that the civil liberties of these people are being violated by the investigations.

What protection do people called to testify by Congressional committees have? They can take the Fifth Amendment. That is, they can refuse to answer questions on the grounds that their answers might tend to incriminate them. This protection of course, is personal. One person cannot refuse to answer questions because they might incriminate someone else.

The Supreme Court has also held that a guarantee of absolute immunity removes the validity of taking the Fifth Amendment. That is, if a person is immune from prosecution, then his answers cannot possibly incriminate him; and he cannot refuse to answer.

Wilkinson would like to have the First Amendment recognized as grounds for refusal to answer questions. He went to jail for refusing to answer on those grounds.

If Wilkinson's plea were allowed, though, it would mean that anyone could refuse to answer questions in a legislative hearing — and presumably in a court — simply because he didn't want to.

To say that one can refuse to say something because of the First Amendment is to distrort the meaning and intent of that amendment. What the writers of the Bill of Rights were trying to do was protect the people from being muzzled by the government. They wanted Americans to be able to say and pring something critical of public officials without being thrown in jail

Wilkinson would like to interpret the freedom TO speak as including the freedom FROM speaking. This interpretation would twist the First Amendment into something it is not. Protection from saying anything self-incriminatory is granted by the Fifth Amendment. Physical coercion to force a man to speak is forbidden.

What is not covered is the case in which a person doesn't want to answer questions in a court of hearing, but cannot or will not take the Fifth Amendment. But to allow someone to refuse to answer simply because he doesn't feel like it could lead to a complete breakdown in the functioning of Congressional investigations and even in the judicial system. Society should have a right to protect itself by requiring its members to provide vital information, if that information is not self-incriminatory

To return to Wilkinson's announced goal, it is doubtful if the abolition of HUAC would really solve anything. There may indeed be too much Congressional witch-hunting going on, but the most notorious example, the McCarthy investigatins, had nothing to do with the House of Representatives

The real problem is Congressional investigations in general. They must not be allowed to become mere inquisitions. They must serve the purposes of legislation. Properly used, they can be invaluable to Congress and the country.

LETTERS

The Daily Tar Heel welcomes letters to the editor on any subject, particularly on matters of local or University interest. Letters must be typed, double-spaced and must include the name and address of the author or authors. Names will not be omitted in publication. Letters should be limited to about 250-300 words. The DTH reserves the right to edit for length or libel. Longer letters will be considered for "The Student Speaks" if they are of sufficient interest. However, the DTH reserves the right to use contributed materials as it sees fit.

Letters To The Editor

Support For Sitterson

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

I would like to preface this letter with the assertion that I, as much as any individual, believe completely in the absolute necessity for free speech and free inquiry on this campus. No university can maintain its proper role in the struggle toward the intellectual and moral enlightenment of its students without these freedoms.

Here on the campus in Chapel Hill all of us, students and faculty alike, have been plagued for many months by a disease which, if not properly treated, could prove fatal . By the action of the Governor's Study Commission (a long and difficult and agonizing process) and by the recent action of the full board of trustees, we have finally been removed, at least temporarily, from the critical list and given reasonable hope of an eventual and full recovery.

For one accustomed over the years to vigorous good health, any illness is difficult, and the caution and restraint which must be exercised during the period of convalescence often seems impossibly frustrating. Yet anyone with common sense knows that it is both foolish and irresponsible for a man, still in the period of convalescence following a serious illness, to insist upon charging out and undertaking the most strenuous sort of activities. I fear that this is precisely what is and has been taking place with regard to the Wilkinson-Aptheker controversy.

It was unwise, in the first place, to force this matter before the date set for the full meeeting of the board of trustees. There was every reason to believe that the trustees would render a proper and acceptable policy relating to the speaker problem, and indeed they did by placing the responsibility with the Chancellors of the various branches of the University. Before this could be done, however, an unfortunate decision (and a rather predictable one) had been made by the executive committee of the board of trustees under the inexcusable prodding of Governor Moore.

Now we come to the most unfortunate action in this sorry saga. With Chancellor Sitterson having been granted the authority to rule in such matters, he was instantly presented with the very same speakers who, only a few days earlier, had been turned down by the executive committee.

The fact is, of course, that Chancellor Sitterson had no real choice. There was only one decision he could render, and he had the courage to make that decision, despite the painful knowledge that by so doing he would be taking a stand which was at odds with his own well documented and demonstrated convictions. By any kind of measure, this was a grossly unfair decision to force upon im.

Chancellor Sitterson is a man well suited by experience and temperament to serve long and well in his office, should his present temporary status be given permanency. Both his words and his actions in the past bespeak a dedication to this University and to all the principles of freedom which are so vital to the University. Patience is not an easy virtue, especially for the young, but patience, coupled with wisdom, is urgently needed in this time of convalescence. I would urge, with all the strength I have, that the students and faculty of this University join ranks behind Chancellor Sitterson and match him in both patience and wisdom to the end that we do not lose what will be a long war for the sake of a quick and flamboyant victory.

Yours very truly,
William M. Hardy

Against The Pickets

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

As participants in the CFI, we would like to exercise our right of expression and go on record as being opposed to the present form of protest being used; namely, a picket line at South Building.

For the past three years this campus has maintained its usual apathy toward the speaker ban imposed on us. We realize that this has been, for the most part, due to the misplaced trust we put in our political leaders to relieve us of this imposition.

At last we have finally gotten together and, as a unit, we have stood up and made our feelings and intentions known. In short, we have taken action through the only channel open to us, the courts.

Since the beginning of CFI, there have been constant pressures from various elements to "demonstrate." However, due to the efforts of Paul Dickson, Richard French, and others, this has been kept under control, i.e., we have demonstrated our position by the forming of CFI and turning out in force to speak as a body, as a unified group standing together for what we believe.

It seems to us that we have certainly clearly demonstrated to all concerned just where we stand. We are angry! We are indignant! We do refuse to have our rights infringed upon! We have made this clear, and, we hope, we will continue to do so.

The question is how do we continue? Do we relax now that we are finally moving? No! We stay as a unit. We attend the CFI meetings. We turn out in force Wednesday for Mr. Aptheker's appearance. In this way, and this way alone, do we demonstrate how we feel at this time.

Are we "against" Chancellor Sitterson, Governor Moore, the board of trustees, and the legislature; or are we "for" our constitutional rights? These two things, despite the attitude of a few, are not concurrent.

Last week we were united under CFI. This week we are divided because of the type of action presently being taken. Let us reunite and follow the course we were originally on. Let us abandon this tired form of protest and demonstration, the picket line. Now of all times we need to stand together, to speak as one. Listen to our elected leaders who plead that we not picket. After all they were chosen to lead us we must then choose to follow them.

Beware The DTH

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Kindly allow me, sir, to warn the students of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill that they must take with a very large grain of salty suspicion anything that is printed in The Daily Tar Heel. It is essential that the Tar Heel cease its distortion of the facts surrounding C.F.I and that the students be allowed to judge clearly and objectively. In reference to Ed Freakley's article on Friday, March 4, please permit me to make the following clarifications:

1. Frank Wilkinson, whose only crime is that he exercised his constitutional rights once upon a time, and Paul Dickson, who just like you and me and the readers of The Daily Tar Heel is quite simply a student and an American citizen were BOTH — not just Wilkinson but Dickson too — forbidden from speaking at Carroll Hall Wednesday night. This order, as I understand it, was handed down by the Chancellor.

2. A sit-in (Ed Freakley's word, not C.F.I.'s) is when you sit down someplace and refuse to leave. C.F.I in their Thursday night meeting did NOT—DID NOT — vote to have a sit in. They voted to occupy the hall where Aptheker might speak, stay until asked to leave, and then leave. This is not a sit-in. Your SIT-INS THREATENED headline is a lie.

3. Bob Keiser was Chairman pro-tem of CFI. Thursday night. He did not pull some sort of coup d'etat when he assumed the chairmanship of the meeting. He simply did what he had been given the right to do

4. The "left wing"? My God, Freakley, if people who gather to plan protests against blatant violations of a student's constitutional right to hear and to speak are leftists, then sure, the C.F.I. is a bunch of leftists.

I assure you that C.F.I. is as sick and tired of the Speaker Ban controversy as everybody else is. But what we refuse to do is to quit making a fuss until free speech is restored to Chapel Hill. We'd love to get this thing over with and return to private pursuits. The Controversy this week has been brought about not by us, but by the Chancellor. Picketting may be rubbing salt in the wounds; but who wields the dagger?

Thank you,
David G. Gullette

I. Q. Not Everything

Colleges Reject Talent

Is it true that our colleges and universities are turning away our country's top talent?

"Yes," said the retiring admissions director of one of the top universities.

He pointed out that the United States presidents who were graduated from his university wouldn't be admitted again if that university were to use its present screening standards.

He wanted to spotlight the fact that some of the most creative and potentially successful young people are being denied a college education.

But how do you tell who is going to be a success when you're looking at him 10 or 15 years before he'll have a chance to be?

Dr. Welsh for several years has been studying what makes a person a success, and how you find out if someone "has it." His particular emphasis is on creativity, and he is working in cooperation with the Governor's School in Winston-Salem under a grant from the Creativity Research Institute of the Richardson Foundation in Greensboro.

"Most traditional selectivity is based on intelligence," he said. "People admit that creativity is important, but rarely use it as a criterion for screening personnel for either universities or industry.

"But above a college level I.Q. (about 110), anything can happen, and intelligence does not really have much to do with success."

Determining whether a person has creativity isn't the final answer to screening personnel either, says Dr. Welsh. But it's a start in a constructive, and greatly improved, direction.

Success will come from a combination of many things, including intelligence, creativity, motivation and perhaps other things. And the more of these we can determine, and use, the better our screening process will be.

Since there are tests to determine creativity, Dr. Welsh believes we should start using them as criteria, for example, in screening high school students for college.

Dr. Welsh proposes an addition to the admissions program, which he feels might work. "Of the students it lets in, perhaps a university could arrange a pool of about 10 per cent who are creative, interesting and not acceptable by normal standards — just try them out and see the results."

At the University at Chapel Hill there is a little hesitation is using creativity as a criterion.

Charles Bernard, director of undergraduate admissions at UNC, said this of creativity: "It has always been my concern that so many high school students with average grades do well here. For these students, who are usually marginal academically, there should be some attention paid to creativity, but not in the case of every individual.

"We're looking to find means to accurately locate creativity, but academic criteria can't be ignored."

Dr. C. Hugh Holman, former dean of the UNC Graduate School, doesn't do the screening of graduate students himself—that is left up to the individual departments — but he said, 'In our screening process, there is mounting interest in creativity, especially when it is certified in the letters of recommendation that we require by someone we respect."

Ten years ago we wouldn't have had this interest, he said.

In a paper Dr. Welsh recently presented to the National Council of the Arts in Education, he tried to pinpoint some of the characteristics of the creative person.

Intuition is also a characteristic of the creative person—he is liable to have a "feeling" for what he should find, to "know" what the findings should be before he finds them.

Aesthetic motivation is another — this is as hard to describe as intuition, but is evidenced by the person's "concern for form and elegance which goes beyond correctness and accuracy and has to do with the aesthetic appeal of the act of thinking."

Other traits of the creative person are: he prefers individual rather than group efforts; he is self-motivated and has a high ambition that leads to productivity even at the expense of personal comfort.

He has a wide range of interests; but he still has specialized skills.

Some would call him conceited, but he just recognizes his own ability.

GM Presents Li'l Abner

Graham Memorial Student Union will present the European Tour Company of the UNC-G Theatre in their production of Li'l Abner tonight at 8 in Memorial Hall. The program is free to students and the general public.

This is the group which will make a seven weeks tour of this country's European Command beginning March 15. The American Educational Theatre Association's Overseas Tour Selections committee tapped the Greensboro group as one of eleven in the nation to participate in this unique program operated jointly by AETA, the Department of Defense, and United Service Organizations, Inc.

The tuneful hit based on Al Capp's famous cartoon characters, which ran for 693 performances on Broadway, recounts the adventures of the citizens of Dogpatch when the word is sent down from Washington that they must all evacuate their mountain homes.

It seems that the gambling enterprises in Las Vegas have been disturbed by the atom bomb testings in Nevada, and so, to preserve that sacred pasttime, the powers-that-be have decided to move their nuclear tests elsewhere. Dogpatch has been selected as the most unnecessary town in the country, and therefore the perfect site for destruction.

Unless the Yokums, the Scraggs, Marryin' Sam and the other citizens can prove that they produce something really useful, Dogpatch is doomed.

When Mammy produces her secret formula of Yokumberry Tonic, which makes handsome people out of weaklings instantaneously, it appears the situation is saved. But General Bullmoose, a sly and conniving politician, eager to enhance his already sizable fortune at Dogpatch's expense, sets the sultry siren, Apassionate Von Climax, and the man with the double whammy, Evil Eye Fleagle, to work on Li'l Abner, hoping to wheedle Mammy's secret formula from him.

The citizens of Dogpatch, however, foil his plan, and everybody settles down for a peaceful life of rustic simplicity back in Dogpatch, U.S.A.

The European Tour Company is composed of 17 actors and the director. The University supplies the production, especially designed for rapid performances while touring. Since USO makes every effort to book as many performances as possible in as many different locations as possible, the "Li'l Abner" company will fly with its personal baggage in a single plane.

Because of weight problems, this necessitates a production designed to fold up into standard sized foot lockers. On past tours the Theatre of UNC-G has used scenery and properties which have been especially designed and built by the students involved in the tour to meet the stringent requirements.

A special lighting control system with special lightweight spotlights has also been designed. The control system fits into one 12 by 15 by 32 inch footlocker, and the spotlights and service cable into three others.

Quotes from Former Students

IN DURHAM . . .

A reading speed of over 2,000 words per minute is enabling me finally to read the vast quantity of material I feel I should read. I am going to try these techniques on cases in Law School, and of course in all my other reading.
Alan W. Eckert.

Since I am studying to be a teacher my increased speed is not only a blessing, but a joy. I am grateful that I took the course.
Janice Smith.

Reading Dynamics has enabled me to read greater than 2,000 words per minute with better comprehension than before. This is particularly of importance to me because of the precious little spare time I have to read.
Jordan Gutterman, M.D.

IN RALEIGH . . .

Part of A Letter Home

"Everything is going just fine here. My courses are all pretty tough but all very interesting. I'm really going to enjoy this semester. You'll be glad to know that my reading has helped me tremendously! It really is a time saver. I've been getting to bed around 11:00 to 11:30 . . . and it certainly is not because I don't have any homework because I always have plenty of it. That reading, though, has just cut my study time. It really is great! That's one of the most useful presents I have ever received. Thanks a million for it! Lots of love to you all,
from a student at State.

I never really learned how to study in school; this course has given me more insight into the "art" of study than the 14 years of schooling I have taken. The guides to organizing your study are of value to all students. The development of Gist Sheets should be taught in all high schools.
Peter Savage

I now understand how to read, how to evaluate a book, what to look for and how to find what I want to in books. I had not learned any of this even after going through college. I can now preview a book for its importance or skim material for beneficial facts. I now appreciate books and the ability to read them.
Thomas Youngblood

IN CHAPEL HILL . .

● "The course has been extremely useful to me. I wish all of our graduate students could take the course." DR. DAN PRICE, Director, Institute for Research in Social Science, U.N.C.

Again I want to wholeheartedly endorse your course and method. I began at 400 wpm and finished — reading dynamically — at speeds as high as 3,000 wpm with no loss of comprehension.—Dick League, Law School, U.N.C.

As an acting intern on pediatrics, I had gained tremendous experience but had done practically none of the general reading required for orals. The night before the examination, I was on duty and essentially, the extent of my reading was from one to three and from five to seven in the morning. In that period of time I was able to read about five hundred pages with satisfactory comprehension. I did not panic or get overly anxious. I had the feeling of a worthwhile job done satisfactorily. Since I last saw you, I have taken my National Board Examinations in all the clinical fields of medicine.
Jerry Elier, Med. Student

READING DYNAMICS CLASSES BEGIN

at 7 P.M.	Tuesday, March 8 at 7 P.M.	Thursday, March 17 at 7 P.M.

— REGISTRATION BEGINS 30 MINUTES EARLIER —

At the Demonstration

- You will see a Reading Dynamics graduate read at amazing speeds from a book he has never seen before and then tell in detail what he has read.
- You will see a documented film that includes actual interviews with Washington Congressmen who have taken the course.
- You will learn how we can help you to faster reading, improved comprehension, greater recall.

HOW IS THIS POSSIBLE?

Eighteen years ago Evelyn Wood, a Utah schoolteacher, made a startling discovery that led to the founding of Reading Dynamics. While working toward a master's degree, she handed a term paper to a professor and watched him read the 89 pages at 6,000 words per minute—with outstanding recall and comprehension. Determined to find the secret behind such rapid reading, she spent the next two years tracking down 50 people who could read faster than 1,500 words per minute. She studied their techniques, taught herself to read at these faster rates. Now, after years of experience in public schools and universities, she has made it possible for you to benefit from this great discovery.

IS IT SIMPLY A PROMOTION STUNT?

Over the past eleven years more than 160,000 graduates have been convinced that Reading Dynamics is a proven method. About Reading Dynamics' impact on our nation's legislators, Time Magazine said "Washington has seen nothing like it since the days when Teddy Roosevelt read three books a day and ran the country at the same time."

SENATOR PROXMIRE, Wisconsin: "I must say that this is one of the most useful education experiences I have ever had. It certainly compares favorably with the experience I've had at Yale and Harvard."

SENATOR TALMADGE, Georgia: "It is my opinion that if these techniques were instituted in the public and private schools of our country, it would be the greatest single step which we could take in educational progress."

MICHAEL LEVY, Pres. Standard Security Life: "My normal relaxed reading is now at a rate approximately 4,000 words per minute. Even with the most difficult and technical reading material, I find that my speed exceeds 2,500 words per minute."

SENATOR STUART SYMINGTON, MISSOURI—"I can now read materials at speeds above 2,000 words per minute and technical material in the 2,000 word per minute range."

Conventional rapid reading courses aspire to 450-600 words per minute. Most Reading Dynamics graduates can read between 1,000 and 3,000 words per minute, and many go even higher.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

We guarantee to increase the reading efficiency of each student AT LEAST 3 times with good comprehension. We will refund the entire tuition to any student who, after completing minimum class and study requirements, does not at least triple his reading efficiency as measured by our beginning and ending tests.

Police Procedures Code Is Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's judges and lawyers were asked yesterday to support a code of police procedures that would require warning an arrested person he may remain silent and may consult a lawyer, family or friends.

Prepared for the American Law Institute under a grant from the Ford Foundation, the proposed prearraignment code would, among other things:

—Require police to tape record "any questioning involving more than a few brief questions" and make the recording available to defense counsel in any legal proceeding.

— Bar the use of lie-detector tests or similar devices in questioning an arrested person unless he has consented in writing.

— Permit police to make arrests only where "the constitutionally required standard of reasonable cause was met."

Require that an arrested person be taken before a judge or magistrate as soon as possible.

At the same time, it would permit police to question persons whether or not a lawyer was present and the requirement of "reasonable cause" to make an arrest could be disregarded in certain circumstances. In some cases police interrogation in the absence of a lawyer would be limited to four hours in less serious crimes and to 22 hours in heinous offenses.

"Some flexibility must be provided for cases where extraordinary action is necessary to save life or to protect some other urgent interest," the tentative draft of the code says.

The proposals are largely the work of James Vorenberg, executive director of President Johnson's National Crime Commission, and Paul M. Bator, like Vorenberg a Harvard law professor, who worked with a committee of judges, lawyers and police officials. The code has been approved in principle by the Law Institute's governing council.

It will be submitted at the Law Institute's annual meeting in May and has been distributed to members of the American Bar Association for consideration at the Association's annual meeting in August.

The proposals come amid a national debate on police practices and are likely to spark further controversy. While they would restrict some common police practices they are likely to be received in some judicial circles as not going far enough to protect the rights of police suspects. It is understood the proposals generated considerable controversy within the ranks of the Institute itself.

At the moment, the Supreme Court is wrestling with constitutional problems posed by police practices, particularly suspects' access to lawyers and the use of confessions in criminal prosecutions.

The proposed code holds that "at no time may an arrested person be held incommunicado in order to facilitate the investigation."

However, it also holds that a law enforcement officer may arrest a person without a warrant if the office has reasonable cause to believe the person committed a felony.

Senator Morse Will Speak

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Sen. Wayne L. Morse of Oregon, a sharp critic of the administration's Viet Nam policy, will speak Tuesday night in Wait Chapel at Wake Forest College.

The senator's lecture is sponsored by the College Union.

During the recent Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings on Viet Nam, Morse was one of the strongest opponents of President Johnson's startegy. He later took issue with Secretary of State Dean Rusk's contention the U. S. "commitment" to South Viet Nam was based on the treaty of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

Rain Causes Floods

By The Associated Press

Muddy, swirling flood waters of eastern North Carolina rivers and streams were pushed higher yesterday by recent rains which drenched the region.

The U. S. Weather Bureau said Friday's rain would prolong the flooding and delay river crests in some areas until mid-week.

The Cape Fear, Neuse and Tar Rivers were still rising above their banks yesterday, picking up mud, sticks and debris as they raced to the sea. Little property damage was reported so far.

Charlotte Couple On Plane

They were Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Varner. He was president of Universal Transportation Service which distributes Thermo-King refrigeration equipment for trucks. The Varners were on a tour sponsored by Thermo-King.

Their survivors include a married son, Larry N. Varner of High Point, where the Varners formerly lived, and a younger son, Christopher Lee Varner of Charlotte. Varner's mother, Mrs. C. A. Varner Sr. of High Point, was staying in Charlotte with the younger son.

Other survivors of Varner include two brothers, James K. Varner of High Point, and Robert L. Varner of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Con Men Sell Money

GOLDSBORO (AP) — Two young men with sideburns and a slick story reportedly have been palming off novelty copies of old money as antique bills for more than three months in eastern North Carolina.

The Goldsboro News-Argus said in a story written for its Sunday edition the bills have been sold to unsuspecting citizens in Goldsboro, Kinston, Greenville, Rocky Mount, Tarboro, Farmville and possibly elsewhere.

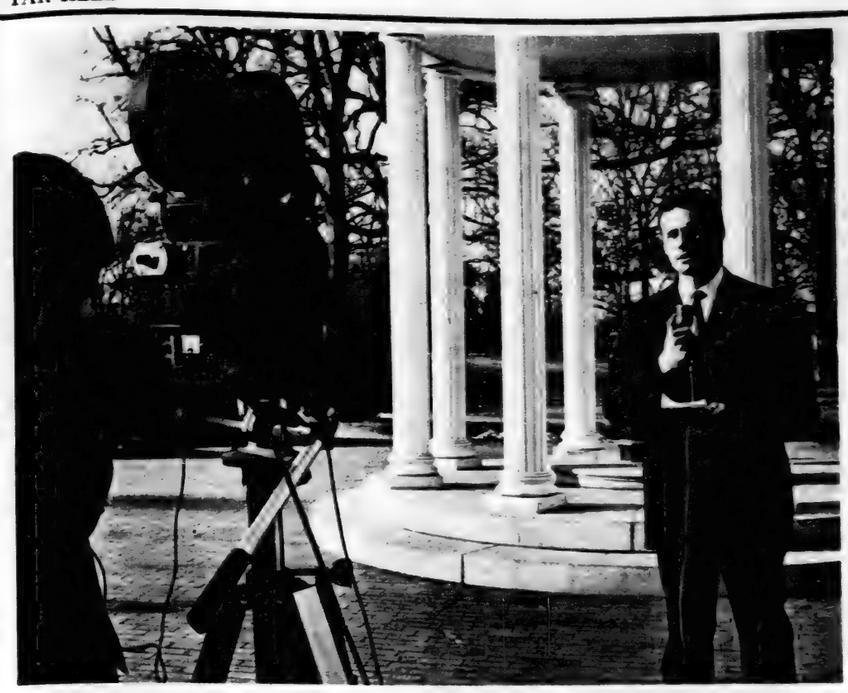
Profits ranged from 1,000 to 5,000 per cent the story said.

It said the Kinston Detective Bureau is investigating reports of transactions. But it quoted spokesmen for other law enforcement agencies as saying some victims have been hesitant to report they fell for the deal.

Most of the victims, the story said, were contacted in rural stores, service stations and in downtown business firms.

The bills can be purchased in packets of five and ten for 25 cents and 50 cents at such places as Williamsburg, Va., the North Carolina Museum and at novelty shops at historic sites.

They are souvenir replicas of Confederate money and bills dating back to the Colonial period. They are yellowed scientifically to appear old and singed around the edges.



Scenes like this have become rather common in Chapel Hill during these days of the speaker controversy. Newsmen from all over the state have come to find out all about the furor. The University has received quite a bit of publicity. There's promise of more to come.

Americans In Viet Nam Get The Word: 'WIN'

Editor's note — Malcolm Browne knows Viet Nam from border to border. He has been there since 1961, longer than any other American reporter. He won a Pulitzer Prize as an AP reporter on the war fronts. Now he is a free-lance writer who maintains close contacts with the men who map strategy and the men who do the fighting. He wrote this analysis for the Associated Press.

SAIGON (AP) — Americans in and out of uniform here have received the word: win the war in Viet Nam by 1967, or else.

The word, of course, has come from Washington, where casualties of 100 Americans killed each week are becoming increasingly unacceptable. Bringing the war to the point at which these heavy casualties stop is now the prime (although unspoken) objective here.

No official in Viet Nam would ever publicly admit the existence of a timetable of victory. Too many officials in the past have had their fingers burned by making over-optimistic predictions about the collapse of the Viet Cong.

All the same, a timetable exists.

The big hope is that within one year that Viet Cong will no longer be able to deploy large units and therefore will lack the ability to inflict heavy American casualties.

That is phase one.

Phase two involves bringing the land under government control to the extent that free general elections can be held without fear of a Communist victory. Saigon's leaders have exacted a promise from lower officials that at least 76 per cent of the nation's population will be under government control by then. Currently, Saigon claims control of only 50 per cent.

From that time on, American troops supposedly will be able to phase slowly out of Viet Nam, and five years or so of mopping up will effectively end the Viet Nam conflict, and bring a new life of prosperity, freedom and happiness to Viet Nam.

How realistic is all this?

Even critics of current policies agree that the big Viet Cong fighting units are being fragmented.

The turning point was the battle of the Ia Drang Valley in Central Viet Nam last November. In that fight, divisions faced divisions in the war's most massive deployment of forces, and the Viet Cong was roundly beaten. American officials claimed a count of about 1,300 enemy bodies.

Even the Viet Cong's normally cocky "liberation radio" described Ia Drang as a defeat. It blamed certain Viet Cong commanders for having betrayed their forces to the Americans. Two VC commanders were shot for treason.

Since November, American forces have continued to pour into Viet Nam, and they often operate in battalion or greater strength. All these units are supported by enormous firepower, including 8-inch Howitzers and airpower. B52 bombers from Guam have saturated some forested areas with bombs.

Indications are that all this has forced the Viet Cong to decentralize.

And, many military and civilian officials feel, there is a very good chance that one year from now there will no longer be any Viet Cong operations of battalion strength or more.

The optimists reason that this will end heavy American casualties.

The pessimists feel that this will be the beginning of even heavier American casualties. As the Viet Cong splinters into more company and platoon - size units, American forces also will have to split up to chase the enemy.

Republicans Are Bliss-ful These Days

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican National Chariman Ray C. Bliss said yesterday inflation and Democratic differences over Viet Nam policy are improving Republican election prospects.

"The Republican position has improved materially in recent weeks," Bliss said at a news conference held during a meeting of big-city GOP chairmen.

Bliss declined to predict how many seats in Congress Republicans might pick up in November but said he expected "substantial gains."

He said the "Democratic infighting" over President Johnson's Viet Nam policy has been a major cause of the improved Republican prospects, with inflation right behind it.

"I hope the Democratic infighting continues," he said. "It's bound to help us."

The inflation issue is of particular importance, Bliss said, because it can be related directly to an individual as he sees prices rising and his money buying less.

Bliss said he was heartened by the AFL-CIO's recent expression of displeasure with Johnson's wage-price policy.

Air Strikes Hit Viet Cong

SAIGON (AP — Battle reports told yesterday of a record air strike of 61 missions over North Viet Nam, with a missile site among the targets, and the death of 665 Communist troops in heavy action in the south.

U. S. Marines, Vietnamese troops and planes slashed at enemy soldiers seeking to flee entrapment in coastal Quang Ngai province. The Allies said they had killed 466 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese regulars in the fight that erupted Friday northwest of Quang Ngai City, the capital.

Paratroopers of the 101st Airborne Division's 1st brigade clashed with a reinforced North Vietnamese battalion below Tuy Hoa, on the coast 240 miles northeast of Saigon. They reported 105 enemy dead and four machine guns among captured arms.

A battalion of the U. S. 1st Infantry Division, in a dawn battle on a rubber plantation about 40 miles north of Saigon, drove off an encircling enemy after killing 50 and capturing four.

Johnson Winning War Fight At Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson appears to have stemmed temporarily the tide of criticism of his Viet Nam policies — but at the cost of Senatorial resentment that may affect other programs.

While dissenters haven't yet talked themselves out, they reluctantly are conceding their inability to persuade their colleagues that Congress ought to lay a restraining hand on Johnson's conduct of the war.

Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., already has forecast rejection by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of two policy riders proposed to a $415-foreign aid bill authorizing an immediate stepup in economic assistance of South Viet Nam.

Fulbright has proposed one which would put Congress on record as saying that approval of the aid bill or the furnishing of economic and military assistance to any country shall not be construed as a commitment to defend those countries with American forces.

The other, by Sen. George S. McGovern, D - S.D., would make it clear that passage of the aid bill involves no endorsement of Johnson's Viet Nam policies. McGovern said that if the Committee rejects his proposal he will not press it in the Senate.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., signalled that this measure is likely to come under heavy attack in the Senate.

Blizzard Is Worst

CHICAGO (AP) — The U. S. Weather Bureau said yesterday the blizzard in the north central section is the worst in recorded history— even worse than the famed blizzard of 1888.

Blizzard warnings were up again as the deadly blend of heavy snow and screaming winds continued to plague Iowa, the east portions of Nebraska and the Dakotas and the northern and western parts of Minnesota.

"The great blizzard of 1888 has always been spoken of as the worst in recorded history," the Weather Bureau said. "But by the time the present storm slowly abates later today it will surpass the duration and intensity of the 1888 blizzard."

Taylor Wants Mining Of North Viet Harbor

WASHINGTON (AP) —Maxwell D. Taylor, one of President Johnson's top advisors, believes that the important supply harbor of Haiphong in North Viet Nam should be closed by U. S. mines.

The opinion of Taylor, retired general and former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was made in a written addition to his public testimony at the Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing Feb. 17.

To date, the North Viet Nam capital of Hanoi and the main supply harbor of Haiphong have been spared bombing or action by U. S. air and naval forces.

Taylor's advocacy of closing the harbor came in answer to 26 questions by Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., submitted Feb. 17 for written replies to save time during the televised hearings.

Symington, former Secretary of the Air Force, asked in writing:

"If we are really serious about curtailing the flow of war material from North Viet Nam to the south, would it not be to our interests to neutralize the port of Haiphong?"

Gen. Taylor's published reply:

"There have always been pros and cons to the use of our air power to neutralize the port of Haiphong. The question of the proper timing is always involved in this matter.

"I am inclined to believe that the time has been reached when we should mine this harbor and cut off the shipping which normally uses it."

Earlier, Symington asked how the campaign to cut off infiltration of combat troops and materials into South Viet Nam from the north has been carried out by U. S. air forces.

"What targets are being attacked, what kinds of weapons are being employed by the Air Force and Navy in carrying out these strikes and how extensive is this air campaign?" Symington asked.

"The air campaign against the North is characterized by a slow, steady increase of pressure through attacks on military targets, particularly those associated with the support of infiltration," Taylor replied.

"The targets include such things as roads, bridges, ferries, port and airfield facilities and antiaircraft missile sites. A limited amount of POL storage and electric power sources has been included.

"The targets are pretty well distributed over about two thirds of the surface of North Viet Nam. As you know, we have always kept out of the Hanoi-Haiphong area."

Numerous questions have been raised by members of Congress and others as to why the U. S. has not halted shipments of supplies to North Viet Nam by bombing or mining.

Copter Crasher Was Cold

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U. S. Court of Military Appeals has reversed the conviction of Army Pvt. Lowell E. Traweek Jr. of Pasadena, Calif., of having negligently destroyed a helicopter he was assigned to guard.

A court-martial of Ft. Bragg, N. C., convicted Traweek in November 1964. The Army said he made a statement that he entered the helicopter while on guard duty because he was cold.

He tried to turn on the heater, he was quoted as saying, and inadvertently turned on the engine instead. The machine rose into the air and then crashed on its side.

Traweek, 24, said he had never operated a helicopter and contended that agents of the Army's Criminal Investigation Detachment had extorted a confession from him and had denied him the right to see a lawyer.

The agents disputed his contention, and after a review board confirmed that conviction in January 1965 Traweek served a sentence of eight months at hard labor.

The Court of Military Appeals held that the confession was admissible. But it held that a law officer had instructed members of the court-martial wrongly by failing to note that the government was obligated to prove there was no denial of counsel.

Consequently, the Appellate Court said, either a new court-martial must be convened to try the case again or the charges should be dismissed.

If he is convicted again, it was explained, he would not have to serve more time.

Entries are due for the Grail-Mural Sports Jamboree this Wednesday, March 9. The Jamboree will be held on March 16.

Previous practice was to hold it in a two-day period. The Intramural Department encourages greater participation in the Jamboree this year. It has been fairly well attended in the past, but not up to expectations.

The primary aim of the Jamboree is to bring about a closer and more productive relationship between the residence hall and fraternity organizations on the Carolina campus. Each fraternity is paired by lot with a residence hall to form a team. The teams are then responsible for forming their own entries on the program's eight events. Each doubles team must consist of one player from a residence hall and one from a fraternity.

A championship plaque is given to the winning team and a large plaque with the winner's name will be kept in the Intramural Office as a permanent record. Individual trophies will be given to chamipons in each event.

Regular intramural entry rules apply to the Jamboree, except no ringers will be allowed. An entry fee of $2.50 is charged to each team to cover the steak dinner for all individual winners and members of the winning relay team.

Competition will be held in relays, half-court basketball, table tennis, badminton, handball, swimming, archery and foul shooting. The relays are pretty wild affairs and something out of the ordinary. Participants better know how to run, dribble a basketball, carry wooden blocks, pick up a football and a bean bag and run around chairs and in circles.

You need not be much of an athlete to participate in the Jamboree. All 98-pound weaklings are welcome, as are 250-pound weaklings. Frustrated athletes should also find something in which they excel. And if anyone is any good in an event, by all means enter. It might add a little class to a fun-filled shindig.

'The Splendid Splinter'

Ted Williams.

When you hear the name you think of baseball. If you live in Massachusetts or if you've always been a Red Sox fan, the name means something special.

You think of a tall dark-haired man who wore a clean white uniform with number nine on the back. You've called him the "Splendid Splinter" and "Thumpin' Theodore" and, when you were young, his bubble gum card was your most treasured possession.

Your biggest thrill was when number nine closed out his career in Boston with a homer his last time up.

If you don't like the Boston Red Sox, the name Williams means other things.

It means long arguments with friends in which you argue that a Mantle or a Mays have it all over him.

It means stories which conjure up the delicious scene of an old lady getting spat upon or getting clobbered by Ted's flung-in-anger bat.

It means stories which sicken you. Stories about Williams, the war hero, who got his shoulder torn apart by gun fire fought back to become a great hitter in the majors.

If you happen to be a man who's pitched against number nine, the name means fear. When you saw those great eyes staring at you from 60 feet away you were always thinking of the long fly ball that would kill you. When you threw the ball you threw it carefully. You threw to the inside or down low and outside and you breathed a little easier when you walked him.

If you've written baseball you had second thoughts about this man. Your war with him was famous. He didn't cooperate with you because he was more concerned with playing and thinking baseball than giving interviews. And you overlooked his name when you voted for the MVP the season that Williams won the tripel crown.

That's the way it was with Williams. You either loved him or you hated him.

But you could never overlook Ted Williams. You could never deny his greatness or his contribution to the sport. If you tried, you had the cold hard facts in the record books to contend with. And you lost.

More than 8,000 men have played in the majors since 1900. But only eight of them have achieved a batting average of .400 during a season. One man in a thousand. A man named Nap Lajoie was the first and Williams was the last. He hit .406 in 1941. In 1957 near the end of his career, he hit .388. His classic swing poured 521 baseballs over major league walls.

This winter his most faithful enemies, the writers, recognized his greatness by voting him into the Hall of Fame.

Now, the name has gone from the scoreboards and the score cards. But it will be carved on a bronze plaque and will hang in a big brick building in Cooperstown.

One Lousy Point

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer

It hurt. It hurt real bad.

No more blue and white uniforms. No more halftimes. And a lot of basketballs put up on racks in Woollen Gym and stored for the spring and summer.

Remember back to Saturday night. If you're like me you were excited when you snapped on a radio and fumbled for the right station.

Bill Rollins and I sat behind long desks in the front office at the Chapel Hill Weekly. Rollins was silent. He drew lines on a yellow pad and prepared to fill pages with the names of players and scores and the times of the shots.

Both of us were thinking . . . thinking back over the victories and the defeats of the long season. The Tar Heels had played Duke twice — and lost twice. If there was ever a time for a victory it was now. It had to be now.

If you're like me you expected Duke to run and you hoped that maybe this time we'd catch them and nose 'em out at the finish.

Then the voice over the radio described Yokley holding the ball and holding the ball and . . .

We heard the description of the passes and the four-man stall hoping for an opening near the basket. We waited. The seconds grew into minutes.

I remembered Louie saying about two weeks ago that the team was throwing the ball away too much. There were an awful lot of passes in those long first twenty minutes. I worried.

At first I wanted to hear us shoot. But we played keep away.

Rollins and I just sat behind those desks. At first we were shocked. Then we thought about the strategy. We had lots of time to think because there wasn't much to hear. We remembered that Duke had run against us and creamed us both times.

And we decided that Dean Smith had come up with a great idea and his boys were making the most of it. Proof: Duke 7 and UNC 5 at the half.

If your heart was working overtime during the second half you had company. Bill deserted his almost clean yellow pad and paced the office. I began to pull my hair out.

With 11:55 left Bennet hit a layup and it was Carolina, 17-12. We're going to do it, I thought. We're going to stay alive for at least 24 more hours. We're going to win the tournament. We're going to . . .

Then the score was 20 to 20 with just over two minutes to go.

We heard Vacendack pass in to Marin — back to Vacendack to Verga who passed to Lewis who drove for the basket — five seconds, four seconds — then the foul.

Smith called time out. Rollins stopped his pacing. And I couldn't take the pressure and walked out onto Franklin Street. I imagined Mike Lewis at the foul line and I prayed that he'd choke. I prayed for a long time and I hoped.

Now the hope's gone. It's all over. You can think back over the game and remember the times when we could have added a few more points to our side of the score. But you try not to because it hurts too bad.

So now its "Wait 'til next year." And next year things might be different. But next year is a long, long way off.

Too much time to think about that one lousy little point. Much too much time.

Davidson Hits NCAA Play

Southern Conference champion Davidson, after two years of frustration, moves into the first round of the NCAA playoffs Monday night against Rhode Island of the Yankee Conference in Blacksburg, Va.

The Wildcats, nationally ranked in the top ten for the two previous years with a club centered around fabulous Fred Hetzel, accomplished what those two clubs couldn't do—win the conference tourney — to advance to the playoffs.

Also on the doubleheader bill at the Virginia Tech Coliseum will be Providence (No. 8 nationally) and St. Joseph's (no. 7). Those two teams met just last Wednesday, with St. Joe ripping off an 86-67 win.

The winners of the two Blacksburg games will advance to Raleigh to join Syracuse and the Atlantic Coast Conference title-winner next Friday and Saturday nights in the Eastern Regionals.

Syracuse drew a bye when Ivy League top-dog Penn was ruled ineligible for non-conformity to NCAA scholastic eligibility rules. Syracuse and Penn were to have met in the third game of play at Blacksburg.

Dusty, yellowed ACC tournament record books are still being inspected for new marks set in Duke's 21-20 semifinal round victory over North Carolina Friday night.

At latest count, there were nine "records in reverse" set in that "chilling game."

The 20-point total by North Carolina was the fewest points ever scored by one team in ACC Tournament history. That total easily broke the old record of 41 set by Maryland against Wake Forest in 1963.

Of course, the 21 points by Duke was the lowest winning score.

Both North Carolina and Duke broke a record for the fewest field goals attempted. The Tar Heels claimed the edge with 15 attempts. Duke had 21. Both clubs broke the old record of 25 set by the Tar Heels against N. C. State in 1954.

Both Duke and North Carolina broke the record for the fewest field goals made in an ACC tournament game. Both clubs made seven field goals — breaking the old mark of 14 by North Carolina against N. C. State in 1954.

North Carolina's 11 rebounds broke the old record of 18 set by N. C. State against Duke in 1963. Duke's total of 17 also clipped that old record.

Both teams combined to set five "futility" records. The combined total of 41 points easily broke the old record of 95 set by Duke (51) and Wake Forest (41) in 1958. That 41 points by Wake Forest was the previous low score for a losing team in the history of the tournament.

Duke and North Carolina combined to break another record for fewest field goals attempted. Thirty-six shots were attempted by both teams — clearing the old record of 86 set by N. C .State and North Carolina in 1954.

The 14 total field goals scored by both teams also broke the old mark of 30 set by Duke and Wake Forest in 1958.

The two clubs attempted 19 free throws — breaking the old record of 24 set by N. C. State and Duke in 1963.

Finally, the 13 free throws made by both clubs broke the old record of 19 set by N. C. State and Duke in 1963.

South Carolina coach Frank McGuire had a few comments on the Tar Heels' deep-freeze tactics after his Gamecocks lost to N. C. State 75-62 in the other semifinal action.

"It was good strategy," he said. "I'm sure Dean Smith had everything planned carefully. But no coach has to be victimized by a deep-freeze game plan.

"The defense dictates the style of offense," he said. "If the defense hangs back in a zone, the offense can hold the ball all night.

"I would love to have held the ball against N. C. State," he said, "but Maravich (State coach Press) was too smart. He comes after you on defense.

"Believe me, I would have kissed Marvich if he had let me stall."

Durham, with a 23-1 record this season, was all set to play unbeaten Myers Park High School of Charlotte in the semifinals of the State 4-A tournament in Greensboro.

Druham's 6-6 center Dennis Hamlett finished his pre-game warmups then headed for the dressing room. But Hamlett never make it. On the way, he struck his head on a light fixture and was knocked unconscious.

Hamlett, who is Durham's leading rebounder, needed six stitches to close the wound. Durham lost 59-57.

Patch Of Blue Far From Today's Usual Love Flick

By KATHY CAUBLE
Special To DTH

"A Patch of Blue", now playing at the Rialto Theatre in Durham, could have been a typical boy-meet-girl story. The two lovers meet accidentally at a park in the middle of a busy city. They continue to meet there, at first by calculated coincidence and then on purpose. They talk. They laugh. They understand one another. They share the little things—a bottle of pineapple soda, a trip to the delicatessen. Then gradually, the protagonists, Gordon and Selina realize they are in love. But the romance has two problems: Selina, the shy, lovely girl, is blind — blinded by a bottle of acid thrown at her father by her mother, a tenement district prostitute — and Gordon, the gentle, understanding young man is a Negro.

Guy Green wrote this story for the screen. He brings it to life with a master stroke of direction. It is obvious that the main characters were carefully cast according to their own individual talents.

Sidney Poitier, as the young Negro, gives a performance that is equal in every way to his Oscar - winning role in "Lillies of the Field." The tyrannical prostitute is Shelley Winters, who turns in her usual superb character performance. But perhaps the greatest contribution of "A Patch of Blue" is Elizabeth Hartman as Selina. This young lady brilliantly plays her role with such emotion and expression that she touches the heart of every person in the theatre.

The black and white photography is at first startling, but then your eyes adjust and you realize the shades of black and gray capture the mood of the movie.

For to Selina the world is dark and limited. The four walls of the shabby second floor flat are all she knows. She shares this cramped world with her alcoholic grandfather, her mother and whatever man her mother has in bed with her at the time. That is Selina's whole life until she happens to go to the park and meets Gordon. The park is fresh air and light and an escape from her screaming mother and Gordon is a friend. He is the key to everything. He teaches her to find her way around the park alone, to cross busy city streets and to dial a telephone. Gordon lifts Selina, as no one else would, from her world of constant despair.

In her blindness Selina cannot realize that Gordon's skin is black. She cannot see the indignant stares of old women as she and Gordon walk arm in arm through the park. All Selina knows is the goodness of the man she loves, not the features of his face or the blackness of his skin. But though Selina does not realize the difference color of skin makes to the world, Gordon does. Gordon must save Selina from the mistake for which the sighted society will condemn her. A society that simply cannot understand.

Is God Dead?

Four Profs In Conflict With Newest Theology

By JOAN PAGE
Special to the DTH

Four religion professors here disagree with the "God Is Dead" theory, but feel certain "some good" will come out of the fuss and furor it is causing throughout the country.

"It has pulled theology out of the mothballs and brought it to life," says Religion Department Chairman Samuel S. Hill Jr. "It offers a constructive challenge to Christianity and has gotten more people interested in theology than ever."

Prof. John W. Dixon, who teaches art and religion, has studied the new concept closely and has spoken several times on the movement. "The so - called 'God Is Dead' theologians have worked apart from each other and disagree rather markedly on what they mean by the term," he observes. "They agree only on the assertion that there is no meaningful way to use the concept or the experience of God in the contemporary world."

Dixon questions any attempt to describe God in words, and objects to Altizer's refusal to distinguish between God and theology. It is theology that is dead, not God, Dixon believes. "Theological systems describe the state of mind and soul of the theologian. They do not account for the reality of things. The description of the state of soul of a few is not authoritative for all."

Pointinting to limitations of language, Dixon maintains that to put God into a sentence is to limit God and put Him under man's control. If man can no longer speak meaningfully of God, the problem lies in the nature of words.

Christianity early acquired a group of spokesmen who were convinced their words exactly fitted the order of things and their statements accurately described reality, Dixon recalls. Now that their words have become outdated, some are ready to announce the death of God rather than admit theology is dead.

Hill thinks the "God Is Dead" theory developed because of the increasing difficulty of talking about God in modern scientific and philosophical modes of thought. "All traditional language about God is regarded by many contemporary thinkers as either useless at worst or suspect at best," he explains. The idea of a "Supreme Being up there" or a "Divine Spirit out there," he illustrates, is practically inexpressible in modern terms.

The theory has been misinterpreted, Hill believes, and the majority of the public has made no effort to see the Christian impulses embodied in the concept. "We should at least listen to their views and try to understand what they mean. Just to dismiss it all as blasphemy seems irresponsible."

Boyd detects a contradiction

Bibical scholar Bernard in the theory. "The very way these scholars phrase their idea implies that God was once living," he observes. "They say our secular ethos killed God in this generation. If He could be killed by secular ethos, then He never was a God in the first place. This theory reveals an inadequate concept of the Biblical doctrine of God."

Boyd points out that many people today, including Christians, have an inadequate concept of Deity. "The God many visualize as an old man with black robe and long white beard, keeping the great book of sins, is indeed dead," he declares. "The God that punishes naughty people by sickness and earthquakes and who stands ready to throw the evil into eternal fire is dead. That God never existed."

"Jesus was compassionate, forgiving, loving and redemptive," Boyd describes. "Any concept of Deity that makes God any less appealing or attractive than Jesus is a false concept. 'The 'man upstairs' God that many people think they believe in is dead because He never really was alive."

Prof. Arnold Nash thinks the movement is dying because no first - rate theologian, natural or social scientist has identified himself with the idea. He nevertheless credits advocates of the theory with raising a real problem.

Nash is puzzled by "the apparent ignorance of the advocates in thinking theirs is the first attempt to restate the Christian message in new terms."

Medical-Anthropology Course At UNC To Aid In Introducing Health Programs

The trouble with many unsuccessful health programs is that they are planned by people who know only about disease, and not by people who know about people, UNC epidemiologists and anthropologists conclude.

In an effort to train scientists who can put their ideas across to foreign cultures, Carolina has just initiated an interdepartmental program in medical - anthropology.

"We want to eliminate whatever it is in a society that leads to a rejection of small pox vaccine or water supply cleaning programs," says Dr. Ralph Patrick of the School of Public Health who is one of the key figures in the new program.

If a community is offered a good health program, he says, it has to be offered the program in just the right way or the program hasn't got a chance — people won't take to it.

"I have a cigarette right here in my hand for example," said Dr. Patrick, "in spite of all the recent studies and findings of epidemiologists."

But it's no snap of the fingers to convince people they ought to take part in a good health project, he thinks; "And running a steam roller over a culture is not the way to change custom either."

Just recently the government announced that it wanted more non - medical people in national and international health programs, people with the ability to work in situations where there are established values and culture, and people who can tactfully present a program to a society.

"We want to train people for anything that requires a 'translation' from one way of life to another, bridging the gap," says Dr. John Honigmann, professor of anthropology and acting director of the program.

Besides training epidemiologically oriented anthropologists, the program plans to induce study of the relation of disease to culture. "We want to know what it is about the way people live that causes a disease rate to be high or low in a given area," says Dr. Patrick.

Council Hearing Thursday On Referendum Protest

By GLENN L. MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

The Constitutional Council will hold an open hearing Thursday at 3 p.m. in Peabody Hall o nthe protest of the Feb. 22 referendum of the so-called "slate amendment."

The UNC Elections Board has dismissed the protest for lack of jurisdicton.

Everette Thompson, who has been appointed temporary Elections Board chairman, said the Board ruled to dismiss the protest because it does not have jurisdiction in election protests.

Harris filed the protest with the Constituional Council last week when he found that protests were to be ruled on by the council.

MacNair said the protest, "seems to be just another complaint which comes up after nearly every election because of some mismanagement by Elections Board.

"Some study in this area is imperative," MacNair said. "I have suggested to student government that some action be taken by the legislature to clarify the election laws.

"The council is getting tired of hearing these complaints after every electon," MacNair said. "The compalints usually arise because of mismanagement or irresponsibility."

He said legislation should be passed to eliminate much of the "vagueness" in election aw.

Harris and several other residents of Alexander Residence Hall filed the protest on the grounds that polls were never opened in Alexander for the Feb. 22 referendum, on the grounds of improper manning of the polls at Y-Court and that there was not enough pre - election publicity to inform students of the issues in the referendum.

The protest was filed about 5 p.m. on Feb. 24, with in the specified 96- hour period following the final tabulation fo the vote. The legal protest period ended at 9 p.m. Feb. 25. The constitutional amendment, which called for the elction of the student body president and vice president on the same ballet, passed by an overwhelming majority. The final tabulation was 1,283 for and 657 against the amendment.

Harris said, in filing the protest, that he was not necessarily opposed to the amendment but the "mechanical difficulties in the referendum lead to a violation of both the spirit and the letter of the general election laws."

Harris said he hopes the council will invalidate the referendum and include the amendment in the March 22 electins.

Spring Springs

It was cold in Chapel Hill yesterday, but we can mark March 7 as the day we noticed the first signs of spring here on the hill.

THEY started cutting the grass and a young man sat on a bench by the Old Well shooting squirrels with his sling-shot as they romped through the trees.

Editorial cartoonist saw the same guy sniping in the arboretum. Check his reaction on page two.

Bricks For Dry Feet

Back in November a load of bricks, thousands of them, were deposited behind Morrison. They apparently were to be used to lay a sidewalk from Morrison into campus.

Well they have sat and sat—until this past weekend. Now there is a sign in the pile saying "place a brick."

The guys in Big Mo got tired of walking through the swamps caused by the rains we have here in the Kidney of the South.

So now they are building their own sidewalk with a campaign slogan of "Dry feet in a wet society."

The Mature Mind

Sen. Robert Morgan is a popular man—with some folks. The Dunn Dispatch, which is Harnett County's oldest and most widely read newspaper, carried this item.

GOVERNOR: Here's a note from our mother. She wishes us to relay the message on to State Sen. Robert Morgan. Mother, in a letter, said, "I want you to give a message to Sen. Morgan for me. Tell him I want him to run for governor. I believe he would make a fine one. Tell him I will see that he carries Villa Drive (where mother lives in Greensboro). I'm not kidding, he would make a good governor. So many people talk so nice about him and about the stand he has taken about those wanting to have Communists lecturing in the schools."

It is good to see that the mature minds of North Carolina are going to support Morgan.

Platform Found For Communist

By ANDY MYERS

Communist Herbert Aptheker has been extended an off-campus speaking platform by the Community Church on Purefoy Road, it was revealed yesterday.

Aptheker will not speak on campus.

He was turned down by Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson Friday and since then the Committee for Free Inquiry has been trying to locate his talk off campus.

Student Body President Paul Dickson said yesterday he "was told by a member of CFI" that the hall would be available.

He would not say who had asked church officials if Aptheker could speak there. The Rev. Charles M. Jones, pastor of the church, was out of town yesterday and could not be reached for comment.

The Presbyterian Church last Thursday refused to let Aptheker appear there. Rev. Vance Barron said the church Session voted by a majority to refuse Aptheker speaking privileges.

Aptheker will be in Chapel Hill tomorrow. He will probably speak over the stone wall on Franklin Street in the same way Frank Wilkinson did last Wednesday.

Aptheker's outdoor talk is scheduled for 1 p.m.

Dickson refused to say when the speaking location at the Community Church had been confirmed, but noted he would try to find a hall closer to campus.

"I haven't tried yet," he said late yesterday, "but I plan to get around ot it later on."

Rev. Henry Turlington Sr. of University Baptist Church on South Columbia Street would not say whether Aptheker would be allowed to use the church to speak.

"Any one - time use of our facilities has to be passed on by our church council," Turlington said.

Officials at the Hillel House on West Cameron Avenue said any decisions about Aptheker's appearance there "would be a question of state - wide approval" by the church.

Wilkinson, chairman of a committee seeking to abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee, spoke at the Hillel House last Wednesday after being denied from speaking on campus.

Aptheker is a member of the Institute of Marxist Studies in New York City. He said he is not an officer in the Communist Party of the U. S., but is a card - carrying member.

Mathis Here Tonight At 8

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

The doors to Carmichael Auditorium will open at 7 tonight for Johnny Mathis's concert beginning at 8.

Mathis will open the show and will continue to appear durind both halves of the concert with Our Young Generation, a new singing group.

Tickets will remain on sale at Graham Memorial for $1 each until 5 p.m. today. Tickets will go on sale at the door at 6 p.m. for $1.50.

Seats in Carmichael will be filled on a first - come - first-served basis. Couples can bring blankets to spread on the gym floor. No drinks or cigarettes will be permitted on the gym floor.

Mathis will sing 24 songs including a medley from Mancini and Mercer and a medley from some of his first hit records.

The selections in the concert include the all - time favorites from "West Side Story": "Maria," "Tonight" and "Somewhere."

Aptheker Will Speak Over Moore's Wall

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

Communist Herbert Aptheker will speak over "Dan Moore's wall of repression" tomorrow at 1 p.m.

The Committee of Free Inquiry decided at its meeting Sunday night to follow much the same procedures as they did when Frank Wilkinson spoke here last Wednesday.

Wednesday night students will stage a "wait-in" in a building on campus where they want to here the Communist therotician speak.

Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson has denied Aptheker permission to speak on campus, but CFI is holding the "wait-in" in hopes of helping its prospective court case.

The committee overwhelmingly voted down a proposal to hold an actual sit - in where they would not move unless forcibly carried out of the building.

The "wait - in" will last until the group is asked to leave. They will then move to a location off campus to hear Aptheker speak on the war in Viet Nam.

At Sunday's meeting which was attended by about 100 people the committee also voted to end the picketing of South Building.

The meeting almost broke into a verbal war when members of the body asked Chairman Paul Dickson why he had labeled last Thursday's meeting a "Kangaroo court."

At that meeting Dickson was absent and the committee voted to picket.

Debate was stopped on this issure when Sid Waldman, a founder of CFI, asked if the press could be instructed not to report the inter fighting.

Dickson said they could not, and the matter was dropped.

Dickson said $1,500 to $2,000 should be collected on campus now for the court case.

The committee voted to set up tables around campus to collect the money. Dickson said he did not know when the case would begin or how much money would be needed to carry it out.

Hill Wants Repeal Of Speaker Ban

By WALTER JACKSON
Special to the DTH

A member of the executive committee fo the UNC Board of Trustees, who voted last month to deny a campus platform to Herbert Aptheker and Frank Wilkinson, said Sunday night he thinks the University made a mistake by not going out and "raising all the Hell they could" immediately after the passage of the Speaker Ban Law in 1963.

George Watts Hill, Durham, a member of the Board of Trustees for 10 years told a group of about 40 persons in the Presbyterian Student Center here he is "by no means" satisfied with the amended Speaker Ban Law and that he is quietly working for its outright repeal.

Hill, a 1922 UNC graduate, said he feels the Speaker Ban controversy has impaired the University's reputation and ability to attract personnel.

"Why should a well qualified man who is teaching somewhere else at a high salary give up his job to come here where his professional reputaton may be damaged by this image?" he asked.

The Executive Committee of the Bord of Trustees voted 8-3 last month to suspend the then-existing invitations to speak on campus to Herbert Aptheker and Frank Wilkinson, two contrversial speakers who had fallen under the restraints of the original 1963 ban law.

Hill said he voted with seven others to withdraw the invitations because it would have been illegal to allow the pair to speak as the law stood before the trustees action of last February 28, a fact which he said has been practically overlooked by the news media of the state.

Although he thinks the students might be able to win a proposed court case and force the chancellor to allow Aptheker and Wilkinson to appear, Hill cautioned against such action.

$75 Given To Protesters

By DAVID ROTHMAN
DTH Staff Writer

Jim McCorkel, former head of Students for a Democratic Society says UNC students have contributed $75 to a group headed by Frank Wilkinson which seeks abolition of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Wilkinson received the money while speaking last week at Hillel House, McCorkel said Sunday. (Hillel House, located off - campus, is a Jewish religious center.)

"The money was contributed by individuals during the talk," McCorkel explained. "It was not from Students for a Democratic Society or any other organization.

McCorkel was interveiwed before Sunday's SDS meeting at which members voted not to picket South Building "for the next three days" — even if the Committee for Free Inquiry decided again to do so.

McCorkel said he opposed the picketing "not because picketing is always wrong but because I believe that picketing is a tactic to be used only in special circumstances.

"It should be used only when other modes of expression of grievances have been exhausted, only when the issue is clear and the picketing seeks to achieve a concrete purpose."

He said Friday's picketing alienated "a large percentage of the students" and strengthened "those forces which would see Sitterson appointed chancellor on a permanent basis.

It was announced a political science professor will invite a Communist to address his class, but his name was not available for publication.

Pub Board Silent On Banov, Gebeaux

By GLENN L. MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

The Publications Board has decided not to issue any further statement on why it did not endorse two of the candidates who were seeking the board's endorsement for editorship of The Daily Tar Heel.

Hugh Blackwell, board chairman, said, "The board felt those candidates not endorsed did not meet the criteria outlined in the original statement of the board."

Fred Thomas and Ray Linville received the board's endorsement while Alan Banov and Howard Gebeaux did not. Gebeaux later withdrew from the race for editor. Banov is circulating petitions in order to secure enough signatures to have his name placed on the ballot in the March 22 election.

Blackwell said Evans will start work on the booklet immediately so students will be able to use it next year.

Only one application was interviewed for the position of business manager of the booklet. The board decided to continue to receive applications for that position until Thursday and interview other candidates at their meeting Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial.

Clark Egeler, a sophomore from Geneva, Switzerland, was chosen as editor of the Yack for next year. He is presently serving as the managing editor.

Jerry Rouse, a junior from Kinston, will be the business manager for the Yack. The accounting major has served on the staff for the past two years.

The board tentatively awarded contracts for photos for next year's Yack to Rappoport Studios of New York City. The details of the contract have to be outlined before the contract will be official, Blackwell said.

The chairman said about $2,500 should be saved in producing the Yack next year through a new process.

Commission To Handle Checks

By STEVE LACKEY
DTH Staff Writer

The Student Credit Commission, in the first of what will be weekly meetings, made plans yesterday to handle bad checks for the Dairy Bar.

Chairman Ralph Grosswald said that this was the first move towards handling checks for all downtown stores.

The Commission's decision to meet each week came after a series of four articles in The Daily Tar Heel defining the bad check problem.

Under the Commission's plan a member will phone each student who does not respond to a merchants attempt to collect a bad check.

The student will have exactly 30 days from the time he is called to pay the check. If no action is taken within 15 days he will be called again.

Anyone not paying the debt after this time will be reported to the Honor Council for trial.

The Commission will consider at next week's meeting holding grades and diplomas until all bad checks are paid.

A "bad check list" may be circulated among merchants, making it more difficult for flagrant violators to cash checks.

Grosswald said that the commission has been taking checks from Lenoir Hall for several weeks and reported that "this has worked well." Three students have been contacted under this plan.

He emphasized that the Commission is not "out to burn" any students, but simply wants to be of help to both the students and the stores.

Germans Fills Weekend

Winter Germans, to be held by fraternities at Carolina this weekend, will include a formal concert in Memorial Hall Friday and an informal dance in Durham Saturday.

The concert will feature Ahmad Jamal, a progressive jazz pianist, and will begin at 8 p.m.

The dance will feature Lou Christie, The Toys, The Flamingos and the Upsetters. It will be held 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. in Planter's Warehouse in Durham.

The Dean of Women's office has granted late 2 a.m. permission for all Carolina coeds for both both night's activities.

Companies Interview

Travelers Insurance Co. (summer jbs for actuaries); G. C. Murphy Co.; Time Inc. (summer program for juniors); Wachovia Ban and Trust Co.; Carnation Co.

Union Carbide Carbon Products; Pure Oil Co.; Burroughs Corp.; Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.; Camps Mondamin and Green Cove (summer jobs).

New Baptist Center

The Baptist Student Union will dedicate its new building 3 p.m. Sunday.

The opening will begin with a dedication service and speech from Consolidated University President William Friday and other speakers.

The dedication service will be followed by an open house until 5:30 p.m. The Union is located at 203 Battle Lane.

Museum Membership

Students, faculty and university personnel can join the Museum of Modern Art through the Museum of Modern Art Student Group Membership Plan.

Under the group plan, memberships are availabe at a reduced rate of $10 instead of the regular $18. Members will receive four publications annually and will be entitled to discounts on various publications and magazines.

Members will also receive an annual pass permitting unlimited free admissions. Membership blanks are available at the Ackland Art Library in the Ackland Art Center.

UP Speeches Planned

Meetings will be on the following nights at 7:30:

Wednesday — Scott College (in Teague)

Thursday — Morrison

Monday, March 14 — Alexander, Joyner and Winston (in Winston)

Tuesday, March 15 — Lower Quad, McIver, Alderman and Kenan (in Kenan)

Wednesday, March 16 —East and West Cobb at 7:30; Craige at 9:30

Thursday, March 17—Nurses Dorm

Musiciologist Speaks

Denes Bartha, an Hungarian musicologist, will lecture in Hill Hall 8 p.m. today on "Structural and Tonal Problems in the Music of Bartok."

Speech On Viet Nam

Dr. Arthur Larsen will speak at Carolina today on "Legal Issue, Relating to Viet Nam," according to Pat Morgan, Secretary to the John J. Parker Society of International Law.

Dr. Larsen will speak 1 p.m. upstairs in Lenoir Hall. Law students, graduate students, and interested undergraduates are invited to attend.

Grant For Botanist

Dr. J. Frank McCormick, assistant professor of botany at Carolina, has been awarded a travel grant by the National Academy of Sciences to attend the Third International Congress of Radiation Research in Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy.

He will present a paper at the meeting and visit laboratories in France, Switzerland, Germany, Austria and Italy.

The Bad Check Problem

After a six-year delay, the Student Credit Commission is getting around to performing its intended function.

By acting as a mediator between merchants and students who cash bad checks in downtown stores, the Commission can save time, money and inconvenience for students and storeowners.

DTH staff writer Steve Lackey thoroughly investigated the bad check problem and his series of articles last month demonstrated the wide range of treatment students receive when they write worthless checks—intentionally or not.

Some establishments "sell" the bad checks back to students for $1 or $1.50. Others turn them over to the two local justices of the peace, who charge eighter $9 or $10 plus the value of the check if the student is found guilty.

Some students have been convicted of the criminal offense of intentionally writing a worthless check simply because they forgot to put the name of their home bank on a counter check.

Those merchants who have been charging students as extra "fee" for not turning a check over to the justice of the peace have in a sense been blackmailing students, even if they intended to do a favor. Those who have turned checks over to legal authorities have perhaps subjected students to harsher treatment then they deserved.

At any rate, the Student Credit Commission, by handling the collection of bad checks for the businesses, will be performing a valuable and long-overdue service.

The Dairy Bar is the first downtown establishment to announce its intention to cooperate with Ralph Grosswald's committee.

Hopefully, all other merchants will join in the effort.

Exploring The Myth

The Carolina Symposium comes once every two years.

In past years—since the first program in 1927—it has been well worth the wait. This year's week long speaker series should be no exception.

With speakers including John Kenneth Galbraith and Tom Wolfe, the Symposium will explore "Man, Mind and Myth" from April 17 through 21.

The topic is especially challenging and should offer the campus the opportunity for some sorely needed intellectual self-examination.

The tone of that discussion is best explained by the Symposium's Program Committee, which selected the myth topic:

"In searching for a topic for the Carolina Symposium, the Program Committee examined many proposals to study particular malaises of our times. But in the course of this examination we felt that underlying all of these was a lack of self confidence in modern man, a failure of nerves. Where were we going? No one seemed to know; no one seemed to possess any basis for beginning an answer. Then the suggestion that our age had outgrown its myth and had failed to create replacements provided our direction for the answer, Hence the topic, Man, Mind and Myth.

"The 1966 Carolina Symposium proposes to examine the problem of myth. We begin our definition of myth as a story which embodies and explains an already existing institution, phenomenon or belief. Because of its simplicity and the justification it lends to a society's pattern of operation, the myth becomes a powerful force, both perpetuating that pattern and shaping the thoughts and values of individuals in that society.

"Hence if a society is to attain any measure of intellectual self awareness, it must understand the structure of its mythology and the manner in which this mythology affects the society as a whole, and its members."

The project is worthy but it will fail without the interest and support of the study body.

The first opportunity to express that interest and build that support will be opened with the discussion meetings to be held in residence halls, fraternities and sororities this month.

Months of preparation have gone into providing the Symposium program.

Committee For Free Inquiry No Longer Deserves Support

The Committee for Free Inuqiry has gone too far.

Authority to rule whether speakers appear here has returned to the University, to the Chancellor. So what's the CFI's gripe?

They insist that they—or, by extension, any student group—should have full use of University facilities for bringing to the campus any speakers they please. That's the issue, no matter what the highflown slogans on the picket posters.

On that issue hangs the parting of the ways. The student body has supported the CFI till now, but it should do so no longer.

We have followed long enough after phantom images in our battle against the speaker ban. If the people of this state were mistaken in depicting the University as a wild, bucking maverick, we were equally mistaken in depicting the state as a frantic, frothing old mare and the University as her perfect, beautiful colt.

These shibboleths drawn from the heat of battle were inevitable. But the battle is over. We must not transfer the false image to our own administration.

Acting Chancellor Sitterson has ruled, and his ruling must be replaced. The CFI claims banning Wilkinson and Paul Dickson from speaking last Wednesday night was a "suppression of free speech."

But it is possible—and it would be to our credit to admit this—that such "suppression" will demonstrate that the Chancellor can withstand student demands when necessary, and so will prevent a movement by people anxious to take the power of decision once again away from the University. It may be that "suppression" of Paul Dickson will thwart the growth of a campus demagogue.

Whether these were among the Chancellor's motives we can probably not learn. To publicly admit them would destroy their effect.

We should rather direct our questions to the CFI. We might ask why they have suddenly and viciously turned on the administrators who for three years fought the speaker ban tooth and nail. We might ask them whether the noise they have made for the past three weeks is a greater effort for freedom of inquiry.

We might ask the student politicians among them whether they are using the CFI as a mere vehicle for Student Government's struggle to wrest more and more power from the Administration.

We might finally ask if they act for the good of the University or of the student body or for anything more under the sun than the satisfaction of having their own way.

Letters To The Editor

Picketing Defended

Editor, the Daily Tar Heel:

Disgusting?? Unnecessary?? No influence? Wasted Energy? Mr. McCrary, if these are the only words that you can find to describe the picket in front of South Building on March 4, I suggest that you taken your own advice—"Reserve a street or sidewalk and walk off you own frustrations."

Who can call dissent through legal picket lines an unnecessary act if concerned students pose valid questions which have been left unanswered

Perhaps, the picket will have as little influence as our patient waiting for complete repeal of the ban or our numerous petitions, but the picket IS an attempt to influence and to allow student reactions (to Acting Chancellor Sitterson's decisions) to be heard while the court case is being prepared.

Picketing 'Unthinking'

Editor, the Daily Tar Heel:

The decision of the CFI to initiate action in the form of picketing before South Building is both unthinking and unfortunate. In a meeting held last Thursday night in Howell Hall, approximately 70 persons were present. The meeting was first conducted by Mr. Richard French, who, though one cannot doubt his sincere interest and concern over the problem of free speech, is not an elected member of the steering committee of CFI, but who has time and again taken it upon himself to dominate by his oratory and witticisms several previous meetings.

Acting upon the annoyance of the audience at Mr. French's monopolizing the floor, Bob Keiser, an elected member of the steering committee, then took over the meeting. Unfortunatly, Mr . Keiser's inability to control an audience of any size caused the meeting to disintegrate into near pandemonium.

It was against such a background that the decision was made to picket South Building. Once the vote was taken, and the motion approved (the present writer dissenting, someone thought to ask why they were picketing, against whom they were picketing, what was to be the manner of picketing, and so forth. No one at first knew the answers. All they knew was that they wanted to picket.

It is for this reason that I call the action unthinking. Action for the sake of action is absurd. Unless there is a clear and determined goal, and unless the procedures have been thought out rationally and with foresight, any action will simple become exhibitionism.

But most important of all, unless the consequences of such action be taken into account, the results can be not only foolish but damaging. At this meeting there was not sufficient discussion about the present state of affairs or about what such action might do to disrupt or damage the progress that has been made so far.

If those who wished to picket were truly and sensibly concerned with this University and its present and future welfare, rather than with their own desires and needs to "act" just for the sake of doing something — anything, then surely they would have taken the time to consider how such action might affect our chances for a final solution to this disturbing problem of free speech and free inquiry.

Finally, I must apologize for my own ineffectiveness in expressing by views at the meeting. I do not have the oratory of witticisms necessary to speak persuasively and make my opinions felt, but I too, like Mr. French, "am angry" with this whole unfortunate business, and would like to pursue my studies in a calm and free atmosphere.

I want freedom of speech and inquiry at this University, even if it must be slow in coming. I do not want to see our chances for obtaining this freedom set back or destroyed by foolish, unfortunate and unthinking actions.

'Panic Prevention'

Editor, the Daily Tar Heel:

A special has just been released from Washington. A new council on the prevention of widespread panic has been instituted by presidential decree for the study of what causes individuals to panic in a state of crisis. The President is said to have felt that such a study is essential for the prevention of panic in case of nuclear attack.

Because experiments of this nature in the past have yielded only partial and laboratory results, scientists will utilize surrpise nuclear bombings, conflagrations, and mass poisonings to achieve true-to-life effects.

The President is reported to have said that nobody need worry that they are The Chosen Few since no one will know beforehand just where the first strike will be. The President further assured news reporters that the catastrophies would be conducted on a safe basis and by all means would be in the interest of the common good.

Reliable sources have reported that the President is resting well at his Texas ranch and that after much deliberation Panic Plan 1-9-8-4 has been discontinued due to the dropping of the first nuclear bomb on Washington. Criticism arose when it was found that more Senators from the South were murdered than from the North. This, a Washington official said, was both discriminatory and contrary to the interests of the common good.

New Super Jetliner Will Carry Hundreds; Care Must Be Taken To Prevent Disaster

Will the C5A jetliner, planned to carry 800 people, become the "Titanic" of the air? In my opinion, the plane should be built, but only with this in mind:

The recent series of Boeing 727 crashes, the 707 disaster in Japan and the killing of the astronauts all but indicated that air travel has yet to become completely safe.

Within less than a month, more than 320 people died—not including the victims of the crash of a Russian airliner.

This is far less than the total killed in automobile accidents, yet these statistics emphasize the lesson of such films as "The High and the Mighty": that no plane can be completely safe, however many hours have gone into its design, however many dollars have been spent to develop it.

And now—added to the already present danger—comes the possibility that some 800 persons could perish should the gigantic C5A lose a wing or collide with another craft.

Particularly significant is the fact that all astronauts killed in the air so far have perished not as they perilously orbited the earth, but while they used the comparatively pedestrian mode of jet travel.

No airline will be able to fly the C5A in good conscience with appreciating what a series of crashes similar to the 727's could mean: the slaughter of enough people to fill a town of several thousand.

Twenty or 30 crashes would mean, in fact, that the number of corpses would approximate Chapel Hill's population. And 20 or 30 crashes, as indicated by earlier experiences, is quite possible within five years if the C5A is used as widely as the 707 or the 727.

Especially disturbing is the tendency of airline crashes to kill off entire groups of persons at one time—groups, say, on company tours, and members of families. A husband or wife can flee from a train or automobile tragedy, without leaving the children orphaned while his mate dies, but this does not happen nearly as often in air crashes, which frequently kill all persons aboard. In the recent 707 crash in Japan were 75 persons on a tour sponsored by one company alone. All of the company's top dealers in the United States were on the plane, said a spokesman for the Thermo King Corp., of Minneapolis.

In terms of victims per miles, air travel will always be safer than other forms of transportation, but, just the same, the thought of 800 persons perishing simultaneously should never be ignored.

Hopefully, the federal government, will remember this in developing the C5A.

Jamerson Set To Succeed Cornwell

He Likes To See Student Grow

By WES LEFLER
UNC News Bureau

The man who will take over the state's largest physical education program in July says his greatest satisfaction comes from seeing his students mature, change directions and find themselves.

Dr. Richard E. Jamerson looks down the list of thousands he has taught since he came to the University in 1938.

And he points to hundreds who have become successful doctors, lawyers, business executives and educators.

"It is these who give a teacher his thrills . . . to see these immature college students rise to the top in their fields . . . and to hope that you have played some small part in this development," Jamerson says.

Prof. Jamerson will become chairman of the UNC department of physical education on July 1. He succeeds Dr. O. K. Cornwell who has held the post since 1935.

When Jamerson takes over the top post he will be responsible for some 4,000 undergraduates, 200 juniors and seniors and 22 graduate majors in physical education. Many of these students are included in the University's 7,200 students in the intramural program.

BEGAN IN HOUSTON

Jamerson began his caoching career at Hogg Junior High School in Houston, Texas, before he became football, swimming and baseball coach at Oberline College in Ohio. Earlier he had received the B. S. degree from Rice University where he had lettered in football and track and where he received the Bob Quinn Award in 1931 for excellence in scholarship, athletics and campus leadership.

He earned the M.A. and Ed. D. degrees from Columbia University.

His varsity swimming teams swept 12 Southern Conference championships. He coached 107 winning teams and only 12 losers. His freshman swimming teams took 43 wins to 9 losses.

And among the stars he has coached have been some 30 all American swimmers, one member of the famous Pan - American team and a world - champion backstroke record holder.

Jamerson has been one of the University's most active faculty members with a reputation as an author, student counselor, professional leader, school board member, community organizer, youth leader, professor and coach. One of the top advisory posts Jamerson has held was on the President's Fitness Council.

HONORED COACH

And the UNC coach has had his share of honors. He was honored by the Southern District of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation in 1962 "for his many outstanding contributions to the field of physical education." In the same year he won the College Swimming Coaches Association 25-year award. Four years earlier he won the Pop Warner Distinguished Achievement Award for service to youth in North Carolina.

For ten years Jamerson was secretary to the National College, Men's Physical Education Association and in 1962 he served as Association president. He was also president of the N. C. Association of Health, Physical Education in 1961-62. Ten years earlier he was president of the College Swimming Coaches Association. He served on the NCAA swimming rules committee from 1948 to 1954.

He is co - author of "Interscholastic Athletics," McGraw Hill, 1953, and is author of a number of physical education articles in professional journals.

On the community level he has been director and coach of the Little League Baseball program, 1954-58; chairman of the Chapel Hill Recreation Commission, 1953; on the Chapel Hill School Board, 1953-58; chairman of the Chapel Hill Red Cross Water Safety program, 1938-61; president of the Chapel Hill Kiwanis Club, 1955; chairman of the Chapel Hill Community Ahtletic Council, 1965 and a member of the Chamber of Commerce.

A former member of the General College Administrative Board and Administrative Board for the School of Education, Jamerson is now member of the Faculty Council, Registration Committee, and Building and Grounds Committee.

Lecturer Wants Guaranteed Income

By JUDY BOLCH
UNC News Bureau

If everyone were entitled to a guaranteed income without putting in a single day on a job, then we would all be free to "work" instead of "toil."

This suggestion was made Saturday by a well - known New York socio - economist speaking to business and professional women meeting at the University for the annual "Spotlight on Women."

Robert Theobald, who is also a lecturer and author, looked at the conference theme "the place of automation in a changing society" and said that our present institutional structures "are designed to increase our power rather than to control it."

He said that unless we change goals, develop new institutions and change the perceptions of people in power, "We necessarily will drift into a nightmare world reminiscent of '1984' and 'Brave New World'."

The guaranteed income is one way Theobald listed to prevent this technological horror. He admitted that unless we accept a basic responsibility on the part of most men, unless we believe "that most men are not fundamentally lazy and that most people wish to do smoething worthwhile with their lives," his ideas would seem "ridiculous."

In addition to the guaranteed income, he proposed an income maintenance scheme designed to take care of the many middle - income people who will sooner or later lose their jobs to the computer.

With these taking the pressure of earning a living away, he predicted, the individual would "be able to do what he considered important rather than what somebody else considered important."

Such guarantees "do not mean the abolition of work, those things which people find useful, important and challenging in themselves," Theobald said, but only the "abolition of toil."

Thus freed, people could concentrate on politics — not in its narrow sense "But in a broader sense — the Greek idea of the development of a good community."

They could also "work at human relationships, human concern and the human care of human beings."

Self - development, both physical and mental, would be another area to which man would have the time and energy to devote himself.

Theobald earlier in his speech said revolutionary changes will come because "Man will achieve the power he has sought for so long — the power to control his environment."

He saw that power as coming from our unlimited energy souces, brain power and computers.

The implications of this power, he said, are a drive toward unlimited destructive power and unlimited productive power. The first of these he felt meant "War is not only possible, but inevitable." The second, massive production based on macines, will result in an abundance of unemployment for the unskilled who thus will not be able to share in the productiveness.

A mammoth information drive ending in such a mountain of material that no one can understand it all, therefore separating the people who understand only their parts of it from others was also predicted.

Communist China Reassures People

TOKYO (AP) — Communist China, in what might be anticipation of some major setback soon, urged its people yesterday not to become panic-stricken if "twists and turns" appear on the revolutionary road.

The unexplained hint of some unfavorable change in the balance of world forces, coupled with an admission that revolutionary leaders themselves may make a mistake, appeared in the official Peking People's Daily.

Five days ago, the same organ — which speaks for the Ruling Communist party — carried a similar editorial, saying "victory in struggle is frequently intermingled with reverse and advances in movements with retreat." It spoke of possible "upheavals" ahead.

The latest editorial, distributed by the New China News Agency and monitored in Tokyo, did not pinpoint any of the areas of possible reversal. Its writers may have had in mind the recent coup d'etat in Ghana, the Vietnamese conflict and the coming Congress of the Soviet Communist party.

The paper discribed revolution as "constant struggle of the new - born forces with the decadent forces, and added:

"Sometimes the balance of the forces in this struggle is, for the time being, unfavorable to revolution, sometimes the leadship of the revolution itself may make a mistake of one kind or another — all this may cause twists and turns in the course of revolutionary progress."

Saying that twists and turns "should cause no surprise" & that the direction of revolution itself cannot be changed by them, the paper insisted the trend of the internatonal situation still shows "the east wind prevails over the west wind."

Stock Market Lowest Since Kennedy's Death

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market reeled yesterday under its worst loss since the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials plunged 14.58 points to 917.76, steepest fall since Nov. 22, 1963, when it dropped 21.16.

The Associated Press 60 - stock average sank 5.0 to 344.3, its sharpest loss since the assassination.

It was a continuation of a slump that began after the Dow Jones industrial average attained an all - time peak of 995.15 on Feb. 9.

Brokers have cited investors' worry over Viet Nam, tight money and the possibilities of higher taxes and price controls as underlying factors for the extended selloff.

There were no new developments yesterday to explain the extent of the decline.

Blue chips and glamor stocks which had been in the vanguard of the climb to a new high early last month were badly battered.

Biggest losses included Fairchild Camera $11.50 a share to $165.25, Zenith $12.62 to $131.12 and Boeing $8.25 to $149.

Among losses by key issues were General Motors $2.25 to $5.87, Douglas Aircraft $3.12 to $95.37, Anaconda $3.75 to $84, DuPont $4.12 to $261.87, Polaroid $6.25 to $122.50, Xerox 15.75 to $218.25, New York Central $3 to $78.50, and United Air Lines $3.75 to $114.

Chapel Hill Residents Killed

PITTSBORO (AP)—Two school teachers were killed in a traffic accident on U. S. 15-501 about three miles north of Pittsboro.

The victims were Col. ret. Jacob L. Ward and Mrs. Eleanor H. Roberts, both residents of Chapel Hill and teachers at the Chatham Central High School in Bear Creek.

Authorities said two other persons were injured in the crash. They were not identified immediately.

The teachers were in a small foreign car which, officers said, apparently went out of control when a tire blew out. The vehicle spun across the road and into the path on another auto.

The driver of the second car, identified as Ronald Haugle of near Moncure, was taken to a Pittsboro clinic. His condition also was reported as serious, officers said.

Charlotte Man Pleads Guilty

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Mack Paul Baugh, 35, of Charlotte, pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of armed robbery and Superior Court Judge W. K. McLean sentenced him to 28 to 30 years at hard labor.

Another armed robbery charge against Baugh, in which Donald Chester Heidelberger, 37, of Westminister, Pa., was robbed of $14, was not prosecuted. Detectives R. E. Phillips and W. B. Austin said Baugh forced Heidelberger out of his motel room at gunpoint, forced him to drive about for an hour, took the money and let him out.

The detectives said Sanders, driving from a parking lot, acceded to Baugh's request for a ride. As they arrived in midtown, Detective Phillips said, Baugh pulled a gun, took the money and forced Sanders to drive about for an hour before releasing him.

Five Children Die In Fire

FAYETTEVILLE (AP)—Fires spread by an exploding oil can caused the deaths Sunday night of five children of one family and the injury of two others and their parents.

Earl Harris, an off-duty deputy sheriff who hurried to the frame dwelling three miles southwest of Fayetteville, said Walter Lilly, 46, reportedly tossed kerosene from a 5-gallon can into a stove and that contents of the can exploded. Flames were thrown about the room and in seconds the entire house was ablaze.

The Rev. Martin Wright, a neighbor, identified the dead as: Alvin Wayne, 3 months; Larry, 6; Jean Ann, 2; Shirley Ann, 3; and Charles, 12;, who died early Monday in North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. The bodies of the other four were found in the ashes.

The father, also in the hospital at Chapel Hill, was reported in critical condition with burns over 80 per cent of his body.

Public School Segregation Hit By Federal Government

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government announced tighter desegregation rules yesterday for public school systems, mostly in the south, which have operated separate schools for negroes and whites.

The new rules are aimed at eliminating these dual systems by the fall of 1967.

At the same time Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N. Y. announced a House subcommittee will go into at least nine big northern cities to probe neighborhood de facto school segregation.

Cities on the list are Washington, New York, Los Angeles, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis and San Francisco.

Powell said neigbhrohood school segreation in the north has left Negro children with a "hand - me - down school system . . . long on rats, leaks, and outdated textbooks."

Powell, Chariman of the House Education and Labor Committee, has introduced legislation he said will cure de facto segregation, which he termed worse than southern practices. It set a deadline of June 30, 1970, for the final stage of compliance. Non-complying school districts would be cut off from all federal funds.

In another move to enforce the Civil Rights Act, the Public Health Service announced new compliance procedures for hospitals and health facilities.

Surgeon General William H. Stewart said hospitals that are not in compliance with the anti - discrimination provisions will not be allowed to participate in the Medicare program.

Witness Says Airliner's Wings Torn By Twisters

TOKYO (AP) — A witness told investigators yesterday two tiwsters appeared to rip the wings from a British airlines before it crashed on the lower slopes of Mt. Fuji, killing all 124 persons aboard.

Yoshiharu Tachibara, 40, a control officers at the Fuji Motorcycle Speedway, said he was watching the famous cone - shaped mountain Saturday through binoculars and saw five columns of twisters.

He said the British Overseas Airways Corp. Boeing 707 seemed to fly between two of the twisters and he saw its wings shear off. It plunged, trailing smoke and many fragments. He reported he had often seen small whirlwinds around Fuji but never such violent ones.

Japanese and British investigators have speculated that violent air turbulance over Fuji caused the crash.

In London, Minister of Aviation Fred Mulley told the House of Commons a preliminary information suggested structural failure caused the accident.This could fit in with the turbulent air theory.

Supreme Court Approves 1965 Voting Rights Bill

Congress has the power under the 15th amendment to suspend literary tests and to order federal registrars into the deep south "to banish the blight of racial discrimination," Chief Rustice Earl Warren said for the high court.

"Hopefully," he said at the end of the historic ruling, "Millions of non - white Americans will now be able to participate for the first time on an equal basis in the government under which they live."

Warren's face was expressionless as he read the decision. When he was done, Justice Hugo L. Black, his eyes darting back and forth across the less than half - filled courtroom, announced that with regret he felt compelled to dissent in part.

A provision which Black said should have been declared invalid bars states covered by the act from adding voting amendments to their constitutions or passing new voting laws without review by federal authorities.

"Nothing like that was ever contemplated when the Constitution or the 15th amendment was adopted," Black said.

And, in his written opinion, the 80 - year - old justice added that this treats states as if they were "little more than conquered provinces."

Still, over his objection, the Court declared the provision valid. Otherwise, the de-Black voted with the other justices.

Thus, the Court upheld the voting law four short months after the tribunal set the stage for an early decision by granting South Carolina permission to file suit with it instead of waging its attack up the judicial ladder.

Five other southern states—Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia — supported South Carolina's argument that the law unconstitutionally and arbitrarily punishes them. They and North Carolina are its prime targets.

Twenty other states joined Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzen, in defending the law as a Constitutional exercise of Congress' power to enforce Americans' right to vote.

In Atlanta, Georgia's Atty. Gen. Arthur K. Bolton said only "the people of Georgia will go on obeying the law just as they have been."

Crime Rate Rises

WASHINGTON (AP)—Wrongdoing in the suburbs — with the accent on rape and robbery — paced a 5 per cent increase in the nation's reported crimes in 1965, the FBI said last night.

Violent crimes and property crimes in all categories throughout the nation showed increased over 1964, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said in reporting preliminary figures for last year.

While cities and rural areas were registering 4 per cent increases in all reported misdeads, crime in suburbia rose by 8 per cent — with 12 per cent more rape and 15 per cent more robbery.

Rape led the national crime rate increase with a 7 per cent gain. Murder increased by 6 per cent, robbery 5 per cent, aggravated assault 3 per cent, burglary 5 per cent, larceny 6 per cent, and auto theft 4 per cent.

The western states, showing a 12 per cent increase in murders, led the national increase with 9 per cent more crime. The south — with less rape, assault, auto theft and no change in burglary — increased by only 1 per cent. The crime rate in the northeast was up 7 per cent, the north-central states 3 per cent.

The west, with its 12 per cent increase in murders, also led other regions with its 10 per cent increases in larceny and burglary and tied with the northeast with an 11 per cent increase in robbery.

The north central states led the rape increase with 13 per cent, while the northeast had the highest increases in assault and auto theft, with 8 per cent each.

Rural areas reported the biggest increase in murder with 18 per cent, as against 6 per cent in the cities and 3 per cent in the suburbs.

Lindsay Does Soft Shoe

Granted, John V. Lindsay is still far from a pro in the straw hat - and - cane, soft shoe department, but he's got time and youth going for him. And as mayor of New York, an almost endless supply of comic material.

No one might ever have known of our handsome mayor's talents for the footlights if he hadn't decided to do something different at the annual political spoof show of the Inner Circle, an organization of New York political writers.

The producers of "New Faces of '66, or, one from column 'A', two from column 'B', "(Lindsay's two running mates lost to Democrats) had a great time ribbbing the young Lindsay administration Saturday night. They expected the usual mildly funny speech from their target at the end of the show.

But they didn't know that the Broadway writing team of Sheldon Harnick and Jerry Bock ("Fiorello" and "Fiddler on the Roof"), and Broadway star Florence Henderson

JOHN V. LINDSAY

("Fanny") had been conspiring with the Mayor to make this Inner Circle show memorable.

So imagine their surprise when they called on the Mayor and out of the wings came Miss Henderson, and her whitegloved, straw - hatted dancing partner was none other than John V. Lindsay.

"Mister Mayor," sang Miss Henderson, posing as a lady reporter, "I understand you like the theater. . . . Do you prefer musical comedies or straight plays?"

"Civilian review," replied the mayor, mentioning a subject on which he and the city police force are slightly at odds.

"Mister Mayor," asked Miss Henderson, "Do you know how to shuffle off to Buffalo?"

"No, but I know how to stagger home from Albany." (That is where the money is.)

"Florence!" He said plaintively. "Are you sure LBJ started this way?"

Work Progresses In Repairing Home

By JUDY BOLCH

Sometimes the younger generation can't wait.

Sometimes tomorrow is too far away.

That same unexplainable, hard - headed idealism which sends them plunging into the Peace Corps makes them act today.

Such is happening to a group of students at the University here. They refused to put off "helping their neighbor," and so they went out and found a neighbor to help.

As a result of their efforts, that neighbor and her nine children will soon be moving into a split - level nine - room house, unencumbered by mortgage. They will leave behind them a three - room shack next door to the new house.

The story opened a few weeks back when the students —boys from Morrison Redence College and coeds from the Nursing Dormitory— learned of the family and their plight.

About a year ago a group of concerned citizens began to construct a house for them, but along the way the project bogged down. Until the UNC groups got into the act, there was no guarantee when the family would get to abandon the shanty, one corner of which stands shakily on a pile of jagged rocks.

Students began by cajoling merchants into donating things need to finish, decorate and furnish the house. They found someone to give them beds, paint, plaster, sheetrock. They talked people out of tile, pipes, linens, curtains. They're still talking and still collecting, for they're determined that the house will be completed.

But they need all the help they can gt.

* *

A visit to the house, set far back on an almost impassible dirt road near the Carrboro city dump, finds pretty, soft - spoken coed Pat St. John of Concord, dressed in smudged bermudas and Carolina sweatshirt, using a paint brush for the first time in her life.

In different rooms of the house more students are painting, plastering. Outside a couple of boys lay pipe to the septic tank, not an easy job on the rocky, hilly terrain.

Several of the family's children wander about, now accustomed to the presence of strangers, but still a little shy. One of the little girls fondles a guinea pig, unmindful of its relation to the hoards of rats which radiate from the nearby dump.

As they work and tell about their project, the students' enthusiasm glows. Almost 50 of them have been taking turns on the 1-5 p.m. shift each afternoon and on Saturdays.

The older children and the mother also help with the house, when they're not in school or working.

Pat, one of the group leaders, said, "We try to fix things like the mother wants. It's more like we're all working together, than a matter of us working for her."

Now the mother is going to have a new house, a house which will have cheerfully painted walls, a washing machine, a large bathroom, warm weather-proofing — a modern house.

Ward Mailliard of Washington, D. C.; Gary Boggs of Seaford, Del.; Byron McCoy of New Bern, and John Ellis of Greensboro are others heading the project.

"We really appreciate them letting us do it. We get as much out of it as they do," Ward said.

Byron, who is governor of Morrison, said, "Most students live in such a tight society and never see anything else. This is a good education for all of us."

When this house is complete, with its aluminum siding neatly applied and its yard landscaped, it may look like any other. But somehow it seems that it will look different, because if personal attention is what makes a house a home, this one has a head start.

Average Drinker Downs 3.4 Gallons

NEW YORK (UPI)—If you are an average drinker, you may consume 17 bottles of liquor in 1966.

This 3.4 gallons amounts to 290 drinks a year or less than one cocktail a day.

Statistics compiled by the Licensed Beverage Industries shows you are consuming no more liquor than your father or grandfather did in 1934, the first year of Repeal. It was 3.4 gallons per drinker then, too.

In 1934, the adult propaultion totaled 77.6 million, of whom 17 million, or 22 per cent, were drinkers. In 1965, the estimated adult population was 116.5 million, of whom 83.3 million of 71.5 per cent were drinkers.

Dr. Harold A. Mulford of the University of Iowa, made a study which showed a sharp increase in the acceptance of social drinking since the end of World War II.

His report, published by the Rutgers Quarterly Journal of Alcoholic Studies, showed that in 1946, an estimated 65 per cent of the adult population of the U. S. drank occasionally. By 1958 the percentage had declined to 55.

In 1963, the number of occasional drinkers had risen to 72 per cent — representing 80 million adults. A projection of these these studies indicated that by 1965, the percentage of consumers had increased to 71.5 per cent or an estimated 83.3 million adult consumers.

By age, the study showed that the highest number of drinkers—78 per cent—were among people between 21 and 45. The percentages decline in the upper age brackets, betwen 46 and 55, where the percentage drops to 66 per cent, and over 55 to 59 per cent.

On the basis of this study, it is expected that the socially drinking adult population will increase to a total of about 100 million by 1975.

USSR's International Women's Day

This 'Weaker Sex' Not So Weak

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Soviet cartoon pictures a Russian father sitting on the floor of his disorderly apartment cradling a bawling baby in his arms. He was crying too, joining his child with a piercing "Ma-a-ma!"

The drawing appeared recently in Krokodil (Crocodile) a trimonthly Soviet satirical magazine and illustrated a common situation of Russian men who often find themselves left to tend the house and children while their wives work.

The Kremlin has become increasingly concerned in recent years by the double-burden carried by working mothers and the effects on their health and home-life.

However, a harsh economic reality has prevented any substantial reform—working women provide needed labor for the government and are a major wage-earner for their husbands.

In a society where women are a 54.4 per cent majority, Russian women hold an unusual place. Three-fourths of all physicians, two-thirds of all economists and nearly half of all factory workers in Russia are female. The world's first woman space explorer was a Russian. And, Soviet women have received about one-third of all government awards and medals, particularly that of "Hero of Socialist Labor."

Each year about now, the Kremlin newspaper and information agencies roll out with these and other facts to show show Communism has truly made women "equal" to men.

The occasion is International Women's Day, a sort of Soviet version of Mother's Day, celebrated each year on March 8, and including all women regardless of marital status.

Tass, the official news agency, points out that the Supreme Soviet, Russia's rubber stamp parliament, includes 390 women, more than "the number of women elected to the parliaments of all the capitalist countries of the world taken together."

All of this lends a more political than sentimental atmosphere to the Women's Day observance.

But the "emancipation" of the Soviet woman has not been without its problems. While working in factories or on farms, the women are still expected to raise families, find time after working hours to shop for groceries, to cook, wash clothes and fulfill other obligations as a wife or mother.

All work and no play has bothered some Soviet commentators who have voiced concern in the past about the women's crowded work schedule.

"Housework occupies about seven hours and twenty minutes of her time, a second working day!" said Kommunist, the party's chief theoretical journal. "In truth, she has no time left to satisfy her spiritual needs."

The Kremlin has also become worried about the heavy burden of domestic duties borne by working wives and mothers and the lack of modern household conveniences to ease their burden.

A study of this problem by the Congressional Joint Economic Committee last year noted that the burden is increased by the relative scarcity not only of such household aids as vacuum cleaners and washing machines, but of such things as hot or even running water and of refrigeration that makes infrequent food shopping possible."

The high percentage of full-time working women, plus the demands of professional life, has discouraged women from having more than one or two children and contributed to a 21 per cent drop in the Soviet birth rate since 1950.

There are other problems too. Ill health among working mothers and in-adequate childcare facilities are two of the most frequent concerns mentioned in Russia.

The Kremlin also appears to have recognized the need to relieve the sheer physical tasks expeted of women who have been known to hold such jobs as stevedore, construction worker, coal miner, logger, porter, truck and tractor driver.

Some Soviet circles have expressed dismay that the Russian woman appears to be valued more as a wage-earner than an opinion-maker.

Draft Revisions Affect Studying?

By DICK JONES
Special to the DTH

How have new draft regulations for students affected grades and study habits?

Carolina gentlement say this:

Tracy Pratt, junior, English, Darien, Conn.—"It might subconsciously affect me. I worry but I don't know if I am doing anything about it."

Bill Albright, sophomore, Major Undecided, Mebane — "Since these rules came up I have studied night and day, not taking time to eat but two meals a day."

George Moose, Senior, History, Newton — Not really. I am a senior and I figure they are going to get me pretty soon anyway."

Faunts Is Still A Cheater

If you have read the sports page you will see that FAUNTLEROY claims he went seven for seven in picks during the ACC tournament.

THAT IS quite true. But he was still going to cheat to do it. And how can we know that Faunts' hasn't cheated in the past.

As for the seven-foot statue he proposes to be erected in his honor, we have this to say about that.

It would have to be at least that high to get his mouth in the right perspective. His mouth is big enough for both his feet and that is exactly where he always puts his feet, plus a few other things.

At any rate, FAUNTLEROY IS STILL A CHEATER.

Uh . . . Good Luck, Ev

We spent a good deal of time yesterday pining away about the hectic life of elections board chairmen here at Carolina.

The job must be murder, if you judge by the turnover.

Last September Alvin Tyndall was given the post by Paul Dickson. He resigned, however, on Feb. 11 to buckle down on his studies and a campus job.

Winborne had served on the board and was willing to handle the Feb. 22 constitutional amendment. (Which is now being contested.)

When Winborne resigned — the day after the election, Dickson came up with another appointee, Jerry Wagner. Wagner's appointment was turned down by the Student Legislature last Thursday. We don't know why.

So, at the recommendation of Tyndall and Winforne, Dickson ave the appointment to Everett Thompson Monday.

His appointment will come before the legislature tomorrow night.

Uh . . . good luck, Ev.

Election Group Revises Laws

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Student Government officials yesterday said revisions are being proposed in the current election laws.

Arthur Hayes, chairman of the special legislative services commission apointed by Student Body President Paul Dickson earlier this year, said the commission is reviewing the election laws and making revisions where they are needed.

He said the revisions will be introduced in the next assembly of the Student Legislature for final action.

Van McNair, chairman of the Constitutional Council, said the election laws definitely need some revisions.

"There are too many parts that are vague," he said. "Almost every election is protested for some reason."

The Feb. 22 referendum on the constitutional amendment was protested on grounds that some polling places were never opened and there was a lack of pre-election publicity.

Hayes said the present election laws are about five years old and have been amended several times. "After a while," he said, "the laws get disjointed."

He said the present laws only deal with one type of election—the general elections. "There are no provisions for referendums, recalls or other types of elections," he said.

"There are some legalities that are not spelled out in the present laws," Hayes noted. He said the person protesting an election has the burden of proof. Hayes said protesting merely on election error was not enough for a valid protest —the protestor must prove the election outcome would have been different if there was no error in the election process.

"No election anywhere is perfect," Hayes said. "So a protest merely on the basis of a procedural error would not be sufficient. If it were, then every election would be protested."

"It's ridiculous to think the recent referendum would have come out any differently if the errors had not occurred," Hayes said. "The protest is being based on a technicality."

He said a part of the protest was aparently filed because there was not any controversy before the referendum. "This was not unusual," he said. "Very few constitutional amendments in the past have raised any controversy."

The Constitutional Council will have an open meeting at 3 p.m. Thursday in Peabody to rule on the protest.

Planning Wives To Meet Today

Aptheker Speaks At Noon; Will Try On-Campus Talk

NBC Television To Record Meeting At Moore's Wall

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

Communist Herbert Aptheker will confront the speaker ban law today at noon when he attempts to cross "Dan Moore's wall of repression" in front of the Post Office and come on campus to speak.

Student Body President Paul Dickson said yesterday he would bring Aptheker on campus and ask officals if the Communist theoretician can speak.

When Aptheker is told he can not speak he will step back across the wall and talk to students, who will be standing on campus just as they were when Frank Wilkinson spoke last week.

A national news team from NBC will be on hand to record the event for national television.

The Committee For Free Inquiry had planned to hold a "wait - in" tonight at a hall on campus where it wanted Aptheker to speak. It felt this would help a court case against the banning of speaker's here.

Dean of Student Affairs C. O. Cathey said last night that since Acting Chancellor J. arlyle Sitterson had denied the Communist campus speaking privileges, "we are not piddling around with Aptheker or the sponsoring groups by giving them a place to sit around when no one is going to speak there.

"The University is not going to get involved in that kind of ridiculous situation," Cathey said.

Under present plans Aptheker will speak tonight at 7:30 or 8 either in the Community Church, Town Hall, or the Episcopal church, if it grants CFI permission to use its facilities.

TIME TO BE ANNOUNCED

The meeting place and time will be announced at the noon meeting today.

The University Presbyterian Church, University Baptist Church and the University Methodist Church all said no to requests to use their facilities.

A seminar will be led by political science instructors Thursday to discuss Aptheker's talk.

Referring to the NBC news team that will be here tomorrow, Dickson said, "I think this is unfortunate in some ways. It will give the University a black - eye.

"But it shows the importance attached to the right of an American to free speech," Dickson said.

FUND DRIVE

Dickson said that the CFI steering committee was still in the process or organizing a fund drive to pay for the court case. He has said that $1,500 or $2,000 is needed right away.

"We are planning to open an account in the student activities fund where the money will be deposited. SDS, CFI and student government will work together on the drive.

Dickson said booths to collect the money will be set up in Y-court, Chase cafeteria and Lenoir Hall.

Dickson also said that some money will be needed to pay Aptheker's expenses.

If Duke, where Aptheker spoke yesterday, has taken care of the flight expenses, only $15 or $20 will be needed.

The sponsoring groups which invited Aptheker will probably pay the expenses. Students at today's rally may be asked to contribute.

Dickson said Aptheker has been asked to speak on the War in Viet Nam. He said he thought Aptheker would be open to questions after the talk.

Ives Visits Kemp, Goes Unrecognized

By ERNEST ROBL

"I'll never retire," the portly folksinger said as he rubbed one hand across his blond beard. "When you retire, you get old."

Burl Ives sat in a corner of Kemp's Record Store yesterday afternoon, his feet propped up on a counter, sipped tea, chewed on his pipe and talked about a variety of subjects.

Often he just looked out the window and watched the people go by.

What had brought him to Chapel Hill.

"I'm just visiting Kemp," he said as he packed the tobacco into his pipe with two fingers. Kemp Battle Nye, owner of the store, handed Ives a pack of matches.

Has he been in Chapel Hill often? "Every day" came the reply, punctuated with a chuckle.

Ives pulled the front of his jacket together, and explained that he is now living in Durham, where he is on a special rice diet. He emphasized he was not retired.

When Kemp brought Ives a copy of The Daily Tar Heel, Ives reached into his coat pocket for a pair of glasses. "Here, I'll hold it this way," he said turning the paper, so that the name of the paper was easily visible.

As Ives talked, Kemp waited on customers, most of whom gave the folksinger no more than a brief glance. Almost no one reco&nized Ives.

Continuing to puff out occasional clouds of smoke, while he chewed on the stem of his pipe, Ives looked through the paper.

A basketball photo caught his eyes, and Ives commented on the new Carmichael Auditorium. There the folksinger in him became apparent when he noted that its acoustics were somewhat unfavorable.

Ives, a frequent spectator at Carolina games, commented, "I guess you can't build an auditorium for basketball and get good acoustics at the same time."

After a thoughtful pause, Ives said that it took a place built for concerts to get good acoustics. With a wry grin, he mentioned a "real hall, like Carnegie Hall."

Ives knows, he's performed there.

As the reporter thanked Ives, he replied that he was happy to help out.

Then he leaned back and continued to watch the people go by.

Nicholson Invites Bulgarian Envoy

Another speaker who may come under the amended gag law has been invited to speak here later this month.

George Nicholson III, chairman of the Carolina Forum, yesterday announctd he will submit a request to Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson for a campus appearance of a member of the Bulgarian Legation in Washington.

Peter Vassilev, the Bulgarian minister, is scheduled to speak March 29 at 8 p.m. in Howell Hall.

Nicholson will request that Vassilev's appearance be in the form of a lecture on Bulgarian literature and its "esthetical values and achievements as seen through the theory of Social Realism (a Marxist concept)."

Vassilev stated in a letter to Nicholson he "would be delighted to address an open forum of the student body."

Biographical material about Vassilev has been mailed from Washington, according to Nicholson. It will be submitted along with the request for Vassilev's appearance as soon as it arrives, Nicholson said.

These plans have since been thwarted by changes in the speaker ban law and invitations by other groups, including Herbert Aptheker's invitation by Students for a Democratic Soceity.

Aptheker, a Communist, will appear here today. He will speak to students at noon from the Franklin Street sidewalk adjacent to McCorkle place.

His nighttime talk is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Community Church on Purefoy Road, about a mile from campus behind Victory Village.

Other possible locations for his evening appearance are the Chapel Hill Town Hall and the Episcopal church (Chapel of the Cross), next to Spencer Residence Hall.

Nicholson said yesterday the invitations extended to Frank Wilkinson, Aptheker and Vassilev had been made last fall, but were cancelled by the executive board of the University trustees last month.

However, other members of the Carolina Forum were not consulted in the invitations of these speakers.

The three speakers' re-invitations, as well as their original invitations, were by "executive decision," according to Nicholson.

AF Drill Team In Competition

UNC's 19-man Air Force ROTC drill team will head to Greenville this weekend with one goal in mind—to win the state drill competition for the third straight year and retire the trophy.

For the past two years the team has topped Air Force ROTC drill teams from East Carolina College, Duke, State and North Carolina A&T College. A victory this year will retire the rotating trophy.

Drill team commander Clyde Thompson says the team "has the personnel to take it (victory) again this year."

Competition will begin at 2 p.m. Saturday in the ECC gym.

At last year's meet, the team won in all areas of competition. They finished with 449 out of a possible 1,000 points, well in front of the ECC team who finished second with 412 points.

Grail Sells Class Rings

Orders will be taken 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. tomorrow and Friday in Y-Court. This will be the last chance to order rings which will arrive before school is out. Orders placed at this sale should arrived about May 15.

Candidates' Notice

All candidates who did not attend the compulsory meeting of candidates Monday night are required to contact temporary Elections Board Chairman Everett Thompson before 7 p.m. today in order to be eligible to run for office in the March 22 elections.

Thompson said the election laws stipulate that, to be reinstated, candidates must contact the elections board chairman within 48 hours after the meeting if they were unable to attend.

McNair Lecturer

Dr. Lawrence M. Gould, a world famous explorer who was second in command to the famous Admiral Byrd expedition to the Antarctic in 1929 will present the McNair lecture at UNC this year.

Dr. Gould, presently a professor of geology at the University of Arizona, will speak on "Science and the Culture of Our Times," 8 p.m. Monday in Hill Hall.

The McNair lectures, which have been held in Chapel Hill since 1908, were founded by Rev. John C. McNair, an 1849 graduate. Their purpose is to pinpointing topics which show the relation of science to theology.

Late Hours Granted

The Dean of Women's office has granted late permission for girls for Germans Saturday night, but not Friday night.

Hours for Saturday night have been extended until 2 a.m. Germans will hold a dance 8 p.m. until 1 a.m. Saturday in Planter's Warehouse in Durham.

Room Deposit Due

Carolina men wishing to reserve their old rooms for the coming Fall Semester or for summer session must pay a $10 deposit by March 15.

The deposit must be payed in the Cashier's office downstairs in Bynum Hall. The office closes 3:30 p.m.

Staffer Tells Of Life As DTH 'Girl Friday'

By CAROL GALLANT
DTH Staff Writer

There is nothing quite as depressing as a blank sheet of copy - paper leering at you from the typewriter cylinder.

As deadline approaches you could swear you hear a sadistic giggle coming from the ASDF letter end of the typewriter. The U merely smirks.

You assure yourself that any moment now you will stop imaining silly little things like a typewriter laughing. Any second now inspirtion will come; the Muses will walk sedately into The Daily Tar Heel office, riht past the AP wire machine, right through the stacks of old newspapers on your desk.

Inoring the ringing telephone along with you, they will perch atop the campus calendar events for next week, and those from last week you are just now running (Better late than never, I always say!) and begin singing to you.

Sure they will! Well, with my luck they'd have a hangover, would have a built-in prejudice against journalists and would sing off key.

Uh, oh, here they come. All I need is seven singing sisters auditiong on my desk. "Alright girls. Just leave your number. Don't call me, I'll call you.

I hear a gentle voice behind me with volume just a notch below that of a cheerleaders after a touchdown, "Deadline in 15 minutes!" Panic is setting in. Glancing around I notice the entire office is just a little old hub - bub of activity. What are they writing!!

I'll explain here that in order to glance around I must leave the confines of my desk and walk beyond the attractive blue partition that separates me from everyone else in the office.

I've never been able to fathom why I am thusly segregated. Just a coincidence I suppose. They really need that partition to . . . to uh . . . Well, anyway I feel sure they need it. It's really fun to raise my sweet feminine voice to high C in order to inform those beyond the blue wall of a phone call.

Wistfully I notice Pat our managing editor, is surrounded by people, Gene & the sports crew are having a conference, Ernie is well into tomorrow's editorial and the copy - editors have already worn their copy pencils down to nubs.

I move about the office unnoticed, which is somewhat difficulty consderng my knack for not seeing 6 foot hulks in front of me. Also my feet, magnetically drawn to any object, wrap themselves around table and chair legs (pure poetry in motion).

After listening in on one of the "friendly exchanges between our managing editor and someone slightly perturbed about the placement of a story, I retreat back of the blue wall to the roar of the AP machine.

People worry about what a Communist on campus will say. They should hear what editors say as deadline approaches!

Before I hit one grinning key on the machine, I'm embroiled in a dialogue I could now participate in while I sleep.

"Edit ear? How am I supposed to know what to put in the edit ear How am I supposed to know what an edit ear is ?! . . Yes, this is the DTH . . . I can assure you, sir, we did not intentionally leave out your Campus Calendar event. Yes, your organization is as good as anyone else's . . . Right, Saturday afternoon Order of the Old Tin Can. Run it three weeks.

"Otelia who? Have you had any writing experience? Someone at your table dropped peas on the floor in Lenoir. You'll have to talk to the editor about that.

"Yes, I'll bring something from downstairs. Seven cookies, two strawberry bars, one ham on rye, a carton of milk, 18 packs of cigarettes. That takes care of Freakley. What do the rest of you want?

Somehwere the sun is shining; somewhere it's "Piggly Wiggly Time," and somewhere in the DTH office is a secretary - staff writer who missed the deadline.

Guess I could have written about working at the Tar Heel, but who would believe it?

The Board Of Trustees Is Overdue For Change

The Commission to Study the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina met last week in Raleigh.

It wanted to hear suggestions about how the organization of the board could be changed to make it more effective and workable.

The response was dismal.

It prompted former Gov. Luther Hodges, chairman of the study commission, to say he was "shocked" that so little was siad.

We share his surprise, because if there ever was a board of trustees in need of overhaul, it is ours.

The UNC board has 102 members, including the governor and state superintendent of public instruction, with 100 of them elected by the General Assembly for eight-year terms.

A trustee can be re-elected any number of times, but terms are staggered so that 25 are elected every two years.

The University of Pennsylvania has the next largest board of trustees with 32 members — less than a third as large as ours!

Robert E. Phay of the Institute of Government staff has prepared a study of 22 universities, 19 of them members of the elite Association of American Universities. UNC is a member of the Association.

He found that only two other universities in this group, Minnesota and South Carolina, elect trustees by legislative vote.

What are the alternatives?

Phay lists six:

1) Appointment by the governor. 2) Election by popular vote. 3) Elections by state legislature. 4) Election by alumni. 5) Election by a special group. 6) Ex officio membership.

He found that the most common method of selection for board members is appointment by the governor. Fourteen of the 22 boards follow this policy in whole or in part.

Regardless of what other successfully functioning boards may do, one fact remains: UNC's board is too cumbersome and too vulnerable to political influence.

The first task is to reduce the size of the board to nine members. Many educators, including former Harvard President Charles Eliot and John Russell, agree that a board with five to nine members is best. Evidence of the fact that our board is far too large is that the 12-member executive committee performs most of the board's vital functions, because meetings of 100 people from across the state are extremely difficult to organize and are expensive.

The governor should be removed from his seat on the board. His role now, as chairman of the board, makes demands on the governor as an educator which he cannot reasonably be expected to fulfill.

He should, however, be allowed to appoint five of the nine members. This still runs the risk or injecting politics into the board, but many governors will go to considerable lengths to make such appointments especially non-political. At any rate, the risk is less than leaving the choice to back-scratching, vote-swapping legislators.

Two of the nine should be appointed by the chairman of the State Board of Higher Education.

Two should be elected by the Alumni Association.

Terms should be for four years. Re-election should be allowed, but no trustee should serve more than eight out of any 12 years.

If this University must be responsible to a board of trustees, it is the duty of the state to provide the kind of organization which will be most workable — for administrators and trustees.

In 1917 the size of the board was raised from 80 to 100 elected members.

Constitution Hurt Again

To the surprise of no one, the United States Supreme Court has upheld the validity of the 1965 Voting Rights Act; and constitutional government has suffered another blow. Rarely has a law been more patently in violation of the Constitution, but the Court, persisting in its habit of approving what it thinks is "right" and striking down what it considers "wrong," chose to see only what it wanted to see in the law.

Because of the Court's ruling, six states will not be able to employ literacy tests to determine if citizens attempting to register are qualified. New York can use a literacy test, but Louisiana cannot.

Since the Constitution expressly gives to the states the right to set voter qualifications, the Court has apparently decided that by abusing this right, the offending states have lost it. This is nonsense. The Constitution did not grant this power to the states on condition of good behavior, and it certainly did not give Congress the right to take it away.

There is no doubt that the Southern states have been guilty of using literacy tests as a device for keeping Negroes off the voting roles. This, of course, is wrong. Qualified Negroes have just as much right to vote as qualified whites. Non-qualified whites have no more right to vote than non-qualified Negroes.

The point is that each state, not Congress, has the power to determine what qualifications its voters must have. If one state decides to let illiterates vote, that is its business. If another wants to make literacy a requirement for voting, that is its business, too.

Literacy tests have come before the High Court before, with varying results. Whtere they have been shown to be discriminatory, either on the face or in the application, they have been thrown out. Where no discrimination has been found, however, the tests have been upheld. In 1959, the North Carolina literacy test was upheld by the Supreme Court. Now this test will no longer be valid, since North Carolina is one of the states prescribed by the Voting Rights Act.

If literacy tests are unfair, they should be voided. Each state's test, though, should be judged on its own merits. The Court has no right to tell a state it cannot use any literacy test at all. Low registration or low turnout is not proof that a literacy test is being used as a discriminatory weapon.

If discrimination is demonstrated, there are two paths of acton. If the law is designed so that discriminatory application is almost mandatory, it should be thrown out. In 1948, the Supreme Court ruled that the Boswell Amendment to the Alabama Constitution, which gave local officials great discretion in deciding who passed a literacy test, was declared unconstitutional on those grounds.

If the law is valid on its face, but is being applied in a discriminatory manner, Congress or the courts should act to provide fair administration.

Discrimination can be ended without discarding a valid qualification for voting and especially without wiping out a constitutional right of the states. When discrimination is proved — by some more universal test than one presidential election — Federal registrars should be sent into the guilty states to insure fair application of the literacy tests. If necessary, a complete registration could be ordered to remove whites who could not pass a fairly administered test.

Two things must be maintained: the right of Negroes to vote and the right of the states to set voter qualifications. Using Federal registrars to enforce state requirements is one way to resolve the apparent conflict.

An attack on this court decision is likely to be taken as a defense of the discrimination long practiced in the South. The two are not necessarily synonymous. Denying Negroes their rights is indefensible. The Constitution, however, does need defending. The Federal government has no more right to abuse it than do the states.

The Student Speaks

Segregated Dorms Add To Problems

By DAVID JONES

I have noted the editor's appeal for comments on the segregation of the sexes in the Carolina dormitories. Except for the past two years I have been at Carolina almost continuously since 1957, and I have often thought that the existing conditions were unwise.

During the past year and a half I have been at the University of Helsinki in Finland and returned to Chapel Hill only about one month ago. I must say that I certainly prefer the regulations and rules governing student behavior there to the ones that are in force here.

There are only three dormitories in Helsinki for a university of 11,000 students, so naturally the great majority of the students, both boys and girls, live in town and rent apartments. Any students, freshmen girls included, can live in apartments at their own choosing.

Of the three dormitories, one is for men, one for women, and one has men on the lower floors and women on the upper ones. All three are built together. There are no late hours and each resident has his or her own key to enter by at any hour after the doors are locked at 11 p.m.

There is complete freedom for the boy students and the girl students to visit each other in their rooms, except that such visitations are also supposed to cease at 11 p.m.

This makes for a much more natural and relaxed atmosphere. Some, who are personally unfamiliar with such a situation, will insist that it also makes for promiscuity. Perhaps it does, but it would be very difficult to show that in fact it does, or, that if it does, that whatever disadvantages this may bring in Helsinki or that a similar system might bring at Carolina could outweigh the disadvantages of the present system here.

Carolina already suffers a severe imbalance of its boy-girl ratio. This problem is compounded immensely by the housing and dining situation and by the lack of gathering places where students of both sexes can easily meet each other. There are practically no campus dances here that students can attend without a date. That means that one of the primary social functions of dances among young, unmarried people — getting them introduced to each other in large numbers and in a natural way — is almost unobserved.

As it stands, most students must meet the opposite sex in the unsatisfactory atmosphere of the classroom, in campus associations or clubs, which only a minority of the students are interested in anyway, or through the roundabout method of introductions through mutual friends, all of which limit rather severely the numbers of the opposite sex that dormitory residents are likely to meet.

Since the students at Carolina are housed separately by sexes, and sometimes at considerable physical distance from each other, the already existing problems, especially for young undergraduate boys and for nearly all non-sorority girls, are made very difficult and very frustrating.

I would guess that most girl students eat in the sororities or Spencer Hall or else form little bunches and eat together uptown. I think a minority eat in Lenoir, which is really the only sexually-mixed eating place on campus where the separation of the sexes could possibly be overcome. Of course, though the difficulties to be encountered in Lenoir in this regard are nothing to be scoffed at either.

When new dormitories are built, housing students of only one sex, with no visiting privileges in the students' rooms, with cafeterias that are sexually segregated in fact, if not by regulations, the problem begins to get out of hand. While certain elements of the administration and of the vocal populace of the state have been so concerned for years with keeping Carolina girls virgins by every possible method, male homosexuality at Carolina has been and is a rather large problem. I believe that this is largely due to the policies of the administration which encourage in effect the separation of the sexes.

As the situation has developed there are on campus presently many quite effeminate young men living their lives almost entirely separate from any real personal contact with girls. Many of these boys are young students and basically rather shy of girls in the first place.

There are few girls of their own age on campus, and I think that many of these boys for diverse reasons feel insecure about themselves, about their schoolwork, about their role in campus life, and last, but not least, about the opposite sex.

Insecure young men living together nearly all day long and virtually cut off from any real contact with girls and fairly constantly in the presence of effeminate fellow students are likely to be affected. As any human being, they are likely to adopt slowly the manners and habits and ways of thinking and acting of those they see around them.

Of course, no boy living under these conditions is compelled to be effeminate, and the overwhelming majority of them, of course, are not. But that is not the issue. The issue is the reality of being slowly conditioned to a particular environment and particular sets of habits, ideas, and frames of thought, at too early an age by undue pressures.

The possibility, and it is only a possibility, that a dozen more girls at Carolina may lose their virginity in any given year when there is mixed housing, mixed dining facilities and free and uninhibited entry to dances (if and when girls here would consent to attend dances without dates) does not seem to me to be a danger so great that the reality of the effeminate and sometimes homosexual complexion of a sizeable part of the campus should be ignored, or, worse, encouraged.

Of course, homosexuality and the fear of it, affects only a minority of the campus, although it appears to affect a proportionately larger minority of the younger and more susceptible male students. For the majority of Carolina students the fact still remains that without a student union, without any proper meeting or gathering place that has the respect of the campus as a whole and with the imbalance of the boy-girl ratio and the physical arrangement of living quarters that now exists, there is a strained, unnatural atmosphere about male-female relations here that, in itself, has too often almost prohibited a sensible, straight-forward discussion of these problems without the presence of the leer, the raised eyebrow, the crooked finger, or the naughty joke.

If nothing else indicated the size and seriousness of the problem, the lack of frankness and maturity in the discussions of the issues would itself be an indication of the widespread frustration that faces the students and their feelings of helplessness and possible fear of immaturity in dealing with the situation.

As a first step we need a student union. It might also be better to stop building these large boys' dormitories and start building girls' dormitories until the imbalance in the ratio of boys to girls in largely rectified. Third, we need more dances, and entry for unaccompanied boys and girls at these dances.

We also need a change in the attitude of the coeds so that they try a little harder to make themselves more visible and more accesible to larger numbers of male students, if and when the facilities for doing so exist. Fourth, the existing dormitories might be made coed or at least girls and boys dormitories might be intermixed in their physical locations.

Fournier Plays Tomorrow

By SUSAN ZARR

Pierre Fournier, one of the world's all - time great violoncellists, will appear in recital tomorrow night, at 8 in Memorial Hall under the auspices of the Chapel Hill Concert Series.

Fournier, considered by many to be the spiritual heir of Pablo Casals, is currently making his 11th tour of the United States. He will be accompanied by pianist Leon Pommers.

Persons not holding subscriptions to the local series may purchase tickets for $2 and $3 at Danziger's Old World Gift Shop or at the door of Memorial Hall tomorrow evening. Tickets for University students are $.50 and are on sale at Graham Memorial.

The program which Fournier has prepared for this recital is one calculated to give full rein to this artist's rare technical and interpretive powers.

He will begin with a transcription for 'cello and piano of Antonio Vivaldi's D Major Concerto and proceed t the sixth Suite for Unaccompanied 'Cello, also in D Major, of J. S. Bach.

Of the six suites, each of them with its own peculiar pitfalls for the performer, this one is certainly the most difficult, having been written for a five-stringed instrument of Bach's invention called the viola pomposa. The rendering of this piece on the four-stringed violoncello demands prolonged and hazardous journeys into the upper reaches of the instrument.

Other works programmed for Thursday's recital are Johannes Brahms' "Sonata No. 2 in F. Major," Op. 9, "Suite Italienne" of Igor Stravinsky and the incredible "Variations on One String" of Paganinni. Stravinsky constructed the "Suite Italienne' in 1933 from parts of his popular ballet score "Pulcinella."

Fournier, whose international reputation keeps him on the touring circuit nearly the year-round, was destined for a musical career from early childhood, through the particular form it would take was decided by a sudden stroke of fate.

Born into a family of musicians in Paris, he was already a prodigy pianist at the age of nine, when a severe attack of polio left him unable to manipulate the pedals of the instrument.

Fournier turned to the 'cello and only ten years later made a triumphant Paris debut as soloist with the Orchestra of the Concerts Colonne.

In the ensuing years Fournier has played repeated engagements with every major symphony orchestra in the world, and after each return appearance, critics and audiences speak in amazement of the perfections which this serious and modest musician seems always to have acquired since his last "perfect" performance.

Fournier and his wife, also a musician, make their home in Geneva. A son, now in his early 20's, is beginning a promising career as a concert pianist under the name of Jean Fonda, and father and son occasionally appear in recital together, when their busy itineraries coincide.

Kentucky Legion Seeks Gag Law

From the Kentucky Kernel

The Legion's legislative chairman, Louisville attorney Edward Seiller, announced that he hoped the bill would be introduced later this week.

The bill is aimed at outside groups and would require individuals or groups wanting to hold meetings other than "normal" college or university functions to have permission from the school's governing body or chief executive.

The bill would involve only tax - supported institutions—the University, Murray, Western, Eastern, Morehead, Kentucky State, and the various community colleges.

Jane Batchelder, Student Center program director, said the bill probably wouldn't effect the University to a great extent.

"Actually, I've never gotten involved with anyone or any groups because they first must reserve a room in the Student Center and that must come through the Student Center Director's Office," explained Miss Batchelder.

Miss Batchelder said any group allowed to use the Student Center must first be approved by the faculty.

"If the faculty has approved a group, then they are able to reserve a room for meetings or speakers as long as the meeting is open to the general public. This also includes any political group on campus."

SEVEN SORORITIES

Seven sororities are now operating on the University campus at Chapel Hill.

Music Fraternity Inducts Professor

Dr. Edgar Alden, of the UNC Department of Music, was initiated into the Carolina chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, national professional music fraternity as an Honorary Brother during ceremonies on Feb. 20.

Alden, a professor of Music, was recognized for his excellence as a performer and as an instructor.

A native of Greenville, Ohio, he received his B.Mus. degree in 1936 from Oberlin College in Ohio. After serving with the Army Signal Corps during World War II, Alden pursued graduate study at UNC and received his Ph.D. degree here in 1956.

Before assuming teaching duties at UNC, Dr. Alden was assistant instructor of violin and music at Meredith College. Now a full Professor, he teaches violin, gives courses in music theory to undergraduates, and in musicology to students on the graduate level.

Alden is first violinist with the North Carolina String Quartet and is a frequent solo performer with symphony orchestras throughout the Southeast. Dr. Alden is known for his ability to communicate his love and enthusiasm for the violin to his students. Alpha Rho of Phi Mu Alpha, the honoring group, through this recognition of Alden's musical excellence, hopes to encourage such excellence in the local musical community. The chapter itself was recently recognized for its activities when it received a Province Award as the best chapter of Phi Mu Alpha in the Southeast.

Alden is scheduled to perform in the fraternity-sponsored Festival of Contemporary Music to be held here March 24-30.

Manners In Lenoir, Lounge

By OTELIA CONNOR

I have been asked by some staff members at Lenoir to call attention to the disorderly habits of students in Lenoir Dining Hall. And, at the Information desk in Graham Memorial, about the carelessness of the students who use Graham Memorial lounge.

They scatter the different sections of the newspapers, and if anyone wants to read a paper, he has to look all over the lounge to get the whole paper. (I can vouch for that.)

They never leave a newspaper intact, and would never, in their widest dreams, put a paper, or magazine, back on the rack. Some students scratch up the table tops with their shoes. They won't bother to remove their shoes if they want to rest their feet.

I was asked what I thought about the spooning couples in the lounge. I said I might excuse some love - making in the lounge since there was no private place for couples to go, but that some of their displays amount to downright vulgarity. You have heard of nit - pickers? Well some couples might be called pimple - pickers. She picks on his face as if he was getting a beauty treatment in a barber - shop. He picks on her face, and they maul each other disgustingly.

In Lenoir, the complaint is about trays stacked on the chairs, tables, and even floors. They drop their silver and napkins on the floor for someone else to pick up. They block the aisles with their chairs and their feet, they stretch their legs on opposite chairs, and one day, I even saw a student with his shoes parked on his table, while he ate.

I told him "You don't put your shoes on the table," and I put them on a chair.

Students think that when they enter the University they must be free to do as they please. They don't want any restrictions on their conduct. But freedom carries with it responsibility.

Evidently, these students are not ready for the responsible freedom of a University. They need discipline. I hate to think it, but about the only place they will get discipline is in an army camp.

They will get discipline in the army, but it will be discipline without freedom of choice, or of self - discipline. But there doesn't seem to be any other answer.

MUSICAL GROUPS

Five groups are open to UNC students interested in developing and displaying their musical talents: the Marching Tar Heel Band, the Concert Band, the University Symphony Orchestra, the University Mixed Chorus and the Men's Glee Club.

Quotes from Former Students

IN DURHAM . . .

A reading speed of over 2,000 words per minute is enabling me finally to read the vast quantity of material I feel I should read. I am going to try these techniques on cases in Law School, and of course in all my other reading.
Alan W. Eckert.

Since I am studying to be a teacher my increased speed is not only a blessing, but a joy. I am grateful that I took the course.
Janice Smith.

Reading Dynamics has enabled me to read greater than 2,000 words per minute with better comprehension than before. This is particularly of importance to me because of the precious little spare time I have to read.
Jordan Gutterman, M.D.

IN RALEIGH . . .

Part of A Letter Home

"Everything is going just fine here. My courses are all pretty tough but all very interesting. I'm really going to enjoy this semester. You'll be glad to know that my reading has helped me tremendously! It really is a time saver. I've been getting to bed around 11:00 to 11:30 . . . and it certainly is not because I don't have any homework because I always have plenty of it. That reading, though, has just cut my study time. It really is great! That's one of the most useful presents I have ever received. Thanks a million for it! Lots of love to you all,
from a student at State.

I never really learned how to study in school; this course has given me more insight into the "art" of study than the 14 years of schooling I have taken. The guides to organizing your study are of value to all students. The development of Gist Sheets should be taught in all high schools.
Peter Savage

I now understand how to read, how to evaluate a book, what to look for and how to find what I want to in books. I had not learned any of this even after going through college. I can now preview a book for its importance or skim material for beneficial facts. I now appreciate books and the ability to read them.
Thomas Youngblood

IN CHAPEL HILL . .

● "The course has been extremely useful to me. I wish all of our graduate students could take the course." DR. DAN PRICE, Director, Institute for Research in Social Science, U.N.C.

Again I want to wholeheartedly endorse your course and method. I began at 400 wpm and finished — reading dynamically — at speeds as high as 3,000 wpm with no loss of comprehension.—Dick League, Law School, U.N.C.

As an acting intern on pediatrics, I had gained tremendous experience but had done practically none of the general reading required for orals. The night before the examination, I was on duty and essentially, the extent of my reading was from one to three and from five to seven in the morning. In that period of time I was able to read about five hundred pages with satisfactory comprehension. I did not panic or get overly anxious. I had the feeling of a worthwhile job done satisfactorily. Since I last saw you, I have taken my National Board Examinations in all the clinical fields of medicine.
Jerry Eller, Med. Student

HOW IS THIS POSSIBLE?

Eighteen years ago Evelyn Wood, a Utah schoolteacher, made a startling discovery that led to the founding of Reading Dynamics. While working toward a master's degree, she handed a term paper to a professor and watched him read the 89 pages at 6,000 words per minute—with outstanding recall and comprehension. Determined to find the secret behind such rapid reading, she spent the next two years tracking down 50 people who could read faster than 1,500 words per minute. She studied their techniques, taught herself to read at these faster rates. Now, after years of experience in public schools and universities, she has made it possible for you to benefit from this great discovery.

IS IT SIMPLY A PROMOTION STUNT?

Over the past eleven years more than 160,000 graduates have been convinced that Reading Dynamics is a proven method. About Reading Dynamics' impact on our nation's legislators, Time Magazine said "Washington has seen nothing like it since the days when Teddy Roosevelt read three books a day and ran the country at the same time."

SENATOR PROXMIRE, Wisconsin: "I must say that this is one of the most useful education experiences I have ever had. It certainly compares favorably with the experience I've had at Yale and Harvard."

SENATOR TALMADGE, Georgia: "It is my opinion that if these techniques were instituted in the public and private schools of our country, it would be the greatest single step which we could take in educational progress."

MICHAEL LEVY, Pres. Standard Security Life: "My normal relaxed reading is now at a rate approximately 4,000 words per minute. Even with the most difficult and technical reading material, I find that my speed exceeds 2,500 words per minute."

SENATOR STUART SYMINGTON, MISSOURI—"I can now read materials at speeds above 3,000 words per minute and technical material in the 2,000 word per minute range."

Conventional rapid reading courses aspire to 450-600 words per minute. Most Reading Dynamics graduates can read between 1,000 and 3,000 words per minute, and many go even higher.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

We guarantee to increase the reading efficiency of each student AT LEAST 3 times with good comprehension. We will refund the entire tuition to any student who, after completing minimum class and study requirements, does not at least triple his reading efficiency as measured by our beginning and ending tests.

- You will see a Reading Dynamics graduate read at amazing speeds from a book he has never seen before and then tell in detail what he has read.
- You will see a documented film that includes actual interviews with Washington Congressmen who have taken the course.
- You will learn how we can help you to faster reading, improved comprehension, greater recall.

FDA Halts Future Sale Of Lozenges

WASHINGTON (AP) —The government moved yesterday to halt the future sale of all non - prescription antibiotic lozenges — those cough drops sold to fight the pain and infestions of a sore throat.

The Food and Drug Administraion, in its most sweeping drug removal order ever, said it found that the lozenges —and some other antibiotic preparations also banned — are not effective, as their labels claim.

An FDA spokesman said the order applies to at least 250 products sold under some 500 trade names by more than 70 manufactureres. They bring an estimated $25 million in sales annually at retail counters.

For some products the order is effective immediately, and there is no appeal except through the courts. Manufactureres of the others have 30 days to raise any valid objectio and ask for a public hearing by the FDA.

However, since no question of danger is involved, an FDA spokesman said drugstores and manufacturers of the antibiotic lozenges and preparation may use up stocks on hand which already have FDA approval.

No list of the products affectwas avilable, but the spokesman said "Sucrets" is one of the market leaders. The FDA order said some of the lozenges and other antibiotic preparations found to lack substantial evidence of effectiveness have been in use for up to 15 years.

A spokesman for the American Medical Association in Chicago said the AMA would have no comment on the order until it has been studied.

The possiblity of crackdowns on other products was raised by FDA commissioners James L. Goddard. He said his agency is continuing to review the efficacy of several antibiotic ointments, deodorants, sprays and other preparations.

Unless substantial evidence is found for their effectiveness, Goddard said, they also will be ordered off the market.

The actions are being taken under 1962 Kefauver - Harris Drug Law amendments. They require that all antibiotic products for human use have FDA approval for both safety and efficacy and be subject to certification of each batch.

Indonesian Student Groups Continue Bitter Rioting

SINGAPORE (AP) — Anti-Communist Indonesian students swarmed through the foreign ministry in Jakarta yesterday, threw out chairs, desks and files and destroyed them in a bonfire, reports reaching Singapore said. Anti-Communist demontrators attacked the U. S. Embassy, smashed windows and burned three cars.

In the midst of the upsurge of violence, President Sukarno assailed the anti-Communist students. The Jakarta radio quoted him as saying in a speech:

"These wild students do not understand what they are doing. They are trying to overthrow me. I do not want to be overthrown. I will fight and crush any attempts to topple me."

From 200 to 300 students arrived at the embassy in trucks and immediately began to stone the embassy. Several windows were broken. Some students crawled over the embassy fence throwing rocks and Molotov cocktails. Three cars were burned and others had windows smashed.

Reliable sources, in constant touch with developments in Indonesia, said thousands of anti-Communist students from the outlawed pro-army KAMI organization and the high school organization KAPI staged the demonstration at the foreign ministry offices.

They gave this sequence of events:

The students pushed past armed forces guarding the foreign ministry and into the building. The troops did not offer much resistance because most of them sympathize with the anti-Communists.

The students dragged papers, furniture and files from the building and set them on fire outside the office block. They hung the KAMI banner on the flagpole of the building.

Seventh Grade Girl Will See Royal Wedding

NEW YORK (AP) — It will be impossible for some very important people to get seats in the little Old Westerkerk (West Church) in Amsterdam Thursday for the wedding of Princess Beatrix, but Pamela Sue Smith of Patchogue, Long Island, will be in one.

Pamela, who is 12 years old, is leaving on a four-day visit to the Netherlands just to go to the wedding. And she's been saved from a very embarrassing situation.

The situation arose some time ago when Pamela's seventh grade class had a project of writing to important people in foreign lands and Pamela chose Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

She wrote to the Queen, got a reply from a lady-in-waiting, and the correspondence continued. Pamela's classmates, reading the letters, somehow got the impression that Pamela had been personally invited to attend the princess' wedding.

Before Pamela could explain that it was just wishful thinking, the teacher had told the mayor, the mayor had telephoned Washington to see about a passport for Pamela, and she was in a mess.

Let's make a dream come true," he said.

And in no time Pamela had the official invitation from the Netherlands government, and all arrangements made for her trip.

Spy, Sentenced To Life, Released On Technicality

LEAVENWORTH, KAN. (AP) — George John Gessner, sentenced to life in prison for giving nuclear weapons secrets to Russia, walked out of the federal pentitiary a free man yesterday saying that in this country "a man tends to get justice in proportion to the thickness of his wallet."

The government dismissed charges against him because it lacks sufficient evidence — outside his confession — to try Gessner again. The conviction and sentence, handed down in Federal Court June 4, 1964, was nullified last year by the 10th U. S. Circuit Court of appeals on the ground that the confession was not voluntary.

Gessner, now 29, was an Army nuclear weapons specialist at Ft. Bliss, Tex., when he went absent without leave Dec. 6, 1960.

North Carolina News Roundup

Redistricting Will Hold For '66

GREENSBORO (AP) — A three-judge federal panel ruled yesterday that North Carolina can hold its congressional elections under a redistricting plan that has already been held invalid but allowed to stand for 1966.

The judges, interpreting a new Supreme Court "one man, one vote" decision as not affecting the North Carolina case, denied a motion for reconsideration of their decision that the plan can be used this year.

Wrenn Drum, a young Winston-Salem attorney, and residents of Durham, Raleigh, Chapel Hill and Smithfield areas had filed a petition for reconsideration of the redistricting plan adopted at a special General Assembly session in January. They based their petition on the Surpeme Court's recent decision in a Florida congressional redistricting case.

Klan Resurgence Predicted

RALEIGH (AP) — The chairman of a State committee watching the Ku Klux Klan predicted yesterday resurgence of KKK activity in North Carolina "just as soon as it warms up enough for them to get back in the cornfields."

Malcolm Seawell, chairman of the State Board of Elections and the' watchdog group, said the committee named earlier this year by Gov. Dan Moore is "keeping an eye on the Klan all across the state."

The committee was appointed to gather and correlate information on the KKK from different state agencies. Seawell is a former state attorney general.

There has already been one Klan rally this year. It was held Sunday in a field northeast of Greenville and a meeting of KKK leaders was reported later in Dunn.

Crescent Committee Appointed

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Dan Moore established yesterday an advisory committee to help with the "sound and orderly development" of North Carolina's vast Piedmont Crescent.

The governor made the announcement at a special news conference following a meeting with more than 100 Piedmont citizens who cared to serve on the committee.

The crescent extends westward from Raleigh through the Piedmont area down to the South Carolina line where it continues on into Spartanburg-Greenville area.

"The most pressing need is an overall plan for orderly development of the area," Gov. Moore said.

He said Miles J. Smith of Salisbury, former chairman of the State Board of Conservation and Development will serve as committee chairman.

U.S. Consulting Allies About Future Of NATO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is consulting with its partners in the Atlantic Alliance on French President Charles de Gaulle's plans to reshape NATO, the White House said yesterday.

Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers disclosed that President Johnson has "communicated with other members" of the Alliance the contents of the latest exchange on Monday between De Gaulle's letter within hours, an unusually dramatic indication of two things, authoritative sources commented:

The swift answer meant, on one hand, that the administration was not caught flatfooted by the French President's letter in which he in effect requested renegotiation of the bilateral agreement under which American forces are stationed in France.

It meant, on the other hand, that the United States did not want to create a false impression that it could go along with De Gaulle's philosophy on the future of the Alliance.

De Gaulle's letter to Johnson was received Monday afternoon in Paris. A reply was given in Washington the same evening.

Moyers declined to discuss the contents of the letters, saying the time is not appropriate. Robert J. McCloskey, the State Department's spokesman, told newsmen that Johnson's answer was a "preliminary reply, relatively brief."

The problems De Gaulle has raised "affect the alliance as a whole," McCloskey said — and this is the essence of Washington's position, other officials stressed.

The French President's letter, was what one source described as a rhetorical rewriting of what De Gaulle told his Feb. 21 news conference. It was a "Declaration of intent," as the source put it, to renounce the North Atlantic Treaty in April 1969 — the date the treaty first allows its members to withdraw from the alliance.

Johnson's reply is understood to have called the general's attention to the serious concern with which the United States views De Gaulle's intentions.

Umemployment Figure Is Lowest In Nine Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson reported yesterday the lowest unemployment rate in 13 years and ordered a closer watch for labor shortages that could force up wages and prices and crimp the nation's zooming economy.

"We are determined to do whatever is necessary to keep the economy expanding and avoid inflationary bottlenecks," Johnson said in a message to Congress on manpower policy.

The Labor Department said the number of jobless Americans dropped 100,000 in February to 3.15 million — or 3.7 per cent of the 74.7 million civilian labor force.

The jobless rate usually goes up in February.

The size of the drop in the unemployment rate from 4 per cent in January surprised even the statistical experts of the Bureau of Labor statistics who compute the figures. It was the first time in nearly nine years that the rate fell below 4 per cent.

Commissioner Arthur M. Ross of the Bureau credited the jobless drop and the 300,000 rise in employment to a total of 71.6 million to the continuing long - term boom in the economy.

Record high manufacturing employment of 18.4 million, exceeding the all out production at the height of World War II, led the employment upswing but there were also sizable gains in wholesale and retail trade, service industries and government jobs.

Harold Goldstein, assistant commissioner of the Bureau, said booming production of consumer goods was the main factor, although the manufacture of war goods for Viet Nan war responsible "to some extent."

Ross said the drop in unemployment was not due to increased drafting of young men for military service.

Fewer high school dropouts looking for jobs helped lower the jobless rate, he said.

The long worrisome teen-age jobless rate dropped from 12 to 11 per cent, the lowest since 1957.

Ross said he will soon follow through on Johnson's instructions to prvide the fullest possible information one existing or threatened labor shortages.

Although a number of spot labor shortages have been reported in certain industries in recent months, both Johnson and Ross said there was no over - all shortage of workers.

Record Number Of Planes Assault North Viet Nam

SAIGON (AP) — U. S. warplanes raked North Viet Nam with a record assault of several hundred sorties in the 24-hour period ended at dawn yesterday, an American spokesm announced. Four planes were lost in widespread raids.

Pilots said they blasted a surface - to - air missile site 80 miles south of Hanoi and set off mushrooming explosions and smoke clouds rising to 4,000 feet at the Son La oil storage area, 130 miles west of the Red capital.

Roads, railways, ferries and bridges, from the southern panhandle to the Red River northwest of Hanoi, were among other targets in 53 missions flown by U.S. Air Force and Navy pilots.

Air operations south of the border included a strike by U.S. B52's from Guam at what was described as a Viet Cong military headquarters 35 miles northeast of Saigon. The spokesman said three Communist regiments had been spotted in that sector of Binh Duong Province since Jan. 1. There was no immediate assessment of the results of the raid.

The ground was tapered off.

Operation Utah, in which U. S. Marines and South Vietnamese troops crushed a North Vietnamese regular regiment in a four - day fight northwest of Quang Ngai City, was terminated with the body count of enemy dead at 634.

The Marines counted 360 enemy killed and four captured; the South Vietnamese 274 killed and 20 captured. The allied forces estimated they actually slew 1,200 of the Red enemy and that the others were carried away along with Communist wounded.

Fauntleroy

Yes sir, I knew all along I was the greatest. You people might not have realized it before, but there is no way you can possibly deny it now — intelligence, good-looks, character, wit, and seven for seven in the ACC tournament.

Of course, I don't want to brag. There's really no reason to since the proof is in the print. You skeptics of Fauntleroy's infallibility eat your Crow Pie in silence. Have you read the outcome of the ACC Games?

As for Ed Freakley! The idea that Fauntleroy — THE Fauntleroy — would stoop to change a prediction in mid-game! Obviously, the "Master of Trivia" is jealous of my talent and is striving to undermine my phenomenal reputation around the world. Little chance does he have! You can't destroy truth; you can't deny perfection.

My breath is precious and my words of such value to you readers that I need say no more about Freakley. The Fauntleroys of this world (or rather the Fauntleroy) do not need to stoop to the level of Trivia.

Mrs. — er — Miss Fauntleroy

I have never cared much for the ostentatious show of worship my followers make over me, but I can no longer retain them. Even now plans are underway to erect a ten-foot solid gold statue in front of Carmichael Auditorium with the words "Seven for Seven" set in rubies and sapphires at the base.

Plans are also underway to erect a mud replica of Ed Freakley with a foot in his mouth behind the Tin Can.

Thank you, thank you, one and all, for your devotion. It is no less than I deserve, but thank you nonetheless.

I leave you singing, "Seven for seven, Faunt wins again, boom, boom, . . . Seven for seven, Faunt wins again." (Sung to the tune of "Seventy-seven Sunset Strip).

Lewis Falls Short Of Rosey's Title

When BOB Lewis, who rated third top honors on the Associated Press' All-America, scored only five points in North Carolina's 21-20 windup defeat at the hands of Duke, it marked the first time in 40 games over a two-year span that the Tar Heel junior failed to reach double figures.

"The Duke game should prove to the world that Lewis is strictly a team player," suggests Coach Dean Smith. "He knew a possession game was our best chance for survival in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. His own personal glory didn't enter the picture."

Lewis, as a result, wound up the season with a scoring average of 27.4 per game. A blazing finish against Duke could have given Bobby the all-time scoring record for Carolina, which is still held by Lennie Rosenbluth (1957) with an average of 27.9.

Had Lewis scored 21 points in the semi-finals contest, he would have emerged with an even 28 points per game. He took only six shots against the Blue Devils. In previous contests against the same team he scored 18 and 24 points.

"We believed we could play Duke best with our four-corners offense," said Lewis. "I had some opportunities for shots which I didn't take simply because the rebounding situation wasn't right. Naturally I would have been pleased with a scoring title. But the team comes first, and we almost made it."

Lewis had several other memories of the 1965-66 season. One was the converting of 39 consecutive free throws over a period of four games. Then there is the all-time single game scoring record of 49 points he racked up against Florida State.

Lewis, who led the All-ACC ballot in voting, has also been named to the Basketball Writer's of America "All-District" 3B" team. Last season, when he averaged 21 points per game, he was a second-string All-ACC choice.

What's next for Lewis? The Washington, D. C., youngster is looking forward to next season already. He is polishing his shots and his moves. He knows the top All-America team is seeking candidates.

UNC Tennis Coach Don Skakle—A Story Of Success For Seven Years

By GENE RECTOR
DTH Sports Editor

Tennis coach Don Skakle, fresh from a 21-0, ACC championship season last year, opens the 1966 campaign against Kalamazoo.

Skakle, beginning his eighth season as UNC tennis coach, has won th ACC championship six times in seven years. A 5-4 loss to Maryland in 1964 broke the string.

During those seven years, Skakle-coached clubs have won 117 matches and lost 15 — quite a record for a man who gets only limited financial aid from the athletic department. His worst record came in 1959 — 15 wins and six defeats.

"Sokol had that European discipline few Americans have," said Skakle. "Dedication was his secret—he practiced all the time."

Bruce Sylvia was another. Sylvia, who graduated in 1962, won the ACC championship one time.

"Sylvia has a good all - court game," said Skakle. 'He had that good twist on his serve and a big overhead shot."

O. H. Parrish, who led last season's undefeated team, is also on the list.

"Parrish was a thinking player," said Skakle. "He was a gifted player with a very smooth game."

Ben Geer Keys, who graduated in 1960, was a "plugger" according to Coach Skakle.

"You would think anybody could beat him just by watching him play," said Skakle. "But he just kept plugging along and somehow always came out on top.

"Stoneman was a big guy," said Skakle, "all 6-4, 200 pounds of him. Believe me, he could really put away the overhead shots. He lost to Sokol in the ACC finals his senior year."

There are many others — Geoff Black in 1959; Bitsy Harrison, who will re-join the team next season; Teddy Holmes, the "hustler"; and Charlie Shaffer, who probably had more ability than all of them.

But Coach Skakle refuses to rest on his outstanding record. This year's club should be even better than last year's unbeaten team. Only Parrish has graduated.

Returning will be seniors Kenny Oettinger and Andy Goddard; juniors Bronson Van Wyck, Nat West, Tom Chewning and Jim Wadsworth. Van Wyck and Oettinger are co-captains.

In addition, a host of talented sophomores return from an undefeated freshman team. Any of them could push the veterans: Gene Hamilton, Rich Holderness, Bob Davis, Billy Trott, Ray Pietersz, Smoky Swenson, Bob Stuhler, Pete Whalen and John Egbert.

Of course with each success story, there must be a secret. Coach Skakle has one.

"The trick is to satisfy the self-esteem of each boy and still have him be a team player," said Skakle. "We had that last year — everyone was satisfied. If you can get each boy feeling glad that the next guy is on his side — well, you have the problem solved."

Over the years, Tennis Coach Don Skakle has solved quite a number of problems. Another starts March 21. Then come 19 more before the ACC tournament.

But UNC tennis problems in the past have a way of working out. Look for the same this season.

Dick Jordan, one of Charlotte's top prep footballers in 1964, has signed a grant-in-aid with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Jordan, a 6-4, 225-pounder was the starting fullback last fall at Castle Heights Military Academy at Lebanon, Tenn. He will undergo a knee operation March 16. At Charlotte, he played at Harding High School.

"We're very happy to have a boy of Dick's ability with us," said UNC coach Jim Hickey. "He is a hard runner and is very talented."

Wake Forest College has added Bob Lord, head coach at MacAlester College in St. Paul, Minn., to its football staff. He will be asigned to the defensive line.

Coach Bill Tate said Tuesday that Lord will reach Wake Forest by the start of spring practice April 4. Then he will go back to MacAlester and wind up his affairs, and return to Winston-Salem for fulltime duty the end of May.

Tate said Joe Pepp, freshman coach last year, will be a member of the varsity staff this year, working with linebackers and defensive ends. Ken Karr, defensive line coach last year, will become an assistant professor in the Department of Physical Education and freshman football coach.

Beattie Feathers will be assigned to coach offensive ends.

David Spec Goldman of Dallas, Tex. and Lewie Lacey of Oklahoma City, Okla., cleared their next to last hurdle Tuesday in defense of their crown in the Pinehurst Country Clubs seniors 4-ball golf championship.

They defeated John J. Byrne of Cincinnati and H. E. Danby of Indianapolis, 4 and 3 on the strength of three birdies and a bogey. They were two under par for the 15 holes.

Rogah Beats Stacy On Balanced Effort

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

The Everett Rogah got an extremely balanced scoring attack as they whipped Stacy No. 3 in intramural basketball on Monday, 67-42. Tom Howard scord 18 points, Johnny Biddle 16, Andy Denny 15 and Tommy Dail 14 in the Rogah win. Neil McKinnon and Bucky Layton had 10 each for Stacy.

The Craige C Alkaceltics crushed the Maverick C Gunners, 63-34, behind Murphy's 26 points and Faison's 20 points. Saunders was the whole show for the Gunners, as he scored 21 of their 34 points.

Phi Delt Blue had to hold off a rally by the Beta Stilts in order to ease by them, 42-41. Tom Parrish had 11 points for the Phi Delts. Harry Ballard had 10 and Dick Van Leuvan 11 for the Betas. Phi Delt was up 17-11 at the half, but the Betas almost pulled it out with a 30 - point second half.

Lee Sherrill ripped the nets for 27 points as Sigma Chi downed the ZBT Zebes, 55-43. Teammate Quinn Koontz added 14 more points. For the Zebes, Bobby Kohn had 15, Richard Gitelson 11 and Eddie Natt 10.

The Morrison C Cavaliers beat the Morrison B Bucs, 51-38. Glenn Cuthrell had 15 Cavalier points while Rod Jurash had 13 and Bill Tate 10. Steve Thomas had 15 and Charles Cranford 12 for the Bucs.

Tom Haney scored 17 points as the Morrison F Falcons pummeled the Morrison G Gunners, 40-23.

DKE Red defeated SAE Blue II in a dull game, 29-15. Hanes led all scorers for DKE with 9 points. No one else had more than six. For the SAE's, Yarbrough managed 7 points to lead their spectacular attack.

Three players did all the scoring for the Phi Gam Whiteowls as they beat DU Blue II, 26-20. Bob Wright led all scorers with 14 points.

The Morrison I Inebriates defeated the Morrison D Ponies, 44-29.

In soccer action, the Town Old Timers drubbed Pi Lamb, 7-0. Lehosky and Subteling had two goals each for the Old Timers and Writer, Johnson and Polak added one each.

A goal by Rand gave St. A White a 1-0 win over Joyner. Rand's winning marker came in the third period.

Gauntlett Is All-Opponent

Tommy Gauntlett, Carolina's junior long - distance bomber, was named by the basketball players at West Virginia to a third unit position on their 1966 all-opponent team.

The press release from WVU declared that the Mountaineers opposed so many fine players that they felt obligated to pick three teams.

Gauntlett was named because of a career-high of 28 points which he fired in—almost all of them from the corners—against West Virginia when the two clubs met in Raleigh during the Christmas break.

The Mounties won, holding Bobby Lewis to 12 points, but barely scraped by 102-97, in the face of Gauntlett's gunnery.

Dick Snyder of Davidson, Bob Verga and Mike Lewis of Duke, Dave Bing of Syracuse and Sonny Dove of St. John's made up the first team. Eddie Biedenbach of N. C. State was on the second unit, while Jack Marin of Duke and Jay McMillen were accorded positions with Gauntlett on the third team.

Sumner Directs 'Mary Mary'

Mark Sumner, director of the Institute of Outdoor Drama at North Carolina, is the director of the Durham Theatre Guild's latest production, "Mary, Mary", which will open tomorrow night.

Curtain time is 8:15. The play will be produced at the Allied Arts Center, 810 W. Proctor St., Durham.

The comedy revolves around the efforts of a publisher, Bob McKellaway, to put his tax affairs in order. To do this he has to call in his ex-wife. Things liven up when the former wife and Bob's fiancee meet. On top of that Dirk Winston, a movie star, appears on the scene and falls in love with Mary, the ex-wife.

The tax lawyer, Oscar Nelson, provides acid-tongue guidance to all.

Nurses Listen To Lecturers

Four visiting lecturers will speak here next week to representatives of collegiate schools of nursing attending a short course at the UNC School of Nursing.

Lecturers for the five-day course will be Dr. Ida H. Simpson of Duke, Mrs. Peter Walker, former assistant dean of women at UNC here, Dr. James Little of the UNC Department of Education and Harry Smith, Presbyterian student chaplain at UNC.

The short course is entitled "Principles of Administrative Organization and Leadership in the Operation of Collegiate Schools of Nursing."

Coed After 'First' In Health

Abby Little's ungirlish interest in "some aspects of biology with some math and physics" had led her into a man's world of anti - coincidence counters, nuclear physics, activation analysis and radiation hazards.

She is the first member of her sex to become a student in a graduate program in radiological health here.

Abby's home base is the Department of Environmental Sciences and Engineering at the School of Public Health .

But her study requirements take her to the math department for calculus, to the physics department for nuclear atomic physics and to N. C. State University in Raleigh for a genetics - oriented course in the biological effects of radiation.

"It keeps me running around," she admits. "But I like it."

Students are allowed a great deal of leeway in the courses they take as along as they fit into thte general purpose of the program.

Abby, a native of Cornelia, Ga., has stepped out of her all - girl surroundings at Queen's College in Charlotte—where she earned a degree in biology — into her all-male surroundings here. She is one of nine students working on advanced degrees in the radiological health program.

In two years she hopes to earn a master of science degree, the first woman to earn such a degree here in radiological health.

"A lot of this program is about how radiation affects living things," Abby explains.

"My high school and college biology come in handy but I need other things to go along with it — like physics."

MIGHTY MAGNIFIER — The electronmicroscope, capable of magnifying objects up to 30,000 times actual size, is used by graduate students at the School of Public Health. Here Abby Little used the electron-beam instrument for a better scientific understanding of radiological health.

Many of her fellow students are physics majors, compelling her to "pick up a lot of math and physics to keep up."

She recites the objectives of her studies as if she's been asked about them frequntly.

"Thre're really two objectives," she says. "The first is to protect man and his environment from undue exposure to radiation. And the second is to promote the use of nuclear energy to benefit mankind."

Does the course require any research work?

"Yes, but I haven't started yet," Abby replies. "I'm doing some outside reading now trying to reach some conclusion as to what I'd like to do.

"I'll start my research this summer and work on it for a year."

All candidates for master's degrees are required to complete a technical report. Most of the two - year candidates base their reports on experimental investigations.

What does Abby plan to do once she completes her studies here?

"I haven't decided for sure," she says. "I'll have a summer course of practical field work in industry, hospitals and a nuclear center and this may help me decide."

Teaching has no great attraction for her now. Her interest is forcused on public health research but she's aware that industry is showing an increasing interest in competently trained radiological health personnel.

Hospitals need these people to supervise the work of X-ray technicians and to consult on protection in radiological treatment programs.

The federal government, the military and universities also are in the market for radiation specialists.

Galaxies Shaped Like Corkscrews

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Something like a giant taffy-pull seems to be going on far out in space.

Photographs of 338 weird-shaped galaxies, just published at the California Institute of Technology, show these vast clusters of stars twisted into corkscrews and sometimes linked with bridges of gas.

Dr. Halton C. Arp, who assembled the new "Atlas of Peculiar Galaxies," said the photographs "point to the existence of either new forces or forces which previously have been little considered. The twisted, distorted shapes and curious linkages shown in the peculiar galaxies, for example, suggest that in some cases viscous-like forces are present.

Viscous means sticky and ropy, like tar—or taffy.

A photograph released by Caltech in announcing the new atlas shows two bright blobs of light, with a spiraling arm from the larger wrapped around the smaller.

Galazies normally are round or egg-shaped discs made up of stars and gas, sometimes with pinwheel arms. The galaxies in the Arp catalog differ in that they seem to have been twisted by unknown forces.

Some are so large that 186,000-mile-a-second beam of light would take hundreds of thousands of years to travel from one side to the other. Most are so distant the light we see left them 30 million to 300 million years ago, and all are too faint to be seen with the naked eye.

Your Mouth Red Inside? Brush Your Teeth Again

An aspirin - sized tablet that is chewed thoroughly and then swished around in the mouth has been labeled by a dentist at the UNC School of Dentistry as "one of the greatest recent advances in oral hygiene."

Dr. Don L. Allen, a specialist in gum diseases' mentioned the wafers to North Carolina pharmacists attending a Dental Therapeutics Seminar at UNC.

Dr. Allen said that people today spend more moeny on the mouth than any other physiological system of the human body.

He expressed the hope that people can be encouraged to spend more in the drugstore for dental prevention than in the dental office for dental repairs.

Good oral hygiene, he told the pharmacists, is the best way to prevent gum diseases.

"Removing or diminishing the number of microorganisms on the teeth and gums is what oral hygiene is all about," he said.

The major agents available for good care of the mouth are:

—The disclosing wafers to pinpoint poor brushing habits.

—A straight - handled, four-rowed, nylon bristled toothbrush (at least two) or an electric toothbrush, used properly.

—And unwaxed dental floss also used properly.

Dr. Aleln expressed no preference for a hand or electric toothbrush.

"There's nothing magic about automatic brushes," he said. "You can do a good or poor job with either a hand or electric toothbrush. Motivation is the important thing."

Ed Dep't Uses Practicum

"As the teacher teaches an exceptional child, she learns how to meet the needs of one who has unusual educational requirements," says Dr. H. W. Harshman, director of Special Educaion.

To provide this unique learning experience, graduate students in Special Education are required to spend two days a week for one semester on the job.

Ths practical application of thoretical learning is called a practicum in the School of Education.

Mrs. Rebecca Whicker, who formerly taught emotionally disturbed children at Butner and mentally retarded children in Chapel Hill, is serving her practicum at North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

With the nethusiasm of a teacher who loves her work she says, "I actually begged for this assignment because the work is so interesting and provide more of a challen&e than regular classroom teaching."

In order to acquire the widest range of experience that hospital teaching offers she is working with students from kindergarten to college age in three different branches of the hospital.

Mrs. Nathalie Harrison, the supervising hospital teacher, had the same practicum last year while completing her M. Ed. in Special Education.

Mrs. Harrison tries to assign the practicum students "long-term patients so they can see their progress."

Recently Mrs. Whicker has been working with three children who are attending an eight-week session of the cleft palate clinic.

"These children have severe speech problems and because of this often function on a retarded level," sayd Mrs. Whicker.

She has been working in the schoolroom on the pediatric floor of the hospital where any child admitted for more than two or three days is eligible for instruction.

She finds that "the children push themselves and each other harder while in the hospital. In addition, many of the doctors feel the patients profit from instruction in their recovery because they do not worry about gettinge behind in their school work."

She will finish the semester tutoring in the psychiatric ward. From her experience with emotionally distrubed children, she has found that "those who seek attention respond much better to individual instruction. The teacher-student relationship is very healthy for them."

Mrs. Whicker, the former Miss Rebecca Lowe of North Wilkesboro, is married to UNC medical student James H. Whicker also of North Wilkesboro, blending marriage and career, she believes "this is a model program and since I will always be near a hospital. I want to learn how it works."

Weekend Seminar Planned To Argue College Crisis

"The Continuing Crisis in University Education" will be the topic of a two-day seminar in Peabody Hall this weekend.

The Carolina Conservative Club and the Intercollegiate Society of Individualists will present a program by four faculty members from the Universities of Pennsylvania and Rhode Island, St. Mary's College, California, and Northwestern University.

Opeing session will be at 8 p.m. Friday March 11, when Dr. Eliseo Vivas, John Evans Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy at Northwestehrn, leads a seminar. Dr. Vivas is th author of "The Moral Life and the Ethical Life," "D. H. Lawrence: The Failure and Triumph of Art,"

It's Worth It, Wrote Dead GI

BURLINGTON, N. C. (AP) —A 20-year-ld artilleryman wrote his parents from Viet Nam, "It's up to every American to fight for the freedom we hold so dear."

Pfc. Hiram D. "Butch" Strickland of Rt. 2, Graham, who had prepared the letter in event of death, was killed Feb. 1 by a gunshot wound in the head by hostile fire.

The undated letter, written in ink was a pad of notebook paper. The parents said it was their son's writing.

"I'm writing this letter as my last one," the letter read. "You've probably already received word that I'm dead and that the government wishes to express its deep regreat. Believe me, I didn't want to die. but I know it was part of my job. I want my country to live for billions and billions of years to come."

Turning to his family, he added: "I fought for Sandy, Nell, Gale his sisters, Mom and Dad. But when the twins and Sandy's kids get old enough they'll probably have to fight, too. Tell them to go proudly and without fear, because it is worth keeping the land free."

and "Relativism: Its Paradoxes and Pitfalls"

Dr. Ronald McArthur, associate professor of philosophy at St. Mary's, will be featured at 9 a.m. seminar Saturday. He has been a leader in the creation of the Integrated Liberal Arts Curriculum and experimental Liberal Arts program at St. Mary's.

Saturday at 10:45 p.m. Dr. William O. Martin, chairman of the department of philosophy at the University of Rhode Island, will present a seminar paper and lead discussion. Dr. Martin is the author of "Metaphysics and Ideology" and "The Order and Integration of Knowledge."

Dr. Albert Hobbs will head the last seminar at 1:30 p.m. when the University of Pennsylvania professor of sociology presents his paper. Dr. Hobbs' books include "Claims of Sociology," "Social Problems and Scientism," "The Vision and the Constant Star."

Concluding the two-day meeting will be a panel discussion at 3:15 p.m. moderated by Peter L. DeLuca, ISI national field director.

Adjournment will follow at 4:30 p.m.

Stuff-It

Crowding into telephone booths are out. Stuff-a-Ford is in.

This contest will be held in conjunction with the Campus Chest Carnival on Friday, March 18.

The group on campus that can cram the most people into a standard size Ford will be eligible to compete in the Inter-college play off. The inter-collegiate champs will receive a $100 check from the Ford Motor Company.

The group that wins here will be given free tickets to the Roger Miller show which will be in Carmichael Auditorium Tuesday, March 29.

The current record stands at 38. The DTH staff would like to participate but we don't have enough people on the staff to break the record. We would like the female cheerleaders, since there is no cheering left to do, to help us out, or rather in.

One More Time

I'll bet you thought I forgot all about something that has been missing from the DTH for at least three weeks. Well TRIVIA returns.

Mathis Before Showtime: A Down To Earth Singer

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

The Johnny Mathis who walked onto the stage Tuesday night before an audience of 5,000 ringing with applause and began singing "On A Wonderful Day Like Today" was not the same Johnny Mathis I has just met back stage.

The one on stage was the old Johnny Mathis I had always known — the one on records and TV.

He sang during most of the two - hour concert and left the audience standing up begging for more when he finished with one of his all - time greats, "Tonight."

As I walked into his dressing room before the show, I saw Johnny standing on the far side of the room looking in a mirror while putting on his make-up.

The short, medium - brown skinned man turned wiping the reddish make - up from his hand onto his light blue dungrees, stuck out his hand and said, "I'm Johnny Mathis."

Besides his casual pants he wore only a pair of low - cut dirty - white sneakers. His, face was almost orange from the thick coating of make - up he continued to apply to his face and neck. He ran the comb straight back through the grease - caked hair, making it flip up in the back like bent wire.

If I had had to pick him out of a crowd judging by his promotions pictures, I would never have been able to do it.

I asked what he thought of Carolina and Chapel Hill.

"The campus looks lovely and has a nice atmosphere," he said. "It seems quaint and very early American. I especially like the relaxed feeling here."

As he continued talking about how much he enjoyed playing to college audiences, I was thinking, "Is this the same Johnny Mathis I had been listening to and seeing on TV for years?"

He seemed different — more down to earth. He was a man with feelings and emotions.

Ban Showdown: Students Shout 'Louder, Herbie!'

By RICK NICHOLS
DTH Night Editor

They came to see a showdown.

Frank Wilkinson's wall-scene last week had been a tea party. This was the real thing.

Before noon the low, stone wall near Graham Memorial had already disappeared under hundreds of students. Across the street Kemp was bellowing, "Come on over and buy some records."

Aptheker hadn't arrived yet.

The 11:50 bell sounded and students began streaming from classes. They poured across campus toward the wall. The hundreds swelled to several thousand.

It was a pep rally crowd. . . shouting, laughing . . . the same kind of crowd that whooped it up at the Gardner speech in Y court last year. But, it was a bigger crowd and a more watchful crowd.

They flowed over the wall onto the sidewalk and into Franklin St. They perched on the roofs of TV buses. Newsmen shoved for better positions.

Then an NBC camera - man came shuffling backwards. Following the lens were Paul Dickson and Herbert Aptheker. Policemen asked the crowd to move back.

Dickson and Aptheker didn't stop. They walked straight past the little, wooden platform selling "Free University in a Free Society" buttons and up the path toward Silent Sam.

The crowd broke and surged toward the statue. Two well - dressed, bearded students assisted Aptheker onto the concrete pedestal, which was the first time most of the mass got a look at him.

Dickson climbed up beside him and began to speak.

He had just introduced Aptheker amid a few roared boo's and polite applause when Campus Security Chief Arthur Beaumont stepped up and told Dickson that Aptheker would be arrested if he attempted to speak on campus.

Already the students were charging back toward the wall. Some, sitting in a cluster on the grass, had never left.

Dickson apologized for the ban prohibiting PA systems on the sidewalk and a student shouted, "The Tempo Room has one, why can't we?"

Aptheker strained to shout above the traffic. He hit the Birch Society and drew snickering. And he lashed out against the Speaker Ban —then they clapped. The beards, the frat men, the professors — they all clapped.

In a mintue he was finished.

The crowd took one more look and a moment later it was just another lunch - time in Chapel Hill.

Speech Attempted Under Silent Sam

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

Communist Herbert Aptheker came very close to breaking North Carolina's Speaker Ban Law before an estimated 3,000 students in McCorkle Place yesterday.

The noon rally began when Paul Dickson, president of the student body, escorted Aptheker to the base of "Silent Sam."

Dickson made a few opening remarks and was about to introduce the 50-year-old director of the American Institute of Marxist Studies in New York City when campus security officer Arthur J. Beaumont interrupted.

Beaumont told Aptheker that if he spoke, "I will be forced to arrest you."

He told Dickson that if he "continued on campus" he would take him before the Honor Council.

Aptheker told Beaumont he was not aware that he might be breaking any law. "I thought I was a citizen of the United States and had a right to speak," Aptheker said.

"You have the same right I do," Beaumont said. "The right to obey the law. And we uphold the law here in Chapel Hill," he said.

Fund Drive

Speaking in front of "Silent Sam" Dickson said he was beginning a fund drive to finance a prospective court case.

Someone in the crowd yelled at Dickson asking him if he was collecting the money for the Viet Cong.

Dickson said the people collecting the money would have letters signed by him.

Referring to the NBC news team that recorded the mass rally, Dickson said, "This is not going to serve the best interests of the University. But it is not our doing."

He said the responsibility lies with the legislature, the board of trustees and the administration.

"This law and these procedures have already done great damage. It is those who would have us believe they were serving the cause of and striking a blow for democracy who passed the law," Dickson said.

"Wall of Repression"

After retreating to a sidewalk which is separated from the campus by a 3-foot high wall and which has been termed "Dan Moore's wall of repression," Aptheker said, "I'm very sorry that my appearance at your University has turned into a spectacle or some kind of circus."

The grey - haired, bespectacled Aptheker spoke from the same spot where Frank Wilkinson, head of the Committee to Abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee, spoke just one week ago to about 1,200 students.

"The main thing here," Aptheker said, "is not only the violation of my rights, as a citizen of the United States, but more, the violation of your rights as citizens and as students who are seeking to learn and listen to whomever they might wish to listen to."

Aptheker told students he had spoken here before, and observed that "the University still stands."

Bill of Rights

"This is hardly a law. The supreme law dealing with this case and our country is the Bill of Rights.

I would suggest that it is the trustees and the chief of police who are violating the law at this time," Aptheker said.

Referring to the appearance of Robert Welch, founder of the John Birch Society and a graduate of UNC, Aptheker said, "What I might say might be as educational as Mr. Welch."

He said he would do anything possible to help a court case.

The Communist, who recently had his passport revoked by the State Department for his illegal trip to North Viet Nam, was in Y-Court yesterday morning and talked with several students.

Dickson said the next step in his fight against the speaker ban is to collect between $1,500 and $2,000 for the court case.

"I'm going to court as soon as my lawyers advise me to do so," Dickson said.

Ban Law Deciding Factor In Resignation Of Arndt

By ERNIE McCRARY
DTH Editor

A UNC faculty member has said he will definitely leave the University if any "controversial" speaker is banned between now and next January. Another has already resigned and he said the speaker ban controversy "made the final difference" in his decision not to stay.

Dr. Bruce K. Eckland, assistant professor in the Dept. of Sociology told the DTH he will leave if the administration turns away any speaker without proving he could serve no educational purpose by appearing on the campus.

He has notified Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson of his decision.

He said other faculty members, especially in his department and the Dept. of Political Science are considering leaving.

"These departments are among the nation's best in their fields, and they may be seriously damaged," Eckland said.

"When I say I'll resign if a 'controversial' speaker is banned, I mean a speaker of the nature of Aptheker and Wilkinson," Eckland said.

"I do not, however, think either of these two should be invited again, because I think any decision made about them will be political and will not serve as adequate grounds for a test of academic freedom," he said.

Eckland said Sitterson's recent banning of Herbert Aptheker and Frank Wilkinson did not fulfill his criterion for resignation.

"Sitterson was acting more on the trustee's decision than his own, and this case has not provided us with the clear evidence we need to show that other controversial speakers will be allowed here," he said.

"I encourage invitations to the controversial type of speakers who fall directly under the law as well a borderline cases, so the academic community can have some concrete evidence that things are going to be straightened out," Eckland said.

The 33 - year - old Illinois native has been in Chapel Hill a year and a half. He has three children.

"I came here because this is one of the best sociology departments in the country. I like the Chapel Hill community, and my wife and I certainly do not want to leave, but if I do go it will be solely on the speaker issue."

Eckland said he has received "six or seven" offers of jobs with higher pay and rank at other schools in recent months, but "I have been very quick to turn them down in the past."

A letter from Eckland, explaining his position, will be printed later in the DTH.

Dr. Walter W. Arndt, chairman of the Department of Linguistics, Slavic and Oriental Languages, will move to a similar position at Dartmouth next September.

"The speaker ban was not the whole thing," Arndt said, "but it made the final difference in my decision to leave. Another major factor was the educational advantages the change in public schooling will offer my three youngest children."

Arndt said the University here matched the financial offers he received from Dartmouth and other schools in an attempt to keep him.

He said he is in charge of finding a replacement for himself, and the leading candidate has already turned down the job because of the speaker ban controversy, even though the position here would have been a "substantial promotion" for him.

"He said he didn't want his children to grow up in a political atmosphere not conducive to a free academic life," Arndt said.

Arndt has been associated with the Unitersity 16 years and has been chairman of his department since last September.

Red Scholar Accepts Bid

One of two Communists scholars approved by the administration to speak here has notified the University he will come March 22.

Frederic N. Cleaveland, chairman of the Dept. of Political Science said Professor Vladimir Alexanrov notified him yesterday he would come.

Alexanrov is on the faculty of Moscow University and is in the United States on a cultural exchange program. He is based at the University of Indiana.

Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson approved Alexanrov's invitation and one to Dr. Hanus Papousek, a behavioral scientist from Czechoslovakia, several weeks ago.

Alexanrov was invited by Dept. of the Political Science and Hanus by the Dept. of Psychology.

Sitterson said both invitations are clearly in accord with the policy on visiting speakers adopted by the board of trustees.

Alexanrov, who teaches the history of the Communist Party in the Soviet Union, is in the U. S. studying American attitudes in writing concerning Lenin.

He will speak to two political science classes and to a faculty - student colloquium.

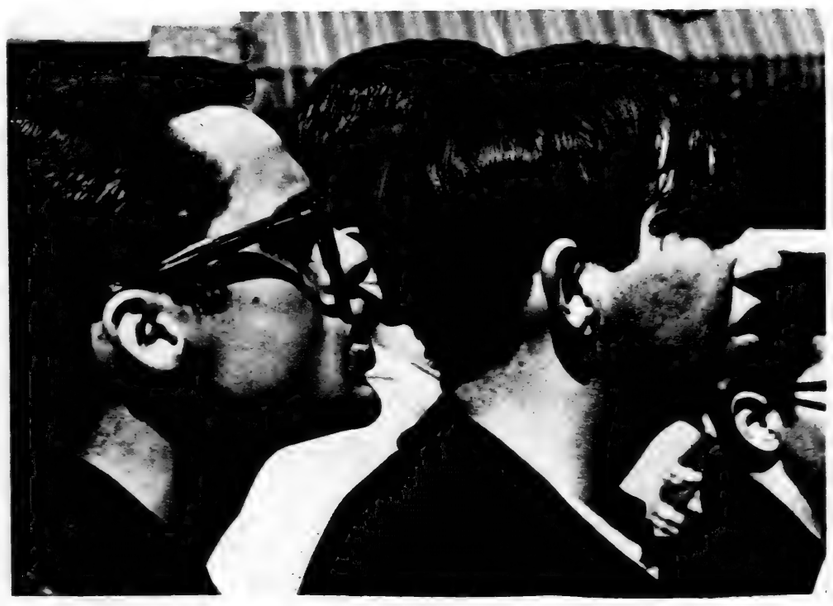
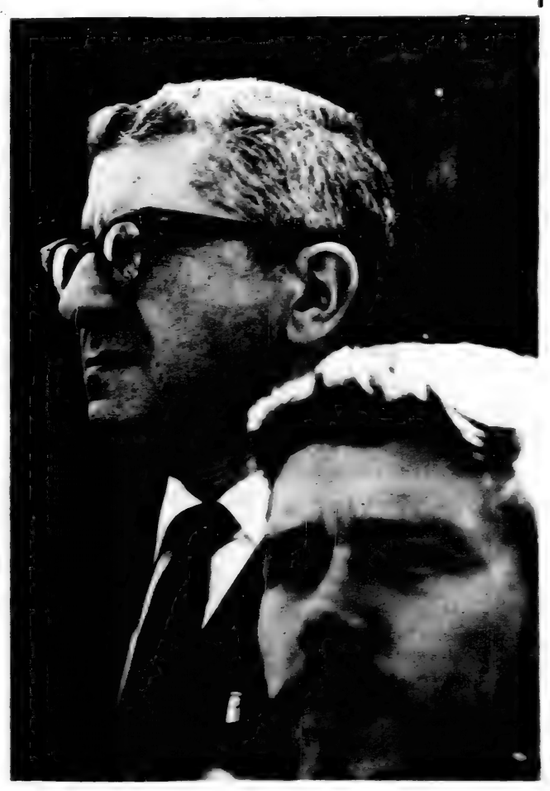
You Would Think Aptheker Was The 'Pied Piper' Of Chapel Hill





THE CROWD that turned out yesterday to see and hear Herbert Aptheker was enthusiastic as it was mobile. They followed him around like the Pied Piper as he began to speak at the foot of Silent Sam, then moved down to the north campus wall. Some climbed trees, booed and taunted Dr. Aptheker who here stands stoically for a while with Gary Waller, spokesman for the SDS below the Confederate memorial which had, incidentally a girl's nylon tied to its left leg.

Dust Off The Suitcases

A statement commonly uttered around the state is, "The University won't be hurt by the speaker ban now that it won't lose accreditation."

Maybe.

But not likely. We've already received millions of dollars worth of nationwide publicity.

Publicity as a fearful, repressive, retrogressive state.

The most damaging possibility of all, however, is that many of our faculty members might decide they would rather switch than fight.

Professors do not enjoy spending their time worrying about problems so basic as academic freedom. They justifiably expect to have it, not to have to fight for it.

The chairman of the Linguistics Department, Dr. Walter Arndt, is leaving to go to Dartmouth. The speaker controversy played a major part in his decision.

Three men have been sought to replace him. All have refused; the best candidate turned down the offer solely on grounds of his aversion to an "atmosphere not conducive to free academic life" here.

An assistant professor of sociology, Dr. Bruce Eckland, has said he will resign if the administration bars any speakers between now and January without showing that such speakers could not serve an educational purpose.

"So what?" some ask. "We can get along without them."

True enough. The University will not crumble if these two men leave.

But once a few begin to go, others will follow and whatever academic excellence the University has built through the years will go with them.

How many must leave before North Carolinians become aware of the disaster such an exodus would wreak on UNC?

How Did They Know?

But events of this week show that perhaps we should pay more attention to what is being said in Peking.

Monday the official communist newspaper, the Peking People's Daily, urged the Chinese people "not become panic stricken" if they should soon be faced with "twists and turns on the revolutionary road."

An editorial spoke of possible "upheavals" ahead. The people were warned that the "balance of forces is sometimes unfavorable."

Surprisingly, the prediction of an upheaval came true.

Swiftly.

There was a severe earthquake in China Tuesday.

Hark The Sound

Most of the citizenry were awakened by the commotion.

A UNC professor was among those whose sleep was disturbed, and, considering the present state of affairs in the community, he interpreted it as a rather specific warning from God.

Thus inspired, he sat down and wrote the following verses, to be sung to the tune of our alma mater, "Hark the Sound."

Ban Aptheker and Wilkinson, but let the others be;
We may have Norman Thomas still (though not too frequently).
Come on, you solemn liberals, forget your squeamish fears:
It happened to those Germans, but it couldn't happen here.

* * *

Come, vestal universitas, accept it as a fact,
It leaves your lux and libertas essentially intact;
It's practical, it's tactical, it's harmless as can be,
No worse than just a teensy-weensy case of pregnancy.

* * *

For all we want's a local-yokel uni-ver-si-ty,
American as apple pie and moonshine and tee-vee.
Let's keep her white, and loyal too, and not too goddam bright,
For Jesse Helms, Hank Royall and Bob Morgan and Tom White.

Busy Time For Spy Swaps

The Russians lately have acquired the habit of exchanging our innocent tourists for their professional spies.

I can now report that the Russian government is quite worried about finding people to swap for their expert spies. It seems as though they've been sending so many secret agents abroad recently that they're about to run out of innocent tourists to exchange.

Comrade Tradevinsky agrees with this conclusion. "You're absolutely right," he said. "The Russian espionage service is growing so rapidly that it will soon be impossible to retrieve any more of our key personnel because so few American and other Westerners feel like visiting our dreary nation."

"But there must be some way to get all your notorious spies back from American assignments."

"There's no way whatsoever," Tradevinsky replied. "The USSR is such a dismal place to visit that hardly anybody from your country wants to go there."

"What about having a travel campaign?"

"We tried that once. But we found not enough tourists were interested in visiting Moscow."

"Why didn't they like the idea of coming to Moscow?"

"Because they don't like Siberia."

"Aren't you doing something else to correct the problem?"

"Oh yes. In the past, we've had our agents perating laundries and grocery stores in the United States. But from now on, they've being told to set up travel agencies. And instead of circulating propaganda concerning Viet Nam, the agents will be used to devote all their all their time to making travel posters."

"And?

"As the posters say, Mscow jailers are very experienced at handling foreigners. First - class, accommodations, of course, will be given persons who volunteer for 15-year tours or longer."

"What if they don't volunteer?"

"That question's ridiculous. In USSR courts, everybody volunteers, especially when they're being asked to plead guilty."

"Suppose the tourists have trouble getting reservations?"

"We never have that problem. All persons will, if necessary, be provided by the court with microfilm packages and several piles of incriminating documents; so it does not matter at all if they don't have any to begin with."

"What about the forced labor camps and the brain - washing."

Comrade Tradevinsky smiled. "I know they're unpopular, but I assure you we're doing our best to improve the work - and - study tours."

Letters To The Editor

Walkway Needed

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

I'm as tired as anyone from walking (slipping and sliding) through mud and swampland to class from Big Mo when it rains. I've put a few bricks down in our community protest, but its time we did a little more thinking about this walkway.

First I'd like to compliment the boy who first laid a brick in the middle of the path to start the idea moving. It was a good idea. I think the project speaks highlu of the boys who started building their own sidewalk. For rather than protesting & picketing a muddy slope, they are determined to cover it with bricks themselves.

Fine, you've made your point. We do need a sidewalk before the next monsoon sets in, but . . . I don't think we ought to continue placing bricks on the walk because they are just going to be in the way when someone starts to do the job right and it will slow the final completion.

To make the sidewalk lasting it will have to laid tight, straight, and have the borders cemented in place. It would also help to have the thing sunken to make it flush with the ground.

Second, if we can build a house out in Carrboro, why can't we build a quarter - mile of sidewalk, and build it right? If we can talk the University into giving us the material and tools they would have to use eventually and teach us how to build it the way the rest of the walks on campus are built, why couldn't we do the job?

We could work at specific times and work in an organized effort, perhaps with floors working in shifts or in competition. Anybody want to start a new committee? I'll help.

A few obstacles are in sight fo whoever does built it. The stretch that runs behind the Ramshead club house is one of the stickiest spots because of all the automobile traffic through it. The weight of the vehicles would ruin a loose brick walk if not laid properly; perhaps concrete should be used there.

Another bad spot is from the clubhouse up towards P.T.A. On that steep slope the water would pour down the walk in torrents two or three inches deep. This part of the wal should be built with a deep groove in the middle and both sides to hold the water and still leave enough room for two streams of traffic.

Let's hope they put the walk in soon, it not, let's build it ourselves, the right way!

Leave UNC-C Alone

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

This letter is in regard to a closing comment found in Ed Freakley's "Carolina Style" column which appeared in the Friday March 4 edition under the heading "It's Nauseating".

Mr. Freakley's comments concerning our campus "stealing" the name UNC-C were in very poor taste. I well remember The Daily Tar Heel's positive stand for our acceptance onto the University family. I find it hard to accept that The Daily Tar Heel has now changed it's position. I hope you have not and that this was merely a thoughtless remark on the part of your columnist.

I would like to commend The Daily Tar Heel for the high standards of journalism which it upholds and I hope that these same high standards will prohibit writers such as Mr. Freakley (whose column is usually very interesting) from making future unwarrented statements concerning our campus.

Yours sincerely,
Ricky R. Dancy

Jacobs Missed Point

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Barry Jacobs' article in the Sunday March 6 DTH completely misses the point of Wilkinson's lecture. In particular, he is wrong on two counts, one regarding the relevancy of Wilkinson's including other groups than HUAC in his speech, and the other on the very basic issue of what Wilkinson was talking about when he explained why he took the First Amendment rather than the Fifth before the committee.

As for the first matter, here it is simply a question of misinformation. Mr. Wilkinson is acting to abolish HUAC, but, in so doing, it also acting to abolish any other Congressional committee, both in the House and in the Senate, that exists for similar purposes.

In the Senate, under the chairmanship of James O. Eastland, is the Subversive Activities Control Board, whose purposes are very similar to those of HUAC. To abolish HUAC under the constitutional grounds that Mr. Wilkinson suggested would also abolish the SACB. So, there is relevance in Wilkinson's talking about other committees, and their chairmen.

The second matter is the more important one, for it shows that Jacobs missed the entire point of the lecture. Wilkinson took the First Amendment on the grounds that the HUAC itself is not a legitimate body because it violates the First Amendment in that it is a legislative committee whose purpose is to investigate towards establishing laws concerning freedom of speech, which is specifically prohibited by that amendment.

This is the basis of Wilkinson's First Amdnement argument, not any of the quasi - explanations proposed by Jacobs, and it is the non - comprehension of this that led to Jacobs' article. Perhaps the following quote by Thomas Jefferson might clarify the question:

"It behooves every man who values liberty of conscience for himself to resist invasions of it in the case of others. Or their case may, by change of circumstances, become his own. It behooves him too in his own case, to give no example of concession betraying the common right of independent opinion by answering questions of faith which the laws have left between God and himself."

James Kahan
202-A Branson

Ed. note: The Subversive Activities Control Board is an independent five-man government agency. It has nothing to do with the Senate. Sen. Eastland is Chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Bad Mathematics

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

We would like to commend you on your article in the March 6, DTH concerning the "Bargain of the Week." Your gross stupidity overwhelms us. The State of North Carolina is leasing the Lincoln Continental limousine at $750 annually, not monthly.

This comes to about $14.42 per week, including all parts and repairs. In our opinion, this actually is the "bargain of the week." Perhaps you had better repeat Math 196; after all, you were only $8,250 in error.

Kennedy--The New Liberal

Those of us who watch the current political scene are observing the rise of a new liberal character. This new character takes the best of the "New Frontier," the failures and successes of the "Great Society," and the realities of the world we live in and combine them to form a new political model. Youthful vigor, political finesse and secular pragmatism are the chief characteristics of this new leader. The epitome of this rising liberal is Robert Kennedy

The liberal thunder of the New Frontier moved from John Kennedy to Lyndon Johnson and company after the tragic assassination in 1963. The outlines of Johnson's "Great Society" programs pleased liberal intellectuals and gave many of them an opportunity to try their theories for the betterment f society. Due to a combination of causes, LBJ's consensus began to wear thin.

The Johnson foreign policy split the liberals. Many of them became critical of his policy. They opposed the escalation of the Vietnamese war, American intervention in the Dominican revolt, American support of fascist governments and reluctance to firm up against the governments of South Africa and Rhodesia.

Robert Kennedy's election to the Senate and his independence of the Johnson Administration gave him the opportunity to fill the void between the Administration and the liberal elements of the nation.

First, on domestic issues, Kennedy called for a higher minimum wage, stronger civil rights enforcement and an increasingly more vigorous program for domestic reform. These programs did not raise as much cain as Kennedy's pronouncements on foreign policy — the chief source of disagreement among liberals.

On the Dominican Republic intervention, Kennedy made it explicit that American action there was hasty and ill-considered. Kennedy favors "progressive leaders" rather than the friendly fascist dictators that the Administration has supported in the past.

RFK has stirred a lot of debate over his statements on our Viet Nam policy. He favors the inclusion of the Viet Cong in any peace negotiations. The State Department will not accept this. Kennedy then points out that it is unrealistic to expect that any group that controls a majority of the South Vietnamese people is going to give up to the United States. These observations made by Kennedy seem to be realistic.

The reason for the emergence of Kennedy is threefold. First, he is the logical person to head the new liberal element. He is nationally known, he has the Kennedy "image", he is a skilled politician and he occupies a safe Senate seat. The only other chief contender for this leadership would be Hubert Humphrey, but his voice echoes the melody of Lyndon Johnson.

The second reason for Kennedy's leadership is that he is attractive to the young —the chief critics of the Johnson policies. Finally, Kennedy is thinking ahead to 1972 when he probably will run for President. His being in the front of happenings is an attempt to emulate the leadership that his late brother used in the Senate to propel himself to the White House. This tack Kennedy knows can work, and this he hopes will work.

'Paris Is A Movable Feast'

Ed. note: Jim Creech is a UNC exchange student now studying in France. He is a junior from Smithfield.

By JIM CREECH
Special to the DTH

PARIS—"Paris Exchange," the announcement read. I asked the guy behind me to save my place in the Lenoir Hall rush-hour line so I could go read the information. It is now hard to believe that was a year ago, and that since then, I have been in Paris for over eight months.

This year has been the most terrific experience imaginable, and the day by day pleasure of discovering this fantastic city and all its treasures has been worth almost more than all my past education. My work as an English language lab assistant, an integral part of the exchange, has been fascinating.

As a result I have a completely new conception of English as a language and a far better understanding of French students. But I am sure Paris itself is more interesting to fellow students than any other aspect of this exchange.

How to say anything about Paris? So many people have tried to describe it, but it has an essence too splendid and grand to be delineated in the narrow confines of words. It is like asking a "patron" how he makes his "sauce" for the "steak au poivre": he always names a few ingredients and then adds "and a lot of little things!"

One can talk about the "ingredients" of Paris, but it is precisely "a lot of little things," quite indefinable, that makes up its essence. There are lots of flavors all blended together into a delicious whole.

This morning, for example, when I was on my way to the Centre Chatelet, I walked up the rue Mouffetard. This is one of the tastiest morsels in the whole city, and particularly this morning.

Striking Colors

It was cloudy, and there was even some fog, which made all the colors more striking and rich than usual, and seemed to bring out tints in the cobble stones that I had never noticed before.

The rue Mouffetard begins at the Place Contrescarpe and is a very old, narrow, market street lined with meat, cheese, vegetable, and flower stands. There is an impressionistic swirl of colors and smells and motion. The "marchands" cry out in high, nasal tones, and in absolutely incomprehensible French.

The rabbits, pheasants, and whole deer, hung side by side on a rack over the kidneys, livers, and brains, next door to a fish monger's stand, all seem to come from a Frans Snyder's still life. The scenes of old men in their berets and the little, white-haired ladies standing alone selling garlics, look like a perfect subject for Brueghel.

Every five feet there is a different odor; especially nice are the strawberries when in season. The rue Mouffetard is a wonderful little world like no other part of Paris, and I walk down it whenever I can.

Paris is probably more well known as a chic city of society and fashion. These parts of the city are fun too—almost as much fun as the rue Mouffetard. Around the Champs Elysees, the rue Saint-Honore, and the Opera, for example, one may see incredibly good-looking and well dressed women walking their Afghan sheep dogs or poodles, or shopping in some of the elegant little boutiques in the area.

There is also the left-bank chic of the area between the Boulevard Saint-Germain and the Seine. In this quarter, one does not see the expansive and impressive boulevards of the right bank. Here it is possible to walk down a maze of little streets lined with small galleries of new paintings, or antique shops that are really "sympathiques."

Many Facets

Paris has many distinct quarters, each with its own atmosphere which, in large measure, draw a distinct variety of people. The Latin Quarter, the Champs Elysees, the Boulevard Saint-Germain, Montmartre, or the rue Mouffetard, are all "Paris," but they are all different. So I can get up on a Sunday morning and decide where to go and what to do by the mood I am in!

Paris is an intellectual treasure box, but some of the best treasures are the least expensive. Theater here is almost free in comparison with New York. There are numerous benefits and reductions given to students for concerts and cinema. I can go to the Comedie francaise to see the classics of French theater for less than three francs (60c).

Then there are the book stores with numerous inexpensive editions. My French friends cannot believe how much I pay for books in the States. Here there are almost as many book stores as there are cafes—and that is saying a great deal!

I have tried simply to describe a little of the Paris that I know and have come to love. But it is impossible in a few paragraphs to talk about it all: the cathedrals, the book stalls along the Seine, the museums, the gardens, the monuments, the night life—and best of all, the life of a student.

It is impossible to relate the sensation I get when I walk past the Brasserie Lipp or the Dome or the Select and see a large, bearded man reading his paper, a man that but for a few years could be Ernest Hemingway.

One who has never experienced it cannot know the stir I feel inside when I look up at the dome of the Sacre-Coeur from the tiny rue Saint-Rustique and realize the Utrillo stood on the same spot to paint what I am looking at.

I cringe slightly when it hits me that I have only a few more short months in Paris, and that there is some lucky soul walking around Chapel Hill now who is going to take my place next year. But I am equally grateful that this experience was made possible for me and for others to come.

When I get sad thinking of having to leave, I try to console myself by what Ernest Hemingway once wrote in "The Moveable Feast": "If you are lucky enough to have lived in Paris as a young man, then wherever you go for the rest of your life, it stays with you, for Paris is a moveable feast."

Mighty 'Man Flint' Even Tops Bond

By DICK WHITE
Special to the DTH

He can kill a man with one blow. He has a cigarette lighter that hides 82 secret weapons. He goes to sleep by turning off his heart. He has four beautiful women to accompany him wherever he goes. He is the invincible Derick Flint.

Saul David's production "Our Man Flint", opening today at the Varsity Theatre tops all the spy stories ever filmed. It is the most spectacular. It is the most amusing. It has more girls, more fights, more absurd little tricks than any of its predecessors.

Derek Flint (James Coburn) has been selected by the computer of the world intelligence organization ZOWIE (Zonal Orangization World Intelligence Espionage) to search out and destroy the heinous "Galaxy" organization, dedicated to controlling the world through the control of the weather.

And so Flint takes off in his private jet for Marseilles to track down the source of the poisoned dart that was meant to kill him.

From there he travels to Rome to search for some "cold cream" and then to a mysterious island for a "family reunion." Of course there is a beautiful enemy agent, Gila (Gila Golan), whom Flint encounters early in the story.

He earns the enemy's respect and the title of the "invincible Mr. Flint". And he truly is invincible.

PERFECT CASTING

James Coburn is perfect for the part of the arrogant Derek Flint. And indeed he should be, for he was excellent in both "The Great Escape" and "The Magnificent".

Perhpas the one trait that distinguishes Mr. Coburn from other actors is that he has wonderful facial expression. In fact, he was a standout in both of his previous films although he rarely spoke a word.

In his first leading role, as Derek Flint, he has outdone himself. He continues to portray the unassuming arrogance that characterized him in his first two big movies. He is excellent as the self - reliant and independent agent. His sardonic smile and contemptuous manner assure us that he will not fail.

Coburn is so good that he overshadows the performances of Lee J. Cobb as the bumbling inefficient head of ZOWIE and the spectacular Gila Golan as the beautiful enemy agent. Bub toh Cobb and Miss Golan do a good job. It's just that they are inferior to the remarkable Derek Flint.

FUNNY FLICK

Our Man Flint" is a rollicking take - off on the James Bond series. But unlike the other satire of the incredible world of Bond, this movie is truly funny. You can never tell what is going to happen when one of these agents of tomorrow pushes one of his little buttons. A house might disappear. There might be a heat wave in the Arctic. There may be a volcanic eruption in eastern Russia. But whatever happens, it is bound to be entertaining.

Derek Flint surpasses James Bond in many regards. Even Bond would not have been able to recognize that the trace of buillabaisse found on the shaft of a posioned dart is found only in Marseilles, or that a certain cold cream contains elements found only in a swamp on the outskirts of Rome. Indeed, Derek Flint is the supreme super - spy.

The action drags a little at the very beginning of the story, but once we are done with her Washington brass and Coburn swings into action, the wild chase begins. From the time he reaches Marseilles until he accomplishes his mission, the pace never lets up, and Coburn is magnificent all the way.

"Our Man Flint" will never win an Oscar. But if you are tired of the James Bond films, if you have a sense of humor, and if you like to be entertained, then you must see "Our Man Flint."

READING DYNAMICS CLASSES BEGIN

in DURHAM H. S.	in RALEIGH YMCA	in CHAPEL H.S. Thursday, March 17 at 7 P.M.

— REGISTRATION BEGINS 30 MINUTES EARLIER —

At the Demonstration

- You will see a Reading Dynamics graduate read at amazing speeds from a book he has never seen before and then tell in detail what he has read.
- You will see a documented film that includes actual interviews with Washington Congressmen who have taken the course.
- You will learn how we can help you to faster reading, improved comprehension, greater recall.

HOW IS THIS POSSIBLE?

Eighteen years ago Evelyn Wood, a Utah schoolteacher, made a startling discovery that led to the founding of Reading Dynamics. While working toward a master's degree, she handed a term paper to a professor and watched him read the 89 pages at 6,000 words per minute—with outstanding recall and comprehension. Determined to find the secret behind such rapid reading, she spent the next two years tracking down 50 people who could read faster than 1,500 words per minute. She studied their techniques, taught herself to read at these faster rates. Now, after years of experience in public schools and universities, she has made it possible for you to benefit from this great discovery.

IS IT SIMPLY A PROMOTION STUNT?

Over the past eleven years more than 160,000 graduates have been convinced that Reading Dynamics is a proven method. About Reading Dynamics' impact on our nation's legislators, Time Magazine said "Washington has seen nothing like it since the days when Teddy Roosevelt read three books a day and ran the country at the same time."

SENATOR PROXMIRE, Wisconsin: "I must say that this is one of the most useful education experiences I have ever had. It certainly compares favorably with the experience I've had at Yale and Harvard."

SENATOR TALMADGE, Georgia: "It is my opinion that if these techniques were instituted in the public and private schools of our country, it would be the greatest single step which we could take in educational progress."

MICHAEL LEVY, Pres. Standard Security Life: "My normal relaxed reading is now at a rate approximately 4,000 words per minute. Even with the most difficult and technical reading material, I find that my speed exceeds 2,500 words per minute."

SENATOR STUART SYMINGTON, MISSOURI—"I can now read materials at speeds above 3,000 words per minute and technical material in the 2,000 word per minute range."

Conventional rapid reading courses aspire to 450-600 words per minute. Most Reading Dynamics graduates can read between 1,000 and 3,000 words per minute, and many go even higher.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

We guarantee to increase the reading efficiency of each student AT LEAST 3 times with good comprehension. We will refund the entire tuition to any student who, after completing minimum class and study requirements, does not at least triple his reading efficiency as measured by our beginning and ending tests.

Quotes from Former Students

IN DURHAM . . .

A reading speed of over 2,000 words per minute is enabling me finally to read the vast quantity of material I feel I should read. I am going to try these techniques on cases in Law School, and of course in all my other reading.
Alan W. Eckert.

Since I am studying to be a teacher my increased speed is not only a blessing, but a joy. I am grateful that I took the course.
Janice Smith.

Reading Dynamics has enabled me to read greater than 2,000 words per minute with better comprehension than before. This is particularly of importance to me because of the precious little spare time I have to read.
Jordan Gutterman, M.D.

Part of A Letter Home

"Everything is going just fine here. My courses are all pretty tough but all very interesting. I'm really going to enjoy this semester. You'll be glad to know that my reading has helped me tremendously! It really is a time saver. I've been getting to bed around 11:00 to 11:30 . . . and it certainly is not because I don't have any homework because I always have plenty of it. That reading, though, has just cut my study time. It really is great! That's one of the most useful presents I have ever received. Thanks a million for it! Lots of love to you all,

from a student at State.

I never really learned how to study in school; this course has given me more insight into the "art" of study than the 14 years of schooling I have taken. The guides to organizing your study are of value to all students. The development of Gist Sheets should be taught in all high schools.
Peter Savage

I now understand how to read, how to evaluate a book, what to look for and how to find what I want to in books. I had not learned any of this even after going through college. I can now preview a book for its importance or skim material for beneficial facts. I now appreciate books and the ability to read them.
Thomas Youngblood

IN CHAPEL HILL . .

● "The course has been extremely useful to me. I wish all of our graduate students could take the course." DR. DAN PRICE, Director, Institute for Research in Social Science, U.N.C.

Again I want to wholeheartedly endorse your course and method. I began at 400 wpm and finished — reading dynamically — at speeds as high as 3,000 wpm with no loss of comprehension.—Dick League, Law School, U.N.C.

As an acting intern on pediatrics, I had gained tremendous experience but had done practically none of the general reading required for orals. The night before the examination, I was on duty and essentially, the extent of my reading was from one to three and from five to seven in the morning. In that period of time I was able to read about five hundred pages with satisfactory comprehension. I did not panic or get overly anxious. I had the feeling of a worthwhile job done satisfactorily. Since I last saw you, I have taken my National Board Examinations in all the clinical fields of medicine.
Jerry Eller, Med. Student

President Clamors For War On Crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — Condemning "years of public neglect," of the problems involved, President Johnson prodded Congress and the nation yesterday toward an intensified war on crime and its causes.

He urged a "three - stage national strategy against crime, welding together the efforts of local, state, and federal governments."

Johnson's message to Congress proposed no major new legislation. Instead, it was a double - barreled pep talk — aimed at speeding Congressional action on long - pending criminal legislation, and reshaping public attitude toward crime.

"The need is not new," the Chief Executive said. "We have simple failed to meet it.

"Despite the warnings of our law enforcement officials, years of public neglect have too often left the law enforcement system without necessary resources and public support.

"Despite the devotion of our law enforcement officials, our law enforcement system does not deter enough of those who can be deterred. It does not detect and convict enough of those who cannot be deterred. It does not restore enough rehabilitated offenders into the law - abiding community."

Johnson described the first stage of his national strategy against crime as "an agenda for immediate action . . . legislative steps we already know are needed, steps that should be taken without hesitation or delay."

In this phase, the President publicly endorsed for the first time legislation to control interstate traffic in guns.

"We must end the easy availability of deadly weapons to professional criminals, to delinquent youth, and to the disturbed and deranged," Johnson said.

While there is no need to legislate against the right of citizens to shoot at game and targets, he said, "there is a pressing need to halt blind, unquestioned mail - order sales of guns and over - the - counter sales to buyers from out of state whose credentials cannot be known.

Senate Hands LBJ Defeat On Tax Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate handed the Johnson administration a second defeat on the tax bill yesterday, voting 47-41 to knock out a proposed increase in the excise on local residential telephone service.

The action followed up Tuesday's adoption of a Republican proposal to blanket under the Social Security System 1.8 million persons over 70 not now eligible for coverage.

It would leave standing on residential telephones the 3 per cent tax rate in effect since Jan. 1. However, it would allow the levy on long distance calls to be put back to the 10 per cent rate which applied until the cut took place Jan. 1.

President Johnson, seeking $6 billion more revenue to help finance the war in Viet Nam, had asked that the entire telephone tax be returned to the 10 per cent level.

Hartke's amendment would reduce the hoped - for gain by about $315 million.

The Senate defeated earlier yesterday an amendment by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., to provide a tax saving of up to $325 a year on col- The Ribicoff amendment lege education costs.
would have cost about $1 billion a year. However, he specified that it would not take effect until the 1967 calendar year and thus would be reflected on tax returns filed in 1968.

The Connecticut Senator said that therefore, it would not out into the revenues the President seeks in the tax bill. These are for the current financial year and fiscal 1967 ending June 30, 1967.

Adoption of the rider to provide Social Security to the aged was a jolt to the administraion.

Johnson Considering Tax Bill To Combat Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sometime in May is now considered the earliest possible D-Day for President Johnson — his day of decision on whether to seek a further anti - inflationary tax increase.

But the President and his council of economic advisers are increasingly pressed to move more rapidly, by economists who fear that his quickie $4.8 - billion Viet Nam emergency tax bill is too little and too late.

The House - passed bill has moved with rare speed to the verge of Senate approval. Johnson has asked that it be on his desk for signing by March 15, next Tuesday.

It has a series of effective dates between then and May 1, so its effect if any in restraining inflationary pressures won't be measurable until May or June.

Administration sources said they see no evidence that the White House plans to move any earlier than that, barring some dramatic rupture of the wage-price line or sharp escalation of the war.

Johnson so hinted Tuesday.

Confronted with new evidence that the boom is exceeding official expectation s— a drop in the unemployment rate to 3.7 per cent, lowest in 13 years—he said "our celebration must be tempered with caution" lest the advance become too fast for stability. The President added, however:

"Yet to conclude that we must proceed cautiously does not mean that we should slam on the brakes or throw the economy into reverse."

Official sources amplified: there is considerable concern lest over - hasty or over - emphatic measures send the five-year - old boom over the brink into a recession. The administration feels that even a 3.7 per cent unemployment rate does not represent "full employment"; it wants to slow down the expansion rather than stop it outright.

Officials therefore consider that a wait - and - see attitude is proper for the next 60 days or so — especially since the skidding stock market is having a sobering effect on the business community.

De Gaulle Disregards NATO Letter

PARIS — (AP) — Ignoring a warning from President Johnson, France announced yesterday it will go ahead with plans to pull all troops out of the Atlantic Alliance and to assume control of U. S. bases on French soil by 1969.

President Charles de Gaulle said in a terse statement issued through his cabinet spokesman that France could see no possibility of useful discussion on effective reform of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Therefore, he said, France was going ahead with its pullout from the 15 - member alliance's integrated command structure.

France also will act to "re-establish her full sovereignty" —meaning that some 26,000 U. S. troops on French soil will have to submit to French authority by 1969 or leave.

At the same time, De Gaulle said, France is willing to have talks with it allies on the consequences of the actions and to make mutual defense pacts.

With a certain remote amiability, De Gaulle said that France would not formally renounce the NATO treaty when it becomes possible in April, 1969.

China Reviewing Policy After Foreign Setbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department officials said yesterday Red China is apparently conducting a broad foreign policy review after a series of setbacks abroad.

Peking has called home a number of ambassadors from widely scattered areas, officials, said.

They noted also that foreign minister Chen Yi disappeared from public view for a while. In the last couple of days, however, Peking has again reported his presence in the capital.

This information was given at a state department briefing for representatives of non-governmental organizations from around the United States.

A large number of senior State Department officials, from Secretary Dean Rusk and Undersecretary George W. Ball down, were listed as speakers at the two - day conference. However, the rules barred quotation of any speaker by name.

In reporting Peking's foreign policy review, the officials declined to predict the outcome—whether Red China will ease her hard - line policy toward the West or become even more militant.

North Carolina News Roundup

Klan Plans Return To Maxton

MAXTON (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan plans to return to Maxton, where eight years ago a group of screaming, gun-waving Lumbee Indians broke up a cross-burning and chased off members of the hooded order.

Mrs. James R. Jones, wife of the KKK grand dragon in North Carolina said the rally will be held March 27 on a piece of leased property just east of Maxton on N. C. 71.

Mrs. Jones said her husband would speak along with the Rev. George Dorsett of Greensboro, chaplain of the United Klans of America.

"None whatsoever," Mrs. Jones replied when asked if she expected trouble similar to the humiliating battering the KKK took in 1958 when Indians broke up a cross-burning planned by former Klansman James W. (Catfish) Cole.

Mrs. Jones, speaking from a new state KKK office on U. S. 52 between Granite Quarry and Rockwell, said the Klan would lease the land near Maxton so that it would keep trespassers off, if desired. She said her husband was out of town and not available for comment.

In Pembroke, Simeon Oxendine, who pleaded for racial understanding after a trial of Klansmen that followed the 1958 raid, said:

"I just hope they're not coming down here. I know there's been a lot of talk about it. I just hope they don't go through with it."

"I attended one of their cross-burnings once," Oxendine continued. I know what their goals are. They want to build up hate and fear.

"We don't mind anyone coming here as a private citizen, just like you and I. But we don't want the Klan coming back," he added.

Ku Klux Klan Grand Wizard Cole was sentenced to 18-24 months imprisonment for inciting a riot in 1958. Another Klansman James Garland Martin of Reidsville was given a 6-12 month sentence on the same charge.

Cole never got to speak the night of the 1958 raid. The Klansmen had just started a portable generator and a single light bulb was burning over the platform. A big Indian smashed the bulb with his rifle and the raid was on.

Police reported four persons, including one Klansman, were wounded in the wild gunfire that followed. Most of the shots were fired into the air.

No Indians were arrested.

Stock Market Pulls Out Of Long Slump

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pulled out of a four - week slump yesterday with a strong rally.

Trading moderate from its recent hectic pace.

Brokers described the advance as a technical rally with the market coming back from an oversold condition.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 3.6 to 347.3, the biggest gain since last June 30.

Some of the hardest hit stocks in the last four weeks came back with good gains. Among them were the color televisions, aerospace issues, airlines, motors, chemicals, coppers, rails, and office equipments.

Of 1,419 issues traded, 880 advanced and 307 declined.

Advances included Jones — Laughlin $1.25 to $64.12, General Motors $1.12 to $97.62, Boeing $2.37 to $149.37, Zenith $4.12 to $141.87, Anaconda $2.62 to $85.87, Air Reduction $3.12 to $72.62 and United Airlines $2.75 to $119.75.

Jim Coghill

Assistant DTH Sports Editor

Spring football practice is just around the corner and Coach Jim Hickey is making preparation for his eighth season and the new 1966 Tar Heel team.

The spring drills begin on March 18 and end on April 30 with the annual intrasquad football game. Everyone will play both offense and defense before the vacation period beginning on April 2, but it's "position" football when the boys return on April 12.

"We plan to get in good shape physically the first ten days," Coach Hickey said, "and we are fortunate in having ten days for our bruises to heal before we start lining up our men for fall possitions."

The 1966 coaching staff will have one change—that being a replacement for Assistant Coach Vito Ragazzo who has accepted the head coaching position at VMI.

Assistant Coaches Joe Mark, Emmett Cheek, Bob Thalman, George Boutselis and Chris Carpenter will return to the staff and Coach Hickey hopes to name a successor to Coach Ragazzo before spring semester starts.

Coach Hickey, Coach Mark and the successor to Ragazzo will be concentrating their thoughts and efforts on offense while Coaches Cheek, Thalman, Boutselis and Carpenter will plan their activities around defensive play.

The Carolina mentor noted that spring drills are beginning later this year than in the past, but he is pleased at the arrangement.

We will probably be practicing under better weather conditions," Coach Hickey explained, "and we are fortunate in having 10 days for our bruises to heal." (These 10 days refer to the time alloted for spring vacation.)

Practice sessions will be held on both Navy field and Kenan Stadium with the latter being used during the picture taking sessions which will occur frequently during spring drills.

As yet, Coach Hickey has no idea about position changes or any proposed line-ups for the fall season. The only thing known at the moment is the schedule. It will be 10 games of tough competition and as usual five of the games will be at home and five away.

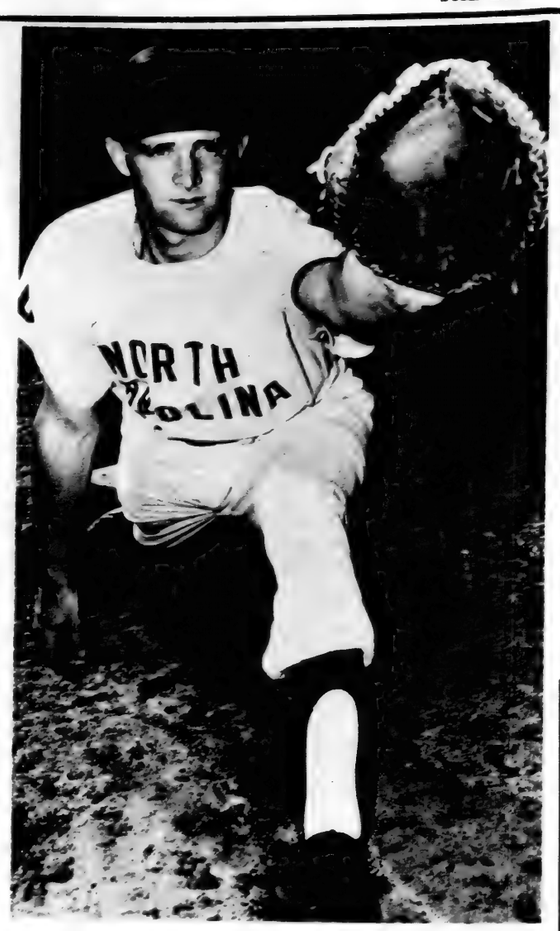
Two oddities have resulted from the Tar Heel schedule for 1966. One is that Carolina has an open date on Oct. 8 and, the other, Duke not being the last game of the season.

"We did not arrange it this way," Coach Hickey said. "This is just the way it happened."

Noting the schedule below, it might be deducted that Virginia's schedule would not allow them to play on Oct. 8, thus necessitating the date as scheduled, Nov. 26. Oh, well, that's alright. We'll just save a little strength after beating Duke to maul the Cavaliers.

The 1966 varsity schedule as follows:

Sept. 17 — Kentucky at Lexington, Ky.
Sept. 24 — N. C. State at Chapel Hill
Oct. 1 — Michigan at Ann Arbor
Oct. 8 — Open Date
Oct. 15 — Notre Dame at Notre Dame, Ind.
Oct. 22 — Wake Forest at Chapel Hill
Oct. 29 — Georgia at Athens, Ga.
Nov. 5 — Clemson at Clemson, S. C.
Nov. 12 — Air Force at Chapel Hill
Nov. 19 — Duke at Chapel Hill
Nov. 26 — Virginia at Chapel Hill



Danny Talbott, leading hitter for the Tar Heels last season, shows the form which also made him one of the outstanding defensive first-basemen in the ACC. Talbott and his teammates open against East Carolina College in Greenville March 18.

Cats First, Duke Second In Final Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky's favored Wildcats and seven other contenders for the national collegiate basketball championship earned spots on the final Associated Press poll for the season.

The Wildcats swept to No. 1 by a 13-1 margin over runner-up Duke. Kentucky collected 39 of 48 sports writers and broadcasters while the champion Blue Devils of the Atlantic Coast Conference got three.

Kentucky and Duke see action Friday night in sectional doubleheaders leading up to the national title showdown, along with six other squads in the Top Ten—Texas Western, Kansas, St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania, Cincinnati, Michigan and Western Kentucky.

Sixth - ranked Loyola of Chicago also made the NCAA tourney, but was knocked out in the first round Monday night by Western Kentucky, a newcomer to the ratings. Eighth-ranked Vanderbilt was runner-up to Kentucky in the Southeastern Conference, thus was shut out of the post - season event.

Kentucky's drive for a perfect season was thwarted last Saturday night by a 69-62 loss to Tennessee. The Wildcats came back with a 103-74 romp over Tulane Monday night, closing out with a 24-1 record.

Duke climbed back to No. 2 after winning its three games in the ACC title tournament and Texas Western slipped to third after taking its lone loss in 25 games, to Seattle 74-72.

FINAL TOP TEN

1.	Kentucky (39)	24-1	468
2.	Duke (3))	23-3	387
3	Texas Western (1)	24-1	313
4.	Kansas (2)	22-3	305
5.	St. Joe's, Pa.	23-4	297
6.	Loyola, Chi. (2)	22-3	226
7.	Cincinnati	21-5	134
8.	Vanderbilt	22-3	126
9.	Michigan	17-7	93
10.	Western Kentucky	24-2	63

Jack Murdock Drops Name From Wake Coaching List

WINSTON - SALEM (AP) — Jackie Murdock, Wake Forest College's interim head basketball coach, said Tuesday he is withdrawing his name from the list of those being considered for the job on a permanent basis.

"There are ample indications that I will not be seriously considered as a contender for the head basketball coaching job at Wake Forest," Murdock said in a statement. "And for this reason it seems to me to be wise to withdraw my name from consideration."

Dr. Gene Hooks, Wake Forest athletic director, announced Monday that he was in the process of screening applications for the job on a permanent basis and said Murdock would be considered.

Murdock was named acting head coach when Horace Bones McKinney resigned last Sept. 28 due to ill health. At that time Hooks said Murdock's appointment was temporary and that "the entire basketball program will be evaluatd at the close of the 1965-66 season."

Hooks added in his statement Monday that even if Murdock isn't retained, a position would be available at Wake Forest for him. He did not say what that position would be, however.

Crowder Hits 28 In Phi Delt Romp

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

The Phi Delt Whites got a 28 point performance by Rick Crowder as they hammered Pi Lamb II in intramural basketball Tuesday, 75-41. Robbie Culp helped out with 16 points while Bill Spry added 13 and Bill Teague 12 more. Robert Leder had 11 and Sam Major 10 for the Pi Lambs.

The Phi Gam Fijis thumped St. A White, 77-30. Titchener tossed in 28 points to lead the rout. Bowman added 18, Sparrow 13 and Horne 12 for the Fijis. Bell fired in 18 for St. A in a vain effort.

Phi Delt Blue had an easy time with KA Blue II, winning by 65-27. Tom Parrish scored 17 points, Ed Williams 16, Billy Trott 12, Miles Foy 8 and Butch Winstead 8 for Phi Delt. Perry had 14 points for KA.

Craig Meads gunned in 20 points is Kappa Psi Red rolled over Pi Kappa Phi II, 57-38. Mark Williams added 18 points and Larry Bullock had 16 for Kappa Psi. Bob Adams scored 16 and Bob White 10 for the losers.

The TEP Flops made a joke of KA Gold II, 51-9. Bruce Goldstein and Bill Zuckerman scored 12 points each to lead the way. Rick Rhyne scorched the nets for 4 points to pace KA Gold. TEP raced to a ridiculous 30-2 halftime lead before feeling sorry for KA and easing up in the second half. The Flops only ran up a 21-6 advantage in that period.

Pi Lamb I beat Chi Psi Gold in an unsuaul game, 26-23. Rick Wainer led Pi Lamb with 10 points, all at the foul line. Mark Alper was next with 7. Jarboe had 8 points for Chi Psi. Chi Psi outscored Pi Lamb from the field, 16-12, but could converted only seven of nine free throws while Pi Lamb was hitting 14 of 16. Only 18 points were scored in the second half.

In other soccer results, Law School beat Phi Kap Sig, 1-0; Lambda Chi defeated Beta Blue I, 2-1; Phi Kap Phi Baena downed Connor, 2-0.

Clay, Terrell Fight Approved In Toronto

TORONTO (AP) — The Cassius Clay-Ernie Terrell heavyweight title fight, boxing's much - traveled road show, found a home for its one-night stand Tuesday when it was approved for Toronto.

Leslie Rowntree, Ontario's labor minister and the man with the final say, went before the Ontario Legislature and announced his approval for the bout to be held on March 29 in Maple Leaf Gardens.

Chased westward from New York to Chicago, then north to Canadian points, the match settled in Toronto over the weekend. Merv McKenzie, the Ontario athletic commissioner, recommended its approval to Rowntree Monday, but the labor minister waited a day before making his decision.

Danzinger--From Russian POW To Local Success

By DEBBY LAZARNS
Special to the DTH

Everybody has heard about Danziger's, bought rich coffee or eaten imported candy from there.

But few people know about the man behind Danziger's — Edward Danziger — the 73-year-old Viennese who was once held prisoner by the Russians in World War I and escaped in Russian disguise.

"I didn't like it" in the Russian concentration camp, he said, "so we kept trying to get out."

He was recaptured after each attempt, beaten and taken back to the camp where he was held prisoner 16 months.

When the Russian Revolution came in 1917 he escaped and returned to Austria.

He had attended school in Vienna but quit at the age of 12 or 13 because "I wasn't very good at anything." His father sent him to France for three years to work as an apprentice in a candy factory. During that time he also worked in Switzerland and Italy.

The war caught him in France in 1914 and he returned to Vienna where he volunteered for the Austrian Army. He was wounded three times during the four and a half years he was in the army and in 1916 made prisoner of war in a Russian concentration camp.

He was released after the war and went back to Austria to work with his father. He opened his own candy factory in Vienna which soon employed 100 persons and had several shops.

When Hitler came in 1938, Danziger's factory and stores were destroyed.

He came to the United States in 1939 with nothing but a knowledge of candy making and a great desire for friends.

D. D. Carroll (for whom UNC's Carroll Hall is named) offered friendship and helped him begin his business here. Carroll raised $500 among professors and businessmen and in 1939 Ed Danziger came to the quaint village, alone, to open his candy shop. His wife and two sons, Ted and Erwin, joined him two years later.

Carolina then had an enrollment of 3,845 and was "not as sophisticated . . . really a village," he said.

Danziger made candy only to sell in his store until his wife came to join him. They then added pastries and their famous coffee.

World War II brought a restriction on sugar and the family found it necessary to open a restaurant to continue in business. Danziger opened the Ramshead Rathskeller for his son Ted when the War ended, discontinuing his own restaurant. The Candy Kitchen and Old World Restaurant then became a novelty and candy shop.

Danziger, surrounded by Old World novelties and decor in his store on E. Franklin St., declared in his crisp German accent, "I would never want to go back to Austria to live — anyone who lives in the U. S. doesn't want to go back."

Nurses' Plight Panel's Topic

Nursing is in need of "an economic transfusion," among other things, before it can attract former nurses back on the job in hospitals, concluded a panel on nursing held by the UNC School of Nursing.

"You can't afford to go back to work unless you're married to a good income," a former nurse lamented during the discussoin conducted by the Alumni Association of the School of Nursing.

The panelists tried to figure out (1) why some inactive nurses remain proud of their profession while others become alienated to the profession and (2) what it takes to interest inactive nurses in returning to work as "renovated nurses."

The panel program grew out of the critical shortage of professional nurses in hospitals. Studies have shown that abut one of every three former nurses intend to return to practice, many of them "as soon as the children grow up."

The Appian Way

As of yesterday morning at 11 it was 53 paces long. That comes to 5,908 bricks, give or take 10.

* * *

Pretty soon you Moes will have your own "Appian Way" leading out of the dark-ages to the civilized area up here on campus.

N . . . B . . . C

Most of you missed Wednesday night's NBC news which had the films of Communist Herbert Aptheker's appearance here at UNC.

HERE IS a run down on how it went with Chet Huntley doing the commentary.

"We now take you to Indonesia where thousands of students sacked the embassy today." The films show students running around throwing rocks etc.

"Rioting also broke out in the Dominican Republic today." Same kind of film, same type of student, only the place has been changed.

THEN HUNTLEY said, "We take you now to Chapel Hill, North Carolina." Here the films showed students running to get a place in front of Silent Sam where Aptheker first appeared. There were also a number of beards that appeared. The film had a caption under Student Body President Paul Dickson which said, "Dickson — a student leader."

Huntley came back on and said that Aptheker's daughter had been suspended from the University of Southern California at Berkeley for participating in two get out of Viet Nam demonstrations last week.

Huntley said they had a rule out there that you could only be in one get out of Viet Nam riot a week.

Goodnight Chet.

A New CFI

Of course we all know that their "tearen' her down to build her over again." We realize the need for some kind of barrier to keep students from walking by and getting a brick stuck in their ear.

BUT WHAT is this barbed-wire stuff?

Is there some kind of government project going on?

Rumors say members of losing athletic teams are going to be thrown in there. We also hear that 180-pound police dogs will be patroling the grounds at night.

The whole thing is unlawful. We propose a new CFI — onstitutional Fences Immediately.

The Lost Tambourine

They say they're going to set up booths in Y-Court, Chase Cafeteria and Lenoir Hall to collect money for the free speech courtcase — but mind you, that's just what they're saying.

Actually, "they" is Paul Dickson. And lately there's been considerable divergence between what Paul has said and what is.

Last Sunday CFI and Dickson said booths would be set up Monday. They weren't. He said the same thing again Monday for Tuesday. They weren't.

And again on Tuesday he said it. They weren't. And on Thursday. They weren't.

Yesterday, a release from Dickson's office promised that today — TODAY FOR SURE — the booths would go up. Or at least, that's what the yellow piece of paper said.

Referendum Could Affect Pepper's Decision To Run

Supporters of MRC President Sonny Pepper indicated yesterday that he would be an independent candidate for student body president.

Pepper could not be reached for comment.

His supporters said his decision hinged on whether the Constitutional Council ruled last month's referendum valid. The referendum stated that candidates for student body president and vice president had to run on the same ticket.

The referendum was passed by a majority vote of the student body, but was held invalid at a Constitutional Council meeting yesterday because of improper election procedures.

"The question now is what is going to happen if the students pass the referendum again," said one Pepper supporter, who asked not to be identified.

"If the referendum is passed," he continued, "what will be the ruling on Sonny's candidacy? He will have already been a qualified candidate by the time of the referendum. Forcing him to comply to a ruling made after he was a qualified candidate is the same thing as passing an ex post facto law.

"Sonny doesn't have a vice presidential candidate now and I'm sure he won't have one the 15th of next month when the new referendum is held."

Fraternities Start Winter Germans

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

Winter Germans, sponsored by the 13 UNC member fraternities, will begin tonight with a formal concert in Memorial Hall and conclude with a casual dance in Durham tomorrow night.

Ahmad Jamal, a jazz pianist, will appear in the concert to be given tonight at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. The event will be preceded by foregathering of girls and their dates at the various fraternity houses sponsoring the Winter Germans.

The dance to be held in Planter's Warehouse in Durham tomorrow night from 8 p.m. - 1 a.m. will feature Lou Christie, the Toys, the Flamingoes and the Upsetters.

The Dean of Women's office has granted 2 a.m. late permission for Saturday night's festivities, but has not changed the late time for tonight.

William Gert Schmidt, president of the DKE, and a senior from Jacksonville, Fla., is president of the German's Club. He will escort Mrs. William G. Schmidt in formal dance occasions of the weekend.

Geoffrey V. B. Parker, vice president, Baltimore, Md., Sigma Nu, with Miss Nancy McLean of Short Hills, N. J.; George C. Venters, treasurer, Zeta Psi, Jacksonville, N. C., with Nickye Yokley of Nashville, Tenn.; R. Bruce Logue, Jr., SAE, Atlanta, Ga., with Miss Delphine Jones of Atlanta.

Robert N. Cate, Sigma Chi, Winnetka, Ill., with Miss Pat Fuller of Cleveland, Ohio; Manton McCutcheon Grier, ATO, Greenwood, S. C., with Sandra Grizzard of Roanoke Rapids; John I. Trull, Beta Theta Pi, of Wyckoff, N. J., with Miss Sarah Bette Barnhardt of Winston - Salem; John C. Egbert III, DKE, Cincinnati, Ohio, with Miss Anne Woodhull of Dayton, Ohio.

James B. Black III, Zeta Psi, Richmond, Va., with Miss Molly Synon of Richmond; Tony G. Misenheimer, PiKA, Salisbury, with Miss Anne Plaster of Elkin; Samuel R. Staggers, Kappa Sigma, Metairie, La., with Miss Mary Curtis Gomila of New Orleans, La.; E. Borden Parker, Kappa Alpha, Goldsboro, with Miss Ellen Lentz of Goldsboro.

J. Robinson West, St. Anthony Hall, Unionville, Pa., with Miss Jane Crews of Oak Ridge, Tenn.; J. Hubert Parrott, Phi Gamma Delta, of Kinston, with Miss Treva Nan Denmark of Kinston; Stewart L. Wilson, Jr., Phi Delta Theta, Raleigh, with Miss Martha Gray Cochrane of Charlotte; Richard Allen Baddour, Sigma Nu, Goldsboro, with Miss Linda Bryant of Goldsboro.

Rebuilding Progresses

The "house - fixing" project being executed by Morrison and Nurses Dorm has progressed considerably since it was started two weeks ago.

A core group of about 15 students has worked every day painting, hammering and digging around the house, which is to be occupied by a family of ten.

But there is still a need for paint, tile, money and workers so that the work can be completed by the end of next week.

John Ellis, one of the workers, says the response from some merchants was very good, but that because of a lack of publicity many necessary materials have not yet been donated.

The students, led by Ellis, Gary Boggs, Pat St. John and Ward Maillard, have ins alled sewage lines and painted both the outside and inside of the home.

They have also put wood siding on the outside.

These students are looking for help in completing the project by next week, so anyone having materials they wish to give or time to spend working, call Gary Boggs at 929-5001.

Honor Court Endorsement

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

The Honor Systems Commission announced yesterday the 15 candidates it has endorsed for positions on the Honor Councils.

After interviews that were held on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons this week, the Commission has endorsed candidates for all but three districts. These districts are Men's District II and Women's Districts II and V.

Any student who had desired to run for the Honor Council in these districts would only have had to get 50 names, of students who are constituents of the office he seeks on a petition, but the deadline for the completed petition to be given to the Elections Board was yesterday.

Therefore the new student body president will appoint the people of his choice to the empty seats in these districts.

The election of members to the Honor Council will be held on March 22.

M. D. I—Robert E. Dornbush, M. D. III—Albert L. Ellis and John R. Corne, M. D. VI—John E. Lawrence, Jr., M. D. IX—Robert L. Farb and Bill Miller.

Also M. D. X—Harry J. Uhrich, Jr., M. D. XI— William Pittman, and M. D. XII—Richard E. Irvin. Thomas Haney, and James L. Lenz.

The following are the students endorsed by the Commission for positions on the Women's Honor Council:

W. D. I—Elder Witt, W. D. III—Sharon Rose, and W. D. IV—Karen R. Hill and Cheryl Lynn Sedlacek.

Brick Sidewalk Will Be Relaid At 'Mighty Mo'

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

The brick sidewalk which is being built by Morrison residents and which is now 53 feet long will be taken up next week and reconstructed by a crew from the Building and Grounds Department.

B. L. Ross, assistant Superintendent of Building and Grounds, said that the sidewalk has not been started before now because of the bad weather that has continued for the past several months.

The thousands of bricks to be used as material for the sidewalk from the back of Morrison along a path to the field house parking lot have been stacked there since last November.

Ross said, "After we begin the construction at the end of next week, it should be completed in two or three weeks if the nice weather continues."

The cost of the project is covered by the money left from the construction of the dormitory for use in the construction of sidewalks and landscaping.

The students living in Morrison who park in the Ramshead parking lot have been having to climb the steep bank to the dorm all year. Ross said he plans to look over the situation and see if steps are needed from the parking lot to the dorm.

"If steps are needed to protect the bank and hlep students get to their residence, we will build it also," he said.

The dirt path from the field house to the north entrance to Kenan Stadium will remain as it is until some further appropriations are alloted to the construction of walks on campus.

Aptheker Attacks Johnson And 'Aggressive Policies'

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

Herbert Aptheker told a group of Carolina students and faculty Wednesday night that his recent unauthorized trip to Hanoi now seems "like a nightmare."

Speaking at the interdenominational Community Church on Purefoy Rd., the Communist described his experiences with North Vietnamese leaders.

"The Vietnamese feel the war is a struggle for independence, and I believe them," he said. He argued that the people of Viet Nam "do not want to wage war with the United States. They do not seek to damage our cities. Defense is their main concern."

Commenting on President Johnson's "peace offensive," Aptheker said he agreed with the North Vietnamese, who considered it "demagogic." He reported that the North Vietnamese premier told him that the United States had not contacted his government, despite the American claim to have "knocked on all the doors."

The State Department revoked Aptheker's passport after the illegal Viet Nam trip. Straughton Lynd, a Yale professor, and Tom Hayden, founder of SDS tlso took the trip.

SDS invited Aptheker to speak here, but he was denied a platform by Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson last week.

Waller remained next to Aptheker during the hour talk, which was followed by a question and answer session.

Aptheker rarely took his hands from the lecturn as he repeatedly referred to "Johnson" (President Lyndon) and the "aggressive policies of the United States."

"The Johnson administration" is impotent in dealing with civil rights killings, but it "can burn villages and ravish a people who have done us no harm," Aptheker charged.

Citing things "in favor" of President Johnson's Viet Nam policies, Aptheker said the "domino theory" (if one nation falls the rest will follow) is a "facade."

"The truth is actually the contrary," he said. "The Johnson policy has flung all the dominos on the floor."

Aptheker said Red China has used "amazing restraint" in its relations with the United States. He drew another comparison by asking how we (the United States) would feel if China had occupied Nantucket, the Florida Keys, and Long Island.

Red China has shown "amazing restraint" by not entering into the Viet Nam war, he said.

Board Upholds DTH Firing

A resolution upholding the firing of a Daily Tar Heel business staff member was passed yesterday by the Publications Board.

Woody Sobol, former advertising manager, was fired Friday by Bussiness Manager Jack Harrington because "instructions were not carried out to my satisfaction," Harrington said.

Sobol applied to the publications board after his discharge and Harrington's decision was upheld.

Eastertide Show At Planetarium

Morehead Planetarium began its traditional spring program, entitled "Easter, the Awakening," Tuesday, March 8. The program is being presented for its seventeenth season to an anticipated crowd of 25,000 people.

"The theme of resurrection and the awakening in nature combine to produce a program that attracts more visitors per week than any other," according to Planetarium Director A. F. Jenzano.

The program includes a dramatization of the creation according to Genesis, reproduction of Jerusalem as it appears today and a dramatization of the Easter story.

"Easter the Awakening" is presented each evening at 8:30; Saturday at 11 a.m., 1, 3, 4 and 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2, 3, 4 and 8:30 p.m.

New Elections Set

Council Declares Referendum Void

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

The UNC Constitutional Council yesterday ruled that the Feb. 22 referendum on the so-called "slate amendment" was not valid. The Council set Tuesday as the date for another vote on the amendment.

Council Chairman Van McNair in announcing the council's decision said, "After considering all the facts in this case, we can find no other decision than to say that the referendum on the 'slate amendment' is not valid."

Before the hearing was conducted, the council deliberated about 40 minutes on the question on whether the protest of the referendum was filed within the 96-hour limit set in the election laws.

McNair said the board could not find "any definite guidelines" on which to act and would hear both sides of the case.

Baynard Harris, a resident of Alexander Residence Hall, filed the protest on the grounds that polls in Alexander were not opened for the referendum and that polls at Y-Court were not properly manned.

In the hearing, Harris said there were "flagrant violations of the election laws and a significant number of voters were not allowed to vote" and asked the council to rule the referendum invalid. He said his protest was not based on a "technicality" but on the "flagrant misconduct" during the election.

Arthur Hayes, representing Student Government, told the council that showing there was error in the election process was not enough to invalidate the referendum.

"There is no need to hold another election," he said, "no need whatsoever."

Jim Little, SP chairman, also recommended to the council that the results of the election stand as valid.

In his statement to the council, Harris said there was a "possibility" for ballot box stuffing and that minimum safeguards were not provided for in the referendum.

Following the announcement of the decision, Harris said, "The student body has been rendered a great service with this deicision."

Harry Day, housemaster of Alexander Residence Hall, should serve as due notice to those in charge that they should discharge their obligations consistent with the importance that the election process bears to Student Government and to the student body."

McNair said he felt the students want the "slate amendment" but "the election was grossly mishandled and there was no other way for the council to rule."

The council chairman emphasized the need for "comprehensive legislation" to be passed by Student Government concerning the elction process. "We are continually appalled by the irresponsibility of the elections board," McNair said.

The constitutional amendment passed Feb. 22, by a two-to-one majority in a light turnout.

Another referendum is set for Tuesday so that if the amendment is approved, it will be in effect in the March 22 elections.

CFI Meeting Held

The steering committee of the Committee for Free Inquiry will meet at 2:30 p.m. today in the Executive Offices of Student Government.

Student Body President Paul Dickson, chairman of the steering committee, announced the meeting Wednesday, March 9, along with the opening of a "Free Speech Defense Fund" in the Student Activi ies Fund office in G. M.

Dickson and Student Body Treasurer Tom White are the only persons authorized to remove monies from the fund.

Dickson said booths will be set up in Y-Court, Chase Cafeteria, and Lenoir Hall to solicit money for the fund. Before individuals give money to students, they should make sure the solicitor has a letter from Dickson authorizing him to solicit funds.

However, persons may send checks for the fund to Student Government offices, according to Dickson. "We are asking each student to give at least $1 and, if possible, more," he added.

Some $1500 to $2000 will be needed at first for legal services for a law suit, and any money not used will be donated to the North Carolina chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, Dickson explained.

CFI Holds Seminar

The Committee for Free Inquiry discussed Herbert Aptheker's talk on Viet Nam yesterday at a seminar led by SPU chairman Chuck Schunior, CFI member Richard French and political science professor Lewis Lipsitz.

More than 50 persons heard Lipsitz and Schunior criticize the United States' Viet Nam policy while saying they did not agree with all of Aptheker's foreign policy views.

Lipsitz said Aptheker's opinions are excessively influenced by Marxist dogma.

At least 100 persons attended the seminar, which lasted more than three hours and was held at Polk Place. Many stayed for only five minutes and then wandered off.

Most of French's remarks were directed against the speaker ban.

Ehringhaus Art Show

Ehringhaus will stage its Second Annual Art Exhibit March 12 through 20. The show will contain works by Ehringhaus artists and will include sculptures, oils, water colors, inks and photographs.

The exhibition will be officially opened Saturday at 1 p.m. by the Assistant to the Dean of Men, Robert Kepner. An informal reception attended by the college officers will be held following the opening.

Shake-Up In MRC

By STEVE LACKEY
DTH Staff Writer

Elections were held in the MRC meeting Wednesday night, but only after 26 members were purged from the roll because a quorum was not present.

Members having more than two unexcused absences were removed from the roll after quorum was called and it was discovered that only 47 of the standing membership of 94 were present.

He did not feel it was right to "have 25 members electing the president to serve over the entire residence hall" system.

MRC president Sonny Pepper recessed the meeting for 15 minutes so that a majority could be found. It was during this recess that Pepper and Gary Boggs, acting as secretary, purged the roll.

Pepper attributed the low attendance to "the general apathy of the men's residence halls."

He said that when a member leaves because of absences his residence president is supposed to appoint a new MRC man. Then "they just don't come," Pepper said.

There were no representatives at the meeting from Battle - Vance - Pettigrew, Everett, Ruffin or Carr Halls.

A Real Law Of Protection

Why ban any speaker from the campus?

To keep young, impressionable students from hearing words from subversive lips.

Students cannot be stopped from hearing any speaker. They have demonstrated they will listen to him on a sidewalk or in a church—without any restraints on procedure which the school administration might impose if it allowed the speaker to use campus facilities.

Banning a speaker makes a martyr of him, builds sympathy for him, and attracts listeners to him who ordinarily would be unaware of his existence.

Yes sir, that speaker ban law really protects students.

Free Love For UNC

Right?

Well, UNC going to have have to hustle to outstrip the University of California in one field—sexual freedom.

According to Time magazine, the emphasis at Berkeley is shifting from free speech to free love.

A half dozen origies, attended by both students and non-students, have been held in the past month in the San Francisco Bay area.

Time quoted him as saying, "Man will only become free when he can overcome his own guilt and when society stops trying to manage his sex life for him."

The campus Sexual Freedom Forum is headed by freshman Kurt Rust, whose philosophy on sexual restraint is: "Do I want to do it? Does it hurt anyone else?"

We strongly agree with such attitudes, and most heartily advocate the establish of a chapter of these organizations on this campus.

We also suggest that the next General Assembly appropriate funds for construction of a home for unwed mothers in Chapel Hill.

Part Of The Conspiracy

We freely admit that Communists probably do all sorts of sly little things to trip us up—you know, to create confusion and disorder in the country.

They might have incited the Harlem and Watts riots. Some folks are convinced the whole speaker ban controversy is proceeding according to a master plan devised in Moscow.

And now the Boys Club of America is falling prey to this insidious threat.

"People have been calling us and saying, 'don't expect me to give you another dime' or 'maybe I ought to throw a brick through your window,' " said Edward J. Stapleton, public information director of the boys clubs.

Why?

Because some American radio and television announcers, when they talk about the Dubois Club, pronounce it "Du Boy" rather than "Du Bwah."

And the Justice Department has ordered the W.E.B. Dubois Club to register as a Communist front organization.

The situation has become so severe that former Vice President Richard Nixon, national board chairman of boys clubs, said, "Because . . . of the unfortunate similarity in the pronunciation of the 'Dubois Clubs' and the 'Boys Clubs of America,' some people have been misled into confusing one organization with the other.

"This is an almost classic example of Communist deception and duplicity," Nixon said.

Sure, Dick. Uh-huh. Yeah.

We realy think the Dubois Club was named just to give boys clubs throuble.

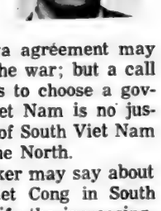
Let's Get The Facts Straight

Those who heard Herbert Aptheker speak Wednesday night heard a talk that ranged from legitimate, if extreme, criticism of America's role in Viet Nam to pure fantasy—the Party Line. The legitimate criticism has been heard before, but most students at the Community Church were probably hearing Communist doctrine expressed live for the first time.

Aptheker delivers his lines well. After the speech, I heard one student comment on the soundness of the logic he had heard. Aptheker's arguments, though, are by no means unanswerable. I don't intend to discuss Viet Nam in any detail in this column, but some comment on Aptheker's statements is in order.



Aptheker continually emphasized America's role as the aggressor against the Vietnamese people and the desirability of a peace settlement on the basis of the Geneva Accords of 1954. The Geneva agreement may be a good way to settle the war; but a call for free, general elections to choose a government for a unified Viet Nam is no justification for an invasion of South Viet Nam by regular troops from the North.

No matter what Aptheker may say about the popularity of the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam, he cannot justify the increasingly strong invasion from North Viet Nam. It is the North Vietnamese who most properly deserve the label of aggressor.

Aptheker's position on Viet Nam, however, has been echoed, more or less, by many non - Communists. When he shifted gears into the regular Communist propaganda, though, he moved farther from the world of reality. Some of his distortions and omissions were inexcusable in one who is supposed to be a scholar. In particular, his defense of the "restraint" of Communist China flies in the face of the facts.

Aptheker emphasized that he was discussing particularly Chinese-American relations, although in a roundabout way, he came close to excusing China's invasion of India. Korea was his special subject.

According to Aptheker, the United States was the aggressor there: China warned the United States repeatedly after the latter crossed the 38th parallel and finally entered the war when the Americans announced the Yalu River was their goal. Once the Chinese had repelled the Americans, they withdrew from Korea, while we are still there.

Amazingly, Aptheker failed to mention the reason for the presence of American troops in Korea, namely the invasion of South Korea by North Korea. The United States entered the war to fight North Korea, not China. Had we not come to the aid of South Korea, she would have been overwhelmed by the forces from the North.

The United States did not set one foot into China and was fighting the North Koreans — the Yalu is also the boundary of North Korea — when China entered the war. Even after the Chinese invasion, this country refrained from making any air strikes across the Yalu into China. The United States, not China, was the country which showed restraint.

Letters To The Editor

Teacher May Leave Because Of Ban

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

The following remarks have been extracted from a letter I wrote to Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson on Feb. 16. As I promised the Acting Chancellor that I would not disclose the contents of the letter before the Feb. 28th meeting of the board of trustees, they are presented here as an open announcement of my intentions and present commitment to the University:

"With all due respect and in good faith, I submit to you and the Department of Sociology one limiting condition upon which my continued employment at the University of North Carolina will depend.

"Unless a fundamental change occurs in the near future on the already prolonged speaker ban issue, I will not return to this campus in 1967. More specifically, as a minimum requirement, I shall view the appearance at Chapel Hill of either Herbert Aptheker or any two at least moderately controversial speakers to whom the present law applies as sufficient evidence that free speech has been restored.

"(The use of any specific criterion here is necessarily somewhat arbitrary; yet, it has the advantage of informing others what precisely I believe must be accomplished and of providing an index by which I can objectively assess the situation later.)

"Although more open to individual interpretation, I nevertheless add that no speaker to whom the law applies be barred from appearing at Chapel Hill unless evidence is provided which clearly indicates that no educational purpose would be served. The burden of proof ought to lie with those who wish to enforce censorship, not with those attempting to exercise traditionally recognized freedoms.

"While I am confident that under your leadership the traditional freedoms of this University will be restored, I am equally confident that if the present controversy is allowed to repeat itself in the near future, the quality and long-standing reputation of the University will have been so impaired in the interim that few incentives would remain for which I would find it desirable to return.

"I am aware of the fact that the University of North Carolina's confrontation with the principles of free speech are not unique. Other state institutions throughout the country have encountered such debates in the past, and often have emerged with little observable damage.

"I believe, however, that there are at least three unique conditions which make it very unlikely that this university could arise from a continuation of the present controversy unscathed:

"1. In terms of a national reputation, most of the universities previously affected did not have nearly as much to lose as does North Carolina. Those that did were sufficiently well-endowed, economically, to retain a competitive position in the academic marketplace. The University of North Carolina, on the other hand, has the prestige to lose but clearly does not have the economic resources with which it reasonably could bolster its position and, in the long run, avoid serious losses.

"2. In few states are the major public institutions of higher education as intimately bound to their political structure as in North Carolina where the Governor of the state officially presides over the main governing board of the University. Although not necessarily requiring review, this linkage makes any and all courses of action taken by the University's administration conveniently available for review at frequent intervals before the delegated leadership of the state.

"The Feb. 7 action of the executive committee of the board of trustees in Raleigh clearly demonstrates that this situation does not allow the University to remain reasonably free from political interference.

"Moreover, it is somewhat wishful thinking for any of us to believe that the establishment of more specific ground rules covering the procedures for making decisions on visiting speakers, such as those presently being devised, will in the long run, cure this particular aspect of the problem.

"3. Already far more students at Chapel Hill, as well as members of the faculty, have been aggravated than previously had been evident, I am quite sure, on most other campuses when confronted with the speaker ban issue. The intensity of the present involvement of our student and faculty bodies may be due partly to the more generalized challenge to civil liberties that has been provoked by the war in Viet Nam, and due partly to the even more generalized movement for educational reform currently led by American college students.

"These historical events are not, however, the only circumstances which may help explain the protest that has centered, to such as alarming degree, on the speaker ban issue. Our concern here, no doubt, also has been heightened by the unparalleled position of the University of North Carolina within the total framework of higher education in America.

"That is, the image of "the best university in the South" carries with it special responsibilities and obligations of which this faculty and this administration most assuredly are well aware. Whatever its sources, the elements for collective action have been firmly seeded in the speaker ban issue and the University and the State of North Carolina literally cannot absorb the probable costs of a mass protest without, in the process, suffering irreparable harm.

"By nature or temperament, I would call myself a moderate on most affairs, as my colleagues probably would attest. Yet, on this particular issue I see little, if anything, remaining for us to compromise — without seriously compromising the most fundamental principle probably ever devised for the preservation of freedom.

". . . I do not wish to leave Chapel Hill, nor does my wife, nor do my children. There is no finer department with which I would rather associate, no finer academic community in which I would prefer to live. I, therefore, am convinced that I personally have something very great to lose here, the prospect of which has led me to write you."

Since this letter was written, both Frank Wilkinson and Herbert Aptheker have been barred from speaking on this campus and the two recent invitations extended by the political science graduate students and the Developmental Psychology Training Program to the non-controversial communists, Vladimir Alexandrov and Hanus Papousek, have been approved.

Obviously the conditions of my letter, as yet, have not been met. In fact, in a literal interpretation, the conditions have been violated since no evidence has been provided that the appearance of either Wilkinson or Aptheker would not have served an "educational purpose."

Actually, those who heard Wilkinson "off campus" seem to agree not only that this man had something of value to say but that speaking was a man of unusual integrity and purpose.

On the same technical grounds, however, that the Acting Chancellor has barred the appearance of Wilkinson and Aptheker (i.e., their scheduled appearances were for dates specifically denied by the executive committee of the board of trustees), I do not hold the presentation of evidence regarding "educational purpose" as binding — but only in these two cases.

Furthermore, I recognize that, owing to the court action planned by the Committee for Free Inquiry, I cannot reasonably insist that these speakers now be extended new invitations in which case the "technicality" presumably would no longer apply.

I do, however, reaffirm my insistence that no speakers to whom the law applies be barred in the future without clear evidence from the censors that "no educational purpose would be served." If this is an unreasonable request, then we surely are bound to a most unreasonable law.

To Live, Act

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

To those who would ignorantly sit by and passively endure an unconstitutional practice which denies men the right to express their beliefs (no matter how divergent from the flood of accepted ideas), and to the forces of reaction which would verbally assault an orderly and legal picket line of concerned students — their fellow students — I would only quote Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr.:

"I think that, as life is action and passion, it is required of a man that he should share the passion and action of his time at peril of being judged not to have lived."

Air Dilemma

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

I wholeheartedly agree with David Rothman's opinion (March 8) concerning the 900 man transport plane. All indications are that the C5A will be put to commercial flight in a not too distant future. However, in spite of the higher safety guaranteed by industries, no machine is perfect, and crashes will occur.

The consequences, emotional or otherwise, caused by the loss of a group of 900 persons will be of a different character to that of losing 600 lives over the nation's highways during the Labor Day weekend.

Society will have a dilemma at that point — it can avoid using the plane at a great financial loss to industries and airlines; or, it can settle for cheaper plane fare in exchange for catastrophic loss of lives.

A similar dilemma can be forseen for the super-sonic transport (SST) which is smaller than the C5A but has the added nuisance of sonic boom which accompanies all supersonic flights. Some aviation officials have called it the sound of progress to which society should get accustomed.

I think that civilization will regress should human beings be made insensitive to the kind of noise which renders cows milkless and chickens eggless. It is too high a price for having breakfast in New York and lunch in Hong Kong. If urgent business is at stake, the billions spent in developing the supersonic transport can be better invested in perfecting a global network of satellite communications systems.

Part V. The Catch-Up Program

"I didn't know what it was to study," said the towhead.

"I did, but I didn't want no part of it," replied the freckle-face.

This conversation between two students at North Carolina's Advancement School reveals in two sentences what many have called "the most exciting school in America."

The Advancement School is in Winston - Salem. It is housed in an old hospital. It is a residence school. At any one time it has only 300 students. So what makes it exciting?

For one thing, it was planned in excitement. Its planning began late in the fall of 1963, and the doors opened in the fall of 1964. I proposed this target date to our original key group called to the Mansion to consider establishing a special residence school for what educators call "underachievers."

They said the idea was good, that the school could be put together, but not likely on target. That would never do, I reminded them. My term of office would end in 1964. They promised to try to get the job done on time.

New School

This was to be a new kind of school. U. S. Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel made us a planning grant of $80,000. In the Office of Education in Washington there can be found report on Planning Grant No. F-033. It tells a story of excited educators who set about to plan "the most exciting school in America."

We knew that we were on to something very complicated. We were struggling for answers to motivating children who came from no common background. Their homes might be in slum sections or average neighborhoods. They include the so-called "advantaged underachievers" in the more wealthy suburban schools. Their parents might be professional or laboring people.

It was not a matter of native ability at all. It was something else. Perhaps they had a poor teacher at a critical time, or were in a bad school, or were in a troublesome neighborhood or part of a troubled family, or had parents who didn't encourage them.

Maybe they were just slow starters. It might be that our methods of teaching simply did not reach a particular kind of child. For some reason, or, more likely, a variety of reasons, they just didn't pick up the ball and run.

We wanted to do something about it.

In October of 1963 we prepared "A Statement Concerning the North Carolina Advancement School." It was to serve the visiting and local consultants as guidelines of our hopes. It set forth the concept, leaving it to the consultants to evaluate the validity and develop the details:

"The North Carolina Advancement School is a residential school which will help annually 1400 junior and senior high school students of good potential. They will be helped to learn, in three-month terms, to read, write and do arithmetic better. It will use and evaluate modern teaching methods, seeking to help the State school system as well as these young people excel in performance, and it will be a center for teacher training.

"There will be no cost to the students for room, board, or training . . ."

Crucial Point

We ultimately decided on eighth graders to begin with, because we thought that this was the earliest age at which parents would want to let a child go away for an extended period of time, and because we felt that this was a crucial time in the educational process.

"This is not a local school in any sense; it will be the first school of its type in our country, and the School will be free to find people who have worked with these problems, who are aware of what new methods will achieve and what they won't achieve, and who can identify with the problems of these young people. The School will be free to find its personnel anywhere it chooses . . ."

We were going to need money. And we were going to need leadership with verve and imagination.

The money would come from the Carnegie Corporation, a half million dollars, the first to show concrete faith in the concept of the Advancement School. It would also come from the U. S. Office of Education, $1.4 million, with about the same from the state of North Carolina spread over a period of three years.

The best man in America to run this kind of school was Gordon L. McAndrew, then heading the intercity project in Oakland, California, dedicated to the objective of upgrading the educational opportunities of 3,500 children from the slum areas.

Experienced in positions of major responsibility in the Oakland public school system, brilliant, imaginative, concerned about children and education — he was our man.

He visited North Carolina, he knew he had only a few months to put together a staff, he saw that the buildings were not ready, he understood that the federal grant had not been approved.

Liked Audacity

The audacity of the proposition captivated him.

"When I got back home I still just couldn't see it," remembers Dr. McAndrew. "The whole thing seemed impossible. And yet, I couldn't get it out of my mind. If we could bring it off, it would be the most exciting thing in education in the United States."

Is it working? Are its students catching up? Are the lessons of any value to the thousands in the public schools who, for lack of space, can never attend the Advancement School? We are beginning to see the form of an answer. It will work.

The parents, the principals, and the students who have gone back home believe, with wholeheartedness, that the school is a marvelous answer to the prayers of many parents.

And will the ripples go out to all the girls and boys who are now slumping at their desks, loafing through school life? We think so. We hope so. The most important thing was to start.

* * *

In the early part of 1964, the presidents of the University of North Carolina and Duke University and the Chairman of the State Board of Higher Education had breakfast with me in Durham.

"I'd like for us to explore," I told them, "an evaluation and research center, drawing into partnership everybody in North Carolina concerned with education. We should include every source capable of contributing something to improved schools, and every position capable of putting new approaches to practical use."

John Ehle talked to many people, and one day came in and said let's call it "Link."

Former Governor Terry Sanford

"Where in the world did you get that name?" I asked.

"The initials of the Learning Institute of North arolina — you spell it LINC."

So we took the name and we incorporated a private nonprofit corporation dedicated to bringing together "in cooperative action educators from the various strata in our state, public private and governmental."

Found Money

The charter members contributing $60,000 each to the annual administrative budget were Duke University, the State Board of Education, the University of North Carolina, and The North Carolina Fund. We had no trouble finding the money to get it started.

To head this broad - based and ambitious agency, the Board elected a distinguished Harold Howe, II, then superintendent of the schools of Scarsdale, N. Y.

The early purposes and hopes are described in a statement publicized by the LINC directors. It is to be "a statewide cooperative effort. Its tools include its own staff and the research resources of the schools of the State. Its principal laboratory is the North Carolina public schools system. And its directors and staff seek the best minds in education in the State and country to assist its programs . . .

"In performing this function, the Learning Institute serves, as its abbreviated name suggests, as the 'link' between educational research and development and the application of promising findings in the schools of North Carolina."

As I reflect on the manner in which I have related this story of North Carolina's efforts to improve education I have the feeling I have made it appear that every time we came upon a good idea, everybody eagerly joined to put it into operation. Such was not the case, and those who would work to improve any governmental function must enter the battle prepared to fight.

We had tried to heed Carl Sandburg's poetry, always measuring our decisions by asking, "What about the people?" He called them the "Reservoir of the human reserves that shape history."

But people do not act alone. They have joined together in government for action and expression that shapes whatever their history is to be. The instrument of their imprint on the sands of memory is responsive government — a lantern of innovation and progress, bold in the discharge of its mission, equal to the dreams of its citizens, and reflective of the best that is in them.

If this nation dare promise greatness, then education is the buttress of the covenant. Self-government is not a detached and supervisory force. It is people. All that government can do for education will be repaid in self-sustenance, as it helps what is really itself to reach for the horizons and beyond.

It is through education that government lifts to a more civilized state the people it serves, and serves in a more civilized way the idea that gave it life.

Symposium To Hear Ellison

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

Ralph Ellison is the Negro writer who refreshes, one of the few unique creators today who refuses to succomb to the "voice of the people."

He will come to Carolina for the bi-annual Carolina Symposium.

Ellison does not ignore the Negro protest movement, but rather transmutes the movement into an art form.

"I found the greatest difficulty for a Negro writer was the problem of revealing what he truly felt," Ellison says. He rejects "serving up" what Negroes feel and are supposed to feel.

"The Invisible Man" won the 1953 National Book Award for Fiction and has been published in nine languages. The same work won Ellison the Russwurm Award in 1953 and the National Newspaper Publishers Award in 1954.

Ellison was born in Oklahoma City in 1914. His life has been one long free - lance, he writes, adding he has worked as "shoe-shine boy, hobo, waiter, jazz musician, photographer, and audio-electronics hobbyist."

He majored in music at the Tuskegee Institute from 1933 to 1936 before leaving for New York City to take up sculpture.

Ellison will examine the plight of the modern Negro in his April 21 talk for the Symposium. He will appear with C. Vann Woodward, as they discuss "Man, Mind and Myth" in the light of the changing myths of the South.

The Negroes' attempts to "overcome the frustrations of discrimination" are mostly a waste of energy, according to Ellison.

But Ellison has used this energy for creation to produce a colorful and nightmarish circus of his personality found in "The Invisible Man."

Senate Ok's Money For Viet Nam War

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $275-million dose of emergency aid for South Viet Nam's war-ravaged economy won overwhelming Senate approval yesterday. And a swift, final vote sent to the White House a bill authorizing $4.8 billion in new battlefield funds.

The aid vote came after a warning that without fresh economic help the South Vietnamese government might collapse.

The aid authorization bill passed, 82 to 2, after a scant five hours of debate — a thin echo of the long and bitter argument over the big military spending measure.

Sens. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., and Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, were the lone dissenters.

The military money bill cleared its real test in the Senate 10 days ago. Yesterday's voice votes in both House and Senate reconciled minor differences and sent it to President Johnson for his signature. The money is for weapons and other military supplies.

As the Senate acted on the emergency aid bill totaling $416 million for Viet Nam and other trouble spots, an Asian affairs expert predicted Communist China would fight to preserve the Red regime in North Viet Nam.

Prof. John K. Fairbank of Harvard University said he doubts Red China would permit unification of Viet Nam as a Southeast Asian buffer state.

". . . The Chinese Communists cannot afford to let us into North Viet Nam without a fight," he told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, "and we cannot afford to let the Communist Chinese into the South where they would threaten the power balance in all of Southeast Asia."

Fairbank recommended Admission of Red China to the United Nations—and, at the same time, endorsed a firm policy of military containment.

He said the United States is "stuck in a dirty war."

Republicans: 'Great Society Has Become High Society'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican congressional leaders jibed at the Johnson administration yesterday by saying that "The Great Society has become the high society," complete with "high taxes, high prices, high spending, high deficits."

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan teamed up at a news conference to accuse the administration of fueling inflation by piling domestic spending on top of Viet Nam war costs and engaging in "fiscal chicanery."

"Inflation is not around the corner — it is here," said Dirksen, the Senate GOP leader. He said it will "rank right up at the top" as an election issue this year.

Ford, the House Republican leader, said it is time for the administration to be candid about the government's budget so that the people will know "how much they are spending to meet the administration's vast commitments here and abroad."

Official Viet Nam War Death Toll Is Released

The weekly summary issued yesterday showed battle deaths up at 156 for a total of 2,491 since the start of 1961. The death count was 130 for the previous week and 97 for the week before.

The number of current missing moved up by one to 152. The list showed 31 U. S. military personnel as detained.

The death toll of U. S. servicemen has averaged nearly 100 each week since the rapid escalation of the war.

Powerful General Out In Viet Nam

SAIGON (AP) — Premier Nyayon Coa Ky's ruling military junta yesterday dismissed one of its most powerful members, flamboyant Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi.

The ouster apparently was carried out without touching off a government crisis, but it exposed a crack in the clique of young generals who have shared power since 1964. Thi is 40.

Washington watched for developments. A White House Deputy Press Secretary, Robert H. Fleming, said "We're still waiting for details."

There was no official announcement here, but it was learned that Ky's 10-man directory fired Thi as commander of the 1st corps area, northernmost of four such military areas in South Viet Nam.

That automatically eliminated him from the government circle, for it was as a corps area commander that he held on of the seats of political power.

Ky and his associates reached the decision in a closely guarded meeting at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airport. Tanks and extra troops were stationed around the base. Vietnamese Air Force planes, which old-timers call the coup patrol, circled overhead.

The young Turk generals often have told each other that, "as long as we stick together, we can weather all storms."

They came unstuck when they purged Thi, a pale, intense paratrooper who very nearly overthrew former President Ngo Dinh Diem in a lightning coup attempt in 1960, then spent three years in exile. He came back to take over a division and then the corps command.

The purge apparently was unanimous and U. S. authorities were reported to welcome it.

"Thi was the only irritant in the whole junta," one U. S. official said. "Now we have unanimity."

Robber Didn't Get Everything

WINCHENDON, Mass. (AP) —A front-page advertisement in the Courier, a weekly newspaper, may have puzzled a thief.

"If the person or persons who stole the outboard motor from my camp at Lack Monomnac would like the gas can that goes with it, stop by at the store."

Special Forces Monitoring Camp Falls To Viet Cong

SAIGON (AP) — Smoking ruins of the Ashau Valley Special Forces camp, which monitored Red infiltration routes from Laos, fell last night to North Vietnamese regulars estimated to outnumber the defenders 6-1.

Helicopters flew out some survivors among a Garrison of 15 or 20 U. S. Green Beret advisers and about 300 Montagnard irregulars before a reinforced Communist regiment—2,000 or more men — overran the final bunker in a two-day battle.

"We closed Ashau at 1745 this evening," said Lt. Col. Kenneth B. Lacey, commander of the U. S. Special Forces detachment at Da Nang, 60 miles southeast of the battle site. That was 5:45 p.m. (4:45 a.m. EST).

Coincidence linked this development with dismissal by Saigon's military government of one of its most powerful members, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, 40, from both his political and military jobs.

A restive, French-trained soldier, Thi commanded the 1st corps area — northernmost of four such military zones in South Viet Man—and as such sat in the 10-man ruling directory headed by Premier Nguyen Cao Ky.

The Ashua camp, near the Loatian frontier 360 miles due north of Saigon, is within the 1st corps area. But the ouster order, decided upon by the directory in a closely guarded airport meeting, was described as arising chiefly from Thi's light regard for Saigon orders.

Casualties among the camp's defenders were heavy. Three U. S. aircraft—two planes and a helicopter—were lost in aerial support pressed despite low-hanging cloud across the wooded, mountainous territory that made all flights hazardous.

But Col. William McKean, commander of U. S. Special Forces in the area, said his men "fought every inch of the way" and he believed the toll among the North Vietnamese also was high.

Before the collapse, McKean said, helicopters flew out "a certain number of defenders." He gave no figures.

AP correspondent Robin P. Mannock reported from Da Nang that three Americans and 16 Montagnards, all wounded, had been flown to that base. He said there was no indicatio nhow many more might have been brought out.

State Cooking Up Klan Trouble?

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials apparently are cooking up something new in the way of security measures for a rally the Ku Klux Klan has scheduled for the Maxton area March 27.

But the officials would not reveal what their plans are.

North Carolina Klan Grand Dragon J. Robert Jones has announced the klan plans to hold the rally near Maxton, in the same area where a similar gathering was routed by enraged Lumbee Indians in 1958.

Col. Charles A. Speed, commander of the State Highway Patrol, was asked about his plans for policing the rally. He said, "that owuld have to come from the State Bureau of Investigation."

Walter Anderson, SBI Director, said any details would have to come from Malcolm Seawell, former attorney general who is chairman of Gov. Dan Moore's committee on Law and Order which is keeping a lookout on the klan.

"I will say that we have some very definite plans and that they will be something rather unique," said Anderson, "but any release of information would have to come from Mr. Seawell.

Seawell could not be reached for comment.

Mrs. J. Robert Jones, the grand dragon's wife, said Klan security guards will surround the meeting "just for precaution."

"We will lease the land on which the rally is to be held so we can keep off trespassers," she said.

Simeon Oxendine, an Indian leader from Pembroke, chuckled when asked if the Indians would raid the rally as they did in 1958.

President Signs Outer Banks Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty-eight miles of wild and beautiful barrier islands off the North Carolina coast became the Cape Lookout National Seashore yesterday as President Johnson signed a bill creating the park.

"The serenity of nature must be more than a once-a-year experience," the President said.

"If we are to be a whole and happy people, this experience should touch our daily and weekly lives."

The new park is located just south of Cape Hatteras National Seashore and is the nation's seventh national seashore.

The chain of islands which make up the new park are very sparsely populated. They bear the full force of Hurricanes that sweep up the Atlantic.

The government plans to spend $3.2 million for small boat marinas, fishing camps, camp-grounds and the preparation of beach access areas. Development of the seashore will start with the purchase of land that is privately owned.

The Army Engineers plan a $5.8 million sand dune project for protection of the storm-battered beaches. The work will probably get underway within two years.

A park headquarters will be established near Beaufort, N. C., on the mainland near the southern tip of the new park.

The President, in signing the bill, called for restoring the environment around cities, where he said three out of four Americans will be living in the year 2,000.

He warned against condemning "a full two-thirds of our population to an ugly, drab and mechanical fate."

"I believe that we can avoid that fate," he said.

Major Banks Increase Minimum Lending Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Major banks increased their minimum lending rate to 5 1-2 per cent from 5 per cent yesterday.

Thomas S. Gates, Chairman, and John M. Myer Jr., President of Morgan Guaranty, said the increase was "the result of disparities existing between commercial bank and other credit market rates and of a continuing increase in loan demand."

The stock market started losing ground immediately after the announcements.

The most recent previous increase in the prime rate to 5 per cent from 4 1-2 per cent came Dec. 6, a day after the Federal Reserve Board increased to 4 1-2 per cent from 4 per cent its discount rate—the federal reserve banks charge for loans to member commercial banks.

The treasury declined to comment on the increase. Last fall Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler argued against bank interest rate increases. But officials haven't nce the taken any such stand since the federal reserve board raised the discount rate.

An increase in the prime rate, the rate banks charge their largest customers, often precedes increases in other rates of interest, such as those on consumer loans.

High interest rates are regarded as bearish on the stock money is drawn from stocks, attracted by the high returns offered by banks.

Police Turn Hoses On Negro Marchers

HERTFORD, N.C. (AP) — Firemen turned fire hoses on 150 marching Negro high school pupils yesterday, and police braced for another demonstration similar to the one Wednesday night that they broke up with tear gas.

The students started their march yesterday at Perquimans Union School, about six miles north of Hertford. They were met by firemen as they entered the community of 2,500 at the Perquimans River Bridge along busy U. S. 17.

The youngsters, soaked by the blasts of water, continued through town to the First Baptist Church. No injuries were reported and no arrests were made.

Friday night, Negro marchers answered police orders to board a prison bus by hurling rocks and brickbats. Police and state troopers, armed with long billy clubs, used tear gas to break up the disturbance.

The marches were staged by civil rights groups pushing for a 14-point desegretation plan. Their leaders want the hiring of Negro policemen, dupty sheriffs and store clerks.

The Rev. F. H. LeGarder of Edenton, regional director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference SLC said Negroes would march again Thursday night. He said police "made a big mistake last night."

The Rev. Mr. LeGarde said telegrams protesting police treatment were sent to President Johnson and Gov. Dan Moore.

The wire to the President said:

"Last night in the exercise of our constitutional rights more than 200 Negroes marched for freedom, jobs and justice in Hertford, N. C.

"We were stopped by the local and state police powers. Thirty were arrested, the rest hosed down with water and shot with tear gas. . .

We call upon you to help us gain our freedom, by enforcing our right to peaceful and non-violent protest as guaranteed under the First Amendment . . . We shall march again tonight."

Moore Wants Conference To Replace Demonstrations

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Dan Moore declared yesterday the time has come to end street demonstrations at Hertford and sit down at the conference table.

Moore told reporters at a news conference that racial incidents at Hertford Wednesday night and yesterday in which officers used tear gas and fire hoses to disperse groups of Negro demonstrators was "an unfortunate situation."

"I regret it," he said, and added: "The time for demonstrating is a thing of the past. I think it is much better for reasonable men to sit down at the table and work out their differences."

Moore said that a community relations committee had been formed recently at Hertford under the leadership of Chairman D. S. Coltrane of the State Good Neighbor Council.

"If the community relations committee had been formed some time ago and if it had had time to work I think these incidents would have been averted," Moore told the newsmen.

Soviet Union Says Mott Case Closed: Suicide

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government yesterday submitted its long awaited findings in the Newcomb Mott case to the U. S. Embassy and repeated the contention that the young American committeed suicide while in Soviet custody.

The U. S. Charge D'Affaires, John Guthrie, was summoned to the Soviet foreign ministry and given the findings by the head of the American section, Georgi Kornienko.

The United States had been pressing for clarification of the Mott case, which caused the State Department to warn U. S. tourists about the possible dangers of travel in the Soviet Union.

Mott, 27, died Jan. 20 while in transit to a Soviet labor camp to serve out an 18-month sentence he received on a charge of illegally entering the Soviet Union.

Patrolman Stack Has Specialty

BOSTON (AP)—Boston Patrolman Thomas Stack has a specialty on the force.

Stack has been a patrolman for 15 years and has delivered nine babies. When a maternity call comes to headquarters, his superiors usually call for Stack.

The patrolman has five children of his own, none delivered by Stack. "My wife would take one look at me and say 'Scram!' " he says.

WAKE ME WHEN IT'S OVER

The trouble with early morning classes is that you're too sleepy. At late morning classes you're too hungry. At early afternoon classes you're too logy. At late afternoon classes you're too hungry again. The fact is—and we might as well face it—there is no good time of day to take a class.

What shall we do then? Abandon our colleges to the ivy? I say no! I say America did not become the hope of mankind and the world's largest producer of butterfats and tallow by running away from a fight!

If you're always too hungry or too sleepy for class, then let's hold classes when you're not too hungry or sleepy: namely, while you're eating or sleeping.

Classes while eating are a simple matter. Just have a lecturer lecture while the eaters eat. But watch out for noisy foods. I mean who can hear a lecturer lecture when everybody is crunching celery or matzo or like that? Serve quiet stuff—like anchovy paste on a doughnut, or steaming bowls of lamb fat.

Now let us turn to the problem of learning while sleeping. First, can it be done?

Yes, it can. Psychologists have proved that the brain is definitely able to assimilate information during sleep. Take, for instance, a recent experiment conducted by a leading Eastern university (Stanford). A small tape recorder was placed under the pillow of the subject, a freshman named Wrobert Wright. When Wrobert was fast asleep, the recorder was turned on. Softly, all through the night, it repeated three statements in Wrobert's slumbering ear:

1. Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109 and is called "The Founder of English Eclectic Philosophy."
2. The banana plant is not a tree but a large perennial herb.
3. The Archduke Ferdinand was assassinated in 1914 at Sarajevo by a young nationalist named Mjilas Cvetnic, who has been called "The Trigger of World War I."

When Wrobert awoke in the morning, the psychologists said to him, "Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109. What is he called?"

Wrobert promptly answered, "Perennial Herb."

Next they asked him, "What has Mjilas Cvetnik been called?"

Wrobert replied, "Perennial Serb."

Finally they said, "Is the banana plant a tree?"

"To be honest," said Wrobert, "I don't know too much about bananas. But if you gents want any information about razor blades, I'm your man."

"Well," said the psychologists, "can you tell us a blade that shaves closely and cleanly without nicking, pricking, scratching, scraping, scoring, gouging, grinding, flaying or flensing?"

"Yes, I can," said Wrobert. "Personna® Stainless Steel Blades. Not only does Personna give you a true luxury shave, but it gives you heaps and gobs and bushels and barrels of true luxury shaves—each one nearly as truly luxurious as the first."

"Land's sake!" said the psychologists.

"Moreover," said Wrobert, "Personna is available not only in the Double Edge style blade, but also in the Injector style blade."

"Great balls of fire!" said the psychologists.

"So why don't you rush to your dealer and get some Personnas at once?" said Wrobert.

"We will," said the psychologists, twinkling, "but there is something we have to do first."

Whereupon they awarded Wrobert an honorary L.L.B. (Lover of Luxury Blades) degree, and then, linking arms, they sang and danced and bobbed for apples till the campfire had turned to embers.

Carolina Selects Clyde Lee As 'Best' Of All-Opponents

By BILL ROLLINS
DTH Sports Writer

Vanderbilt's Clyde Lee was named "the best player we faced" and was a unanimous first team selection as the Tar Heels picked their 1966 all-opponent team yesterday.

Lee, Vandy's All-American, polled the maximum of 60 points and was joined on the first team by Utah's spring-legged defensive ace, Jerry Chambers (51), Duke's ACC MVP Steve Vacendak (50) — the only conference player to make the first unit — John Wetzel (48) of Virginia Tech, and Virginia's Jim Connelly (40).

Twelve members of the UNC varsity voted, naming three teams each, with a first team nomination counting five points, a second team choice counting three, and a third counting one.

Lee was virtually unchallenged as the top opponent. Chambers was a distant second to the 6-9 Commodore center's nine votes with just two, and Duke's Jack Marin — although he placed only on the second team in overall point tallying — received one.

All told, 32 opponents were included in the voting, and 13 of the top 15 received at least one first team mention.

Here is the 1965-66 UNC all-opponent basketball team listed in the order of highest-to-lowest points received, with first team votes in parenthesis:

FIRST TEAM
Clyde Lee, Vanderbilt (12)	60
Jerry Chambers, Utah (9)	51
Steve Vacendak, Duke (8)	50
John Wetzel, VPI (7)	48
Jim Connelly, Virginia (4)	40
SECOND TEAM
Bob Leonard, WF (4)	35
Jack Marin, Duke (2)	33
Mal Graham, NUY (3)	25
Carl Head, West Va. (4)	24
Ron Williams, West Va. (1)	22
THIRD TEAM
John Moates, Richmond (2)	17
Keith Thomas, Vand'bt (1)	15
Paul Long, Wake Forest	15
Gary Schull, Fla. State (2)	12
Eddie Bied'bch, N. C. State	11

Chris Ellis, Virginia Tech's 6-4 frosh guard who powered the drive which led to the Carolina basketball frosh's only defeat of the past season, was named the club's top opponent of the year on an all-opponent team of ten picked by the Tar Babies this week.

Receiving unanimous selection along with Ellis were Pembroke State center Joe Gallagher and Davidson guard Wayne Huckel.

Completing the ten - man team were Ellis' teammates Ken Talley and Stan Kerrick, Fred Lind and Gene Bromstead of Duke, Steve Jackson of Virginia, and N. C. Staters Dick Braucher and Nick Trifunovich.

Rusk, an outstanding center on the Davidson team during his college days, told Davidson President Dr. Grier Martin by telephone from Washington that he hoped his schedule would permit him to be a spectator when the Wildcats play in the first round of the NCAA Eastern Regionals.

Dolphins Set For Tourney

By BOB CURRIE

Swimmers of the University of North Carolina have their sights set on the Eastern Seaboard Championships to be held this coming weekend at College Park, Md.

This group of tankmen boasts Olympic butterflier Phil Riker, All-Americans Pete Worthen, Rick Forum, Jack Hayden, Fred Lipp, John Sheldon, and Steve Hildenbrand, who all swam on this year's varsity which posted a winning record of nine wins and five defeats.

While the record of the Dolphins, third in the Atlantic Coast Conference, was not as impressive as it has been in past years, Tar Heel coach Pat Earey is hopeful that his boys will make a good showing.

"I think we can expect a good effort from our relay team," speculates Earey, "and there is no reason not to hope for some first places in the individual events. Pete Worthen, our top sprinter has done 21 seconds 'plus' several times this year in the 50-yard freestyle event. He did a 21 flat as a freshman and he has been under :50 in the 100 free (1:47.7) as a freshman. Riker will have some stiff competition from Frank Pratt of Army in the 200 butterfly event. Both of them have swum the 200 butterfly in 1:58 'plus.

"In previous years we have placed second and third. Topped ranked teams like Yale, Army, and Navy will make it hard for us to finish in the top ten. If N. C. State decides to go, it will be even more difficult to win. The only reason they aren't definite is because they have had a lot of trouble with their swimmers catching flu. We have also had trouble with our boys being ill, but I think that we will be in fairly good shape."

After the Eastern Championships the Carolina swimmers will participate in the Nationals.

'Bones' McKinney Featured At All-Star Alumni Game

Bones Mckinney, for years the hub of Wake Forest College basketball, will make his first public sports appearance since his retirement last season as head coach of the Demon Decons.

McKinney will appear March 22 in Duke Indoor Stadium at the second All - Star Alumni game between graduates and seniors of Duke and UNC under the sponsorship of Durham Academy.

Proceeds from the contest will be applied to such needed areas as arts, music, language laboratories and physical education equipment for the Academy's new campus. The exact nature of McKinney's participation is a closely guarded secret, but the colorful former star will take an active part in the proceedings.

The makeup of the two teams is a promoter's dream. Duke, No. 2 in the nation, numbers on its roster three members of the squad that won the ACC championship — Phil Allen, Steve Vacendak, and Bill Zimmer. Stars of former years include R. Haskell Tison, Howard P. Hurt, Doug Kistler, Scott Williamson, Buzzy Harrison, Ron Herbster, Jay Buckley and Jay Beale.

The Carolina delegation lists Larry Brown, star of the 1965 U. S. Olympic team, Pete Brennan and Dan Lotz, both of whom were active on the 1957 team that was No. 1 in the country, Charlie Shaffer, Art Katz, Dick Kepley, Yogi Poteet, Mike Cooke and Ray Respass as alumni, plus seniors John Yokley, Jim Smithwick, Bob Bennett and Mike Smith.

Referees will be Lou Bello and Joe Mills.

Halftime entertainment will include the pep bands and cheerleaders of both schools and a basketball contest between Durham and Chapel Hill disk jockeys. It is expected that this year's exhibition will duplicate last year's sellout, when Duke edged out Carolina to win by a squeaker in the closing minutes.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available in Durham at the Academy, at all three Kerr-Rexall drugstores and at Connelly's on West Main Street. In Chapel Hill at Sloane's, the Sports Shop, Danziger's, the Record Bar, Crowell Little's Ford dealership and Dr. Lou Vine's Veterinary Hospital.

Dr. W. H. (Bill) Peacock Receives District Award

Dr. W. H. Peacock recently received the Southern District Honor Award, highest honor accorded a member of the Southern District of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, at the District Convention held in Louisville, Ky.

Dr. Peacock is a member of the University of North Carolina's Physical Education Department, which he joined at the conclusion of World War II as an assistant professor after teaching math, physical education and coaching in high schools at Timberlake and Chapel Hill. He also taught in the Navy V-12 program here.

Dr. Peacock was promoted to the rank of associate professor in 1949 and became a full professor in 1955. Evidence of his effectiveness as a teacher lies in the fact that virtually every institution of Carolina has at least one of Dr. Peacock's students on its faculty and many of his pupils hold responsible positions of leadership in colleges and universities throughout the southeastern portion of the United States.

The 1966 Honor Award recipient is a member of numerous state and national professional organizations including the North Carolina Association for Health, Physical Eduction and Recreation. He also belongs to Phi Delta Kappa.

He has made numerous contributions to the literature of health, physical education, and recreation.

Stacy Studs Edge Lewis In Murals

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

Will wonders never cease! The Stacy Studs edged Lewis White in intramural basketball on Wednesday, 62 - 60. Leading scorer for Stacy was, would you believe, Gene Rector, who masquerades as DTH sports editor on the side. Rector bumbled his way to 22 points, supported by Pete Mallison's 14, Jim Carpenter's 13 and Shearin Teague's 10. For Lewis, Kelly had 22, Parsons 14 and Liles 14 in the nip and tuck battle.

The Teague Trojans smashed the Teague Toughs, 75-48, as Dave Adeimy flipped in 27 points. John Harper had 16 and Jerry Brake 14 for the Trojans while Jim Sanford poured in 23 for the Toughs.

Five men hit double figures as the Parker Patrol drubbed the Teague Totalers, 69-50. Harris Prevost had 20 points, Jim Melvin 13, Larry Smith 12, Bill Lawrence 10 and Rick Williams 10 for Parker. For Teague, Don Winslow scored 14, Jon McLean 13 and Allen Hughes 12.

Bill Tate fired in 15 points and Glenn Cuthrell 13 to lead the Morrison C Cavaliers over the Morrison F Falcons, 51-22. Mack Skipper added 10.

Frank Harrison scored 23 points as the Mangum Mugs beat the Mangum Whumps, 48-36. Rich Thomas had 11 points for the Whumps.

The Ruffin Rebels coasted past the Ruffin Roadrunners, 65-38. Dave Bower led the Rebels with 23 points while Bill Skeen had 16 and Dave Spencer 10. Markland and Carroll had 12 each for the Roadrunners.

The Craige C Alkaceltics beat the Craige C Steers, 48-39, behind Faison's 24 points and Murphy's 15.

The Ehringhaus C Superstars downed Ehringhaus A No. 5, 47-38. Lowman hit 15 points and Roberts, Miller, Bost and Lisk added 8.

Lee Clower's 21 points led the Graham Bells over Stacy No. 2, 49-30.

Duke Takes On St. Joseph's Tonight In Eastern Regional

By DICK BRUSIE

DURHAM, N. C.—How does St. Joseph's College, Duke's Eastern Regional opponent Friday night at 7 o'clock in Raleigh, compare with Villanova, the quintet the Blue Devils upended in the tournament two seasons ago?

"St. Joseph's can do many more things," explained Duke assistant coach Chuck Daly. "They have more quickness and more cohesiveness. The Hawks overall personnel is better, quicker and deeper."

Duke whipped Villanova, also a "Big Five" Philadelphia school, 87-73 in the opening round of the Eastern Regional Tournament in 1964 and defeated Connecticut 101-54 in the finals. The Blue Devils have also won both previous post season tournament battles with St. Joseph's, 58-56 in 1960 and 73-59 in 1963.

The Villanova team featured All-America scoring whiz Wally Jones who is now with the pros. The current Hawk edition has another great player in All-America Matt Guokas, a 6-5 junior guard whose main asset is pinpoint passing although he is also the team scoring leader.

"At the time we faced Villanova," said Daly, "it was rated on a par nationally with the present St. Joseph's club as far as the polls are concerned."

Primarily a team of native Pennsylvanians, the Middle Atlantic Conference champion enters the tournament with a 23-4 record, including a streak of 10 victories in a row.

Duke, rated No. 2 in the country, takes a 23-3 slate into the tournament. The Blue Devils have won their last four contests and earlier in the season chalked up 13 straight wins.

Blue Devil coach Vic Bubas has stated: "I think we can win both games in Raleigh. But we've got to be a smarter team and take advantage of what we've got."

Leading Duke scorers Bob Verga (19.1) and Jack Marin (17.9), both All-America selections, will be battling Guokas, 6-5 forward Tom Duff and 6-4 center Cliff Anderson. Duff scored 19 points in the Hawks' 65-48 win over Providence and Anderson grabbed 14 rebounds. Lefthanded shooting guard Billy Oakes scored 18 points.

Bubas, a tree-time ACC coach of the year, said of the Hawks: "They're probably the most versatile team I've seen from the standpoint of playing many defenses and offenses."

St. Joseph's has been hardened to partisan crowds because of the intense rivalry of the Philadelphia "Big Five." The "Big Five" of St. Joseph's, Temple, Villanova, La Salle and Pennsylvania is comparable in rivalry to the Big Four of the ACC. The Hawks summertime six week tour of South America is also a factor in helping them to adjust to tournament playing conditions.

The Hawks will likely start Duff and 6-6 Marty Ford at the forwards with Anderson at center and Guokas and Oakes at the guards. The sixth man is 6-7, 220 pound Chuck McKenna.

Duke will go with its regular combination of 6-6 Marin and 6-7 Bob Riedy at the forwards, 6-7 Mike Lewis at Center and 6-1 captain Steve Vacendak and 6-0 Verga in the backcourt. The Blue Devils' first reserves will come from 6-8 center Warren Chapman, 6-5 forward Jim Liccardo and 6-1 sophomore guard Ron Wendelin.

Four of the Duke starters—Marin (17.9), Verga (19.1), Lewis (13.1) and Vacendak (13.0) — are scoring in double figures while Riedy has hit at a 9.8 point per game clip.

As a team the Blue Devils have a scoring average of 82.9 points per game to 70.5 for the opposition.

This will mark Duke's fourth venture into NCAA Tournament play in seven seasons under Bubas. The record is currently 8-3 over that stretch including a third place finish in 1963 and a second place windup in 1964.

SPORTS

Tar Heels Break Scoring Records

The University of North Carolina's basketball team broke a number of scoring records during the 1965-66 season.

The Tar Heels average 80.9 points per game over a season composed of 27 games. This bested the old high of 79.9 during the 1955-56 season.

In field goal percentage, the Carolina team connected on 51.7 per cent of their shots from the floor. This is considerably better than the previous high of 47.3 in 1964-65.

"The scoring average doesn't surprise me," points out Coach Dean Smith. "Before the season began I predicted that we would score every bit as well as last year's team. We missed Billy Cunningham's rebounding, but not his scoring."

Led by Bob Lewis and Larry Miller, who averaged better than 48 points per game as a duet, the Carolina hardwooders scored 100 or more points four times during the year. The 127-76 drubbing of Richmond University is a UNC offensive high for all time.

It might also be noted that Carolina's 21-20 loss in the final game of the season to Duke rated as the lowest point production for the Tar Heels since 1942, when they lost to Wake Forest, 36-20.

All five starters shot 48 per cent or better from the floor, a rather remarkable statistic.

Frosh Golf Team Selected; Begin Position Qualifying

By JIM FIELDS
DTH Sports Writer

The freshman golf team began position qualifying rounds Wednesday to determine the top seven members of the team.

Qualifying rounds were shot last week with the top ten qualifiers making the team. From these ten, seven will qualify to play in the first match on March 17 against Louisburg Junior College.

This year's team doesn't have any real outstanding players as far as having achieved any national recognition. But, it is made up of a group of real sound golfers who will represent the school well.

Anyone of the ten boys who make up the team has the potential to shoot below par on any given day, so it should be a real interesting season for them.

Three of the ten members on the team are from North Carolina. They are: Tommy Smith, Bill Aiken and Bill Boss.

The big match for the frosh this year is the annual "Big Four" stroke play tournament. This consist of four rounds of golf medal play, with one round each to be played at Duke, UNC, N. C. State and Wake Forest. Each team turns in its four lowest scores, and at the end of the four rounds, the team with the lowest score is the big four champion.

There is also an individual champion that is determined by the same methods. In addition to the "Big Four" tournament, the frosh will play several other individual matches against conference and non-conference schools.

GM Film Festival Will Start Sunday

By LYTT STAMPS
DTH Staff Writer

The Graham Memorial Film Committee has announced plans for its first film festival to be staged Sunday through Tuesday. Films will presented nightly at 7 and 9:30 in Carroll Hall, free and open to the public.

"The Silence" will be shown Sunday. The Ingmar Bergman-directed film has been described as "the conflict of body and soul; a study of alienation in modern society."

In the movie, Anna (Gunnel Lindblom), her sister Ester (Ingrid Thulin) and Anna's young son are forced to stop a journey to Sweden from an unidentified country because Ester is too ill to continue. A weird drama unfolds in a hotel as the outside world prepares for war.

"Babo 73," "Georg" and "Scrambles" will be shown Monday. "Babo 73" is a "wild tale about the tribulations of a newly elected President of the United Status (sic)." "Georg" is the story of a man's fruitless attempts to find some way of living. "Scrambles" shows motorcyclists in action.

"Knife in the Water" will be shown Tuesday. Saturday Review said director Roman Polanski has given it "overtones of violence and sex, and has left the conclusion hanging more or less in mid-air."

Plans are being made for a panel discussion of the films.

Deadly Snakes New VC Trick Reports Marine

Marine Lt. Kenneth R. Furr, a 1965 Graduate of the University of North Carolina, reports from South Viet Nam that poisonous snakes are now being used as principal weapons in booby traps by the Viet Cong.

"A person lives only a few minutes after he's been bitten by one of these snakes," Lt. Furr reports.

The Viet Cong are placing snakes in the pit traps to bite soldiers who become impaled on bamboo stakes in the pits.

Noting that Americans do not like to wade through the rice paddies, the Viet Cong are putting traps in the dikes along which the Americans advance. The traps are said to be expertly camouflaged with matting and grass and are hard to detect until someone falls into one.

Lt. Furr was commissioned a second lieutenant in the U.S. Marine Corps last June upon graduation. He went into action in Viet Nam in February after a short stop in Okinawa. His unit has already come under Viet Cong fire.

Coeds To Shine Shoes For 25c

Winter's gone. It's time for buds to pop, grass to grow and girls to shine shoes.

The Carolina Women's Council will take on the shoe-shine task, however, and leave the bud popping to Mother Nature.

Starting Wednesday, bright and early, there will be two young things in Y-Court and two more at Lenoir Hall shining the shoes of Carolina Gentlemen at 25 cents each.

This year's annual shoeshine will go to the Campus Chest, and the girls only ask for a lot of dirty shoes. The project runs through Thursday.

News Causes Crisis For TV Viewers

By JOHN GREENBACKER
Special to the DTH

Walter Cronkite looked the same as usual. Same neatly clipped moustache, same sincere expression, same time, same station.

The stock market report started off the same. Stocks were down quite a bit though. Hard hit, Cronkite explained, were pharmaceutical firms who produced anti-biotic throat lozenges.

It seems the Food and Drugs Administration has proclaimed the drugs to be useless and has ordered them off the market.

Like a swift slug in the guts, the ruling's horrible implications crumpled the composure of thousands of discerning TV viewers. An old friend seemed to fade from the screen before their eyes.

Fondly they remembered: the chalk-white face; the drooling, blood-red lips; the hollow eyes; the greasy, slick black hair; the hollow cheeks; the leacherous leer; that gas of an outfit.

Count Sore Throat Pain would never come into their homes or warm their hearts again.

They recalled those blissful 30-second commercial breaks, when the count would gleefully explain how he transformed a mild-mannered businessman by the insidious process of throat infection into a snarling werewolf.

With his familiar, deep and wonderfully stilted intonation, the County would explain what was happening to the man, being careful to emphasize the first syllable of each word.

The werewolf returned to its normal human form.

"Don't take Isodets," the Count would piteously implore. "Otherwise my work will be all in vein."

"Maybe the public took him to seriously," the Count's fans groaned, and prayed for a miracle.

The Associated Press bore the good news in the morning papers: "However, many non-prescription lozenges with the same brand names as antibiotic lozenges may remain on the market because, although they contain a local anesthetic, such as benzocaine, they have no antibiotic."

The relief was blessed.

Count Sore Throat Pain's many fans could ease back in their chairs before the tube with the firm knowledge that, failed, their favorite lozenge and its macabre, tongue in cheek here would be around for more commercials to come.

Sing Out '66

Will 130 singers "change the world"? The horde hits UNC March 22. Be in Carmichael two Tuesdays hence to witness the fulfillment of prophesy (or the deflation of an extravagant boast).

'Sing Out '66' Will Come To Carmichael—For Free

By CAROL GALLANT
DTH Staff Writer

Athletic Director Chuck Erickson said yesterday that "Sing Out '66," a group composed of students from 52 campuses and 17 countries, will appear on campus Tuesday, March 22.

"We're out to change the world" is the cry of the group and the vocal youth corps uses music as its media for speaking out.

"Sing-Out '65" traveled from Washington, D. C., to Watts, California, to Waseda, Japan, in six weeks, and then to every city and campus it could reach in America. The group filled the Hollywood Bowl (capacity, 15,000) and sang before members of Congress.

The youth in the cast have given up university scholarships, sold cars and personal posessions, and postponed plans for college education to spend a year with "Sing Out '66."

The idea for such a group came out of a 1965 summer conference sponsored by Moral Re-Armament on Michigan's Isle of Mackinac. Students from 150 colleges and 300 high schools attended.

The 130-members of the cast are "out to show the world that free men and women can be the most convinced, most enthusiastic, in fact, the most revolutionary people on earth."

The Athletic Department here will make the necessary arrangements, but Erickson said the group asks only housing and two meals.

The students will present a "Hootenanny" type concert in Polk Place at noon Tuesday and a concert in Carmichael at 8 that night.

There will be no charge.

All necessary expenses for its appearance here have already been covered by donations, according to Erickson.

"Sing Out '66," will appear in Charlotte this weekend. It has recently returned from Japan and Korea where it sang before those countries' prime ministers.

The group has been followed by such headlines as, "Thousands Cheer for Sing Out '66," "If This Is America We're All For It," and "Standing Ovation For Singers."

According to the Nashville Banner "The Moral Re-Armament team Sing-Out is expressive of their belief in God and love of country . . . Moral Re-Armament stand positively, equivocally, openly, for clean, decent behaviorism — Americanism.

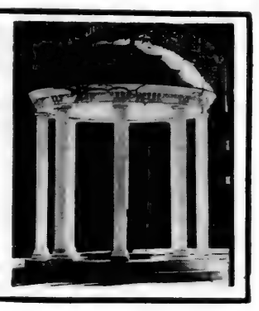
WHEREVER SING OUT '66 has appeared it has drawn packed houses — and raves.



CAROLINA STYLE

with Ed Freakley

Darling . . .

The following is a survey conducted by Miss Eva Gabor. She is an authority on . . . on a lot of things.

Those people who believe the old adage that gentlemen prefer blondes but marry brunettes are in for a real jolt, according to blonde, vivacious Eva Gabor.

Today's college man prefers dark-haired women (brunettes, browns, auburn and redheads) five to one while co-eds choose dark-haired men over blond males — again, five to one!

"It's all part of this marvelous survey we took, darlings," Miss Gabor began in her familiar way. "I act as spokeswoman for pipe tobacco, and we decided to do a survey of the nation's campuses to see what the average, pipe-smoking college student was like and whether the girls like him, an important point. I am happy to report, darlings, that 70.5 percent of the girls who replied prefer a man who does — smoke a pipe, I mean."

* * *

THE ACTUAL questionnaire was sent to atotal of 19 leading colleges around the country. Representing the East were Dartmouth, Cornell, Wellesley, Skidmore, Vassar, Bryn Mawr, Mt. Holyoke and the University of Pittsburgh. In the South, there were the universities of North Carolina, Duke, Georgia and Emory, while the Big Ten schools of Michigan State, Northwestern, Ohio State and the University of Illinois spoke for the Midwest. Schools from the Far West included Stanford, the University of Washington and San Jose State College.

"The students were so cooperative," continued Miss Gabor. "Why, the darlings supplied us with so much information and you know, we tried to be as open and honest as possible. We even asked the girls if they thought the pipe-smoking college man was handsome, unattractive or even ugly. Only 1 per cent found him ugly, while 70 per cent replied he was handsome. Of course, I've known this for some time, but it's nice to hear it from other women."

* * *

IN FACT, the male replies were quite flattering to the pipe-smoker. He is liked equally by his fellows, 58 per cent, as by his fairer friends, 57 per cent and, of the men replying, 56 per cent indicated that they number pipe-smokers among their friends.

"Darling," Miss Gabor concluded, "It's no wonder that a young coed from Illinois wrote that she wanted to marry a pipe-smoker. It makes all the sense in the world."

Sure it makes all the sense in the world. Especially since a pouch of pipe tobacco doesn't have that little phrase, "Caution: Cigarette Smoking May Be Hazardous to Your Health."

* * *

The next thing you see on the tube will be Eva Gabor coming up out of a can of tobacco.

Legislators Blast 'Slate Amendment'

By JIM SMITH
DTH Staff Writer

Two legislators from opposing parties Thursday urged the student body to defeat the constitutional amendment to elect the president and vice president on a single ticket.

Charging that The Daily Tar Heel had failed to report dissention opinion on the issue, Rep. Hugh Blackwell declared his opposition to the amendment.

"This amendment will in effect give the President of the student body the power to appoint the vice president," Blackwell said. "It will weaken the Legislature's power to be a check on the executive branch and hinder the Legislature's ability to consider legislation properly. If the amendment passes, there should also be an amendment to permit the Legislature to elect its own Speaker.

Rep. Clark Crampton added several points to Blackwell's comments.

1. The amendment will limit the students' choice in determining the Big Four officers.

2. It will limit the students' power to choose the best presidential and best vice presidential candidates.

3. The claim of the supporters of the amendment that if the president and the vice president are in the same party, there will be greater cooperation between the executive and legislative branches is not well founded. It is not the vice president, but the members of the Legislature themselves that determine whether there will be co-operation with the executive branch.

A bill to appropriate $53.66 to the Orientation Commission was recommitted with the provision that the Judicial Committee of the Legislature investigate the commission. There was a question of the commission's exceeding its budget.

Thompson Resigns, Hays Appointed Elections Head

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

Arthur Hays was appointed chairman of the Elections Board yesterday following the resignation of Everett Thompson, the fifth man this year to hold the post.

Thompson resigned for personal reasons, according to Student Body President Paul Dickson.

"I am sorry to see him go," Dickson said. "I think he's a very qualified person, and I understand his position with regard to the chairmanship of the Elections Committee."

Commenting on the recent referendum, declared invalid this week, Hays said much of the blame "heaped upon the Elections Board has been undeserved."

The Board handles the most complicated part of student government, Hays said. He cited the problem of trying to keep watch over all the ballot boxes on election day, as well as preparing the ballots and providing poll tenders.

Dickson said Hays will fill the post for the remainder of the year, if he is approved by the Student Legislature next week.

The Tuesday referendum as well as spring elections will be run by Hays. No balloting will be done with IBM cards again this year, Hays said.

We don't have the kinks worked out of the system," he said.

Grad Students Will Be Moved To Craige Hall

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

Dean of Men William G. Long announced yesterday that Conner Residence Hall would not be used for graduate students after this year and that from now on all graduate students living on campus will be housed in Craige Residence Hall on the fourth, fifth and sixth floors.

Graduate students now living in Conner have been given the right to reserve their old rooms for next year, but have also been told that they could end up with undergraduate roommates.

The University Housing office is trying to place all grad students who want to remain in Conner on the first floor so that they will not have undergraduate roommates.

Dean Long said, "It is a possibility that Craige Residence Hall will eventually become a graduate residence hall. But even if his happens it will not be for several years to come."

The reason that Craige has been selected as the residence hall to house all graduate students is that its sixth and part of its fifth floors are occupied now by medical students.

"The residence hall is so convenient to the medical complex and the location of the new law school," Long said. "It also provides nearby parking that is almost impossible in the area of Conner."

If Craige is evenutally made a residence hall restricted to grad students, Long said that the undergraduates would be given the choice of moving their entire residence college system to the new Hinton James Dormitory. This would include the transferring of the adopted name "Maverick House."

Pepper Joins Race For SG Presidency

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

Men's Residence Council President Sonny Pepper announced yesterday that he is "definitely an independent candidate for student body president." He said he will run without a vice presidential nominee in the election March 22.

A constitutional amendment passed by the student body Feb. 22 stated that candidates for student body president and vice president had to run on the same ticket. It was ruled invalid by the Constitutional Council Thursday.

Another referendum on the "slate amendment" is scheduled March 15.

"Since I am already a qualified candidate," Sonny said, "I don't see how the referendum can affect me."

Pepper stated that he was against the proposed "slate amendment."

"It seems to me that it was the clear intention of the constitution that it intends for the student body to be able to select or reject any candidate on his own merits," he said.

"I would like for this election to be held on the basis of the students selecting the man they consider best qualified for the job.

"It is ridiculous to assume that the top two elected officers of the student body will not be able to put aside partisan differences in favor of effective student government."

He said he previously had offered his platform to each of the other candidates and "both had accepted it."

"However," he added," I feel I can handle my program better than someone else could."

He said he feels the major issue of the campaign is presenting the correct image of the University and the students to the general public.

"I hope to see the University present a united front against any adversary," he said.

Bureaucratic hodge - podge has developed because student government has extended itself into areas beyond its proper concern.

"I am vitally concerned with the status and reputation of our student government. There is too much disunity and lack of contact with the student public."

Pepper said he was interested in improving the cultural atmosphere of the University.

He proposed to do this with a "reevaluation" of the Carolina Quarterly so that at least half of it would be the work of UNC writers. He also advocates the establishment of a campus humor magazine.

Other planks on Pepper's platform include:

— A transit system for south campus.

— Continued improvement of the residence college system.

— Better coed visitation privileges.

Pepper said he would file a protest if the "slate amendment" was made retroactive.

Pepper has held the following student government offices: MRC president, MRC treasurer, junior class president, member of student legislature and Consolidated University Student Council member. He is from Salisbury.

Fraternity Fined For 'Dirty Rush'

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

A sentence of social probation handed down to a fraternity by the Inter-Fraternity Council was overthrown by Dean William G. Long Wednesday after the fraternity appealed the decision.

Long refused to give the name of the fraternity involved without permission of the fraternity.

The decision of the IFC was based on charges of "dirty rushing" lodged by a member of another fraternity. Long stated that "a member of the fraternity (charged) had called a rushee after rushing hours."

Long changed the sentence from social probation to general probation.

John Ingram, attorney general, said yesterday that "any fraternity has the right to an open hearing," however, "even then no names may be used." He said that the fraternity in question had applied for a closed hearing.

Long's general probation puts a threat of a change back to social probation if the fraternity is called before the IFC again before June 2.

To clarify the issue Long said "General probation means that it isn't enforced until June 2, and if between now and that time the fraternity violates any rules and is found guilty, it is put on social probation."

Long said that most cases appealed from the IFC are usually handled by the Faculty Review Board, but in a case involving an organization and requiring knowledge of fraternity rules, the appeal goes to the dean of men.

Long said charges of breaking strict silence rules are usually handled by the fraternities themselves through their own court.

Long's decision to make the charge general probation carried with it a fine of $100. The sentence itself is approximately equivalent to an official reprimand.

Birch Society's President Opposes Graham, UNICEF

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

Robert Welch, founder and president of the John Birch Society, will speak here at 8 p.m. Sunday in Memorial Hall on "What is the John Birch Society?"

According to Welch, the Birch Society is an organization which "sees its goals as completely opposed to those of the Communists."

Here are a few of the things the 1916 UNC graduate has opposed at one time or other:

Walter Lippman, foreign aid, fluoridation of water, United World Federalists, Frank Porter Graham, Dwight Eisenhower, Allen Dulles, John Foster Dulles, Walter Reuther, Martin Luther King Jr., Henry Cabot Lodge, UNICEF and Earl Warren.

He also opposes such motion pictures as "Spartacus" and "Inherit the Wind."

Welch usually has some choice terms for those he opposes.

For instance, he said Dr. Frank Porter Graham, former UNC president and U. S. Senator "was accurately described as 'not a Communist — he is simply the most gullible jackass in America.' "

Of former President Dwight Eisenhower he wrote, "My firm belief that Dwight Eisenhower is a dedicated, conscious agent of the Communist conspiracy is based on an accumulation of detailed evidence so extensive and so palpable that it seems to me to put this conviction beyond any reasonable doubt."

Welch said he "personally believes" that John Foster Dulles, Secretary of State in the Eisenhower Administration, is a "Communist agent who has had one clearly defined role to play; namely always to say the right thing and always do the wrong ones."

Welch also has a list of things he favors:

Continued nuclear tests, repeal of the income tax, Maj. Gen. Edwin Walker, the memory of Sen. Joseph McCarthy and such motion pictures as "The Alamo."

Welch enrolled at UNC at the age of 12. He also attended the United States Naval Academy and Harvard Law School.

Phillips Hall Gets Beauty Treatment

Those flower bins that stood empty at the back of Phillips Hall for so long have now been filled.

Thursday a truck backed up to the south exit of Phillips and workmen began to fill the four bins with sand. By 4:15 the job was complete.

The Daily Tar Heel carried a story and pictures of the empty bins Feb. 20. A sign placed on one of the empty bins by a local jokester had read "Please leave these flowers for others to enjoy."

There were no flowers there then — and, although the pots have now been filled, there are none now.

Sterling A. Stoudemire, chairman of the Buildings and Grounds Committee, said the spot will eventually be filled with greenery.

Looks like they could have simply moved some of that foliage from the prison compound in front of Davie Hall rather than sawing, bulldozing and tromping it.

The chains of authority are a thing of beauty. Sometimes it seems no one know what happened to the missing link.

THOSE PHILLIPS HALL flower holes are being filled in by University workmen. Thursday they wheel-barrowed loads of red soil from a truck, up a ramp and into the holes.

Do Coeds Want New Rules?

The Rules Committee of the Women's Residence Council is about to wrap up months of study and work by suggesting these changes in coed rules:

Extend closing hours on weeknights from 11 p.m. to midnight.

Allow senior women 2 a.m. permission on the third, sixth, ninth and twelfth Saturdays of each semester.

Eliminate closed study for freshmen during the spring semester. Under present rules all freshmen women who do not make 2.0 scholastic averages during the fall must continue to observe closed study during the spring.

Allow girls to spend the night outside Chapel Hill and vicinity for any occasion, so long as they have proper parental permission.

These suggestions are still subject to approval by Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael, but Rules Committee Chairman Mary Haverstock said little trouble is expected in getting them accepted.

Hopefully, she is correct, because if such modest and carefully considered requests are refused, there is little hope of any change ever being made.

Why bother to make changes?

Obviously, the most compelling reason to change the rules is a desire on the part of the girls to have them changed.

Do they want rule changes? What kind?

These are difficult questions to answer, but the only adequate attempt was a poll taken late last semester of more than 1,200 coeds. A committee headed by Sandra Burden worked closely with a faculty member who gave advice on how to conduct the poll fairly and accurately.

Perhaps the Rules Committee is asking all it can reasonably expect the Dean of Women to approve now, but if some really basic changes in closing hours and housing restrictions are ever to be made, the coeds must become much more vocal and unified in expressing their wishes.

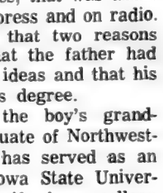
Will Welch Answer These Questions About Birchers?

Robert Welch, who graduated from UNC and later went on to the glory of calling former President Eisenhower a Communist agent, wasn't very eager to take a stand on the speaker ban when I contacted him recently by telephone.

"I'll have to refer that to my research department," said the founder of the John Birch Society. "I don't answer questions of that type over the phone."



I asked for a letter telling the official Birch Society position on the ban, but so far, haven't received it.

Perhaps someone tomorrow night can ask Welch that question. Hopefully, he'll be more talkative. Right now, it seems, he cannot decide whether to consistently follow his fanatically anti-Communist line or recognize the fact that his ideology, like Aptheker's, is unpopular enough to have been banned at times. (At least, this is Welch's version of what's going on. He claims there's a conspiracy working to suppress his views.)

Meanwhile, I have other questions for the Birch leader:

—Is there any connection between the Society and the Ku Klux Klan? Birch officials in the past have denied this, but according to State Sen. Ralph Scott, the Birch Society in Eastern Carolina has taken on many of the Klan's functions—including the intimidation of opponents of its racism.

—How many Birch chapters are there in this state? And to what extent are Birch members responsible for the "Impeach Earl Warren" bill boards that have at various times dotted the Carolina landscape?

—Is there any Birch activity in Chapel Hill? We've heard enough about Communist subversion — real or imagined — in this friendly village. Now, I'd like to know about our friends at the other end of the political spectrum. And, Mr. Welch, if you refuse to give us any information, why?

Is it, possibly, because you fear that the local patriots would be the target of Communist threats? If so, this would be an odd parody of the situation in North Carolina, where some members of leftist groups like Students for a Democratic Society hesitate to reveal their identities because they are worried about receiving abusive phone calls from the local ultra-conservatives.

—What is the main goal of the Birch members in North Carolina?

—Has the Birch Society taken any stand on statewide issues, or is it too busy opposing the so-called Communists in Washington to worry about the lower levels of government —which the group apparently feels can do more to improve this country than can the national government?

—If any stands on local issues have been taken, what are they?

—Have Birchers in this state participated in the campaign to strengthen the speaker ban?

Maybe these questions are embarrassing, but it's time for them to be answered by Welch or one of his local colleagues—if, by some misfortune, there happen to be any. Should no answer come forth, we can only assume that the Birch Society's tactics are as underhanded as those of its Communist enemies.

Letters To The Editor

Free Speech Now

Editor, the Daily Tar Heel:

Free speech NOW.

When?

Now!

Why?

It is a natural right guaranteed by the U. S. Constitution.

Why your concern son, you have the freedom at UNC to express your views.

Yes, you are perfectly right; but what if, by some strange mixup in the U. S. Records Department, my name just happened to be Frank Wilkinson?

Well in that case you would be a horse (automatic shift or principles) of a different color.

So?

If that were the case you would be a known Constitutionalist.

A Constitutionalist, what is that?

That is a person who believes the Constitution. He is one who takes literally certain statements in the Constitution which pertain to personal freedoms and individual protections.

You mean he should take these certain guarantees which deal with freedom and individual protections as only "campaign phrases" and not try to enforce them.

I think I am catching on, but there is still a question in my mind. (How evil) Why are these statements in the U. S. Constitution?

Well, son, there you have me. I am not sure I think that long years ago our great fathers (self inflation) could not foresee the superior threat that a certain element is exerting on our national security today. And because of this lack of foresight they entered certain guarantees that today would destroy our way of life if enforced.

Oh my, I see clearly now. If we take these statements about personal freedoms and individual rights seriously we would be exposing ourselves to destruction. We must not be so irresponsible and immature as to allow these guarantees to be used by certain elements (ones that do not see things as we see them).

Now son, it appears that the issues are clearing up for you.

Yes, I will go out and work for a repeal of the Constitution; it is a most dreadful tool. We must write a new one. It is obvious that our forefathers did not foresee this grave threat that has emerged in the East. We must take every action possible to squeeze as much life out of our dying political state as we can, we must put off this take over as long as we can.

Thank Moore! You are no longer a boy my son you have become a straight thinking, mature, responsible man. I am sure the state would be proud of you.

Later the young man appears picketing (irony) South Building.

Sign: Down with beards? Burn the SDS members? Abolish the CFI? Stamp out the Open Forum? Repeal the U. S. Constitution. Close down UNC? FREE SPEECH NEVER!

One Basic Conflict

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Regardless of the issue in our country today—political, economic, or social—there is one basic conflict or dichotomy which unites them all in difficulty of solution. The most important decision and commitment that we Americans have to make now is how much individuality we shall sacrifice in order to improve the whole state of our society.

For example, limited socialism in this country seems to be imminent and almost inevitable. It is my purpose to beg and plead for self-awareness and responsibility to ourselves and to our fellow man upon such current issues. Everyday we become more dogmatic and less pragmatic, more theoretical and less practical, and finally more idealistic and less realistic.

This country as a nation has never suffered defeat. For us as individuals it becomes more difficult to realize that the force of idealism is lost if it does not recognize the reality of things. I do not criticize personal commitment to high ideals or ethics, but rather I acknowledge the equal validity among theories.

Religious or non-religious, to make our own cause the cause of God or the cause of mankind denotes a loss of personal responsibility and integrity. Do not misinterpret my message as a plea for apathy and indolence. I hope that we as united Americans and as citizens of the world can ameliorate or moderate irresponsible conformity, but simultaneously inexcusable self-righteousness.

I do not believe that the manifestation of a temporal paradise is possible. Therefore, I plead for a sincere unity, not without an earnest diversity—a unity for the purpose of survival and a diversity for the necessity of constant dissension and reform. In the eighteenth century, William Blake attempted to convince his comtemporaries that "opposition is true friendship." Who then are the rampant ones? You and I.

Accurate Press Needed

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

It is generally conceded that without freedom of the press our other freedoms could not long endure. However, a free press must not only be free and willing to state the truth, but it should be conscientious in making certain, in so far as it is able, that what it presents as fact is indeed fact.

I am again referring to the national news coverage of the Iowa Supreme Court's decision concerning the custody of one Mark Painter, not because I feel it is important in itself, but because of the light it sheds on what could be a much more serious problem.

Just to review the background, the Painter boy has lived with his grandparents ever since the death of his mother when he was very young. Now, some years after the death of his first wife, Mr. Painter, who has remarried, was asking for the custody of his child. The Iowa Supreme Court ruled against the father, stating something to the effect that he was incapable of providing a stable, conventional, Midwest back ground for the child.

At least, in many cases, that was about all that appeared in the press and on radio. David Rothman implied that two reasons for the decision were that the father had picked up too many new ideas and that his new wife had a master's degree.

Now the facts are the boy's grandfather is not only a graduate of Northwestern University but also has served as an associate professor at Iowa State University. Furthermore, his wife is a college graduate. So the implication made that the choice was in favor of "the simple life" as opposed to "knowledge and culture" is totally misleading and erroneous.

Other bits of evidence considered by the court were that Mr. Painter has never supported the boy, that he has trouble holding a job because he uses bad grammar, that he squandered his first wife's estate, and that he has more often been supported by his wives than vice-versa. A good bet for responsible fatherhood?

With these bits of evidence in mind, one must conclude that the court's decisions no longer seems, as some have expressed it, "patently rediculous." In fact it was the only reasonable decision possible.

The problem results, of course, from the unfortunate wording of the court's decision, which, on the surface, does make that decision seem ridiculous. Even more unfortunate than the court's choice of words, however, is the idea that a mere fragment of a story, misleading at best, could be considered nationally newsworthy when the readily available facts behind that story rendered it otherwise.

As I stated previously, I am not making this harangue because I feel this particular instance is important, but it does illustrate the fact that errors in news reporting do occur. Can we believe what we read? And even worse than honest mistakes, is the news "managed" from Washington? I have confidence that most of the American press makes an honest effort to keep errors at a minimum. At least I certainly hope it does.

Sincerely,
Brian C. Brush

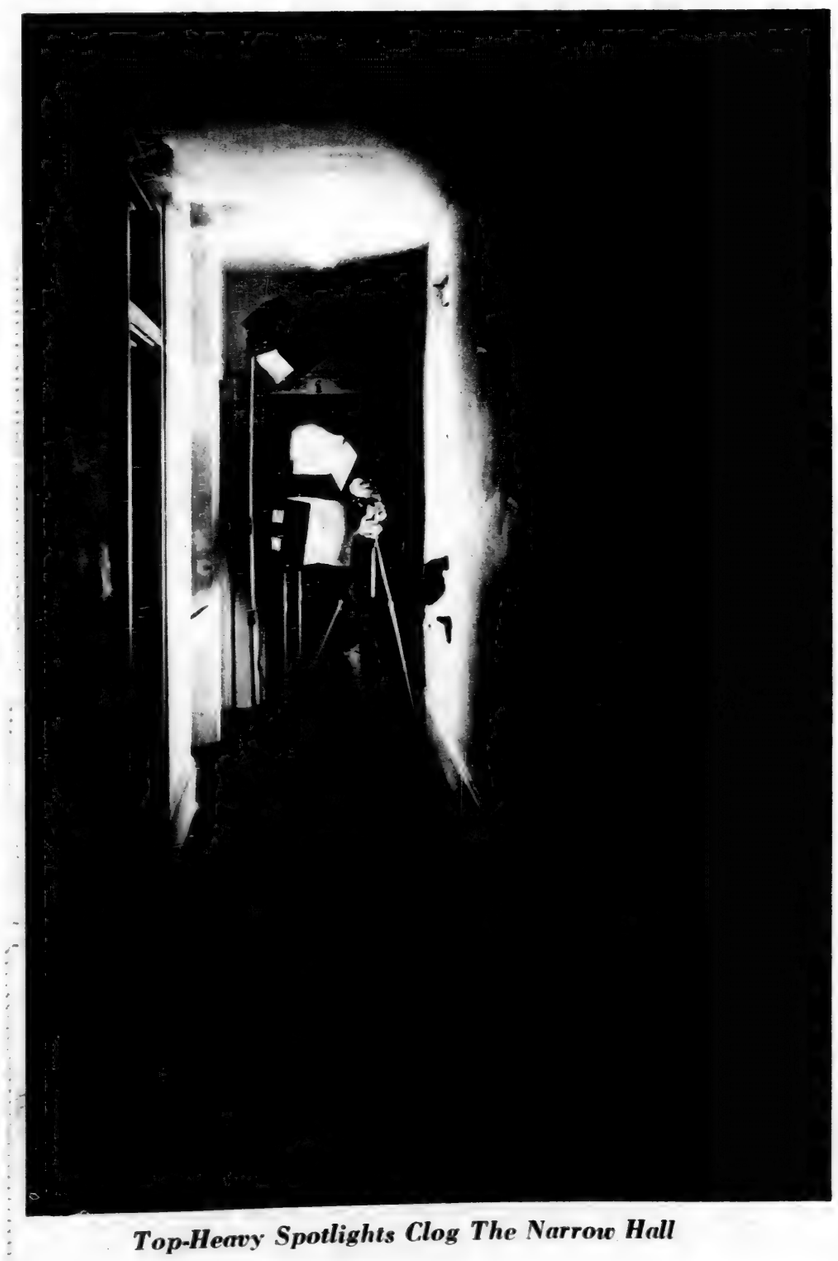
Mehitabel Parades On The Window Sill While Chris Films

Time Out For A Break; The Ice On the Roof Fascinates "Hittie'

'Cat On A Cool, Gravel Roof'— Mehitabel's Movie

Chris Shoots, Surrounded By The Bright Lights



Top-Heavy Spotlights Clog The Narrow Hall

A black and white streak of fur bounded to the windowsill, paused and then lept out into thin air leaving the windowsash swaying from the commotion.

"Cut!" cried a commanding voice from the roof outside the window. "Chonk," the movie camera stopped purring and Chris Parsons ambled across the flat, tarred roof.

"Come on, Mehitabel," he coaxed the small, green-eyed cat who had just fallen in an icy puddle in a shady corner of the roof.

Cat back on windowsill, Chris back at movie camera, start the scene over again . . . and over again . . . "Cut!", cat back in icy spot, Chris pulling hair.

That's the way it is in the movie industry. UNC students get a taste of movie-making in courses like Radio-Television-Motion Pictures 60 and 184. Chris is a junior from Baltimore in RTVMP 60 and is filming a movie on his cat.

The story will center around the life of an inquisitive cat in an apartment. The cat's thought will be spoken by Laurel Dykstra, who is also in the RTVMP 60 class.

Chris's cat has got to be a ham. In the movie she must climb trees, run from dogs, stretch, yawn and look thoughtful.

"Mehitabel Sleekit is her name," Chris will tell you as he cradles the complacent feline in his arms. "But I call her "Hittie" for short."

"Hittie" stared over Chris' arm with those all-knowing eyes that cats seem to be endowed with at an early age. Her sleepy head was draped over Chris's elbow, she didn't want to film any more.

But the show must go on, so it was back to the window sill in the hall. There the gawky lights blared hotly as the cat perched on the window sill.

The narrow canyon of the hall was cramped by the bright lights which towered and swayed on their twig-like pedestals top - heavy with the huge bulbs.

Electric cords ran out of a kitchen outlet, down the hall floor like a maze of recumbent black snakes

Bent over the camera, Chris squinted in the viewfinder. His tousled, blond hair caught and reflected the glare from the parching lights. Blisters of sweat lined his forehead as the session lengthened.

In an enterprise such as this neighbors can't help but be curious. The girls in the apartment down the hall would peek out their door, afraid they might walk right into a filming sequence. "Is it OK to come out?" they would yell before daring to open the door any wider. Even Chris's roommates helped him with the cat.

"Actually, Mehitabel is being quite good about doing what I want her to," Chris gasped as he retook a scene of the cat climbing in the garbage can for the fifth time.

The filming took several long days, lots of patience and plenty of love for the cat.

Slowly peace returned to the apartment. The lights were turned off after having blown one electrical line. The camera was packed away after it had run for several scenes without film.

Five ideal dates. Three dollars($3)

Join in the most adventurous experiment of our time. Operation Match. Let the IBM 7090 Computer (the world's most perfect matchmaker) stamp out blind dates for you.

Two Harvard juniors started it. 100,000 students have done it. Now you and 3,400,000 college students in 1500 colleges in 50 cities can sign up and join in!

Then return the questionnaire with $3.00. What you're like and what you like will be translated into our 7090's memory file. It will scan the qualifications of every member of the opposite sex from this geographic area. Then it will select the five or more matches best for you.

You'll receive your names, addresses and telephone numbers within three weeks. You'll be what your date is looking for. Your date will be what you are looking for. In other words: the matches will be mutual.

Dear IBM 7090,
I am 17 or over (and 27 or under) and I want to help stamp out blind dates. So mail me my questionnaire. Quick!

North Carolina News Roundup

Hertford Demonstrations May End

HERTFORD (AP) — Hope emerged yesterday for a temporary end to Hertford's racial troubles, but a Negro leader forecast a long series of demonstrations in northeastern North Carolina.

The Rev. F. H. LeGarde said at a news conference the demonstrations will culminate in a voter registration drive throughout the First Congressional District in April.

Negro high school students demonstrated in Hertford Friday without parade permits after the news conference. When confronted by police, they knelt, sang songs and then marched peacefully back to the church where they started.

None was arrested and there was no violence.

Meanwhile, the Ku Klux Klan announced plans for a rally in Edenton, 15 miles away. Spokesmen for the Negroes said no counter demonstrations were planned.

Wednesday night 200 Negroes parading without a permit were routed by police using tear gas and fire hoses. Thirty were arrested.

Firemen wet down marching Negro students again Thursday. About 200 Negroes started a march Thursday night, but returned to the church at the request of police.

Negro leaders have presented 14 requests to county and town officials, including the hiring of Negro law enforcement officers and a Negro cashier in a Hertford chain grocery.

These will be discussed Saturday night at a meeting between Negro leaders and the newly formed Hertford Good Neighbor Council.

Drum Appeals To Supreme Court

GREENSBORO (AP) — Renn Drum Jr. of Winston-Salem and nine other North Carolina residents yesterday appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court a District Court ruling that 1966 congressional elections could proceed in North Carolina under a plan that has been ruled invalid but allowed to stand until next year.

They filed their appeal in Middle District Court here.

Klansmen Plead Innocent

The Klan leaders, included Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton, 36, Tuscaloosa, Ala., of the United Klans of America, James R. Bob Jones, 36, Granite Quarry, N. C.; Robert Hudgins, 32, Cary, N. C.; Robert E. Scoggin, 43, Spartanburg, S. C.; Marshall R. Kornegay, 37, Raleigh, N. C.; George Franklin Dorsett, 48, Greensboro, N. C., and Calvin Fred Craig, 37, Atlanta.

Helicopters Rescue More From Battle

SAIGON (AP) — Darting in under Communist fire, U. S. Marine helicopters plucked out 59 more survivors yesterday of a lost battle at the Ashau Valley Special Forces camp. The high risk missions boosted the roll of resceued to 128.

B52 jets staged an explosive sequel to the fall of the frontier camp, which temporarily blinded a Green Beret watch on Red infiltration routes from Laos. The eight-engine bombers from Guam saturated another frontier area, in the central highlands three miles from Cambodia's border, described as an old Communist assembly point.

U. S. fighter-bomber pilots managed to fly 11 missions against Communist North Viet Nam Thursday though they, like the airmen who tried vainly to turn the tide at Ashau, were handicapped by heavy overcast. Highways, ferry landings and warehouses were among the targets.

Field action generally abated, but Vietnamese troops reported they killed 17 Viet Cong, captured three and seized a stand of weapons with only light losses in a sweep across coastal lowlands of Binh Dinh province, 225 miles northeast of Saigon.

A terrorist grenade blasted at a U. S. military jeep on its way from Saigon to the capital's Tan Son Nhut airport.

Riots Continue In Far East

Important Meeting Called By Sukarno

"Indonesia's future is probably going to be decided at these talks," one of the Singapore sources said.

The students have demonstrated for three consecutive days against Sukarno and Subandrio. Sukarno met with cabinet members at his Jakarta palace yesterday and students punctured tires and caused traffic jams outside to keep more than a third of the 90-odd cabinet ministers away, the sources said.

Sukarno told the ministers he was unhappy that the armed forces had not taken firmer action against the demonstrating students. Reports circulated in Jakarta that the President might try to replace anti-Communist Army Chief Lt. Gen. Suharto with "more reliable generals" to get firmer action against the students.

Army troops did not arrive at the student-sacked Chinese News Agency office earlier this week until an hour after the students left. The students —who have used sharpened bamboo sticks, knives and stones in previous demonstrations — are preparing to arm themselves because they are beginning to realize that the old weapons are of no use against the battle-ready troops of Sukarno's palace guard, which has been strengthened in the past week and now contains more than 2,000 elite troops.

Meanwhile, Red China made its strongest protest to date to the Indonesian government about the demonstrations.

PRIME MINISTER GANDHI

Gandhi Government Is Severly Tested

NEW DELHI (AP) — Mobs swept through Calcutta and surrounding towns yesterday in the second day of food riots, setting street cars afire, looting and throwing bombs. Police shot five rioters dead.

In an uproarious session of parliament, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi declared the riots were due to "deliberate plans for violence" by the nation's leftist political parties. Communist and other leftist members walked out.

About 20 persons have been killed since dawn Thursday in Calcutta and other parts of the west Bengal state of eastern India.

Among yesterday's victims was a boy, 15, shot down in the central part of Calcutta. Two policemen were among the victims in the past two days, beaten to death by frenzied crowds.

Leftist parties had called a general strike to protest food and kerosene shortages, touching off the violence Thursday. Then the parties issued a new call for demonstrations

Dawn broke quietly over Calcutta, and some public transport service was resumed. But then the mobs poured into the street in response to the leftists' call, set fire to two street cars and a street car depot.

Violence spread to parts of the city untouched in Thursday's fighting. Police, backed by troops, threw up barricades against the howling crowds.

A two-mile stretch near Wellington Square in central Calcutta was turned into a battlefield. Police used tear gas to disperse the mobs.

Reports of arson, stoning, looting and bomb throwing poured into Calcutta from the suburbs and nearby towns. A railway bridge was set ablaze in the northern suburb of Barrackpore. Five times police had to fire on the mobs.

Congress Eyes Possibility Of New Anti-Inflation Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) —Without even awaiting final enactment of President Johnson's $6 billion tax program, Congress completed arrangements yesterday for exploring the form of a possible new increase.

Both Senate and House expect to pass by Tuesday the excise tax and payment speedup bill Johnson proposed as a relatively modest move toward financing the Viet Nam fighting and dampening any inflation forecasts.

A Senate - House Economic Subcommittee announced yesterday the names of witnesses and subjects to be discussed at hearings beginning the following day — Wednesday — on:

"The need for and design of temporary tax changes which could be enacted promptly in response to a recognized need for stimulating or restraining the economy."

Chairman Martha W. Griffiths, D-Mich., has repeatedly emphasized the subcommittee is considering the possibility of tax cuts as well as tax increases.

But from all present indications, stepped up fighting in Viet Nam, which might call for tax increases, is far more likely than a sudden truce, which might inspire tax cuts to pick up the economic slack of reduced military buying.

The exploratory hearings were requested by Johnson. They are being set up in a way apparently designed to reassure business and the public that no decision to raise taxes has been reached and that their only purpose is to save time if such a decision is made later.

Accordingly, the hearings are to be conducted, not by the tax-writing ways and means committee, but by the joint committee, a study group without authority to handle legislation. Moreover, the announced witnesses consist entirely of professional economists outside of government.

Teachers' Strike Ignored By New Orleans' Teachers

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Most New Orleans school teachers ignored a teachers' union strike call yesterday and each of the city's 124 schools conducted classes.

Union officials had estimated 1,500 or more teachers would take part. They also had predicted the strike would disrupt the school system.

Local 527 of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, ordered the strike in an effort to force a collective bargaining election. Four other teacher organizations denounced the walkout.

Whether the strike would continue next week or be called off was uncertain. A union spokesman said no decision had been reached late yesterday.

Edward Fontaine, a union leader, pledged the strike would continue "so long as one (union) representative had the strength and courage to continue."

A school board tally listed 407 teachers absent. Normal absence among teachers on a Friday is 150.

Police said 62 pickets, some of them carrying anti-school board signs, appeared outside 23 schools. Most of the strikers were Negroes, who make up 80 per cent of local 527's membership of 1,400.

Democrats Consider Selling Convention Rights To TV

WASHINGTON (AP) —Democrats are thinking of putting a price tag — perhaps up to $2 million — on television coverage of their national conventions.

Their talking-stage idea: let the television networks bid for the right to broadcast the party's political extravaganzas.

"They do it on major sports events," said Wayne Phillips, Director of Public Information for the Democratic National Committee. "Instead of having all three networks cover the convention, which has gotten to be a madhouse, we'd try to sell the time to one of them."

"I think they can well afford it," Phillips said. He said the networks try to get commercial sponsors for their convention broadcasts.

"Astounding idea," said Elmer Lower, President of the American Broadcasting Company's news division.

"We can't believe that this is a serious proposal . . ." said CBS News President Richard S. Salant. "If they want to treat themselves as if they were a commercial spectator sport, that's their business.

"As a news organization, we intend to cover the conventions as news," Salant said.

A spokesman for the Republican National Committee said only that the GOP has no plan like that advanced by the Democrats.

Phillips said he was assigned to look into the idea as a possible way to recover funds the party would lose if Congress bars business tax deductions for the cost of advertisements in political convention programs.

He said advertising raised some $2 million at the last Democratic convention, in Atlantic City, N. J.

"This is the money that we're going to have to try to replace if that amendment goes through," he said.

Humphrey: U.S. Will Fight Until Free Elections Held

WASHINGTON (AP) —Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey declared yesterday the United States will remain in South Viet Nam "until conditions permit genuinely free elections."

While Humphrey underscored the administration stand, Congress hastened the process of appropriating more than $13 billion, almost all of it for military and economic aid operations in the Asian combat zone.

And administration officials ruled out the use of mines or bombs to close the port of Haiphong, the major harbor of North Viet Nam. They said it would increase the risk of conflict with Communist China and would not significantly affect the flow of supplies to the Viet Cong.

Humphrey told the National Press Club that the administration's offer of unconditional negotiations to end the war still is open—but at the same time he rejected the idea of coalition government in advance of South Vietnamese elections.

He said the Communists have proclaimed that a route to victory and to power in the South.

"We will neither tire nor withdraw," Humphrey said.

Chapel Hillian In Army School

Pvt. Jerry B. Kilpatrick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Kilpatrick of Chapel Hill, has completed an eight - week fire direction control course under the Reserve Enlistment Program at the Army Artillery and Missile School, Fort Sill, Okla.

He was trained to compute target distances using logarithmic and trigonometric tables, and received instruction in mathematics and map reading.

The 23-year-old 1964 graduate of N. C. State will return to his National Guard Unit, Headquarters Battery, 6th Howitzer Battalion, 1-th Artillery in Manassas, at the completion of his six month tour of active duty.

How Do I Love Thee . . .

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — "Now Patti hardly speaks to me," said Ralph Julian, 19, after he proclaimed his affection for his sweetheart, Patti Boyle, 18.

Ralph put up a billboard with foot-high letters proclaiming "Pattie: I love you! Will you marry me?" It was signed "Ralph."

Ralph didn't say why Patti wasn't speaking, whether because he misspelled her name or she was embarrassed.

He said Wednesday he hopes a more formal proposal will bring about a chaage of heart.

EASTERN NUMBER ONE TO THE SUN

Casey Stengel Was Something Special

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer

He was something special to the game.

He was colorful and he was controversial.

He added new dimensions to the English language every time he opened his mouth.

He was number 37 for years and years and. . .

It's hard to imagine that the old man was ever a player for National League baseball clubs. But he was one. He was a small, tough, outfielder, and he hit .393 in his three World Series. But that was more than forty years ago.

You knew him as a manager — the best of them. You saw him pacing back and forth in a dugout in Yankee Stadium. And you remember his walk out to the mound.

That walk was a masterful production. It was slow and deliberate. His back was stooped and thin wisps of white hair showed below the black cap.

He was always the boss. You read about his feud with Billy Martin and his tough, almost tyranical, hold over his ballplayers.

He was a genius with the pitchers. He knew more about the game than anyone. His Yanks won five straight pennants and five straight World Series. You referred to him as the Ol' Perfesser.

He was the Father of the Mets. He brought his character to them and made all of New York love them because they were human. They were funny and fun to watch. The Yankees were cold and precise in every game they played. It was easy to hate the Yankees because they always won. The Mets were warm and unpredictable.

Casey Stengel was a part of baseball for more than 60 years. He played and managed when it was at the top as the nation's favorite sport.

Baseball has changed.

It's big money and big business. It's new steel and glass stadiums and new teams. It's television and it's radio. It's players who hold out for huge sums of money. And it's owners like Charles O. Finley who are changing the game into a cheap sideshow.

Once baseball didn't need any trimmings and football was left to the colleges.

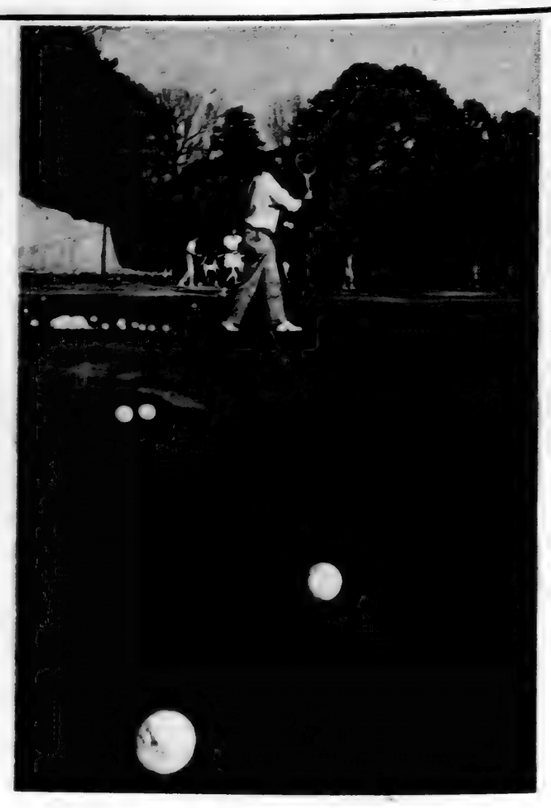
It's not the same anymore.

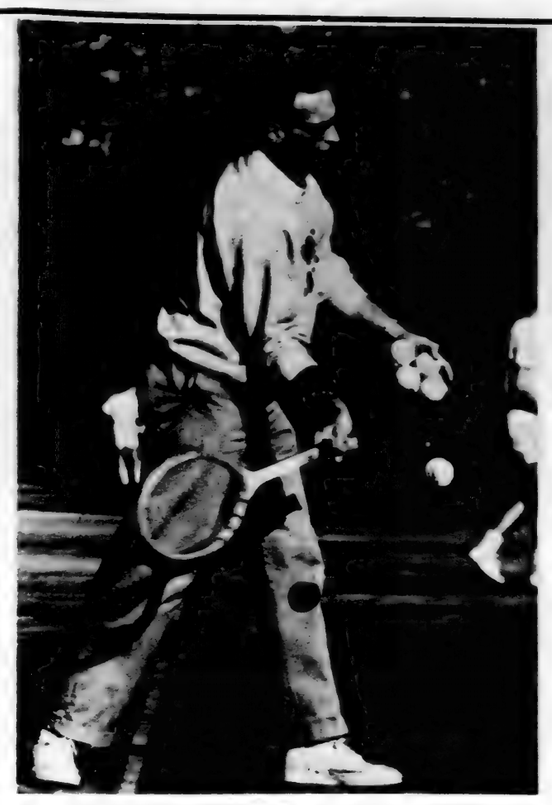
Casey Stengel represented the game throughout his career. He was a part of it's history.

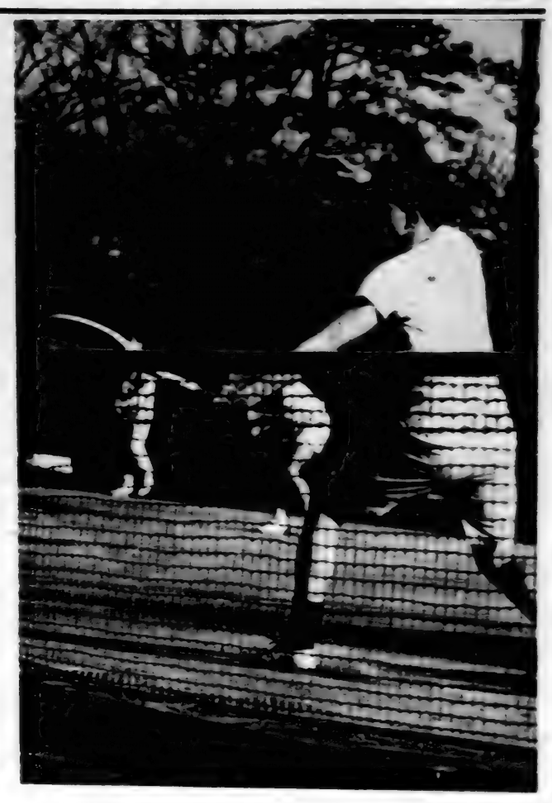
He gave his life to the game. And he made it something special to millions of people.

Stengel retired late last August at the age of 70. And last Tuesday he received baseball's greatest honor.

He was voted into The Hall of Fame.







THE BRIGHT MARCH afternoon sunshine and the smack of tennis balls fill the air around the varsity courts as Tennis Coach Don Skakle prepares his highly regarded crew for their opener with Kalamazoo here on March 21. This year's club can hope to do no better than tie last season's outstanding record. Last year Coach Skakle guided his crew to a 21-0 record and the ACC Championship — Skakle's sixth championship in seven years as UNC Tennis Coach. Coach Skakle is a stickler for quick reactions and recovery and in these photographs fires lightning-fast shots at his varsity hopefuls shouting "block, block." Richard Holderness, trying out for the varsity team, attempts to return one of the hot-shots and finds the coach a top player as well as a top coach. Skakle played tennis here for Carolina under John Kenfield from 1945-1950 during the era of former Davis Cupper Vic Seixas. Coach Skakle posted a four-year record of 60 victories and one defeat.

Top Backs Missing From Spring Drills

North Carolina's entire starting backfield from last fall returns for the 1966 football season — but only one member will be on hand when spring drills begin here next Monday.

Halfback David Riggs of Morganton is the lone starting back drawing equipment. The others — Quarterback Danny Talbott, Fullback Tom Lampman and Flanker Bob Hume — are possible starters on the baseball team.

"Naturally I would like to have everyone out," explains Coach Jim Hickey, "but those men have proven themselves and I feel it is only fair to allow them to participate in another sport. Spring drills actually were installed to acquaint the inexperienced athletes with the system."

Hickey expects almost 100 men to report for action. The Tar Heel grid boss moved his practice back several weeks from his original schedule because of inclement weather. Hickey calls the coming drills "our split season."

The Tar Heels will work out 10 times, then go on the regular spring vacation beginning April 2. The athletes will return on April 12 for another 10 days of drills, winding up the duty with an intersquad contest in late April.

Hickey says he is anxious to look over his crop of rising sophomores. Last fall's freshman team posted a 5-0 record. It also was one of the most sizable frosh units ever to play here.

Softball Clinic Set For Woollen

A softball clinic for officials and prospective officials has been set for Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

The clinic is scheduled for 4:30 each afternoon in 301 Woollen Gym.

'Pretty Good Year' Says Bobby Lewis

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer

The basketball season is over.

All that remains is several hard facts. The Tar Heels posted a 15-10 record this year. They went to the ACC tournament and beat Maryland. Then, in the second game, they lost to Duke by only one point.

As spring grows into summer people are likely to forget the facts and look towards next year.

But few of the thousands of fans who watched the Tar Heels in action are likely to forget the play of Bob Lewis.

Lewis earned the coveted title of All - American before his name. He was considered by the nation's sports writers to be one of the 15 best collete players in the country.

"I think we had a pretty good season. A lot of people expected it to be the other way around.

"We were ready going into the tournament. We played real well in the first game against Maryland. We really hustled.

"I found out the strategy for the Duke game the day before we played them. It sounded really good. That was the only way we could have beaten them. I was really calm during the game and didn't feel the pressure.

"There wasn't a sound in the locker room after it was all over. The loss really hurt everyone. We played it so well."

Then Lewis looked to the future.

I'll practice all summer. I hope I'll be working for at least an hour a day. I'm going to concentrate on shooting from the outside."

"I was surprised to see my name on one of the All-America teams. It's a great honor.

"I never would have gotten it if it weren't for all the guys on the team, the coaches, the people connected with the publicity and all the writers. I'd like to thank them for everything."

Phi Delta Downs Zete II

52-28 In Intramural Action

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

Phi Delt Black rolled to an easy 52-28 victory over Zete II in intramural basketball on Thursday. John Hubble led the way with 14 points while Gay added nine, Coleman and McChesney eight each, Armstrong seven and Mann six. Bill Poe managed seven for the Zetes. The Phi Delts had an easy time of it throughout the game, running up a 32-14 halftime score.

The Mangum Mugs edged the Ruffin Rebels, 41-37. Andy Holland had 17 Mug points while Joe Dunn and Tom Kirkman chipped in with ten more. Dave Bowman scored 10 points for the Rebels. Bowman had 12 of his points in the first half when the Rebels tied the Mugs, 21-21. But Holland saved 13 of his points for the second half to clinch the win.

The Phi Gam Fijis won a slow 35-19 affair over SAE Blue I. John Titchener had 10 points and Ron Sparrow and Bill Bowman nine apiece in the victory. SAE had Newlin as high man with a paltry four points. Three men hit for three points each, another two and another one in the futile effort. The Fijis had a 21-10 halftime advantage over SAE.

In table tennis results, DU White No. 1 downed Kappa Psi Blue, 2-1. Gerald Hayes of DU beat Tim Kroboth and Robin Dial of DU beat James Hall in single matches. Jack Bailey and Mark Williams of Kappa Psi won doubles over Bob Coleman and Bill Walcott.

The DU's were beaten in their next match by DKE Blue, 3-0. Holderness beat Jack Bennett and Van Wyck beat Dial in the singles while Swenson and Edgerton downed Coleman and Walcott in the doubles match.

DKE Blue had earlier beaten the TEP Pops, 2-0. Van Wyck won a singles match over Kaufman and Gabriel. One singles match was not played.

Sigma Nu Blue beat the TEP Mops, 2-1. Gene Merritt of Sigma Nu beat Gary Gross in one singles while Paul Camnitz of TEP beat Tom Whitehead in the other. Eddie Koonce and Howard Hackney of Sigma Nu won the doubles over the Mops' Eaten and Gaines.

DU White II also lost to the Sigma Nu's, 2-1. Merritt beat Jim Clark of DU but Whitehead lost to Charlie Hupfer. Koonce and Hackney then polished off Benbow and Menius of DU in the doubles for the win.

Levin, Williams Compete In Track

Two UNC track stars, middle distance runner Mike Williams and sprinter Jon Levin, will participate in the NCAA National Indoor Track Championships this week-end in Detroit, Mich.

Williams, who won the ACC indoor mile run with a 4:17.3 two weeks ago, will not be running the mile. Instead he will be running the 1,000-yard run. Tar Heel track coach Joe Hilton said that each runner had to qualify with a certain time. Mike's time of 2:13 in the 1,000 qualified him for the big meet.

The Tarpon Springs, Fla., native expressed pleasure at the opportunity to run at Detroit. "I think it's a great honor. I just hope I can represent UNC well. The competition is the strongest I've ever faced, but I'll certainly try my hardest."

Levin will be running the 60-yard dash against some of the fastest runners in the nation. He was the winner of the indoor 60 at the ACC meet with a time of 6.3. His best is 6.2 seconds.

"The key to a good race will be relaxation and a good start," said Levin. "I realize there will be tremendous competition in the Nationals, but I'm looking forward to competing."

Double Headers On Tap

A brace of doubleheaders Saturday in the 29th National Invitation Basketball Tournament at Madison Square Garden will determine the quarter-finalists in the nation's oldest post-season tournament.

In the first game in the afternoon San Francisco meets Penn State following which St. John's, the defending champion, takes on Villanova. At night Manhattan meets Army and Boston College plays Louisville in the second game.

The San Francisco-Penn State game, which starts at 2 p.m., EST, will be televised nationally by CBS.

In opening games Thursday night Temple defeated Virginia Tech 88-73 and qualified to meet top seeded Brigham Young in the quarter-finals, and New York University edged DePaul 68-65, winning the right to meet second seeded Wichita.

In the first half of the quarter-finals on March 14 are the Brigham Young-Temple and Wichita-NYU games. On March 15 the winner of the Army-Manhattan game meets the winner of the Penn State-San Francisco game.

The other quarter-final match pits the winners of St. John's-Villanova and Boston College-Louisville.

Ruggles Named LR Coach

Lenoir Rhyne College Thursday announced the appointment of Melvin Ruggles, a successful high school coach, as head basketball coach.

Ruggles, who has coached at Hildebran High School for 18 years, had a 120-9 record for the past five years and a career record of 312-89. His team won 24 games and lost one this season.

He will take over Sept. 1, succeeding Dr. Ed Lucke, an interim coach at Lenoir Rhyne. Lucke succeeded Billy Wells last year.

"Melvin Ruggles' record speaks for itself," said Athletic Director Hanely Painter. "He is considered by many as one of the best high school coaches in North Carolina. We're looking forward to Coach Ruggles joining our staff."

Several of Ruggles' boys have gone on the play college basketball. They include Art Whisnant of South Carolina, Eddie Holland of Wake Forest and Lenoir Rhyne and Curtis Eckerd, who plays at Clemson.

'Old Man Of Racing' Dies

On March 4, 1885, the day Grover Cleveland was inaugurated President, a 10-year-old kid, James E. Fitzsimmons, got a job as a water boy for the Brannon Brothers stable in Brooklyn.

Thus started Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons' 75-year career in horse-racing and a career that ran the gamut from exercise boy to jockey, to trainer. As a trainer he saddled 2,275 winners, including two Triple Crown champions.

The Grand Old Man of American thoroughbred racing died early Friday at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital here at the age of 91.

His Triple Crown winners were Gallant Fox in 1930 and Omaha in 1935. Ten other Fitzsimmons horses won one or more of those three classics, the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont.

Net Team Sees Difficult Season

North Carolina's tennis team, which will be co-captained by Bronson Van Wyck and Ken Oettinger, faces a 20-match schedule beginning here Mar. 21.

"The squad is a good one," commentes Coach Don Skakle, "and my hopes are high. We went unbeaten last season and won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship. I know this present group will give its all to match that record."

THE AIR FORCE ROTC Drill Team is in Greenville today to try to win their third state championship in a row. They have been practicing 50 hours for the past two weeks getting in shpae for the competition.

AFROTC Drill Team Shoots For Third Consecutive State Championship Today

By GEORGE HAIRSTON
Special to the DTH

The Air Force ROTC Drill Team, which has won the state championship for the past two years, is in Greenville today competing for a third win.

Victory today will mean the North Carolina team retires the trophy and is eligible for the national drill team competition to be held in Wsshington in mid-April.

The other teams in competition with North Carolina are N. C. State, East Carolina, Duke and North Carolina A&T.

This is the last year drill competition will be held. Second lieutenant Robert S. Barnhardt said that the AFROTC is going on a two-year program at the end of this year.

Under this program "we will not have the material to form a drill team," Barnhardt said.

"The drill team will die unless we form a squad drill, maybe a sergeant's drill team for special drills," he said.

The group has practiced about 50 hours over the past two weeks. They have perfected their drill to the point that no verbal commands are given, making them the only drill team in the state with such precision.

There are three phases in drill competition: inspection, regulation drill and "monkey" or trick drill.

Company commander Clyde Thompson said, "trophies are awarded for each phase and for overall excellence. Last year UNC won all the events for the first time in drill team history."

Last year's team placed 14 out of 40 top teams in the nation. It came in third in the Cherry Blossom Parade, where teams from all over the nation and every branch of the ROTC program participate.

Negro Aid Book Published By 'Y'

A new booklet has recently been published by the YM-YWCA.

"Financial Aid for Southern Negro Students" lists scholarships and loans available on a non-discriminatory basis. Demand is so great that it is now in its second priating.

The idea to compile the sources of financial aid available to Negro high school students originated with Tony Mason, Chairman of the YMCA Human Relations Committee, and Ben Spaulding.

The booklet was deisnged for N. C. Negro students. The first copies were sent to all Negro high schools in the state, but the second mailing will include every Negro high school in the South.

Financing has been done through the Human Relations Committee of the Y. The first copies were free, but they will cost 40c apiece in the future.

"We are trying to get grants from foundations to finance expansion of the booklet to 10,000 copies and 80 pages," Mason concluded.

Prof Finds Flaw In Grad School

Education is one thing which is not going on in our institutions of higher learning.

Northwestern University professor Dr. Eliseo Vivas made this charge last night at UNC during a seminar on "The Continuing Crisis in University Education.

The well-known philosopher and author, in leading the seminar sponsored by the Carolina Conservative Club and the International Society of Individualists, said, "There is a distinction in kind between training and education. Training goes on in our graduate schools and is accomplished fairly satisfactorily."

But when it comes to education, he said, "It does not go on in our institutions of higher learning, and they are so constituted that they do not allow and even unconsciously discourage the process of education on the part of graduate students."

He added that since graduate students become the teachers of undergraduates, they pass on their attitudes, objectives and habits of mind, thus training instead of educating their pupils.

"This makes for more or less skillful specialists who are uneducated. And this is a condition which apparently is not felt to be an evil one, either by our universities or by our society," Dr. Vivas noted.

The former visiting professor at UNC described an educated person as one, who unlike the trained person, "has a defensible grasp of his relationship to his fellows and hence to himself, to his society in terms of its enduring as well as of its momentarily fashionable values, and who has a defensible sense of his place in the universe."

A specialist's skill in either science or the humanities isn't enough to provide this graps, he said.

Dr. Vivas concluded that it is desirable to have educated men because "They represent a form — and possible the most enduring and catholic form — of human excellence."

Murdoch Will Receive Funds

The Murdoch Center at Butner is to be among the five charities to be added by Campus Chest contributions. This donation will be used for medical equipment and recreational supplies, such as books and records.

The Murdoch Center is the home for 1,500 mental retarded. Those in residence are six years old and up; the oldest patient often being over eighty. The I.Q.'s vary from 15 to 85.

A staff of 300 professional workers, teachers, and maintenance men serve the center.

One problem for the staff at Murdoch is to cope with providing necessary transportation to take the children on field trips. There are several UNC church groups and "Y" Committees which volunteer time and attention to help meet the needs of these retardates.

Valkyrie Contest Set For Apr. 26

The annual Valkyrie Sing has been scheduled for April 26 in conjunction with the tapping of the Golden Fleece.

Six trophies will be awarded this year. Four will be in the singing division and two will be in the skit division.

Both divisions will have a men's and women's category and singing groups will be subdivided into small groups of under 15 members and large groups of over 15.

UNIVERSITY PARTY Candidates for Senior class offices are Rick Crowder, president; Nelson Schwab, vice - president; Barbara Knight, secretary; Jody Wright, treasurer; and Martha Menefee, social chairman. The election is March 12.

Forum Invites Kissinger And Lodge

Defense policy expert Henry Kissinger and George Cabot Lodge, son of the ambassador to South Viet Nam, Henry Cabot Lodge, will speak at Carolina Tuesday.

Kissinger, an authority and commentator on Far Eastern politics, and Lodge, former Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs and one time candidate for the U. S. Senate seat from Massachusetts, will speak on the Vietnamese war. They are sponsored by the Carolina Forum.

George Nicholson, Forum chairman, Beauchamp Carr, vice chairman, and Neil Thomas, Student Government press secretary invited them from among the many dignitaries interviewed on the Forum's recent trip to Washington and Boston.

They also spoke with Robert Welch, the John Birch Society head who will speak at Carolina on Sunday.

Medical Alumni Day

The UNC School of Medicine will hold its annual Alumni Day Thursday, March 24. The day will include class reunions, a special awards and recognition program and a series of scientific papers.

Distinguished service awards will be presented and the original clinical department chairman and hospital administrator will be honored at the annual alumni dinner.

A business meeting, including a report from the Nominating Committee is scheduled at a luncheon session.

The afternoon will be devoted to a scientific session.

The speaker at the lecture will be Dr. Lewis Thomas, of the Department of Medicine at the New York University School of Medicine.

MRC Picks Officers

Moore To Talk Here

Governor Dan K. Moore will address members of the UNC Faculty Club at a luncheon meeting at noon Tuesday. The speech will take place at the Faculty Club.

Governor Moore will discuss various aspects of the university. He will be introduced by acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson.

Collection Booths

Booths for collecting money for the "Free Speech Defense Fund" weren't set up yesterday in Y-Court, Lenoir Hall or Chase Cafeteria.

Student Body President Paul Dickson had said they would be.

Dickson said yesterday that the Steering Committee of the Committee for Free Inquiry met yesterday and decided to set up the three strategic locations on campus Monday.

Drill Team Wins Third State Title

GREENVILLE — UNC's AFROTC drill team won the Area B-2 (state of North Carolina) drill competition yesterday, making it the state champs for the third time.

Drill Team Commander Clyde Thompson was elated. "It's great. We're number one," he said.

The drill competition was based on regular drill, personal inspection and special drill. The Carolina team scored 763 out of a possible 1,000 points.

The closest contender was East Carolina College with 696 points. North Carolina State, the only other contestant, scored 562 points.

UNC lost only in the personal inspection division to ECC, by five points.

In the other two divisions, regular and special drill, UNC won wasily, giving it four out of the possible five trophys that were awarded.

The trophies UNC won are:

The regular drill trophy, the special drill trophy and the trophy for winning this year's competition. UNC retired the revolving trophy by winning it the third year in a row.

After the competition, Roddy Morrow, a former UNC drill team member who trained this year's winning team, was ceremoniously tossed into a swimming pool.

A Victory Banquet was held 5:30 p.m. yesterday at ECC. Dr. James J. T. McShane, father of a member of the ECC drill team and chief of U. S. Marshalls in Washington, D. C., was the key-note speaker.

The judges all came from Shaw AFB, S. C. They were: Lt. John S. Durkin Jr., M-Sgt. Robert J. Degrechie, S-Sgt. George M. Ardis and S-Sgt. Marion G. Vann.

The competition was held 3 p.m. yesterday in the ECC's Memorial Gymnasium.

Tuesday Set For New Vote On Referendum

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

The latest chairman of the Elections Board, Arthur Hays, yesterday promised an all-out effort to conduct Tuesday's Constitutional Referendum without a hitch.

Hays, appointed to the post Friday by Student Body President Paul Dickson, is the fifth Elections Board chairman this year.

The Tuesday plebiscite will decide whether the offices of president and vice president of the student body should be placed on the same ticket.

An identical referendum was held Feb. 22 on the so - called "slate amendment," but a protest was lodged by a resident of Alexander Residence Hall, Bayard Harris.

Harris charged that John Winborne, then temporary chairman of the Elections Board, had not provided poll tenders at Alexander; that the Y Court polls were not properly manned and that not enough students had been informed about the referendum.

They will include: times polls will be opened, voting locations, poster defacement violations, campaign expense rules, polling places regulations (no campaigning within 50 feet), rules for stamping of ID's, lists of unqualified voters, a rule that each voter must deposit his own ballot, a rule that polls must be manned at all times, a rule that no candidate may man a poll and a rule that all violations must be reported as soon as possible.

John Birch Society Founder Will Speak On Campus Tonight

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

The Robert Welch who will speak here tonight at 8 in Memorial Hall is billed a controversial speaker. His point of view has not always been so radical.

In fact, P. Cleveland Gardner, a 1916 graduate and a classmate of Welch's, says, "He was a quiet, normal-type boy. He was the last type of boy I would have expected to have these radical views."

S. H. Hobbs Sr. of Chapel Hill told the Durham Herald he doesn't remember Welch's having any "notions about politics when he was here because he was too young for it."

Since that time, however, Welch has become deeply interested in politics.

In 1950 he placed second in a field of four for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor of Massachusetts. He actively supported Robert Taft against Dwight D. Eisenhower for the 1952 Republican presidential nomination. He has found Barry Goldwater an acceptable spokesman for his views in 1964.

He and several other men organized the John Birch Society in 1958. The society sees its purpose as working "by all honorable means to bring about less government, more responsibility and a better world." It sees its goals as completely opposed to those of Communism.

The society is named for John Birch, an American Christian missionary who directed Nationalist Chinese intelligence forces during World War II and was murdered 10 days after V-J Day by the Chinese Communists.

The organization calls Birch the "first American casualty in that third World War between the Communists and the ever-shrinking free world."

Welch terms John Birch's death as the event which clearly set up battle lines between Communism and "Christian-style civilization."

In addition to tis attacks on former President Eisenhower, the society has launched violent attacks on Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren.

In fact, in Welch's opinion, the "whole Supreme Court is a nest of socialists and worse . . ." and, "The impeachment of Earl Warren would dramatize and crystallize the whole basic question of whether the United States remains the United States, or becomes gradually transformed into a province of the world-wide Soviet system."

It is Welch's belief that "at least 95 per cent of all people on both sides of the Iron Curtain do not want Communism. The job is not to unsell a majority from something they want or think is good for them, but to enable a preponderant majority to resist and refuse something they do not want."

"This belief is that . . . the American support of the international Communist conspiracy is now the backbone of its strength, and has been for many years." If and when we can reach the point of turning just the American government from actively helping the Communist conspiracy everywhere in the world, we shall have won a most important battle in the world ahead."

Welch's appearance is sponsored by the Carolina Forum. He is the author of several books including "May God Forgive us," and "The Life of John Birch."

Chancellor 'Upset' By Tape Recorder

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

A tape recorder came between Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson and three Student Government representatives yesterday.

Student Body President Paul Dickson was answering a request by Sitterson to come by his office and discuss the administration's speaker policy and other "related matters" when Sitterson noticed his conversation was being recorded.

The three students who spoke with Sitterson in his office for 30 minutes were Dickson, NSA Coordinator Eric Van Loon and Carolina Forum Chairman George Nicholson.

Sitterson said yesterday that the talk concerned the "general situation," although there was some discussion about possible renewed invitations to Herbert Aptheker and Frank Wilkinson.

"This was mentioned," Sitterson said, "but then we got off on a general discussion."

Dickson, his arm in a sling from a fall last week, entered the office with Nicholson and Van Loon. Van Loon carried the tape recorder.

When the tape recorder was discovered Sitterson made them play back the tape and erase the two - minute conversation.

"That upset me a little bit," Sitterson said. "They didn't mention it to me."

He added, "I've been dealing with people all my life and this is the first time anyone has tried this."

According to Dickson there was no consensus reached at the meeting. "We didn't exactly hide (the recorder) it from him," Dickson said. "Eric was sitting with it right in his hand."

The recorder was a miniature model which Dickson has been carrying around with him since he became involved in the speaker controversy.

Van Loon stressed that "the real question" Dickson presented to Sitterson "was whether or not we should have a court case, and whether the decision (to ban) Aptheker and Wilkinson was binding.

"It was fairly important that we did not get it wrong, and that's why we had the tape recorder," Van Loon said.

Beat, Hippy, But No Soap

By PEYTIE FEARRINGTON
DTH Staff Writer

A beat. A hippy. The sorority girl and the residence college boy envision a beard, sandals and an evident lack of soap.

But several afternoons at Harrys, The Tempo, Y-Court and GM bring a new dimension to a definition of this one per cent of the student body.

As Russell Banks states, "The average student here is a child in his interests and ambitions. Saturday night becomes the end of all his activities. UNC is like a big high school, but I don't feel frustrated. There are outlets for the serious student here."

This same idea was echoed by David Mallison, Richard Doble, Paul Tyler and various other students who, by their appearance, must be placed in the beat category.

One coed who attended a beat masquerade party said, "It was out in the country. People were just sitting around talking and drinking. This boy dressed up as death walked up and stared. He scared the hell out of me, but then he walked off to argue with some other boy."

When asked what the argument was about, she said, "I really don't know — the words were beyond me. These people are concerned with serious matters. They are looking for the truth in themselves and in the world without taking anything for granted."

This then becomes the basic idea behind the movement and the beards. But why the beards at all?

Wendy Farer provides her view, "The outward appearance of the hippies is not conventional, but this is the point. A great many of these sincere, productive students are in the arts or the interpretive humanities. Convention and society's rules confine and restrict their creativity. It's when hippiness becomes an end in itself that the individual becomes a non-producer."

Another interpretation is offered by Kitty Hawthorne, "I'm not sure why this certain vehicle is used for the beat protest against middle class conformity, but clothes and an outward appearance are the most logical way to illustrate their feelings."

"The point is a hippy can wear anything that appeals to her, Farer said. She can go into a store and buy a pair of Pappagallos, but she has a choice."

When the beats on campus are considered as interested, conscientious students, they cannot be overlooked.

Dr. Dan W. Patterson, associate professor of English, has instructed several beat students. He says, "One of these boys in my class always wore a coat, but never a tie. Some other professors said he would be rebellious, but I found him exceedingly intelligent and interested."

"Many people feel that there is no need for them and no job to be done," Patterson said. Their mistake comes when they become narrow-minded idealists not willing to see the whole field and to loose a few points to win the game."

If the entire hippy movement is genuine, from where did the bad connotations arise? A trip to downtown Chapel Hill and a few well-placed questions can quickly answer this.

The famous, or infamous, beats in town, the young people from 25 to 30 who appear most extreme in attitude and dress are, for the most part, not students at the University.

One student, preferring to remain anonymous, stated, "These people are psychologically messed up. In another time they may have only been town drunkards."

Still another group is called beat by the student body, but hippies term them "pseudo." Farer's remark of "hippiness for its own sake" is recalled.

With three distinct groups within the beat category, the question arises why the conscientious group does not change its appearance to be

Carolina Will Get New Law School Building

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

Construction of a new $1,880,000 Law School building to be erected on Ridge Road behind the Institute of Government will begin next October. It will be completed by the fall of 1968.

The building cost of $1,755,000 and equipment cost of $125,000 will be paid for by the state. The building will contain 94,000 square feet.

Dean of the Law School J. Dickson Phillips said, "The new building is to be constructed to provide adequate facilities for the Law School and space to house a growing Law Library."

At present, Manning Hall houses the Law School, but does not provide an adequate amount of space for the current number of faculty and students.

There are 465 students in Law School this year with an expected enrollment of 500 next fall. Manning Hall has been over -crowded since the jump in enrollment in 1964 from 377 to 451.

When the enrollment reaches 500 no additional students will be admitted until the new building is completed. Dean Phillips said the new facility will easily handle that enrollment.

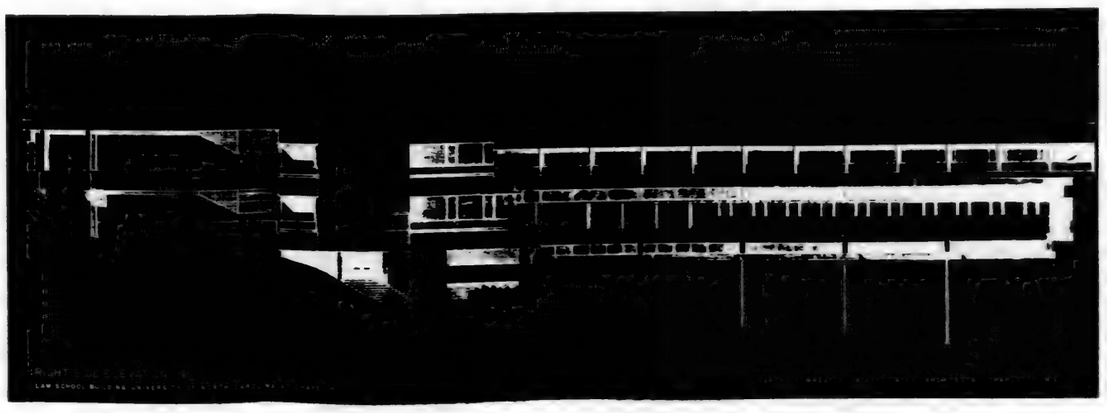
Another major deficiency in the present quality of the Law School is the space available for the Law Library and for student reading and study.

At present, the Law Library contains about 110,000 volumes. It must enter a period of substantial growth if it is to be adequate in terms of comparison with the libraries of law schools of comparable size.

"The new library, designed for a total collection of from 250,000 to 300,000 volumes, will adequately accommodate our needs," Phillips said.

University Business Manager J. A. Branch said, "The new Law School building will be comtempory in style. It is deisgned so that it can be enlarged to take care of further increases in the student body."

The architect, Charles H. Wheatley of Charlotte, is concluding design development drawings incorporating the Property Control review comments of his preliminary sketches.



THE NEW LAW SCHOOL BUILDING, to be constructed on Ridge Road beginning next October, will cost $1,880,000. Most students will enter from the east side, which is next to a parking lot. A student lounge will be located just inside the door. The main entrance will be on Ridge Road.

ONE OF THE LADY staff members received a speeding ticket, and when police reporter Mike Yopp (former DTH managing editor) came into the newsroom the conversation was directed his way.

"Hey Mike," someone yelled. "Tell Tom's boys to lay off that stretch on U. S. 70 West. My wife got a speeding ticket there last month; my neighbor's wife got one there last week and now Shirley got one out there today. What's wrong, anyway?"

"Sounds like Raleigh's full of fast women," replied Mike.

Gould In The Cold

Laurence Gould, who delivers the McNair Lecture here tomorrow night at 8 in Hill Hall, was the butt of good-humored jibes from his associates in 1928 when he was encamped in the Antartic wastes of "Little America," the headquarters of the Byrd Expedition to the South Pole.

They were joking with Gould because he kept talking about the possibility of taking a trip by submarine to the North Pole.

Thirty years later the United States sent its Polaris submarines under the ice to the Arctic regions around the North Pole.

Gould tells about being kidded about his proposed Arctic under-ice venture in his book "Cold: The Record of an Antarctic Sledge Journey by Dogs."

* * *

Gould may have some advice for wearers of beards. Especially in the event that they ever go to the Arctic or Antarctic regions. There, a beard is practically a must.

"SOME DAYS ago I shaved my beard, believing it wise to do so before starting on the trail, Gould writes in his book, "Cold." "It was quite a change for I had not shaved since leaving New Zealand. My face had not gotten fully used to the change for I froze it time after time today. Now tonight my face feels as though it had been sunburned."

So beardos, there is someting you can do in ths world of ours.

Statements From Candidates

Candidates for president and vice president of the student body and editor of The Daily Tar Heel will be allowed to run statements and letters of endorsement in the DTH.

Statements from each candidate must not exceed 350 words and copy must be in the hands of the managing editor by 4 p.m. Friday. Pictures of each candidate, if desired, are due at that time.

Letters of endorsement, with no more than 25 signatures, may be submitted by each of these candidates no later than 4 p.m. Wednesday. They cannot exceed 250 words.

Candidates for all senior class offices may choose between submitting a policy statement or letter of endorsement, either of 250 words.

They must be turned in to the DTH by 4 p.m. Wednesday. Photographs of each candidate may be submitted at that time.

Interviews Start For Orientation

The Campus Orientation Commission announced yesterday that interviews for staff positions will be held March 14-18 from 4-6 p.m. in Graham Memorial.

The positions open for men and women on the staff are as follows: foreign student coordinator, married student coordinator, secretary and treasurer.

Also the directors of academics, receptions, medical affairs, UNC-G mixer, counselor's manual, Student Government, publicity, religious emphasis, honor systems, activity session and weiner roast, counselor benefits and library coordination.

Bob Wilson, commission chairman said, "This year the commission is looking for students who are not overburdened with outside activities and who will be able to dedicate the necessary time to the project."

Interested upperclassmen are urged to apply for these committee positions.

Students should sign up for an interview at the information desk in Graham Memorial.

ERNIE McCRARY, EDITOR

That Silly Kid Stuff

He might be a fighter for freedom, but he certainly isn't a James Bond.

If 007 had wanted to record a conversation, he never would be caught doing it.

Student Government President Paul Dickson has taken to carrying a tape recorder around with him since the possibility of legal action over speaker restrictions has arisen.

For example, he has recorded his confrontations with Campus Police Chief Arthur Beaumont when both Frank Wilkinson and Herbert Aptheker were told to get off school property.

Fine. No question about Dickson's right to have these things taped. They are public information, of a sort.

But this spirit of coak-and-daggerism is getting a little out of hand when attempts are made to record private conversations with the chancellor without telling him about it.

Saturday morning Dickson and two of his Student Government associates paid Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson a visit. They were invited to talk about the speaker controversy, and in particular they wanted to pin Sitterson down on his reaction to renewed invitations to Aptheker and Wilkinson.

One of the students had a small recorder on his lap during the conversation. It wasn't hidden — they just didn't tell Sitterson they were taping his words.

Sitterson heard the recorder squeaking after it had been on about five minutes.

He got "upset."

In fact, you might say he raised hell.

He made the students erase the tape and play it back to make sure no words remained. Then the discussion resumed.

You made a mistake, Chancellor.

You should have thrown them out and told them not to come back until they were willing to talk without playing games.

If students have to build their case with such shenanigans, we ought to forget it.

Presidential Confusion

The campus political scene has been pretty well scrambled by Sonny Pepper's unexpected entry in the race for student government president.

Pepper made a bid for the University Party nomination, but Teddy O'Toole did more homework with the convention delegates and edged Pepper 184-175.

His change in thinking was primarily prompted by the confusion surrounding the constitutional amendment which would require that the president and vice-president be elected from the same party.

Pepper could not run without a party because he did not have a vice-president.

His obvious choice for a running mate would be Bill Purdy — but Purdy, as the UP nominee for vice-president, would be bound by the slate amendment to stick with O'Toole.

Now the election in which that amendment was approved has been declared invalid because so many polls were not open during the voting.

A new election has been set for this Tuesday, and to accomplish the near-impossible task of organizing a spur-of-the-moment election, S. G. President Paul Dickson appointed the old pro of his staff, Arthur Hays.

If any man can pull the election off, Hays can. He wrote many of the election laws himself, and knows how to get the job done.

Assuming the election is held Tuesday, however, its fate is now uncertain. Pepper supporters will be out to defeat the slate amendment so he can be elected with Purdy.

Even if the amendment is again approved there will be some doubt as to whether it will apply to him — since he announced his candidacy before the vote to make the amendment official.

Are you thoroughly confused now?

Yeah, so are we.

Republicans Face Problems In South

Much has been written about the Republican resurgence in the South. In recent years the G.O.P. has scored victories below the Mason-Dixon line that have surpassed anything since Reconstruction. The one bright spot for the Republican party in the dismal year of 1964 was the success in the South.

Five of the six states that Barry Goldwater carried were Southern—Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georigia and South Carolina. Alabama elected five Republican Congressmen. One of these, James Martin, nearly defeated Sen. Lister Hill in 1962. Mississippi elected its first Republican Congressman since Reconstruction. South Carolina Representative Albert Watson, chastised by the Democratic party for supporting Goldwater, was triumphantly re-elected as a Republican.

In this state, of course, Rep. Charles Jonas of Mecklenberg County repelled an attempt to gerrymander him out of office. Louisiana has no Republicans in Congress, but two Republicans were elected to the state legislature in 1964.

No Republican has captured a statehouse in Dixie, but G.O.P. candidates ran strong races in both Louisiana and Missippi. In Arkansas Winthrop Rockefeller was beaten by Orville Faubus, but the transplanted New Yorker is readying himself for another try this year. The Republicans are also given a good chance in the Alabama gubernatorial race.

It would seem, then, that the upsurge in the South offers the Republican party a reason for optimism, despite the national debacle of 1964. The Republican situation, however, is not as bright as it seems. The Southern success is clouded by the same basic problem that confronts the Democrats, namely a wide breach between the national party and its Southern wing.

The party of Watson and John Tower is far from the party of Rockefeller, Romney and Dirksen. What the Republicans do not have that the Democrats do is a large majority in the North, especially in the big cities. The Democrats showed in 1964 that they could win without their long-time stronghold, the Solid South.

The Republicans made major advances in the South, but came near to being wiped out elsewhere. If the Republicans exploit their advantages in Dixie, they may virtually disappear in the power centers of the North. In short, extreme conservatism, if not racism, won for the Republicans in the South. The party cannot follow such a course on a national level with any hope of success.

While party philosophy is a fuzzy thing at best, one can reasonably say that the national center of gravity of the Republican party is to the right of that of the Democratic. Dirksen, Ford and Nixon are basically more conservative than Mansfield, McCormack and Kennedy.

The pattern is the same in the South, with the whole political spectrum shifted to the right. Russell and Stennis are definitely in the right wing of the Democratic party, but men like Tower are even to the right of them. They are also far to the right of most of the nothern Republicans.

The Republicans face one major historical problem: they have never been a national party. The G.O.P. was founded as a sectional party—basically an anti-Southern party—and it remained so, even during its glory days in the 1920's. Because of its power in the North, the party was able to ignore the South. Now that the Republicans have been far outstripped by the Democrats in the North, they are looking to the disgruntled South as a new source of power.

The Republicans have tried to "me-too" the Democrats on the national level, but they cannot hope to succeed that way in the South. Dixie's natural and long-standing antipathy to the Republican party gives the Demorats an edge in any contest with no sharp issues. The Republicans, then, must clearly differentiate themselves from the Democrats in order to win.

Southern Democrats, while covering a wide range of beliefs, are basically conservative. They leave the Republicans with two choices: they can take a position either to the left or to the right of the Democrats. To assume the more liberal position would reverse the national relationship of the two parties and make for considerable confusion in national elections. In addition, the Southern people are basically concervative; and a liberal Republican party would stand little chance of getting off the ground.

The only alternative left to the Southern Republicans is to be more conservative than the Democrats. With men like George Wallace, James O. Eastland and Richard Russell in the Democratic party, Republicans attempting to move to the right of the Democrats can easily be pushed to an extreme brand of conservatism, even racism.

Southern Republicanism may be on a suicide course. The Negro vote in the South is certain to increase rapidly, and its effect will probably be to force Southern politics more to the left. Whether or not the Republicans can adjust to the new situation remains to be seen.

Birchers Live In Chapel Hill

Chapel Hill still hasn't been completely subverted by the Communists.

That's the word from Neil Thomas, who says there are several John Birch Society members here, doggedly waging their battle against foreign aid, the United Nations and fluoridation of public water supplies.

While visiting the society's Belmont Mass., headquarters, Thomas spotted a pin on a Birch Society map which was stuck on top of Chapel Hill's location.

He says each pin represents up to 20 members.

Thomas toured the headquarters for several hours last February long with Carolina Forum chairman George Nicholson, who has invited Robert Welch to appear at Memorial Hll tonight.

"There were a lot of pins stuck around Burlington," Thomas said. "And in California? California and parts of Texas had so many pins that in places they looked like bee hives."

He told me that the Birch Society has a roomfull of files designating various organizations as friendly or "comsymp" (Bircher short hand for "Communist sympathizer").

I was about to ask if the UNC student government and The Daily Tar Heel have any disreputable listings when Thomas said he wasn't able to see the files for himself.

But he did say that Birch Society members can write to get inside dope on individuals and groups arousing their suspicion.

As lunchtine neared, the workers at society headquarters took out some Birch records recorded by Welch. They avidly listened to his monologues while they gulped down their food, Thomas said.

Hopefully, the food was not cooked with fluoridated water, which the Birchers consider more dangerous than nuclear fall out.

Thomas mentioned the chain of Birch book stores. He said they help the society fight what it considers "a great liberal conspiracy determined to let the conservatives have no voice whatsoever." Especially the conservatives who are Birchers.

The society, he said, also wants to estaboish a group of reading rooms like the Christian Scientists to spread The Truth —that the United States is already 40 to 50 per cent Communist.

The Birchers have their own publishing house, Thomas said—Western Islands. It is housed in a separate building. From these Patriotic presses comes literature like the montly "Bulletins," urging memebrs to:

—Abolish foreign aid.

—Tell James Roosevelt to start a movement to abolish James Roosevelt and sign their letters "Not yet yours, truly."

—Compile a file on liberals and "Comsymps"—the best term since the members don't have to specify the extent tof Communist opinions.

—Send to headquarters eight and one-half-inch sheets listing names of "people who never will be missed." (SDS member Gary Waller says he has been told he was on such a list while a student at Drake University in Iowa. He sayd these lists are apparently turned over to the Minute Men, whose members are now training for the guerrilla war they think will be waged within the boundaries of the United States.)

—Write a letter to Westbrook Pegler (the ultra-conservative columnist who made a career out of lambasting Eleanor Roosevelt) telling him what a fine job he has been doing.

It was quite an informative tour, Thomas said, disgusted with the society's fanatical anti-communism.

As for myself—I'm still eager to see if the DTH is on the "Comsymp" list.

• • •

More on the battle of the ideologies: Paul Dickson must not be that Communistic, despite his pseaker ban views. He has accepted George Nicholson's invitation to sit down with Robert Welch at a nice friendly dinner at the Carolina Inn.

• • •

When I walked into the Student Government offices last week, I found him busily trying to put a person-to-person call through to Moscow.

Maybe it was only a gag, but Nicholson said he wanted to contact Nikita Khrushchev.

Letters To The Editor

'Outside Space, Time'

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

A special Conservative Congress met last week. The meetings were held in a maximum-security auditorium specially constructed outside space and time. Truths were reiterated with minimal modification. At one point the Constitution came to life and read itself resonantly to the full house. It received a standing ovation and was frequently reaffirmed.

A spokesman for the congress announced that God would speak on the last day, and that anyone who came to hear Him would be admitted free, so we all came—the whole nation. Then the gremlins went among our factories and machines, our crops, our libraries and laboratories, and they laid waste to it all while our backs were turned.

When we looked there was only rubble and gray desolation, dust in the air. Germs grew in the milk. Big babies cried and died.

A dapper, sophisticated young man stepped from the auditorium and smiled unctously at us. "We have saved you," he said. "Come forward into freedom, for now there will be no planning, no regimentation, no 1984, and the human soul, freed from the degradation of empirical scrutiny and sinister subjective conceptions of the common good, will once more rest in peace."

A Matter Of Principle

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Spokesmen for the University have indicated that the recent speaker decisions were determined by the attitude previously adopted toward Frank Wilkinson and Herbert Aptheker by the executive committee.

It is not entirely clear whether we are to understand that the University literally had no choice or that those responsible for the decisions believed that the political costs of approving the invitations were simply too high for us to bear. The distinction is important. If the latter interpretation is the appropriate one, then the University, to put it baldly, has barred a speaker for reasons of political expediency and we have reason to be deeply troubled.

While we can have sympathy for those placed in the difficult position of choice, we should not allow our sympathy to obscure the issues of principle that are now before us. There are some indications that these issues are being obscured and that responsibility for our situation is being lodged in the wrong quarters and for reasons in themselves unacceptable.

For example, Pete Ivey's March 6 column in the Chapel Hill Weekly contains two little stories intended to suggest that the faculty is relieved that the administration has finally said "no" to the students. The implication is that the students have been unreasonable. This unfair to the students and, additionally, sets the discussion in an improper context.

Through this entire controversy the students have shown at least as much regard for principle and at least as much responsibility as have the other participants. They have also shown remarkable restraint. They accepted the judgment that the absolute ban of the original law should be observed and that the University should be given the opportunity to work for repeal or alteration of the law. They thereby gave up the chance of an early court test.

Once the law was modified, they invited two speakers, following procedures with which the administration apparently had no quarrel. The fact that the executive committee rejected the view that acceptable procedures were in force was a shock to most of us.

Once procedures satisfactory to the Board of Trustees had been established, the students followed them and gave the University the opportunity to choose. We do ourselves no service if we now read student irresponsibility into this record.

The original invitations were made by an approved campus group. Ultimately this group was joined by other sponsors, forming a long and distinguished list of campus ogranizations and officers. We should not pretend that the issue has been the creation of a small group of students.

The two speakers selected are clearly equipped to participate in intellectual events. Both express unpopular views, but both possess some degree of distinction. The New York Times has called Aptheker one of the leading Marxist theorists in this country. Wilkinson's address on March 2 was able and temperate.

The expressions of repugnance for these men, made even by some who supported the right of the students to hear them, are a source of wonder to the writers. We should not delude ourselves or others into thinking that in this instance we are dealing with the right of students to hear cranks or charlatans.

The point is simply this: we should not make a caricature of events to obscure the nature of our recent decisions. In the opinion of the writers, the tiniest and least attractive student group should be able to hear the wildest crank imaginable, if they want to, and we should assert their right to do so. But that is not the form in which the issue has recently been put to us.

In fact, the University has acted to prevent a large, respectable group of students from hearing two speakers who have intellectual credentials. This community has no reason to apologize to the people of the state for the behaviour of the students during these trying times, and we would do well to remember that.

Soon the University will be considering invitations to speakers not previously judged by the executive committee. One can hope that the twin criteria of relevance and frequency will be interpreted in such a way that no speaker will ever be barred again.

But one fears that the powers that be outside the University will behave as the Emperor did toward the Lord High Executioner, demanding a record dotted with banned speakers, just as the Emperor insisted on at least one execution a year.

One of the writers was at Ohio State University and knows the cost to a university in loyalty, pride, and self-confidence once it undertakes to restrict speakers. Those who warn us of what is in store for the University if we do not restrict would do well to ponder what is in store for us if we do.

Playmakers Present Wilde's 'Earnest' On March 22-27

Oscar Wilde predicted his most lasting and popular play would prove to be the comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest," which the Carolina Playmakers are presenting at the Playmakers Theatre from Tuesday, March 22 through Sunday, March 27.

Wilde's prediction was made in 1895, when he already had three previous plays produced that had been notable successes—"Lady Windermere's Fan," "A Woman of No Importance" and "An Ideal Husband."

That he judged correctly is evidenced by the fact that "The Importance of Being Earnest" is still being constantly produced all over the English-speaking world — and even sometimes in French, a language in which the pun of its title is lost in the translation to "L'Importance d'etre Severe."

The enormous success of the comedy is largely due to its plot of bright nonsense, along win Oscar Wilde strung his most celebrated epigrams, rare puns and verbal fencing exhibitions.

Wilde, with tongue in cheek, dubbed his play "a trivial comedy for serious people." Writing of Wilde's use of the world "trivial," critic Louis Kronenberger stated, "The comedy, with its babies found in handbags and its young men who invent invalid friends and black sheep brothers, must be accepted on its own terms. To complain that it is trivial would be like complaining that fireworks are trivial."

No less than eight first-class Broadway revivals have been given the comedy; and in 1952, "The Important of Being Earnest" was made into a successful British film starring Michael Redgrave as Jack Worthing, Joan Greenwood as his haughty fiancee, Gwendolyn, an Dame Edith Evans as the glowering, razor-tongued Lady Bracknell.

The Playmakers production, staged by Tommy Rezzuto, features Tom Hull of Durham as Worthing, Amanda Meiggs of Myock as Gwendolyn, Louise Lamont and Carolyn Fitz-Simons, both of Chapel Hill, as Lady Bracknell and Cecily, and James Slaughter of Kannapolis as Algernon.

Tickets for "The Importance of Being Earnest" are now available at the Playmakers business office, 214 Abernethy Hall, and at Ledgetter-Pickard's in downtown Chapel Hill.

Seniors: Looking For A Job?

Placement Service Helps Hunters

By BOB BETTIS

Each spring thousands of college seniors approaching the end of their formal undergraduate work face a question which, for many, is horrifying: "What will I do after graduation?"

Uncle Sam and graduate school will enlist a number of the boys, while marriage vows will be taken by a sizeable portion of the girls.

Yet most graduates must choose a career consistent with their qualifications and interests — a task none too easy since the huge size of this year's graduating class makes the competition highly formidable.

Offering UNC students assistantce in job hunting is an organization called the Placement Service. Joe M. Galloway, a trim, enthusiastic, Tennessee - born gentleman now in his 18th year as placement director (he got the job through the Placement Service before leaving as assistant placement director at Tennessee), elaborated recently on the purpose of his bureau.

"We're trying to assist three groups," Galloway said. "The students, by putting them in touch with actual employers; the employers, by correlating their need for employees with available and interested students; and the University and faculty itself, by handling correspondence with companies, setting schedules, and other similar items which would be time consuming for administration officials to handle."

Begins In Fall

The Placement Service swings into action each fall when business, industry, and Government representatives visit the campus to interview graduating seniors for possible employment. (The Service also deals with summer work and graduate teacher placement.) During this time the employer studies academic backgrounds and faculty evaluation sheets, which were completed as part of the student's registration.

After this "initial interview," the representative takes his impression and the material supplied by the placement office back to his home base for further study. If the evaluation is unsatisfactory, the student is written a "Dear John" letter and, in most cases, is encouraged to take more interviews.

If the recruiter would like additional on-the-spot interviews, the student is offered an invitation to visit the company at one of its locations. These visits are paid for by the firm extending the invitation.

"A company visit is very important," said one busines representative recently on campus. "It gives the applicant an opportunity to get a first - hand view of the frim, meet employees, and assess the geographic location . . . time, money, and organization goes into company visits; so they should not be taken lightly or used as a means to tour the country."

Galloway maintains that employers prefer the system of recruiting on campus, rather than waiting for potential employees to come to them. "A forward-looking company can't afford to sit at home," he emphasized. "They just wouldn't get enough people with management potential. It may cost them more to go out, but in the final analysis they get so much more in return."

"Good System"

One criticism of placement services throughout the country is that a great deal depends on the personal interview, thereby placing extreme pressure on students. "True, a certain amount of pressure is involved," Galloway replied. "In that 20 or 30-minute interview you either pass the first phase, or you don't pass. But it's about as good a system as has been developed. It has grown rapidly in importanc esince World War II.

"Nevertheless, students can grow out of any pressured feeling with a little practice. Register early, read the company literature that we supply, prepare yourself, go through a few interviews, get the feel of what industry is looking for. If you are sincerely interested in a company, then by all means talk with them. As a by-product you get your experience in the interviewing process."

Those students going into the armed forces or graduate school should register at the Placement Sercice also, Galloway says, because "it's an excellent means of contact which may be helpful when you get out a couple of years later. You have the further advantage of having your background, record, and faculty evalutions on file. And that's a point often overlooked. Some of the faculty may move away or die. Thus you would lose possible recommendations."

Apparently many UNC students agree, for in his 1964-1965 annual report Galloway notes that 1,457 individuals register with the Placement Service. "Of those registrants reporting employment," he said, "50 per cent of the men and 16 per cent of the women attributed their employment to direct contacts made through the Placement Service."

But what types of students have the most luck in getting jobs?

"The ones in high demand areas — such as accounting, sales, and chemistry — and the well - rounded individuals are naturally better off," Galloway remarked. "But the total placement picture is quite good. It's not a matter of whether students get jobs — they get them. And it's not so much the major as it is the indivudal. If a company feels a student has a good academic record as well as good potential, he won't have much trouble."

Same Openings

The UNC Placement Service fills basically the same types of jobs year after year; that is, openings in business, industry, government, and college teaching.

Some of the most unusual positions landed lately, however, include (1) a worker in a poultry development project with the Peace Corps in India, (2) a recreation therapist with a local hospital in Milledgeville, Georgia, (3) a stewardess with Eastern Air Lines, (4) a clerk of court in Wake County, (5) a broker with Hornblower and Weeks in New York City, and (6) an estate and gift tax examiner with the Internal Revenue Service in Greensboro.

Galloway concluded his remarks on the value of placement services by saying, "The Placement Service here is an integral part of our educational system. The state is spending much money to train people, so it is proper that we carry it farther to bridge the gap between college and employment.

"Prior to World War II everyone dug on his own when looking for a job, you know. Today we'd like to help people do their digging. We feel the Placement Service is a logical extension of the educational process. We feel we're an integral part of the educational process just as a literature or physical education professor is a part."

Joe M. Galloway, a man who arrived at UNC through the Placement Service, makes it hard to argue with one who practices what he preaches.

Writers Conference Hears Address On Editorial Sins

Five major editorial sins were cited here yesterday by a Georgia newspaperman speaking to North Carolina Editorial Writers.

"Dullness is the major sin," Sylvan Meyer, editor of the Gainesville Georgia Times, told State editorial writers gathered on the University campus for their annual conference.

"An inconclusive, wandering, verbose editorial drives readers to TV and magazines," he warned. "I would rather reprint a bright editorial from elsewhere then bore my readers to death."

The "know - it - all" or "I told you so' editorial, along with those asking questions instead of answering them and those utilizing the "last word" privilege were listed as three other sins.

As a fifth sin, Meyer named the reflective editorial. "This is the piece written from one editorial writer's reaction to a news story, with no new background, no new information and no check to see if the news story was accurate in the first place."

Reporting on a study he made of editorial pages of 19 North Carolina papers over a week's time, Meyer noted that the week chosen turned up a full review of ideas about Herbert Aptheker, the communist invited to speak in Chapel Hill.

"The ideas varied in expression from crystal clear to sort of translucent, and several writers found it difficult to restrain themselves," he observed. "There apparently is no brevity in discussing communists — one way or the other. A few of the editorials, wound up at their conclusions with subject matter not even hinted at in their beginnings."

Meyer found no question - asking, no "know - it - all" and no "last word" editorial in the papers studied.

He did, however, detect some "minor sins" in the 19 papers. These included a dearth of locally written columns of comment, humor or observation; a lack of experiment with photography, typography and illustrations on editorial pages; too many editorials among smaller papers; and a lack of dialogue with readers.

Meyer cautioned the editors against flooding the reader with too many editorials on too many topics. "Five or six issues on the stove at one time is enough," he advised.

Questioning the practice of many State papers in running only signed letters to the editor, Meyer said he senses a lack of conversation between papers and their readers around the country.

"The insecure person who doesn't want to make a fool of himself, but may have something to say, shouldn't be pushed into oblivion merely because we want to know who he is. We can balance the scales merely by doing what we do all the time — editing the newspaper, including the letters."

North Carolina News Roundup

ESC Will Conduct Survey

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Employment Security Commission will conduct a survey of more than 4,000 companies to determine whether skilled workers are needed in North Carolina industry.

The ESC will compile the information and turn it over to the Department of Community Colleges which will use the data to increase training in the areas where shortages exist or are expected.

The cost of the program will be shared by the two state agencies.

The ESC will ask selected employers how many and what kind of workers are needed now and how many will be needed in the next five years, Henry E. Kendal, ESC chairman, said Friday.

The occupations to be studied, he said, represent major types of technical and skilled manpower needed by industry in North Carolina.

"The study will help determine the kinds of manpower, training and community development program most needed to boost employment and equip workers to take jobs presently going unfilled," he added.

Auto Inspection Going Well

RALEIGH (AP) — Motor Vehicles Commissioner A. Pilston Godwin Jr. said Friday the state's auto inspection program, now nearly a month old, "is running smoothly."

Godwin said the License and Safety Inspection Division of the department has made 75 under-cover investigations of privately operated inspection stations since the program began on Feb. 16.

Roger Parker, inspection administrator, said three stations have been cited to show cause why their inspection licenses should not be suspended or revoked. Three other stations voluntarily surrendered their licenses without a hearing.

Parker said the division routinely sends undercover agents throughout the state to make continuing checks on the inspection stations.

"The division has received only eight written complaints from motorists," Parker said, "but newsmen have reported other instances of alleged inconsistencies in the program.

Community Colleges Association

SALISBURY (AP) — Community college trustees from across North Carolina have organized and plan to meet again May 11 to complete formation of an association.

The first meeting of the North Carolina Association of Community College Trustees was held Thursday at the Rowan Technical Institute in Salisbury. The location of the May meeting was not determined.

The association will accept into membership trustees from the state's 30 community colleges, technical institutes and industrial centers.

W. Stanley Moore, editor of the Morganton News-Herald, was elected president of the association.

NCSU Student Wins $5000

WASHINGTON (AP) — William R. Mitchell of Raleigh, N. C., won the $5,000 annual Reynolds Aluminum Prize for architectural students last night.

Under terms of the competition, the cash award is divided between the prize winner and his school, North Carolina State University.

The American Institute of Architects, which announced the winner, administers the competition for the "best original design of a building component in aluminum."

Mitchell's winning design, selected from entries submitted by 29 architectural schools, was for a portable "Educational Facility for the Peace Corps."

Mitchell, 22, is a native of Wake Forest, N. C., where his parents live. He is due to get his degree next year.

Quakers To Meet At Guilford

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Edwin B. Brenner, chairman of the 1967 Friends World Conference Committee, announced Saturday the selection of Dr. J. Floyd Moore as executive secretary of the Fourth Friends World Conference.

Some 2,000 Quakers from about 40 countries are expected to attend the World Conference at Guilford, July 24 to Aug. 3, 1967.

Cong Shell Vietnamese Barracks

SAIGON (AP) —Viet Cong mortarmen shelled a Vietnamese military barracks area last night at Vung Tau, a peninsular town on the South China Sea 40 miles southeast of Saigon. They struck about 10 p.m., lobbing in a half dozen 81mm rounds.

Five persons were reported killed and 37 wounded. Women and children were among the casualties. All servicemen at Vung Tau, including Americans, took up duty stations.

Vying for attention were political developments.

More demonstrations of a similar nature are expected there was no immediate indication whether they may gain enough momentum to threaten Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's 9-month-old regime.

The explosion of an ammunition barge moored on the Saigon River two miles outside town destroyed about 350 tons of shells and cartridges, including some for 105mm Howitzers. The barge, and two others nearby, burned and sank.

A government spokesman said there was a possibility of Viet Cong sabotage. Other sources, however, said the ammunition may have been touched off by a cooking fire of the crewmen. All aboard got off before the blast and there were no casualties.

Combat contact in the field was generally light.

Republicans Unified Behind President

WASHINGTON (AP) —Senate Republicans have reached what they call remarkable unity in support of President Johnson's limited war in Viet Nam.

Led by Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois—who calls himself an eagle, rather than a hawk — GOP members have all but eliminated among themselves the squabbling that has divided the Democrats.

The 32 Republican members have some minor differences over the military and political tactics to be employed. But they are agreed that running the war is Johnson's business and not theirs.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits of New York, for example, doesn't agree with Dirksen's position that the Viet Cong have no place in any coalition government that might follow peace negotiations.

Javits said he does not favor holding out as "bait" the prospect of participation of the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front. But he said he believes this must be accepted if it comes about as a result of negotiations and free elections.

Rocket A-Ok; Gemini 8 Flight Will Last 3 Days

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — The Gemini 8 astronauts, whose flight script reads like a daring chapter out of science fiction, yesterday received a green light for a Tuesday launching after they resolved a spacecraft hatch-closing problem.

The spacemen, Neil A. Armstrong and David R. Scott, reported they were ready for the action-packed three-day journey during which they are to make four separate hookups with another satellite and Scott is to step into the emptiness of space for a record walk of nearly 2 1-2 hours.

A mission review board of space agency, air force and industry officials gave the go-ahead for Tuesday's spectacular doubleheader launching after studying all factors of the flight: the Titan 2 and Atlas-Agena rockets, the Gemini 8 spacecraft, control centers here and in Houston, Tex., the global tracking network and recovery forces.

But there were some anxious moments this morning when Armstrong and Scott were summoned to Gemini launch pad 19 after technicians had trouble closing a spacecraft hatch.

It is the hatch Scott will open to exit the spacecraft for the space stroll.

Why DeGaulle Hit NATO

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle is expected to seek new ties with Russia as he cuts his alliance links with the United States and other western powers. U. S. officials think he probably will conclude a French-Soviet nonaggression pact when he visits Moscow in June.

The French leader, who rocked Washington with two breakaway messages this week, is considered here to be engaged in an intricate and possible dangerous maneuver to realign France in the East-West power balance.

He is moving France into a neutralist position between the two major world powers, while retaining the protection of American nuclear strength against Soviet military might.

Frustrated U. S. officials, who have watched De Gaulle patiently shape and impose this policy for seven years, would undoubtedly like to block his design. But they see no way to do so.

They are annoyed at what they consider De Gaulle's bid for a free ride in the western alliance, gaining protection without continuing to contribute to the military organization. They are concerned also about the future of allied military integration if De Gaulle's move creates dissension among the remaining 14 allied governments.

In consultations now beginning, some of the European allies and perhaps Canada with its large French population may urge some compromise course in an effort to retain maximum French cooperation with the allies on De Gaulle's terms. U. S. officials are against any such policy.

Johnson administration leaders still hope that after the 76-year-old De Gaulle relinquishes power some day new leaders with popular French backing will modify if not renounce his lone-wolf diplomatic policy.

De Gaulle believes the world crisis center has moved from Europe to Asia, and he no longer sees any need for any Atlantic alliance military organization.

He told alliance members this in diplomatic notes handed to ambassadors in Paris on Wednesday and Thursday. The text of the notes was released yesterday.

The messages, which had the clear imprint of De Gaulle's prose style, said France was withdrawing the remaining forces it has assigned to NATO commands, and that two principal NATO military headquarters should leave French territory.

An additional section of the note to the United States said France could accept on its territory only forces and installations that fell completely under French command. This was a clear invitation for the United States to close down most, if not all, of its 40 supply bases or headquarters on French soil. Specifically mentioned was the big headquarters of U. S. forces in Europe at Saint Germain.

The notes said there is no longer any "immediate and menacing" danger to Europe and that the European nations have economically recovered so they can better take care of themselves. Besides, France has its own atom bomb which cannot be integrated into an allied defense system.

NDEA Loans May Continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — A drive to continue the government's direct college student loan program in full force gathered momentum in Congress this week despite Johnson administration opposition.

Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex., a member of the Senate Education and Appropriations Committees, told a reporter there will be an all-out fight to restore every penny of the funds for the loans.

"This attempt to end the National Defense Education Act loan program is a dagger in the back of higher education in this country," he declared.

"Does the Great Society mean that we talk about education but falter when it comes time to pay the bills?"

President Johnson's budget, sent to Congress in January, proposed to kill the NDEA loan program and shift to a federally guaranteed and subsidized loan plan included in the 1965 Higher Education Act.

But, in the face of an outcry in Congress and many protests from colleges and universities, the administration reversed itself and announced $150 million would be made available for the direct loans in the next year.

It said this would make certain a student could get an NDEA loan for the college year starting next September if none of the new guaranteed loans was available from a bank or other private lender.

However, Department of Welfare officials, in announcing the retreat, said they hope the full $150 million won't be spent. And they made it clear they still plan to end the NDEA loans as soon as possible.

Indonesian Army Restricts Sukarno

SINGAPORE (AP) — Indonesia's anti-Communist army restricted President Sukarno to his Jakarta palace last night and held First Deputy Premier Subandrio a virtual prisoner there, informants here reported.

These reports reached Singapore after Jakarta Radio announced the nation's new strongman, Lt. Gen. Suharto, acting under Sukarno's name, had dissolved and outlawed Indonesia's huge Communist party, would's largest outside the Communist bloc.

Another broadcast carried excerpts from a palace ceremony earlier in the day in which Sukarno officially turned over control to Suharto, the Indonesian army chief.

Singapore sources, receiving independent reports from Indonesia, said even army generals who supported Sukarno had turned against him.

Some army leaders and others have accused Sukarno of having been involved in the Communist-led attempted coup last Oct. 1. Two Communist leaders have been sentenced to death in connection with that attempt and some reports say they have been executed.

The Singapore sources said developments in Indonesia indicated Suharto is firmly in control and the chances were against a comeback by Sukarno. These sources picture him as merely a figurehead now. The 64-year-old leader had been designated "President for Life" several years ago.

In the broadcast of excerpts of the palace ceremony, Suharto told government officials Indonesia's new regime will move the nation neither to the right nor the extreme left.

This led the informants here to speculate that Sukarno may only have taken one step to the side and two forward and still was maneuvering to hold power. They added, however, that subsequent information reaching Singapore indicated Sukarno no longer wielded real power and that Subandrio was being held virtually a prisoner.

These sources said Suharto, a 45-year-old former revolutionary, worked with Gen. Abdul Haris Nasution, whom Sukarno removed last month as defense minister.

The Singapore informants pieced together this account of the events leading up to Suharto's rise to power.

Suharto and Nasution managed to get all the armed force chiefs on their side after a series of secret meetings in Bandung and Jakarta early this month.

They handed Sukarno an ultimatum early this week to get rid of Subandrio by Saturday. They then began to move loyal troops into Java from all parts of Indonesia to reinforce their position.

Sukarno was confronted by the generals late Friday and told that the ultimatum to get rid of Subandrio by Saturday had been updated and strengthened. Sukarno was now to turn over all power to the army.

LBJ Says Viet Nam Costs Running Below Expectations

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Johnson said yesterday Viet Nam spending is running a little below estimates this year. But he said it's too soon to decide whether higher taxes will be needed to finance the war.

Johnson took this wait-and-see attitude in personally briefing newsmen on marathon meetings with more than 40 governors who went to the White House to discuss, in the President's words, "the state of the world, the state of the nation and the state of the states."

The state of the economy was one topic canvassed in a morning session with the executive committee of the National Governors Conference.

Johnson, summoning reporters to his office for an account of this meeting, said he could not tell "just what strains would be put on our economy" because Viet Nam developments cannot be forecast very far in advance.

"I may have to ask for more money," he said.

Asked to elaborate on the possibility of a tax increase, Johnson replied, "I haven't reached any conclusion at all on that."

He said administration budget estimates have been quite accurate in the past but "we don't know how many planes we are going to lose, how many shells we are going to fire, how many losses we are going to suffer."

Then he disclosed that Viet Nam spending has run somewhat below expectations since Jan. 1. He said one factor was bad weather that curtailed some combat plans.

There was a strong bipartisan flavor to the day of meetings. The President shared the spotlight — deliberately —with two Republican governors — John H. Reed of Maine and William Scranton of Pennsylvania.

In one 90-minute period, Johnson briefed newsmen three times on the proceedings. And on each occasion he called on Reed and Scranton to say a few words—once before television and newsreel cameras in the White House driveway.

Reed, Chairman of the Executive Committee of Governors, was unrestrained in his praise of the sessions and said no President ever before made himself so accessible to the Chief Executives of the states.

"We are relieved, we are encouraged by the prospects for greater liaison between the federal and state governments," he said.

Scranton, who joined nine other governors in reporting to Johnson on the federal-state program to aid the Appalachian region, said this joint effort should be a model for others.

Check The Check

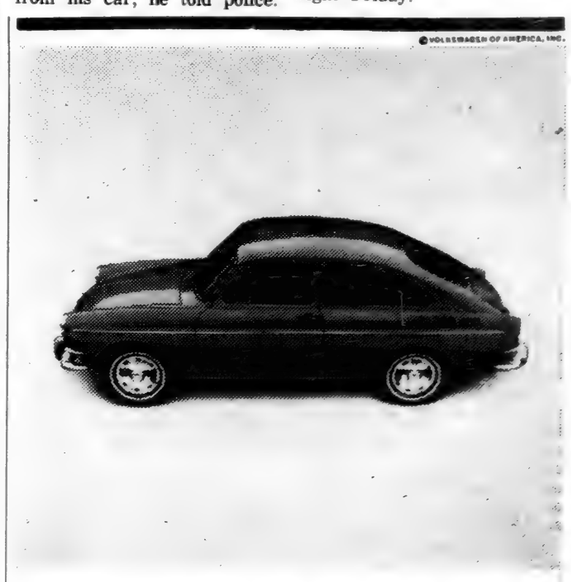
Cloud was dumbfounded. The check was a personal one written by Cloud and stolen from his car, he told police.



What's a nice-looking car like you doing in a Volkswagen ad?

(We haven't made very many yet, so you probably haven't even seen one yet. That's why we're running this ad in the first place.)

The Fastback isn't a VW in name only; it's a Volkswagen through and through.

The engine is air-cooled so it has no use for water or antifreeze. And it's in the back to make the going easy when the weather isn't.

The Fastback is airtight, like all Volkswagens, because it's made in the same plant by the same people.

Naturally, there are differences, too.

The Fastback engine is a little more powerful (the car will cruise at better than 80). It holds 5 nicely. It has disc brakes in front. The upholstery is (for us) kind of jazzy. And it (the Fastback) costs $2128.*

If you've steered clear of a Volkswagen because it wasn't big enough or good-looking enough or expensive enough, you may be forced into thinking it all through again.

Sorry.

*Suggested retail price, P.O.E. ($2128). Local prices and other dealer delivery charges, if any, additional.

Intramural Clipboard

With Bill Hass

Intramural basketball has entered its most crucial stage, with league and division playoffs now under way. Residence hall teams are battling it out in residence college leagues to nail down a place in the tournament field. Fraternity and graduate leagues have already determined their champions and are in the division playoffs. It's single elimination — one loss and a team is through for the season.

A winner will be determined in each residence college and these eight teams will compete for the residence hall division championship. In the Old Well area, the Old West Studs (4-1) will meet Battle - Vance - Pettigrew (3-1) for the title. In the Connor area, the Connor Animals (6-0) play the Connor Vikings (5-1) for the championship. The Upper Quad king will be decided between the Mangum Mugs (5-0) and the Ruffin Rebels (3-2).

The Craige Alkaceltics (5-0) won the Craige College playoffs and have a spot among the final eight teams. In the Scott College tournament, two unbeaten teams, the Teague Trojans (5-0) and the Teague Totalers (6-0), will clash for the championship. In Ehringhaus College, Ehringhaus B-2 (6-1) battles the Ehringhaus C Superstars (6-1) for all the marbles.

The Morehead College tournament is partially complete. The Graham Bells (6-0) and the Everett Rogah (6-0) each won first-round games and will meet each other in a semi-final contest. The Stacy Studs (5-1) moved into the semi-final round and will play the winner of the game between the Lewis Browns (4-1) and the Graham Crackers (4-1).

The Morrison C Cavaliers (5-0) have advanced to the finals of the Morrison College tournament. They will play the winner of the game pitting the Morrison I Inebriates (3-1) against the Morrison A Rebels (5-0).

* * *

All but two of the positions in the second round of the fraternity division tournament have been determined. Games will match the Phi Gam Fijis (6-0) against Phi Delt Black (5-1), KA Blue I (5-1) against the TEP Tops (4-0) and DKE White (4-1) against Zete I (5-0).

Other second round games will have DKE Blue (5-0) against Phi Delt White (4-1), ZBT Zebes (5-1) against Chi Psi Red (4-1) and Pi Kappa Phi No. 3 (5-1) against Chi Phi Blue (3-1). Phi Delt Blue (5-0) will meet the winner of the Sig Ep Bisons (5-0) Sigma Chi (4-1) game. ATO I (5-) will play the victor of the Sigma Nu A (3-2) Pi Kappa Phi No. 1 (5-0) contest.

* * *

The graduate division is still unsettled. Four teams have byes and automatically moved into the second round. They are the Peacocks (4-0), Navy Dolphins (4-1), Med School Blue (4-0) and Law III Blue (4-0). Law Blue I (3-0) will play the winner of the Law II Blue (3-1) and Dental School (3-1) in a first round game. The Peacocks will then meet the winner of that game.

The Navy Dolphins will play the winner of the game matching Med School Yellow (4-0) and Med School White (3-1). The Med Blues will play the winner of the contest between the Fellowship of Christian Athletes (5-0) and the State Grads (2-1). Law IV will have the winner of Law III Blue (4-0) and an opponent which will either be Law III White (2-2) or the NROTC Neseps (2-2).

Most of the teams will play next week and eventually each division will have a champion. The three elites will then meet for the all-campus championship.

Merrimon Lecture Is Wednesday Night

Some of the crucial ethical decisions faced by physicians who bring babies into the world will be related by an internationally prominent obstetrician in the first Merrimon Lecture here on Wednesday night.

The lecture, at 8 p.m in Hill Hall, will be open to the public.

The speaker will be Dr. Nicholson Joseph Eastman, professor emeritus of obstetrics at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and consultant to the Ford Foundation.

His topic will be "Induced Abortion and Contraception: A Consideration of Ethical Philosophy in Obstetrics."

Nolan Leonard, a transfer from Wingate, gets in some swing-time as Coach Walter Rabb's men battle for starting berths on the 1966 diamond nine. Leonard is a shortstop candidate and is joining his teammates in some serious competition with the season's opener less than a week away. The Tar Heels, who won the ACC title two years ago with a spotless 14-0 record, slumped to 6-8 in 1965 and tied for sixth in the league. Cats 'Bing-oed'; Devils Limp On

By BILL ROLLINS
DTH Sports Writer

St. Joseph's Hawks were "Marin-ated" and the Davidson Wildcats were "Bing-oed" in the semi-finals of the Eastern Regionals at Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh Friday night.

That second form of elimination had the most devastating effect, but both did the job as Duke's Jack Marin and Syracuse's Dave Bing — a pair of All-Americans — led their teams past each's first obstacle in it's path toward a hoped-for NCAA championship.

Duke's left-handed ace pulled down 15 rebounds to go with his 18 points, and tossed in four straight free throws down the winning stretch to keep the Philadelphia Hawks on the short end of a 76-74 score. And the amazingly quick and coordinated Syracuse guard rocketed his wily 6-3 frame into the air for 12 rebounds to enhance his 20-point scoring effort, and exhibited an onselfish display of passing and feeding which shot his team into whopping 35-point lead with eight minutes to play. The Orangemen played reserves most of the rest of the way, and Davidson was able to cut the final margin to an almost respectable 94-78.

In the doubleheader opener, Duke was plagued by inconsistency — especially when it managed to pull to eight-or-10 point leads — and was forced to fall back on some unerring foul shooting in the final minutes to avert disaster.

The Hawks pressed Duke practically throughout the game, and were able to cut significant deficits on five occasions when it seemed that they were going to fall victim to a breeze-away.

It was not, however, until after the Dukes had spurted to a 68-58 lead with 6:51 left that the Joeys made full use of their press to register six steals in the next five minutes and almost pull the game out of the fire.

Marin's rebound basket was the only Duke score in those five minutes, and with 1:49 remaining, the nationally second-ranked Blue Devils looked back and found the clawing Hawks just two points in arrears at 70-68.

Then Bob Verga, who led Duke's offense with 22 points, zipped in a pair of free throws in his usual sling-shot motion, but Billy Oakes scored for the Hawks, who trailed, 72-70.

It was here that Marin — who netted six of Duke's last eight points — hit four free throws while St. Joe's All-American Matt Guokas Jr., and Marty Ford (from 40 feet at the buzzer) countered for the final 76-74 margin.

Davidson's showing in the nightcap of this Eastern Regionals first round was very similar to Duke's battle against UCLA in the NCAA title bout two years ago. The Wildcats made a game of it for most of the first half, but just like that ill-fated Duke Club, were blitzed in the last few minutes of the opening period and were never able to catch up.

In Duke's case two years ago, it ran into a guy named Walt who wreaked havoc in a Hazzard-ous manner. And in Davidson's case Friday night, it ran into a guy named Dave who "Bing-oed" the 'Cats before the first half was over.

It was 22-all with 9:15 to go in the first half, but Mr. Bing and Jim Boeheim scored eight straight for the Orangement. Then with four minutes left, Davidson quit scoring, and yeilded 11 points in a closing flurry which spelled doom for the team which had come such a long way on an All-American, a fellow senior, and six sophomores.

Davidson's top man, Dick Synder, outscored Bing by 25-20, but had only ten with eight minutes to go and his team almost unbelievably behind by 84-49. Synder, a top defensive man, tried in vain to contain his first-team A-A counterpart but on Friday night the two were not even in the same league.

Bing toyed with the Davidson backcourt press, waving his teammates on up the court and bringing the ball into the offensive zone alone. Once there, he performed as if no one was defensing him, driving at will and passing through the slower Southern Conference titlists in an eye-popping performance.

The bang-up Syracuse whiz would whirl into the midst of the Davidson defense around the upper part of the foul lane, pick it apart, and shoot the ball to a friend breaking in from the side for an easy lay-up. He passed up an untold number of shots which would have certainly pushed his individual scoring total past his 29.4 points per game average. Not even when his team was holding its insurmountable lead did he gun for the basket.

Then at about the eight-minutes-to-play mark, Bing and most of the straters left the game. Syracuse led by 92-60 with six minutes left, and then Snyder and center Rod Knowles — who also finished with 25 points — got hot against the Orange's reserves and outscored the winners 18-2 in the remaining time.

Meade, Janowitz Co-Captain UNC

Jim Meade, a two-miler from Ridgewood, N. J., and Bill Janowitz of Cloister, N. J., whose specialty is the 880-yard run, will co-captain the University of North Carolina track team this spring.

Both Janowitz and Meade are winners of two letters. A total of 13 lettermen will be available for Coach Joe Hilton.

Fauntleroy

SO COME ON DOWN.

Here I am ballfans, down in sunny Florida. Here I lie amidst the palms, surrounded by a bevy of bare-busted beauties.

Aahhh. Just listen to that ocean. Feel the gentle salt spray brush across my forehead. The sand is soft and I think I'll just lie here all week bagging the bennies (beneficial sun rays).

Boy, lunch was really great. Fruit and lots of cooling drink served at my beck and call by desirous damsels.

Well, I'm still thinking of you ballfans. Thinking of the cold north and all the classes you're suffering through. Wish you were here. (Stab!)

I hate to make you drool at the mouth like this, so I've got to admit it. I'm down here on business.

In my profession it's wise to acclimate oneself. My basketball predicitions are far behind me and thoughts turn sublimely to baseball. No, don't worry — you'll get the NCAA winner on Friday morning.

At this time of the year where do you go to brush up on your crystal ball for forthcoming baseball picks? Florida, of course.

Well for the past week I've been the distinguished guest of Major League clubs at their spring training camps.

I've been talking to the players, giving advice to the coaches and measuring home runs.

I've even taken a few swings myself. I blush to relate it, but relate it I must. I've been hitting the horsehide pretty well and several clubs have been offering me contracts.

Sorry boys, no dice. No, 200,000 bucks a season really isn't tempting. You see fellas, I tell them, I've got an obligation to my readers. They've been really loyal. They just laughed at Ed Freakley when that dastardly doer of derring-do had the audacity to call me a cheater.

Then they asked me to pick Major League games instead of limiting myself to the college circuits. I explained that if the public knew the outcome of the '66 season the ballparks would be deserted and Ballentine beer would go bankrupt.

So here I am. Thinking baseball and whistling "Take Me Out To The Ballpark," "Damn Yankees" and "Meet the Mets."

Next week I'll be back home in my Victorian mansion with Jeeves my trusty manservant.

So, get ready to discover how the college of your choice is going to do. Place your bets. Tune up on your boos and your jeers. "KILL THE UMP." "THROW THE BUM OUT."

Ah, I can hear you new ballfans. And it sound sooooooo good.

Post Scripts:

I can't resist one last parting shot at Freakley. It's customary for a jealous inferior (Freakley) to challenge the good name of a great sports figure (Me). I don't wish the poor confused underling an eternity stoking the hell fires. I merely ask him for a printed apology. May he cleanse himself with tears. REPENT AND RETURN TO THE FOLD.

Baseball Countdown Ends This Friday Against ECC

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer

It's a countdown that ends on March 18 at 3 p.m.

The countdown began last September with fall baseball practice. It has continued since last month in the midst of the basketball season.

A lot of concrete steps have been climbed at a fast pace. A lot of jumping - jacks and sit - ups have worked legs and stomachs into shape.

Dozens of baseballs have been thrown and hit and lost.

Now, the preparation is almost over. The Tar Heel baseball team opens its long season against East Carolina Colin Greenville.

What kind of a season will it be for Carolina?

The infielders have fast hands and strong arms. They'll make the plays and throw out the runners. The same is true of the outfielders.

In John Shaw and Tommy Robbins, Carolina will have ability and experience behind the plate. Both men are as good as any catcher in the ACC.

The defense will feature the experienced men on the team in at least the first few games. Danny Talbott will start at third. Baylan and Watts will apparently cover second base, and Tom Lampman will start at first.

But a host of sophomores provide the vital element of depth to this year's team. L. E. Sayer, Bruce Bolick, Charley Thomas and Bill Estes will play this year. Before the season is over some of them might be starting.

In the outfield, Gene Link, Bob Hume, Charley Carr, Bob Bonczek and Larry Mills will be the men hauling in the fly balls.

But in order to win games, there are two essentials to any ball club — hitting and pitching. In these departments, the certainties end and the "if's" begin.

Talbott, Link, Hume, Shaw, and Bonczek have proved their ability with the bat in past seasons. These are the men who should break ball games open with the long ball. If they hit up to their potential this year there will be a lot of Tar Heels crossing home plate.

Any coach will tell you that the most important position in baseball is the pitcher. No matter how great your team may be defensively and despite its ability to hit the ball — if you don't have strength on the mound, forget it.

Beattie Leonard and Danny Walker have looked good in practice. Both of them can be counted on for good performances. Sophomores John Richards and Chip Stone can put the ball over the plate with effective stuff.

But the key to the Tar Heels of '66 lies with two men, co - captain Mike McLaughlin and sophomore Mike Flannigan. They possess first-rate fast balls. And they're strong enough to work eighteen of the scheduled 29 games.

Both men have been plagued by lack of control.

During his college career, McLaughlin has been virtually untouched by opposing hitters. But he's walked plenty.

Flannigan came to Carolina after a high school carrer which made him one of the most promising pitchers ever to come to Chapel Hill. But during his freshman year he also had trouble finding the plate.

This makes pitching the biggest and most important "if" to consider as the season approaches. It could mean a conference championship.

UNC Dolphins Place Fourth In Swim Meet

North Carolina's Dolphins, led by Phil Riker's record-setting performance, placed fourth in the Eastern Seaboard Championships.

Riker, who swam the 200 yard butterfly event in 1:56.9 for a new Eastern Seaboard record, led a North Carolina charge that piled up 110 total points—good enough for fourth position behind Yale, Army and Navy.

Fred Lipp was another outstanding Dolphin performer. Lipp finished second in the 200 yard freestyle. John Sheldon finished tenth in the same event.

Other Tar Heels who placed were: Rick Forum, ninth in the 100 yard breaststroke; Gaye Stratten, seventh in the 100 yard backstroke; and Rick Mercuri, eighth in the 100 yard backstroke.

North Carolina's 400 yard freestyle relay team finished fifth. Pete Worthen, Gaye Stratten, J. Henry and Russ Sleeper composed the Tar Heel team.

Softball Clinic Set For Woollen

A softball clinic for officials and prospective officials has been set for Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

The clinic is scheduled for 4:30 each afternoon in 301 Woollen Gym.

Gridder Inks Grant-In-Aid

Saulis M. Zemaitis, regarded as one of the top football players in Canada, has signed a grant-in-aid here. He is a six-footer who weighs 198 pounds. Home is Hamilton, Ontario.

"Zemaitis has outstanding moves and power," said Assistant Coach Bob Thalman, who recruited the fullback. "We think he is a blue ribbon prospect."

Dick Wesolowski and Mark Mazza, both of Hamilton, starred for the Carolina frosh last season. Wesolowski gained almost 600 yards rushing, while Mazza excelled as a blocker and fullback.

Asked if Zemaitis could match his running ability, the modest Wesolowski said, "He's a better football player than I am."

Both Mazza and Wesolowski are expected to push veteran performers to the limit for jobs on the varsity when spring workouts begin here next week.

Paris, Alps 'In The Reach' In Study Abroad Program

By CAROL GALLANT
DTH Staff Writer

Living within four hours (by train) of Paris; skiing in the French and Swiss Alps; experiencing a full academic year, with credit, in a French university located in a large provincial center—Sound nice? These are some of the things the student participating in the UNC "Year at Lyon" program does.

The "Year at Lyon" program is in its third year and selection is now being made of next years participants. Thirty to 35 UNC students will be aboard the SS France on September 1 bound for a 10 month program of study at Lyon and an experience in living they will never forget.

Are you eligible?

You are if you are a "responsible man or woman in regular standing at one of the campuses of the Consolidated University and are a "beter than average" student (B or B-).

The program is not set up for French majors exclusively. In fact, if you have the necessary average, your amount of formal training in French could be minimal. This would mean two years of pre-college French and at least the equivalent of French 21 in college.

It is normally a third-year program, but students in other classes have been accepted.

What would you study?

The program at Lyons is a flexible program combining American elective and course credits with the more specialized degree programs found in European universities. In setting up the Lyon program, the University of North Carolina has drawn from the courses Lyon offers and has added some of its own.

The program is divided into three parts. First is a five week program of intensive language study in preparation for the regular year. The first semester (Nov. 1-Feb. 1) all students will take language-civilization courses at either the advanced or intermediate level.

Second semester (March 30-June 2), students can leave the language-civilization courses if they have completed the work satisfactorily and take more elective courses.

Elective courses meet once a week; no Saturday classes. Students are expected to attend class, and cut policy is much the same as it is in Chapel Hill.

Students enrolled in the program will be under the supervision of the director who will serve as each participant's academic and social advisor.

Next year's director will be Rupert Pickens.

When classes are not in session, students are free to travel. Richard L. Frautschi, of the French Department was the director of the first Lyon program. He said he had students traveling as far as Istanbul and North Africa.

This same year the students rented a French chalet in cooperation with Lyon students. According to Frautschi this made for good "Franco-American" weekends.

There are 24,000 students at Lyon; the great majority are French. It is an excellent place to study abroad as no "permanent American colony" has been established as in Paris.

American students have their choice of living in the dormitory housing provided by the University of Lyon or of living in a French home.

Frautshchi said, "There were some surprises and difficult moments the year I was director, but everyone came back realizing it was a worthwhile experience . . . It's educational in itself, living abroad. but the primary purpose of the program is to offer an academic program as well as the experience of living in a foreign country."

If you are interested in learning more about the program go to Dey Hall Faculty Lounge at 7 p.m. Tuesday March 15. Application deadline is April 1.

You might be pleasantly surprised to learn that the estimated total cost of the program (including travel, housing, food) is $2,007-$2,877 for N. C. residents.

If you decide to apply, who knows? In a few months you might be completely involved in reading detailed information about passport application, carte de sejour, and banking facilities in Lyon.

TEACHERS' MEETING

The Chapel Hill Unit of the N. C. Teachers Association will meet at Northside School, Tuesday. There will be a special showing of the 30-minute film, Mathematics for Tomorrow, beginning at 4 p.m. All teachers in the Chapel Hill School system have been invited to attend.

Beats' Origin

distinguished from the other two.

Hawthorne comments, "This is alsmost a counter rebellion. A lot of the beats have decided if the general public is so insensitive and biased that it cannot tell the real from the pseudo, then that is its own fault."

Dr. Kenneth J. Reckford, associate professor of classics, has still another outlook. "I've known several of these so-called beat students. They have withdrawn from society into themselves as a temporary strategem. When they find out who and what they are, perhaps they can return to society and be productive individuals.

Reckford concluded his interview with this remark, "Sometimes I walk across campus and have the horrible feeling that the University is full of Tom Sawyers. We need a few more Huckleberry Finns."

MCAT To Be Given May 7

The Medical College Admissions Test to be given at UNC this year May 7 will be taken by all pre-medical juniors and sophomores that have their applications in by April 22.

The applications can be picked up at the University Testing Center in the basement of Peabody Hall.

The exam must be taken by all juniors and sophomores who are planning to enter a medical school within the next year and a half.

Alpha Epsilon Delta, the international pre-medical honor fraternity, reminds all students who will be taking the exam to begin thinking about the names of the medical schools they want to receive their test scores. This list must be included on the test application.

Radiation Effects To Be Reported

A study of the effects of radiation on blood will be reported at the 3rd International Congress on Radiation Research this summer by a University radiological hygienist.

Dr. Donald G. Willhoit, assistant professor at the UNC School of Public Health, has been invited to attend the meeting in Cortina de 'Ampezzo, Italy, and to present a paper entitled "Acute Hematôlogic Radiation Injury: Comparative Effects of Cobalt - 60 Gamma and Fission Neutron Radiations."

The study here grew out of interest in humans who were exposed to radiation injury in reactor accidents.

Dr. Willhoit has received a travel grant from the National Research Council of the National Academy of Science to attend the meeting in Italy.

NROTC To Offer Summer Program

University of North Carolina has again been selected by the Navy Department to administer a special six-week NROTC training program that can save enrollees up to two years of training time, according to Capt. Rex Warner, professor of Naval Science.

The new program will give rising college juniors from across the United States an opportunity to get into the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps. It will begin in July.

Normally, a student must begin NROTC training at the beginning of his freshman year in college, but the new program will allow college students to break in at the halfway point and receive full training and benefits.

Under the plan, enrollees can complete the Navy's four-year contract plan in just two years, at the end of which time they can receive either a Naval Reserve or Marine Corps Reserve officer's commission.

Those who are accepted for the special summer school will be paid transportation from home and return from the summer session. They will receive pay of $87.90 per month, uniforms, Naval Science textbooks, tuition and fees, and allowances for room and board.

During the academic year when enrolled as Contract students in the NROTC program students receive uniforms, Naval Science textbooks and instruction, plus $40 per month subsistence allowance.

Training will consist of academic instruction, laboratory, drill and physical education. Program options include surface, aviation, Marine Corps, technical supply or science and engineering.

Sophomores with at least a "C" average may make application for the summer training prior to May 1 at any U. S. Navy Recruiting Station or NROTC Unit for all options except aviation. Applications for the aviation option must be made at Naval Air Reserve Activities.

At the University of North Carolina the special six-week program (Naval Science Institute) will coincide with the second session of summer school, July 18 to Aug. 25.

Westminster Fellowship To Sponsor Panel Talk

By WILLIAM FESPERMAN
DTH Religion Editor

There are two questions we can ask about death. The first is "Why did this person die?" The second is "Why did this person have to die?"

For the answer to the first question, we can go to medicine. But where do we go for an answer to the second question. And once we have found the source of an answer, how adequate is that answer?

The Westminster Fellowship is sponsoring a panel discussion at today's Sunday Supper Forum at 6:30 p.m. to discuss into this dilemma. The supper and panel will be held at the Presbyterian Student Center on Henderson Street.

Discussing our culture's refusal to face the reality of death and the various attitudes toward death will be Dr. David Hawkins of the Department of Psychiatry, Dr. William Blythe of the Medical School, and Reverend Vance Barron, pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church. Harry Smith, Presbyterian student chaplain, will be the moderator.

Although the "American Way of Death" controversy has toned down, the American way of death, unfortunately, hasn't. Any who wish to re-open that discussion with their experience or opinion are invited to do so.

What's Going On At UNC

LSA supper and meeting in the church at 5:30 p.m. The topic will be "Why So Much Unrest" by Dean William G. Long.

The Service of Worship for the University Community with Reverend Banks O. Godfrey, Jr., delivering the sermon will be held at 11 a.m. at the Wesley Foundation, 214 Pittsboro St.

The Sunday Afternoon Symposium of the Methodist and Episcopal students will be held at the Wesley Foundation at 4 p.m. "The Quality of Intellectual and Cultural Live in Chapel Hill will be the inquiry made by Professor John W. Dixon, Jr.

Med School Projects

Eight research projects at the UNC School of Medicine have been selected for presentation at the fiftieth annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology in Atlantic City, N. J., next month.

The FASEB annual meeting is the largest scientific meeting held anywhere in the world. A registration of 20,000 is expected for the five-day event beginning April 12.

Scientific papers from UNC will be by Dr. Campbell W. McMillan and others; Dr. R. A. Weaver and others; Joe Paul Hurt and others; Dr. N. F. Rodman; Dr. Paul P. Leyssac; Dr. Henry N. Kirkman; Patricia A. Moore and others; Dr. J. E. Wilson and others.

Long Promises Investigation Of UNC Fraternity System

Action Comes After Weekend Of Drunkenness, Pillaging

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

Dean of Men William G. Long announced yesterday that he intends to recommend that the entire fraternity system be subjected to a broad investigation.

This action is being taken after the happenings during Germans, which climaxed which trouble has been brewing with fraternities over the past several years.

"The dance at Planter's Warehouse in Durham Saturday night was disorderly and exhibited a great deal of drunkenness," Long said.

A pillaging rampage through the Pi Lambda Phi house between 6-8 Sunday morning resulted in over $300 damage to the house, furnishings and the personal property of its members.

A surf board taken from the Pi Lam house valued at $150 was stuffed down the chimney of the Pi Kappa Alpha house across the drive from the Pi Lams in the Big Fraternity court.

A number of fraternities in the area of the Big and Little Fraternity Courts have been implicated in the damage done to the Pi Lam house.

Dean Long arrived at Big Fraternity Court at 9 a.m. along with is assistant Bob Kepner and the president of the IFC, Lindsay Freeman. Long investigated all of the houses in Big and Little Fraternity Courts.

"I found men passed out on the floors, bottles everywhere and furniture overturned in most of the houses, Long said. "The Pi Lam house was only the best example of the general overall display of wanton destruction of private property prevailing throughout the area."

Horace Johnson, president of the Pi Lams, said, "We are trying to settle the situation among the fraternities involved. I do not think this is going to help the fraternity system. I do not plan to turn it over to the IFC Court unless we can not come to an agreement with the fraternities involved."

Pi Kappa Alpha has already agreed to pay for the surf board found in their chimney.

Long said that the investigation by the University will examine the attitudes, practices and programs of each fraternity.

"The absence of a self - disciplining police system in fraternities is at the core of the problem in fraternities today," Long said.

"The open party system is also a main cause of the trouble. Fraternities must realize that they have to accept responsibility for the actions of their members and guests while in the house."

Dean of Student Affairs C. O. Cathy will meet today with the presidents of the fraternities connected with the incident in the Pi Lam house Sunday.

'Less Government, More Truth' Welch

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

Robert Welch, founder of the John Birch society, said here Sunday night that the society "is in no way a political organization. Its sole purpose is to spread understanding of the world situation."

"Truth is our only weapon," Welch told about 2,000 persons —including an estimated 200 society members—at a Carolina Forum sponsored speech in Memorial Hall.

Welch began his speech — "What Is the John Birch Society?"—in a light mood: "For those who came to hear me out of curiosity, the horns I am supposed to have are retractible. The six armed bodyguards I am supposed to have with me are down with the mumps and my wife forgot to pack my black shirt with the swastika armband."

This drew chuckles from the audience, but the chuckles stopped when he began his hour-long speech.

He told how the society was formed in Indianapolis in 1958 to combat "the Communist conspiracy which has been steadily growing since the early 1930's."

"The society," Welch continued, "inducts only the highest calibre of persons because we are striving to set an example in integrity, deed and purpose which our children's children can follow."

He said the ultimate aim of the society is to provide "less government, more responsibity and a better world.

"Naturally, we have collided with the Communists," he added, "since they want more government, no responsibility and an amoral world.

"The Communists set out in 1961 to destory us. They never face us head-on on the issues. They just call us names."

Welch said the Communists feared only exposure and "the Birch Society was formed to give that exposure." He said the society is a "nation wide educational army with facts as its only weapon."

"These facts are presented by a paid staff of 255 persons and weekly expenses of $100,000," Welch said.

Later in his speech Welch told of the "advantages of a republic over a democracy."

ROBERT WELCH

"A democracy," he said, "is government by the masses. Authority is derived through mass meeting or any other form of direct expression.

"This results in mobocracy with a communistic attitude toward private property.

"On the other hand," he continued, "A republic is a form of government in which men in government are ruled by laws made by the people instead of rulers changing laws at their whims."

In a question and answer session after the speech, one unidentified man asked in a choked, emotional voice: "How dare you say you are a patriotic organization and patronize Negroes and Jews when you call for impeachment of our great Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren?"

"Impeachment is a lawful process . . .," Welch retorted.

Revisions Made In MRC Body And Judiciary

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Recent revisions in the Men's Residence Council will result in the addition of another member to the court and a reduction in size of the MRC body from 100 members to 38 members.

Bob Hunter, outgoing chairman of the MRC court, said the revisions were made by the court recently because of the MRC divisions created by the residence college system.

The new by - laws provide for the chairman and a vice chairman of the MRC Court to be elected from the outgoing court and the other eight members of the court are to be elected from the MRC body.

The chairman and vice chairman for next year will be Bob Taylor of Ehringhaus and Chuck Allard of Craige.

Hunter said the court will be made up of one reprsentative from etch men's residence college on Campus and the MRC body will be composed of the senators and governors of the Men's residence colleges.

"The reduction of size from 100 to 38," Hunter said, "will probably prove to be more efficient and the body will be stronger. It will be speaking for all the residence hall men on campus."

He said the senators of the residence colleges will take over the enforcement of men's residence hall rules instead of having regular MRC members elected in each residence hall as in the past.

Hunter said anyone interested in running for a position on the MRC Court should contact him as soon as possible at 968-9180 at 117 Teague.

The chairman said the MRC under the new rules will be very similar to the Men's Honor Council but will only represent the men in the residence halls.

Services Held For Coed Killed Here On Bike

Memorial services for Linda Carroll Wyatt were held in the Presbyterian Church last night.

She died in Memorial Hospital Saturday night at 8:30 three hours after being injured in a motorcycle accident.

Miss Wyatt was a 21 - year-old senior majoring in elementary education. She was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and was from Norberth, Penn.

The accident occurred at 5:30 Saturday when the motorcycle, dirven by Jeffrey Russell Hackman, a UNC Senior, turned off Pittsboro Road onto Westwood Drive.

The motorcycle failed to make a curve and both riders were thrown to the ground.

Miss Wyatt suffered head injuries. Hackman was treated for minor scratches and released from Memorial Hospital Sunday morning.

Testing Service Presents Help In Choosing Majors

By STEVE LACKEY
DTH Staff Writer

Do you sometimes wonder (especially during exams) whether you would be better suited in a different major?

The University Testing Service may have just the answer to your problem.

Since 1937 the testing service has been helping students to discover exactly where their abilities and interests lie. This year they are expecting to help over 500 people through series of tests and counseling.

Anyone wanting to know what field he is best suited for can go to Dr. J. W. Little in 019 Peabody to make an appointment for the free service.

The time required for all tests and conselling is surprisingly short. Usually from three to 10 hours, spread over as much time as the student desires, is all it takes.

The tests are grouped in five general categories:

1. One test similar to the scholastic aptitude tests on the college boards,
2. An Achievement Test, usually in the field of reading,
3. Several "Interest Inventories" designed to determine what occupations the student will most likely enjoy,
4. A "Temperament Inventory" to test the student's general adjustment to situations,
5. And Several Specialized aptitude tests in such fields as engineering, law, medicine and accounting.

Discussion with specialized guidance counselors always follows the testing.

Dr. Little feels that the counselling is one of the most important phases of the overall program, and stresses that it will "help (the student) decide what is feasible for him to do."

Little said that the tests alone do not dictate what field the student should pursue, but that they do provide information so he can decide for himself.

Clark, Waller Meet In Di-Phi

Wilson Clark and Gary Waller will be the principal speakers at the inaugural debate of the Di-Phi Senate tonight at 7:30 on the third floor of New West.

"Should human rights supersede property rights in a modern society" will be the topic of debate and all inerested persons are invited to attend.

Clark is president of the Carolina Conservative Club and Waller is a spokesman and former temporary director of the UNC chapter of Students for a Democratic Society.

Di - Phi president - elect John Greenbacker will also address the society on future delegates and programs.

Second Referendum Today; Sabotage Thought Possible

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

Polls open at 10 a.m. today in the second attempt to obtain student approval for a controversial amendment to the Student Constitution.

The referendum, first held last month but ruled invalid by the Constitutional Council Thursday will decide whether to put the president and the vice president of the Student Body on the same ticket.

An official protest lodged against the ballet by independent presidential candidate Sonny Pepper claims the Council "was in error and exceeded its powers in setting the date for the new election."

The ballot permits a voter to check "yes" or "no" if he agrees with he addition to the Constitution of the following statement:

"The President of the Student Body and the Vice - President of the Student Body shall have sought their respective positions together and shall be elected together as if they were one person."

This statement would be added to Article III of the Constitution, Section 1, the part defining the executive power of the president.

Elections board chairman Arthur Hays said yesterday that "certain individuals have been considering sabotaging the election."

He warned that it is an honor council offense to tamper with ballot boxes. However, he noted that "certain individuals" might have "poll tenders not show up."

If it could be proven this did happen today, and if any errors reported to the elections board were "planned in intention" the residence would be turned over to the Attorney General John Ingram.

"I think it is unfortunate that certain individuals might have such a low regard for the democratic processes of election," Hays said.

"I ask the Student Body to be alert for any irregularities and to inform the elections board immediately."

The Vice Chairman of the University Party, David Kiel, yesterday called the proposed amendment "one of the most needed reforms ever to come befor the Student Body."

Protests against the ballot today held that the Constitution does not permit the Constitutional Council to set the date of an election.

Bill Rodinson, recently elected chairman of the Council, said yesterday that he will not have to rule on today's referendum.

"The Constitutional Council has the power to interpret the Constitution," Robinson said. "A protest was not in order at this time."

"We made a decision and we're sticking by it," he added.

Hays, the fifth chairman of the elections board this year, held a meeting of the board yesterday and ruled the vote legal.

Protests Voiced Against Constitutional Referendum

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

Protests from the University Party chairman as well as from non-partisan sources yesterday were voiced against today's Constitutional Referendum.

Sonny Pepper, an independent candidate for president of the student body, lodged an official protest Saturday on the grounds that the Constitutional Council did not have the right to set the date of elections.

Pepper's statement to The Daily Tar Heel that the amendment is being sponsored by the "Student Government establishment" to prevent "me from being a candidate for president of the student body."

Pepper noted that Everett Thompson, former chairman of the Elections Board, was opposed to the ruling by the Constitutional Council to hold today's referendum.

"Suddenly (Thompson) found himself replaced by the oldest Student Party boss at the University, Arthur Hays," Pepper said.

"The Student Party is putting the campus to the trouble and expense of an unnecessary and . . . unfair special election," Pepper said.

However, Hays, chairman of the Elections Board, said yesterday the protest was not lodged soon enough to stop the ballotting today.

University Party Chairman Neil Thomas claimed that because of "the lack of publicity and the short time between the setting of the date of the referendum and the holding of the referendum. I feel the Constitutional Council has not followed the election laws."

The new chairman of the council, Bill Rodinson, concurred with Hays in a decision to hold the election despite protets.

The council, he said, is an intrepretative body and has the right to set the dates of elections even though no such mention of this specific power is mentioned in the student government constitution.

Protests from other sources included a group statement from UP floor leader Ed Wilson, chairman of the Finance Committee, SP member Frank Longest, chairman of the Publications Board, and SP member Hugh Blackwell, UP member Rick Miller, UP member Kathy Cauble and Steve Salmony.

Salmony insisted there was a "chance" the referendum would be defeated today, even though it passed by a two-to-one margin last month.

The so-called "slate mendment" puts the president and vice president of the Student Body on the same ticket.

A statement signed by Salmony and Wilson argued that today's amendment will "lessen the ability of the individual student to have the necessary control in his government."

Salmony said he did not see "where the student Legislature itself or the student government president needs the power or authority to necessiate this change."

He said the referendum will make the individual student less effective in the actions of his student government.

"Students will be voting for a more efficient and 'professionalized' student government at the expense of allowing each student the basic right of voting for an individual — the best candidate — for a particular office," Salmony said.

Candidates Will Debate

A debate among candidates for president and vice president of the Student Body and editor of The Daily Tar Heel will be staged Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Gerrard Hall. The debate is being sponsored by the Di-Phi Senate and the GM Current Affairs Committee.

John Greenbacker, Di-Phi president, said several candidates have already accepted invitations to participate in the debate.

Bob Powell and Don Wilson both of SP, and Fred Thomas and Alan Banov, candidates for editor of the DTH, have accepted. Ray Linville, also a candidate for editor of DTH, has not been contacted yet, Greenbcker said, but is to be contacted today.

Greenbacker said confirmation of whether UP candidates Terry O'Toole and Bill Purdy will participate is expected later today. Independent candidate for President Sonny Pepper said he would participate in the debate too.

Greenbacker said residence Hall campaign meetings planned for Thursday night may be postponed if all the major candidates accept invitations to the debate.

ERNIE McCRARY, EDITOR

License Cycle Drivers

A UNC coed died Saturday night.

She was the second student of the school year to die from injuries received in a motorcycle accident.

Many students have been involved in two-wheeled mishaps, sustaining injuries ranging from scratched faces to broken legs.

A study conducted last November showed that 28 students were involved in motorcycle accidents in that month alone!

There is no need to speculate on the causes of these accidents, because the damage is already done.

But if this one-a-day accident rate still prevails, something has to be done.

A simple way to cut down the number of accidents is to cut down the number of motorcycles.

There are now no restrictions on the ownership of these vehicles. Anyone who can afford one, including freshmen, can have it.

Part of the problem seems to be an attitude on the part of riders and non-riders alike that the cycles are toys. They are not toys. They are motor vehicles and should be treated as such.

So, as a start, the University administration should make ownership of motorcycles subject to the same rules governing the ownership of cars. This would eliminate the single largest group of cycle owners—freshmen.

The state could also help by changing its licensing requirements. Merely because a person has a license to drive a car does not mean he is qualified to operate a motorcycle. It is now possible to rent or buy a motorcycle, hop on it and take off, with little or no instruction on its operation — depending on the thoughtfulness of the dealer.

It should be made an offense to ride a motorcycle without a special license and to lend it to anyone who does not have such a license.

Until these and other similar steps are taken, motorcycles will continue to be thought of and used as toys.

And more accidents will happen.

Be Wary Of Hypocrites

On Feb. 22, 1,283 students voted in favor of an amendment to the constitution which would have required the president and vice-president of Student Government to be elected as a team. Only 657 students voted against this "slate amendment."

That election has been declared invalid, because many polls were unmanned and it is possible that many students who wanted to vote were unable to do so.

A new election on the same question is being held today.

But the issues are not the same as they were three weeks ago.

Today the fate of one of the candidates for the presidency — Sonny Pepper — rests to a great extent on the fate of this amendment.

It will greatly simplify his candidacy if the amendment is defeated since he is running as an independent and has no vice-presidential candidate on the independent "slate."

Some of those who howled loudest last month in favor of the amendment are now working hard to have it defeated — because it is suddenly politically expedient.

A month ago they said it would be impossible to expect a president and vice-president from different parties to work together effectively if elected.

Now they say it ain't so. Anybody can bury the hatchet, they say.

In turn, some who were silent before, now clamor for passage of the amendment. It is no accident that most of the people in this group would like to see Pepper defeated.

Not being partial to hypocrites, the DTH contends such people are being less than honest with themselves and their fellow students.

The reasons for approval were strong enough three weeks ago to give the amendment a 2-to-1 favorable vote.

The DTH supported the amendment then and does not withdraw that support now — for the sake of a candidate or anybody else.

Vote however you wish, but at least be sure you know why you vote and what a "yes" or "no" vote means.

Those Loyal Defenders of Freedom

The Chapel Hill Weekly

"Journalism Week," a series of workshops, seminars, speeches, banquets, luncheons and whatnot for North Carolina's newspapers, began in Chapel Hill this weekend, and the choice of the University as host is remarkably fitting for a reason other than that the State's only School of Journalism is located here.

The reason is that the University of North Carolina has never had a more loyal and unrelenting champion than the press of this State, and this has never been truer than during the last three years of the Gag Law travail.

In these three years, the University has found itself caught between a concept of freedom on the one side and on the other side many of the Trustees who control the University, many of the legislators who have the power of financing it, and many of the people who own it. In such a position, the University has in large part been powerless to defend itself. Without readily accepting the direst possible consequences, you don't in any circumstances try to destroy those who control finance and own you. And more often than not, whether realistically or not, the Gag Law controversy has been framed as a win-or-lose-all issue.

As they have many times before, the newspapers of the State, particularly many of the major dailies, took up the cudgel for the University that it couldn't possibly lay hand to itself.

Such newspapers as The Charlotte Observer., The Winston-Salem Journal, The Greensboro Daily News, The Durham Morning Herald, The Raleigh News & Observer and The Raleigh Times laid about with eloquence, with hard-won facts, with ingenuity and enterprise in the University's behalf — spending their influence liberally and often at the cost of reader popularity.

Some of the non-dailies, such as The Smithfield Herald (whose editor is a Duke man), The Roxboro Courier-Times, The Raeford News - Journal (most of whose Hoke County readers must still be incensed), and The Ahoskie Herald (deep in the heart of Gag Law country) also planted themselves firmly at the University's side.

Nobody can say with any certainty whether such newspapers saved the University, or whether they will save it yet. At the same time, no one can deny that they have tried.

The University's position is such that it cannot even afford to express its gratitude publicly to these loyal defenders. But someone should, and we are most happy to do so.

Letters To The Editor

Why This Cause?

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

In today's (March 10) paper I noted with interest two articles. One told of the heroic fight a small group of United States Special Forces soldiers waged against overwhelming numbers of communistic Viet Cong when their outpost was overrun. It seems as though this small number of our own have given their all in this effort against our enemy.

The other article reported an incident on your campus when your president of the student body, Paul Dickson, took the side of an admitted Marxist, Herbert Aptheker, and in what Dickson evidentally would call "freedom of express or speech" tried to make an issue in favor of one who is against our way of life.

My question is that . . . Don't our students have more to do on college campuses than to champion the causes of this type of character? . . . Some such acts are done in the name of crusading for a cause. We hear this from many campuses and streets. I have no qualm regarding crusading for a cause but I wonder if Mr. Dickson has selected a worthwhile cause for which to crusade.

Those of the Marxist opinion are of the same crusade as those Viet Cong who killed the small group of Special Forces troops mentioned in today's paper mentioned above. Why champion the cause of the enemy when there is much to be done in other areas?

May I suggest some good causes on every campus throughout our country that Mr. Dickson and the others there at Chapel Hill may consider . . . Immorality, honestness in classes, drunkenness, patriotism, respect for authority, appreciation for others and love of God.

Why select a cause that is without a doubt aimed at cutting our own throat . . . I do appreciate Mr. Dickson's right to speak or do what he feels he would like to do. I spent 31 months in Europe in 1943-45 preserving this right as the Special Forces group was doing when they died. I ask why this cause? It will bury us so the Marxist followers say.

I challenge the real, red-blooded students on yours and othe rcampuses to get on the crusade of that which many of us gave years to preserve and many gave their lives.

Respectfully suggested,
Nick F. Senter

Government And Schools

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

The current speaker ban controversy is an excellent example of what can happen when government gets involved in such things as education. Some people argue that, however undesireable, the State of North Carolina has the right to ban speakers here since North Carolina finances this school. Even if this is not true, surely most will agree that this government's involvement in education has caused a lot of trouble and social unrest.

It is no secret that the Federal government is expanding more and more into all levels of education, and this means, of course, more and more control. Is it possible that the Federal government could pass a speaker ban or some similar law once it has a strangle-hold on education in the United States? Of course.

It is amusing to me that the Left, who on this campus have been the most vociferous and radical in protesting the speaker ban, is also involved in efforts to expand federal aid and therefore control to all levels of education, grade school through college.

On second thought, maybe it is not amusing.

Sincerely,
Douglas R. Stanton

Bad Food At Lenoir

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Mrs. Connor's recent letter on the manners of UNC students in Lenoir Hall was very interesting. I am inclined to agree with her that manners in that place are not nearly as good as they might be, but I don't think she is getting at the cause of them.

Perhaps she has forgotten that responsibility inspires responsibility. I believe that if Lenoir Hall were operated more responsibly, the students would behave more responsibly there. And although there have been a few improvements in the past year in Lenoir, and regardless of a few revolting articles in the Tar Heel in the past few weeks praising the place, Lenoir Hall is still very much a cause for shame at this university.

The main lack of responsibility lies in the preparation of the food. The low quality of food most students can bear in the interests of economy, but not the preparation of it. A more bland and greasier type of food anywhere is very difficult to imagine. It is very hard for me to believe that with just a little more care in preparation the palatibility of the food put on the student's plate could not be vastly improved...

There are a good many other ways in which the management of Lenoir shows a lack of responsibility. Just one of them is that vast pile of bent silverware, which one person with a pair of pliers should be able to straighten in a few hours.

Mrs. Connor loves to talk about the discipline many UNC students will face in the armed forces. Well, I am a veteran of the U. S. Army, and discipline there is not nearly as difficult to take as Mrs. Connor is inclined to think. The main reason is that in the service people are treated like what they are expected to be. Men are treated like soldiers because they are expected to act like soldiers, and in response most of them do act like soldiers.

But in Lenoir Hall, UNC students are treated like hogs, but are expected to act like ladies and gentlemen. I might remind both Mrs. Connor and the Lenoir Hall management that: (1) in the service I never ate any food as bad as Lenoir's best, even the C rations eaten in the field were better than Lenoir food (I might add here that I served as an enlisted man); and (2) that a lot of former slobs who used to eat in Lenoir Hall and peeve Mrs. Connor with their bad manners are doing a very fine job for us in Viet Nam now.

In conclusion, I would like to suggest to Mrs. Connor that her battle for manners in Lenoir Hall would be much more meaingful and effective if she would also battle for greater responsibility in the management of Lenoir Hall.

Respectfully,
James F. Hamburg

Beauty Mourned

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Once again beauty has given way to expediency! The lovely maple trees on Cameron Avenue are gone and even the little rise on which they stood has been leveled. A new building may be well on the way to completion before autumn, but it will be many a long year before there are maples in glorious color to frame it.

Who makes these decisions?

Political Football

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

The most tragic thing about Tuesday's rerun of the slate system referendum is that it has become the political football of the pro and anti-Pepper partisans. The amendment goes beyond the personalities in this election; it is a fundamental improvement in the structure of Student Government itself.

The amendment should be passed or rejected on its merits, with no regard as to the effect it will have on Mr. Pepper's candidacy. I personally hope that the student body will once again vote to institute this needed reform in Student Government.

Vote For Amendment

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

It is unfortunate that the Constitutional Council saw fit to invalidate the slate system amendment which was supported by a two-to-one majority of students. Let us hope, despite the partisan pressures which are generated at election time, that this measure, which has been supported by all the past student body president and vice-presidents, will be reaffirmed by the students on Tuesday.

The slate system will provide for a more efficient student government and virtually eliminate partisan politics in the executive branch. Considering the problems that student government had in 1965 under the present system, it becomes obvious that, to meet the needs of a dynamic university in 1966, we must, once again, affirm the need for a unified, rather than a divided executive in Graham Memorial.

Sincerely,
Bob Alexander

Fifty Cents Short

Bill Vurnakes walked out of Maverick House Friday morning to hop on his motor scooter and putt off to his 8 o'clock class.

Bill found a note taped to his scooter.

"A brand new shiny license tag replacement costs but $1," it said. Also attached was a $1 bill. And, of course, the license tag was gone.

"It could have been worse," Bill said, "they could have taken the scooter and left the tag."

He notified the police department that his tag, number 12696, had been stolen.

He bought a new tag for $1, but had to pay an extra 50 cents no a notary.

Bill wants Robin Hood to send him the 50 cents or drop it by the Chi Phi house.

Yeah, Hood, why don't you drop by the house. And then quickly retreat to Sherwood Forest.

It promised all kinds of great things.

It said, "Through the personal efforts of Israel Bond (Agent Oy Oy Seven), Hillel has brought to its Chapel Hill headquarters the world famous Cafe Av-Go-Go-Already, direct from its smash success at the fabulous Kahn-Tiki Hotel in the Hebrew Himalayas.

"All Food approved by Mother Margolies. Special guests from UNC-G-erusalum."

North Carolina String Quartet Plays Tonight In Hill Hall

By SUSAN ZARR

The North Carolina String Quartet, assisted by pianist Clifton Matthews and the Ciompi String Quartet, will present one of the most eagerly anticipated chamber music programs of the Triangle area current season tonight at 8 in Hill Hall.

There towering works from the chamber literature, each utilizing a different combination in instruments, will be performed on this program being sponsored by The Tuesday Evening Series and Graham Memorial. The public is invited.

The North Carolina String Quartet, composed of violinists Edgar Alden and Earl Wolslagel, violist Dorothy Alden and 'cellist Charles Griffith, will open the evening's performance with the Quartet in G Major Op. 76, No. 1 of Josef Haydn.

The Op. 76, consisting of six quartets altogether, is considered the climax of Haydn's achievement in this form, comparable to the last quartets of Mozart and Beethoven. Written in his later years, the opus follows Haydn's highly successful visits to England, visits which firmly established his reputation and freed him from many of his more unpleasant professional obligations.

For the performance of Johannes Brahms' Quintet in F Minor, Op. 34, the North Carolina String Quartet will be joined by pianist Clifton Matthews of the UNC music faculty. The Quintet — Brahms' only composition for this combination of instruments — is among the best known and most popular of his chamber music works. Actually the work was first written for a string quintet of two violins, viola and two cellos and later rearranged for two pianos before Brahams, at the suggestion of Clara Schumann, settled upon the form in which we now know it.

Topping off the evening's program will be the stirring and opulent sounds of Felix Mendelssohn's Octet, in E-Flat Major, Op. 20. For the performance of this work, the North Carolina group will be joined by the Ciompi String Quartet, Giorgio Ciompi and Arlene diCecco, violina, Julia Mueller, viola, and Luca diCecco, 'cello.

The diCeccos are members of the music faculty of Converse College in Spartanburg, S. C. and both Ciompi and Mrs. Mueller are associated with the Duke University faculty. The Octet is a product of Mendelsohn's 16th year, and like Mozart's works composed at a similar age, is music of complete artistic maturity and astonishing technical mastery.

Unlike Mozart's, it represents also very nearly the height of Mendelssohn's output. The Scherzo from this Octet is surely one of the most popular and widely played movements in all music literature.

Philosopher Kaufmann Coming To Symposium

By MIKE JENNINGS
DTH Staff Writer

Walter Kaufmann, a philosopher and speaker for this year's Carolina Symposium, believes in doubt.

He says the only way to a true set of beliefs is through renouncing all systems that demand faith on the part of the believer.

Kaufmann will speak here April 17 on "Mind and Myth."

Kaufmann, described as one of America's most brilliant young philosophers, claims he has given up all the world's great religions, saying, "what I want to do and would advise others to do is to make the most of life; put into it all you have and, if possible, die with some measure of nobility."

He says people speak dishonestly about faith and morals from fear of hurting feelings, and therefore they never approach the truth.

Kaufmann was born in Frieburg, Germany, in 1921. Raised a Lutheran, he converted to Judaism, the faith of his grandparents on both sides, at 11. He studied for a time in Berlin, but fled to America in 1939.

Here he attended Williams College and graduated with highest honors and Phi Beta Kappa. He received his philosophy M. A. at Harvard in 1942, then entered the Army and served in Europe until 1946.

After returning to Harvard for his Ph. D., he joined the faculty at Princeton, where he published his doctoral thesis as "Neitzche" in 1950. The book was successful, as were his next three words, "Critique of Religion and Philosophy," "From Shakespeare to Existentialism" and "The Faith of a Heretic."

Kaufmann received a full professorship at Princeton in 1962. In addition to his books, he has edited or translated many other works concerning religion and philosophy.

He has served visiting appointments at Columbia, Cornell, the New School for Social Research, the University of Michigan, and the University of Washington. He received an international Leo Baeck Prize in 1961, has been awarded several Fulbrights, and in 1962 was invited by the Princeton Undergraduate Council to be a Witherspoon lecturer, the highest honor a faculty member may be given by undergraduates.

Rochester Bans No Speakers

Ed. note: The following editorial from the University of Rochester Campus Times was sent to The Daily Tar Heel by Leslie Kardon, a freshman there. In an accompanying letter, she said she sent the editorial "to let you all know that Yankees appreciate your problems and hope that you too may achieve a similar sort of 'freedom with responsibility' in the future."

We must often stop ourselves, in the heat of our assorted crusades, and grant our appreciation for an administration which, by comparison with others, is quite liberal in its attitudes toward the student body. The Towers experiment is one example of its liberality; its policy on outside speakers is another—especially by comparison.

Take the current goings-on at the University of North Carolina. In 1963, the state legislature banned Communists and other left-oriented people from speaking at the university's four campuses. Last November, the legislature repealed the ban but gave regulatory control to UNC's trustees.

This past Tuesday (Monday, Feb. 28), the trustees turned control of speaker policy over to the chancellors of each branch of the university, which was how the situation stood in 1963 when the legislature enacted the ban.

Now only certain speakers may appear at UNC. Excluded, according to the New York Times, are "known Communists, who advocate the overthrow of the state or federal constitution, and persons who have pleaded the fifth amendment when questioned about subversive acitivity."

The issue of the speaker ban's constitutionality may soon be settled, however. The student body president of the Chapel Hill campus announced Tuesday that the student Committee for Free Inquiry would apply "immediately" to invite to UNC Herbert Aptheker, theoretician of the United States Communist Party, and Frank Wilkinson, chairman of the American Committee to Abolish the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Among UNC's trustees, the only reported opposition to putting speaker policy up to the various chancellors came from Thomas J. White, who is also a state senator. He predicted that, "if the trustees wash their hands of this control over speakers, as Pilate washed his hands of the blood of Jesus Christ, there will be no restraint over Communist speakers."

We cannot think that such a view would be given serious consideration at the UR, and we are greatly thankful for that. Freedom to hear has, to our knowledge, never been a point of contention for this campus, thanks to the administration's open-mindedness.

All a group need do is apply for facilities for any speaker it may see fit to invite. No question is asked about an invitee's background or present activities. Not even his name is requested.

Much of this has to do with the fact that the UR is a private and not a state-supported university, so there is little to fear from actual outside control. But much of this is also due to UR's administration, to which we sincerely say, "Thank you."

WUNC HIGHLIGHTS

THE ARTS: USA — THE NOVEL — 8:00 p.m. —Valdimir Nabokov, author of "Lolita" (1955) and "Pale Fire" (1962), is subject for this program—having consented to the first off-the-cuff, for-the-record program of this kind when National Educational Television filmed him at his home in Montreux, Switzerland, collecting butterflies, correcting galleys and talking about his life and work.

THE FRENCH CHEF —8:30 p.m. — "Four-In-Hand Chicken" Julia Child presents a quartet of culinary variations, based on the theme of chicken poached in white wine.

THE TURN OF THE CENTURY — 9:00 p.m. —"Stand Close! Sing Loud!" The problems the early record producers had with sound reproduction are revealed during a grueling recording session in a back room mechanical recording studio as this program returns viewers to the turn of the century when cylinder records were first being produced to supply the nation's growing number of parlor phonographs.

Suharto Orders All Reds To Surrender

SINGAPORE (AP) — Lt. Gen. Suharto ordered all Indonesian Communist officials of whatever rank yesterday to surrender to local military commands by the end of March, Radio Jakarta reported.

The new Indonesian strongman warned that action will be taken against those ignoring the order. He also directed all political parties to accept no Communists as members.

A big rally will be held in Jakarta today to show the people's "utmost gratitude" to Suharto for banning the Communist party — his first official act on assuming power Saturday — the radio said.

The broadcast declared statements "of support, jubilitation and gratification" were still flowing in to Suharto for takirg over the government.

Informed sources in Singapore said Suharto and his supporter, Gen. Abdul Haris Nasotion, were consolidating their position and were receiving pledges of support from provincial chiefs and political organization throughout the nation of 3,000 islands.

Prisident Sukarno fired Nasution as defense minister last month, touching off violent demonstrations that finally led to the switch of power.

Radio Jakarta was careful to say Suharto took over on order from Sukarno and all orders were issued in the name of the President, who apparently still is in his palace in Jakarta.

Travelers arriving from Jakarta said two agents of Deputy Premier Subandrio's intelligence service were shot Saturday when paratroopers and military police went to arrest 20 of them. They said as far as they knew this was the only bloodshed in the turnover of power. They said the agents surrendered after a brief shooting match.

There have been various reports concerning Subandrio, but the last one said he was under arrest in Sukarno's palace. Considered Pro - Peking, Subandrio was a major target of student ire in demonstrations.

Low Unemployment Is Not Dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz said yesterday it is "cockeyed" for anyone to say the current 3.7 per cent unemployment rate is too low and would cause labor shortages.

Wirtz, at a news conference, said the government will continue to try to push the nation's jobless rate down to what it considers the rock bottom level of 2.5 per cent of the civilian labor force. This figure is generally considered transitional unemployment—people temporarily out of work while switching from one job to another.

"There is not a manpower shortage in this country today," Wirtz said.

However, he added, there are budding labor shortages in some areas of the country and in some trades, particularly the Great Lakes and midwest areas and in the metal working trades and construction.

"We don't have a shortage in people, but we have some shortages in skills," Wirtz said.

He said the problem now is to train the unemployed, totalling 3.1 million, for the jobs that do exist.

Savings And Loans Face 'A Year Of Crisis'

WASHINGTON (AP) —The climb of bank interest rates has confronted savings and loan firms with "a year of crisis" in the competition for investors' savings, an industry spokesman said last night.

Widening concern over tight money—caused partly by last week's increase from 5 to 5 1-2 per cent in the rate charged by major New York banks on prime business loans—brought these further reactions from savings and loan quarters:

— A proposal that President Johnson name a special commission to study and recommend possible changes in the rules which restrict the investments and dividend payments of savings and loan firms.

— A forecast that the Federal Reserve Board may again be forced — perhaps in April—to raise the discount rate. That is the interest charged by Federal Reserve Banks on their loans to commercial banks.

— A warning that mortgage money for home financing may be inadequate to meet the anticipated housing demand of 1966.

Anti-Inflation Tax Increase Is Probable

DETROIT (AP) — The nation is limited in its "margin for economic error," and there might be a need for moderate tax increases, Secretary of the Treasury Menry H. Fowler said yesterday.

Fowler, urging Americans to "guard with unrelenting vigilance against the danger of inflation," told the Economic lub of Detroit:

"We do not want to put the brakes on unnecessarily or too fast."

He said the Johnson administration is watching carefully what happens to the President's budget in the appropriation process of Congress, the costs of the war in Viet Nam, the "upward drift in the wholesale price index for the first time in seven years" and the nation's low level of unemployment.

He said he disagreed that the economy is inflationary at present.

But he added: "What the situation does require is the exercise of calmness, moderation, and responsible restraint on the part of all of us, for it somewhat limits our margin for economic error, and narrows our tolerance for economic excess and irrespnsibility."

"My whole speech implies there might be a need for further moderate tax increases, depending on the factors I mentioned in the speech," Fowler told newsmen.

North Carolina News Roundup

NLRB Makes Recommendation

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A National Labor Relations Board examiner yesterday recommended that Becker County Sand and Gravel Co. in Camden, S. C., bargain with a union and offer jobs back to six former employes.

Trial Examiner Robert Cohn said that the company refused to bargain collectively with the International Union of Operating Engineers which, he said, has been representatives of employes since Feb. 16, 1965.

Cohn also recommended that the company be ordered to offer Robert L. Vinson, Lawrence B. Watkins, Olin Huggines, Charlie J. Baker, Edward A. Gardner and Braton E. Baker immediate, full and unconditional reinstatement.

Republican HQ Stays In Raleigh

RALEIGH (AP) — State headquarters for the North Carolina Republican party will remain in Raleigh.

Rep. James Holshouser, the new state Republican chairman, said yesterday some of the details of the party's functions will be handled from his home in Boone but the GOP headquarters will stay in the Capital City.

Graham Calls Crusade A Success

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham said Monday his crusade last week in Greenvile, S.C., was the "largest we've ever held in the South."

The evangelist was in Charlotte to address the Executives Club last night. He discussed the crusade with newsmen before the speech.

"I never saw anything like it," Graham explained. "It was the warmest response we've ever had. When we began turning away thousands at every service, there was nothing to do but go to two services a night."

He said the Greenville audience's spirit and response was "just like old time revivals."

U.S. Jets Pound Viet Cong Regiment; Quiet Elsewhere

SAIGON (AP) — Screaming over mountaintops, U. S. Marine and Air Force jets pounded a North Vietnamese regiment holding the Ashau Special Forces camp yesterday, apparently silencing its antiaircraft defenses despite the heaviest groundfire yet encountered in South Viet Nam.

Officials in Saigon said no U. S planes were lost and that the boming and strafing attacks on the Laotian border camp destroyed one building and knocked out five mortar positions. Heavey antiaircraft fire at the outset of the air strikes fizzled toward the end and most of the North Vietnamese were believed to have scuttled back into the neutrality of Laos.

With war action elsewhere continuing to ebb, there were these other developments:

—Following up the execution Monday of wealthy businessman as an economic saboteur, Saigon's special anticorruption tribunal sentenced a former official to death on charges of embezzling $104,000 in public funds.

—Political tensions eased in the five northernmost provinces over Saigon's dismissal of Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi as commander of the 1st corps.

—A U. S. Mission headed by Health, Education and Welfare Secretary John W. Gardner arrived in Saigon to explore social needs of the South Vietnamese.

Only scattered ground action was reported. A combined U. S. - Australian force encounted a Viet Cong unit in the jungles 30 miles northeast of Saigon and on the central coast a South Vietnamese unit foiled a VietCong ambush.

U. S. briefing officers in Saigon reported that U. S. planes flew 42 missions against North Viet Nam despite bad weather Sunday, striking again at targets around Vinh on the coast and Dien Bien Phu near the Laotian border.

Leak Delays Gemini Flight

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — Troubles struck the Gemini 8 rendezvous and spacewalk mission yesterday, forcing at least a one - day launch delay, until Wednesday, of man's first try at hitching two vehicles together in space.

Officials decided to postpone the spectatcular space doubleheader after technicians discovered volatile fuel loose inside a 66-foot Atlas rocket, and a leak in the spacecraft's oxygen recirculation system.

Within a few hours, the problem in the Atlas, to be used to launch Gemini 8's Agena Rendezvous target, was isolated, and officials were confident the rocket could meet the new launch date.

The leak developed in the space suit circuit which separates moisture from recirculated cabin air during space flight.

Fulbright Speaks

CHICAGO (AP) — Sen. J. W. Fulbright told told schoolmen yesterday the Viet Nam-Red China hearings he directs are heating up controversy in the hope of forging a true consensus policy.

The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee acknowledged the group is fostering controversy, and he added:

"There is nothing wrong with the honest and responsible airing of differences. Controversy is the condition of intelligent decision-making and the crucible in which a consensus as to objectives may be translated into a consensus of policy as well."

Fulbright, a Democrat from Arkansas who has criticized President Johnson's Viet Nam policies, spoke to about 2,000 persons at the National Conference on Higher Education

Stock Market Dives Again

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slumped 10.86 to 917.09.

Brokers blamed the decline mainly on further reaction to the tight money and credit situation

They noted that announcement late last Thursday of the minimum lending rate by a major New York bank quickly halted a rally and that the market drifted slightly lower on Friday

The decline embraced the motors, steels, rails, chemicals and electronics.

Dog Gets Contact Lenses: Often Turned Himself In

LONDON, (AP) — Yuri is shortsighted and keeps getting lost, winding up in the police station. So he's been fitted with contact lenses. Yuri is a boxer dog, 4 years old.

Dr. Michael Jags, a Harley Street eye specialist, fitted the lenses Sunday.

"Yuri is just shortsighted," said the specilist. "But he will have no difficulty wearing contact lenses because he has got the right kind of baggy eyelids."

Michael Dormon - Brailsford, owner of the dog, said it's been the same old story since Yuri was a pup.

"We have lost count of the number of times he has been lost," he commented. "The police are always ringing up to say they have got him."

Yuri lives in Crookham, a small town in southern England, and is well known for his amiable habit of going for walks and losing himself.

"At first the police took him in automatically when they saw him wandering," said his master. "But lately he's been going to the police station himself to give himself up."

Sex Scandal Investigation

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson ordered a broad investigation yesterday into alleged links between the previous Conservative government and a blonde German refugee now in West Germany.

Pearson announced the inquiry at a dramatic session of the House of Commons called to consider the case of Gerda Munsinger, 36, whose name has been coupled with those of members of former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's cabinet.

Immediately after the Prime Minister spoke, Davie Fulton, former Justice Minister, accused the Liberal government of "blackmail." He said the 6-year-old information was being brought to light in an attempt to halt Conservative criticism of the government's handling of another matter.

The charges against the Conservatives were made last week by Justice Minister Lucien Cardin, who did not identify the former officials he said were involved, but suggested Canada's security may have been endangered. He charged Mrs. Munsinger was engaged in espionage before coming to Canada in the 1950s. She has denied being a spy.

The Prime Minister said the inquiry would be conducted by Supreme Court Justice W. F. Spence. The move had been approved earlier at a 2 1-2-hour cabinet meeting.

The intense public interest in the case was reflected by long lines of curious spectators attempting to gain admission to the packed public galleries.

Mrs. Munsinger has stated that she was acquainted with at least two members of the Diefenbaker cabinet while she worked in Canada as a waitress, a model and a secretary. She named former Trade Minister George Hees and former Associate Defense Minister Pierre Sevingny as politicians she knew socially.

ACC All-Academic Team Headed By Marin, Coker

GREENSBORO (AP) — Jack Marin of Duke and Pete Coker of North Carolina State topped the balloting for the fourth annual Atlantic Coast onference All-Academic Basketball team announced Monday.

ACC Commissioner Jim Weaver, said Coker and Randy Mahaffey of Clemson were the only repeaters in the all-academic selection.

Completing the team were Jim Sutherland of Clemson and Hal Blondeau of North Carolina State.

In earlier voting for the all-conference team, Marin, star forward for Duke's Eastern Regional champions who play in the NCAA finals this week, was second for the first team and Coker placed on the second team.

Players qualify for the all academic squad by having a B or better academic average for either their full college career, the entire year just completed or one semester of the past year.

Sutherland, an A student in pre-med as a junior, tops the academic rating on the ACC team, just above Mahaffey's A-minus in pre-med as a junior.

The B students are Marin in chemistry, Coker in economics and Blondeau in economics. All are on the dean's list.

In the voting were Bob Bennett of North Carolina, Larry Worsley of N. C. State and Buddy Benedict of Clemson.

Tar Heel Golfers Open Season Today

By JIM FIELDS

The 1966 UNC golf team takes to the fairways today in their frist match of the season against Davidson at Finley Golf Course.

This year's Tar Heel team will be led by John Baldwin, defending tournament champion, and Steve Robbins, who made honorable mention All-American last year as a sophomore.

Baldwin and Robbins each had a very eventful summer as Baldwin won the Long Island State Amateur Title and Robbins won the New Hampshire Amataur Title. The two then teamed together to play in the Anderson Four Ball Tournament in New York and finished fourth, two strokes behind the winners.

This year's team will have plenty of experience with the majority of the players being juniors. The only newcomer to break into the starting lineup will be Brooks Carey, a sophomore, who will play fifth today.

"The boys are only looking fair right now," said Coach Ed Kenny yesterday. "They have been making steady improvement all along and things are looking better each day."

The ability to improve as the season goes along was the key to success for last year's championship team. At the beginning of the season, they were a team with a lot of inexperienced sophomores; but by tournament time, they were experienced veterans, and they played like champs in sweeping the tournament.

One of the big reasons for last year's championship was the surprising play of Dick Van Leuvan. Going into the tournathe number seven man on the squad, but he shot an amazing 147 to finish in a three way tie for second place, three strokes behind Baldwin. Dick is back this year and with a year's experience should be even better than last year.

Starting for the Tar Heels today against Davidson will be Baldwin, who qualified at 290; Robbins, 295; Stan Thompson, 298; Brooks Carey, 299; Brooks Carter, 300; Van Leuvan, 305 and David Owen, 306.

Thursday and Friday of this week and golf team will be in South Carolina to play USC and Clemson on consecutive days.

Villanova Downs St. Johns

Bill Melchionni scored the last three of his 33 points in the final two minutes and five seconds Saturday, giving Villanova a 63-61 basketball victory over defending champion St. John's, N. Y., in a first round game of the National Invitation Tournament.

San Francisco defeated Penn State 89-77 in the opening game of the doubleheader in Madison Square Garden.

The victories advanced Villanova and San Francisco to tonight's quarter-final round, along with the winners of the Saturday evening doubleheader in which Army downed Manhattan and Boston College beat Louisville.

Finley Wants Inter-League

Charles O. Finley said Saturday he is convinced the greatest boon which could happen to major league baseball would be inter-league play.

The Kansas City Athletic owner said he reached the conclusion after a poll of season ticket holders here in which 97 per cent favored each play.

"I 'm absolutely convinced," he said, "that such a decision by the two leagues would constitute the greatest justice baseball could pay to the fans, who, after all, are the ones who buy the tickets and who make it possible to build the new stadiums.

"This would boost major league attendance immeasurably and, even better than that, it would give the fans a chance to see the whole play and not just one-half of it," he continued.

"I think everyone knows by now that the American League is 100 per cent in favor of inter-league play. It is the National League which is balking and that, to me, is a very short-sighted attitude."

Picka Heads All-Academic

Freshman John Picka of High Point heads the Carolinas Conference All-Academic basketball team with an "A" average.

The other four members of the team — selected from players with a C plus or better average who had participated in at least 50 per cent of his team's games — have averages of B or better.

Nick Serba of Atlantic Christian has a B plus average, Harold Williford of Pfeiffer, B; Robert Covington of Atlantic Christian B; and Charles McConnell of Western Carolina, B.

Picka, a 6-10, 230-pounder from Baltimore, Md., averaged 9.2 points a game and broke into the starting lineup midway the season.

'Golfer-Of-Year' Nominees

Carolinas Golf Writers Association has nominated five golfers for its annual "golfer of the year" award.

The writers announced these nominations Saturday:

Raymond Floyd, Fayetteville, N. C., pro; Randy Glover, Florence, S. C., pro; Bill Harvey, Greensboro, N. C., amateur; Billy Joe Patton, Morganton, N. C., amateur, and Aubrey Apple, Greensboro, N. C., pro.

The winner of the award will be presented the Greater Greensboro Open trophy at the golf writers' annual dinner meeting in Greensboro March 31.

Dale More won the award in 1965.

'Prosperity' Plagues Duke' Other NCAA Semi-Finalists

By BILL ROLLINS
Assistant Sports Editor

Unranked Utah joins the nation's three top-rated college basketball teams in the NCAA semi-finals this Friday at College Park, Md., and the four contestants have something in common.

None of them can stand prosperity.

At least that's the way it seems from the way each won its regional championship last Saturday night. All lost seemingly safe leads and were forced to come through in the stretch to earn their advancements to the semi-finals.

Friday, No. 1 Kentucky (26-1) meets No. 2 Duke (25-3) in the 7 p.m. opener that will decide the Eastern champion, and No. 3 Texas Western (26-1) accepts unranked Utah's (20-6) challenge in the Western title tilt at nine. The winners play Saturday night at nine for the national crown after a seven o'clock consolation bout between Friday's losers.

Southeastern Conference champ Kentucky built a 12-point first half lead over Big Ten winner Michigan, and then saw the nation's top college player, Cazzie Russell, lead a comeback which put the Wolverines on top 53-52 midway through the final period. Forward Pat Riley, whose 29 points matched Russell's output, slipped the Wildcats ahead for good at 65-64, but Coach Adolph Rupp's team was pushed to the final seconds before winning by 80-79, for the Mideast crown.

Duke, the Eastern tiltlist, won by 91-81 over independent Syracuse, but had to recover after frittering away a 16-point lead just before the half and being down to the Orange 72-70 with just over five minutes to play.

Texas Western had the biggest scare—and perhaps the most luck—of the four finalists. It took them two overtimes to win the Midwest crown from Kansas, 81-80.

The Miners had fourth-ranked Kansas down by 69-64 with a minute to go in their Midwest showdown, but the Jayhawks charged back to tie at 69-all after 40 minutes. Then in the first overtime, the once-beaten Miners were seemingly eliminated from the nationwide event when Jo Jo White of JU sank a 15-footer with one second left.

But White had stepped out of bounds before the shot, and the game went into its second overtime before Western's aptly-named Willie Cager hit for the clincher with 32 seconds left.

Utah's Redskins, who fell to Carolina (90-85) during the Christmas break, rode their fast-break to an 18-point lead early in the second half, but had to hold on tight for a 70-64 win over Oregon State in the Far West title game.

Kentucky's leaders are Riley and guard Louie Dampier, the first Wildcat duo in history to average over 20 points each in the same season. Riley scored 58 points in the regionals.

Utah made it to the final gathering of four despite the loss of its biggest man, 6-7 George Fisher, who broke his leg before the tournament began. But 6-4 center Jerry Chambers scored 73 points in the two regional games, and will provide the 'Skins' biggest threat against Texas Western—which, like Kentucky, was unbeaten until the final Saturday of the regular season.

Braves On Guard In Training Camp

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — In Milwaukee, the Braves are on trial. In West Palm Beach, the Braves are on guard.

With the exception of Maager Bobby Bragan, an outspoken critic of the state of Wisconsin, the city of Milwaukee and the officials of both, few words are volunteered here about the actual courtroom proceedings in Milwaukee.

Physically, the approach is less subtle. At the Braves' training site, the last reminders of the Milwaukee Braves have been firmly erased.

The signs have been redone. Everything is carefully labeled Atlanta Braves. And visiting reporters are handed blue and red baseball caps with the bold white letter A.

Bragan meanwhile, remains the one firm link with the situation—willing to speak about the case despite its obvious unattractiveness—although veteran outfielder Hank Aaron expressed certain sentimental reservations about leaving Milwaukee.

"The whole case is settled as far as I'm concerned," said Bragan. "We're going to play in Atlanta.

"To me the whole thing is like a child custody case where one state rules one thing and another rules something else. If the child is in Tennessee and the judge there rules one thing, and the California judge rules another, the usual decision is to keep the child where he is.

"The child here is the Braves —and we're in Atlanta."

Besides, said Bragan somewhat facetiously, if the Braves were to be forced to move out of Atlanta, Milwaukee cortainly does not have the No. 1 claim.

"If wer move," he said, "there's only one place legally and logically — Boston. What's the sense of moving us back to Milwaukee until Boston sues and says we have to play there since we left there first.

"I know I wouldn't be interested in going back to Milwaukee even if the judge rules we have to. I've had it there. As I said in my deposition, I wouldn't go back if they tripled my salary."

Bragan went on to cite the aatitude of Milwaukeans as a contributing factor in the Braves' failure to win the National League pennant last year and also said he hadn't noticed his players paying much attention to the trial.

"We certainly would've had a better chance at winning last year if we had played somewhere else," Bragan said.

"When you play before three packed crowds in Los Angeles, three packed crowds in the Astrodome and three packed crowds in San Francisco, you don't relish the idea of coming home and playing before 5,000 or 6,000 people.

"As for the players, I'm glad they're not concerned with the trial. We've got all we can do to get ready for the season. The lame duck year is behind us, and the only time I've heard any discussion among the players is when something appears in the papers.

Today's New Universities: Failing To Reach Ideals

Is the modern university "a bundle of paradoxes embedded in tradition and held together mostly by platitudes?" Is it a multiversity which fails to approach the ideal of a university by prostituting itself to get federal money, perverting the educational process and debasing ehtics?

Yes, says a modern conservative who addressed a seminar on "The Continuing Crisis in University Education at the University of North Carolina Saturday.

Speaking to a session of the two - day meeting Albert H. Hobbs said American universities once were guided by a religious purpose, but 'having lost that guideline' failed to formulate a new central purpose.

The University of Pennsylvania sociology professor called the modern University a "multiversity" and quoted University of California president Clark Kerr's description of it as having "British - oriented undergraduate life, German - modeled graduate studies, American - style service to the state with all of it kept as confused as possible for the preservation of the whole uneasy balance."

Dr. Hobbs said students believe they are attending a university and are being misled. He proposed that they fight this deception by posing these questions to trustees and professors and to "try, by probing their conscience, to persuade administrators to respect education in deed as well as word, to appreciate intellectual endeavor, whether published or not, and to set an example of ethical conduct which students will be proud to follow."

Dr. Hobbs titled his speech "To Probe the Academic Conscience." His appearance and the two - day meeting were sponsored by the Carolina Conservative Club and the International Society of Individualists.

Film Fest To Close

"Knife in the Water" will close this year's film festival. It will be shown at 7 and 9:30 tonight in Carroll Hall.

Director of the film is Roman Polanski, who also directed "Repulsion."

In "Knive in the Water," a successful journalist and his wife invite a young stranger to join them on a weekend outing. This leads to a conflict between the husband and the stranger over the wife.

Time said the movie is "a thriller as sharp as a knife and as smooth as water."

Slow Start For Fund

So far, $7 has been collected to defray the cost of the planned $1,500 to $2,000 legal suit aimed at repealing the Speaker Ban.

There is presently a collection booth at Chase Cafeteria which is open from 11-1 and 5-7. Additional booths are planned for Y-Court and Lenoir Hall.

Committee To Meet

The Ways and Means Committee of Student Legislature will meet today at 4 p.m. in the Woodhouse Room.

Chairman Sandy Hobgood said resolutions chartering residence colleges and establishing a student art committee will be considered.

He invited all interested students to testify at the hearing.

Award Applications

Candidates for the Irene F. Lee Award must be submitted to the Dean of Women's office not later than March 30.

Any individual or organization may submit a candidate and a brief statement of her qualitifications to 202 South Building.

'Go Where The Action Is' Says Editor

By JOAN PAGE

Tar Heel editors were advised to "get the hell out of the office and go where the action is" in an address here last weekend by a Florida newspaperman.

Speaking at a N. C. Editorial Writers' banquet, James A. Clendinen, editor of the Tampa Tribune, said "there is no substitute for personal inquiry and observation to give authority to an editorial."

Today's editorial writer is under - informed, over-burdened, under-valued and overly modest, the chairman of the National Conference of Editorial writer is under-informed because it is physically impossible for him to acquire the knowledge to write authoritatively about all issues which confront him.

Clendinen called on editors to abandon the "glue of habit" that sticks them to desks where their reading and thinking time are continually interrupted.

The editorial writer's potential power to shape events and his contribution to the paper are often under-valued, he continued.

"The old argument that the editorial page has lost its influence holds true only for those papers that don't want any influence or don't know how to exercise it," he said. "A newspaper can have influence if it is unafraid of controversy, establishes a reputation for acting in the public interest and chooses its fights with care."

Citing a growing need for "responsible editorial pages," Clendinen said it is becoming increasingly difficult for the average citizen to grasp what is going on by spot news reports.

"The daily collision of forces showers the public with fragments of controversy. It is the job of the editorial page to sort out the pieces and fit them together into a recognizable pattern."

A newspaper, he maintained, exerts its greatest influence in the determination of complex issues. "Where the voter does not have a clearly-formed opinion of his own, he is likely to accept the opinion of a newspaper in which he has confidence. Too often, we under-value our ability to change the surface direction of events by energizing the underlying body of public opinion."

In conclusion, Clendinen expressed bafflement at the excessive modesty of many papers in subordinating editorials to everything else in the paper. He criticized location of editorials and their display in terms of typography and headlines.

Lipsitz: 'Long Way To Go For Truly Great Society'

By JOAN PAGE

A political scientist here, somewhat of an expert on the poor, disagrees with those who see "Great Society" programs only in terms of increased taxation, inflation and loss of individual freedoms. He differs even more with those who maintain that a man's failure is his own fault and that aiding those who fail is rewarding lack of effort and making a virtue of laziness.

Prof. Lewis Lipsitz is doing extensive research on the poverty stricken and their feelings about the United States government and its policies under a grant from the Social Science Research Council. His research prompts him to argue that our nation is not living up to its potentialities in creating "a truly Great Society."

Though the United Staates is the wealthiest country in the world, he says, it is showing every sign of not being able to solve some of the most elementary social and economic problems.

While billions are poured into the space race, defense budget and toward production of consumer goods, the nation continues to have one of the highest unemployment rates in the western world. At least 20 per cent of the population lives on incomes below the minimum recognized for decent human existence and almost half under conditions of considerable deprivation. Lipsitz has found that at least one person in six lives in a slum.

At a time when the average computer has the equivalent of a high school education, but a third of all students never finish high school, the nation must attempt to solve its social problems, he warns. "If we do not now make a more substantial effort to improve the situation of the poor, we will pay the price later in terms of crime, disorder and wasted lives."

In addition to unemployment and education, he lists housing, medical care, air and water pollution, recreation, and training for creative use of leisure as other problems that must be faced.

Lipsitz thinks of himself as a "radical - liberal - conservative" and has formulated some definite ideas as to how society's social problems might be solved.

He says he is "conservative" in his concern that human beings not bewasted, "liberal" in that he believes all levels of government can help solve these problems, and "radical" in that he feels he knows a solution to the problems and is eager to see something done about the existing situation.

The professor isn't too worroied about automation for the time being. He sees enough social needs in our society and in poor nations of the world to take up whatever "slack" is created by machines in the foreseeable future.

Lipsitz has an answer for every charge likely to be hurled at his proposals. To the cry of "socialism," he replies that almost all Americans and Europeans are "socialist" these days and notes that many programs advocated by socialists years ago (such as social security and welfare payments) are now "a part of the repertoire of all modern western governments."

Lipsitz points out tha a tone of moralistic indignation toward the disadvantages is a typical one in today's society. "Poverty is a social problem, not simply a matter of individual failure. Those born poor are highly likely to remain poor, regardless of their innate talents."

He fails to see how programs such as social security, aid to education and unemployment insurance can restrict the individual's freedom. On the contrary, he believes they have given the old and disadvantaged new opportunities and hope, and a bit of self - respect. "For those on the bottom of the heap, they have opened the way to self - improvement."

With regard to taxes, Lipsitz estimates that the programs needed to combat suffering, privation and ugliness would require an additional 10 to 15 billion a year in federal spending. He sees this amount as a small investment compared to space and defense budgets.

These social programs can be accomplished, he believes, without impairing the fiscal freedom of the taxpayer. Such programs represent an investment in the future of the country and they encourage maximum use of human resources, he says. They're also an intelligent way of cutting down problems of crime and social disorganization.

As for inflation, Lipsitz argues that the nation now has the economic know - how to use increased governmental expenditures in such a way that total productivity is increased and average incomes to up over the long run.

"It requires governmental action to provide services none of us can buy for ourselves," he explains, referring to clean air and rivers, beautiful cities, adequate medical facilities and fine schools. "No one can purchase these commodities in the market place. We can only buy them through our government by giving that government the endorsement to use its powers toward these desired goals."

Slate Amendment Narrowly Beaten

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

The "slate amendment" to the Student Constitution was defeated by an extremely narrow margin yesterday in a moderate turnout of 2,573 voters.

The referendum would have put the offices of the president and vice president of the Student Body on a single ticket.

Yesterday's vote was the second attempt by backers of the amendment to obtain student approval. A Feb. 22 vote was declared invalid by the Constitutional Council.

The final margin was separated by only 81 votes, with 1,327 voting against and 1,246 voting for the amendment.

Elections Board Chairman Arthur Hays said, "I believe that this referendum is a perfect example of why an election should not be declared invalid for error without proof that the error changed the results."

Politics have shrouded the slate amendment ever since it was declared invalid the first time by the Constitutional Council.

In effect, the defeat of the amendment will permit independent presidential candidate Sonny Pepper to run for the office. Hays said late yesterday his board will meet today to rule on Pepper's candidacy.

Pepper is seeking the presidential office without a runninging mate or endorsement of either political party.

"I am very pleased that I now have an opportunity to submit my candidacy to the Student Body," Pepper said. "However, I am very sorry that the Constitutional Amendment was placed in this political light."

Yesterday's vote received a larger turnout than the first attempt for student approval, which attracted 1,940 voters.

The results of the vote were not known until 9:30 p.m. last night. Ballots were counted by hand.

The failure of the amndment was "unfortunate" in the words of Don Carson, former student body vice president, who felt the vote would have been fairer had it been held next Tuesday, instead of yesterday.

Carson said politics played a larger role than necessary since it was held during the heat of political campaigning for spring elections.

Spring elections are set for Tuesday.

The elections board will meet today to act on petitions of Daily Tar Heel candidate Alan Banov and two independent legislators.

Dates At $3 Must Be OK!

"Operation Match" comes to Carolina again today. Ralph Levering, co-ordinator of the program here, said match-ups would be sold at 10 other universities and colleges across the state.

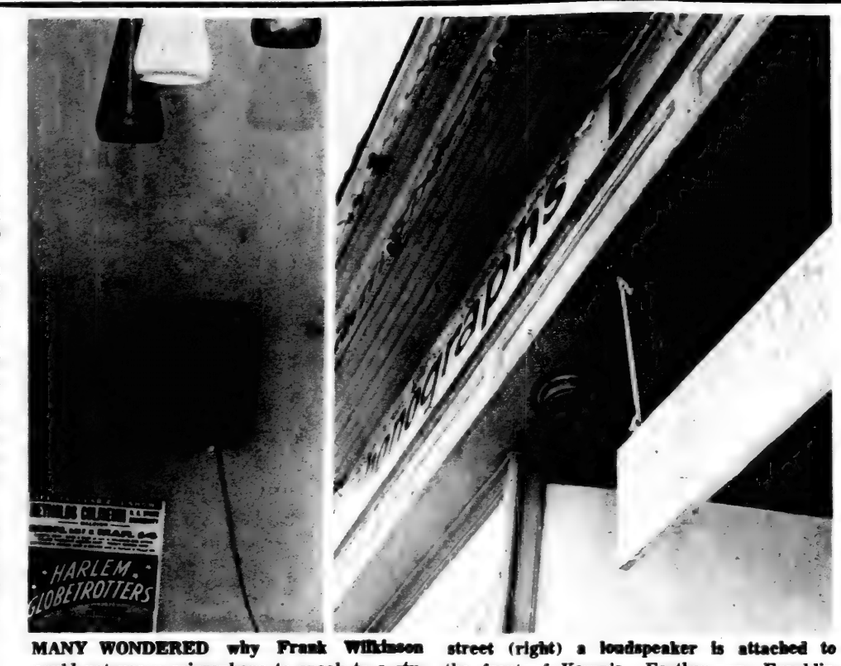
Levering feels "Operation Match" was a success last fall and that it will be even better this spring.

"Although in almost every case the five to eight dates provided by Match last fall were well worth the $3 investment, there are several reasons why the program should be a greater success this spring.

"First, Compatibility Research, Inc. of Cambridge, Mass., which directs 'Operation March,' gained invaluable experience in last fall's experimental program," Levering said.

"Second, the program is much more compact. More than 70 per cent of the matches will be in Chapel Hill, Durham or Raleigh and well over half the remainder will be in Greensboro. Lengthy drives to Queens, Salem and Winstrop will thus be eliminated."

"Third, the advent of summer after the matches have had time to meet will lead to many more casual contacts than would be possible in the hectic pace of college life."



MANY WONDERED why Frank Wilkinson could not use a microphone to speak to a student gathering March 2 while across the street (right) a loudspeaker is attached to the front of Kemp's. Farther up Franklin Street is the Tempo's loudspeaker.

When Is Illegal Legal? When No One Complains

By PAT STITH
DTH Managing Editor

The loudspeakers at the front of Chez Kemp Ltd., the Tempo Room and the Record Bar are illegal under Chapel Hill's anti-noise ordinance only if someone complains to town police.

The question of the legality of those loudspeakers came up when Student Body President Paul Dickson told students who had gathered on McCorkle Place March 2 that Frank Wilkinson could not use a microphone because a town ordinance prohibited it.

Actually, Chapel Hill's anti-noise ordinance includes almost everything but loudspeakers, so long as they are not mounted on trucks.

It singles out horns, radios, televisions, phonographs, musical instruments, soundtrucks, airplanes and the "exhaust or unnecessary racing" of a car, truck or motorcycle motor.

Though there is no specific mention of loudspeakers in the ordinance, Chapel Hill Police Chief William D. Blake says he interprets the law to include them also.

The key to enforcement of the ordinance, however, is a complaint.

"I did not tell the representative of Committee For Free Inquiry who contacted me he could not use a microphone for the Wilkinson speech," Blake said.

"I advised him of the anti-noise ordinance and told him if he set up a microphone for Wilkinson and anyone complained, we would have to shut off the speaker."

"I suppose he decided not to use one because he thought someone might complain and he did not want to have the speech interrupted," Blake said.

The ordinance, which was passed in 1939, has been amended periodically. Its purpose is to "suppress those unnecessary noises . . . that become a nuisance to the citizens of the town."

"I'm surprised somebody in Battle-Vance-Pettigrew hasn't complained so far," Blake said. "My men have asked the Tempo to cut down its speaker on several occasions but we have received no complaints."

Blake said he thought there were several areas where the anti-noise ordinance ought to be amended.

"Prohibitions against microphones, bull horns and the loud combos that play at fraternities ought to be spelled out," he said.

Carnival Friday; Intramural Field

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

What! Kathy Carmichael is going to part with her Last Blooming African Violet??

What!! Dean Carmichael's assistants have taken to mixing batches of coke and aspirin?

That's right. This Friday's Campus Chest Carnival from 1-6 p.m. will reveal what's behind all these secrets and more when 5 booths spring up on the intramural field and the pies start flying.

Carnival Co-Chairman Ellen Lentz said yesterday that this year's carnival promises to be the best ever. Refreshments and hot dog booths will provide the food, and the other booths will provide the fun.

An auction is planned Tuesday for 7 p.m. in Memorial Hall, preceded by a fashion show with clothes from the Fireside for door prizes.

This year's King and Queen will be crowned Friday afternoon near the main booth on the field. Neil Thomas, chairman of the University Party, will be the official Barker for the Carnival.

All the money from the Campus Chest goes to student-affiliated causes. This year's five groups are the World University Service, the O'Berry Center for retarded children in Goldsboro, the Murdoch Center for retarded children in Butner, the Cerebral Palsy Hospital in Durham, and the Heart Association, for a research grant at Memorial Hospital.

"We hope every student gives at least $1," Miss Lentz said. "We don't think this is too much to ask, since the Campus Chest is the only student-organized charity drive at Carolina."

A goal of $12,000 has been set. The booths are being sponsored by residence halls, sororities, and fraternities.

A combo sponsored by Graham Memorial will also be on hand Friday to provide an outlet for "refreshments," which will also be available.

Some booths will let any good-intentioned sadist dunk a pretty coed in a bucket of ice water, or plaster a Carolina Gentleman with a gooey pie. Others include rope jumping and various intellectual activities.

Tuesday's auction will be chaired by Bill Webb, amateur auctioneer. In addition to Dean of Women Catherine Carmichael's last blooming African Violet, and her assistants' coke and aspirin brew, there will also be a TV and an autographed Lettermen record up for bidding.

And for those with a tendency towards self flattery, WTVD will be taking color pictures of students Friday afternoon, which will be broadcast over the 6 p.m. news on channel 11.

Case Collection Reaches $16.56

The drive to collect money for a court case over the speaker ban controversy has yielded $16.56 so far.

A booth has been set up in Chase Cafeteria for two days to reach students going to supper there. Collections in Y Court and Leonir Hall have not yet begun.

He stated that even if enough money is not collected on campus there will be a case, since "several outsider sources" have pledged funds. One of these pledges amounts to $1,000, according to Dickson.

Communist Scholar Accepts Invitation To Speak Here

Another Communist scholar has accepted an invitation to speak on campus.

The announcement of Hanus Pabousek, a Czechoslovakian scientist was made by Dr. Hal Robinson of the Psychology Department. He said Pabousek will speak in two political science classes and a faculty-student colloquium.

Dr. Robinson said Pabousek has conducted research on the development of infants.

Earlier, Professor Vladimir Alexandrov of Moscow University accepted a similar invitation. He will speak to a political science class on March 22.

These two men will be the first known Communists to speak at UNC since the 1963 Speaker Ban Law was enacted.

Recently Communist Herbert Aptheker spoke to a large crowd of students while standing just a few feet beyond a low wall which marks the campus boundary.

Frank Wilkinson, who spoke in the same manner, was not a member of the Communist party, but was banned because he had taken the Fifth Amendment before a Congressional committee hearing.

The Carolna Forum has invited Peter Vassilev, a member of the Bulgarian Legation in Washington to speak here on March 29. Plans are not yet complete, according to George Nicholson III, chairman of the Forum.

Long Bars Women From Frat Parties

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

The University administration indefinitely suspended the Fraternity Visiting Agreement yesterday. As of now, fraternities may not entertain women guests under any circumstances either at fraternity houses or at off campus locations.

Dean of Men William G. Long said this new policy has been implemented because of the history of events concerning fraternity activities which have created public embarrassment for the fraternities and the University.

The new policy was given at a meeting yesterday afternoon by Dean Long and Dean of Student Affairs C. O. Cathey to the current and past presidents of the IFC, Lindsay Freeman and Frank Martin; the chairman of the IFC Court Jeff Parker; and chairman of the German's Club Bill Schmidt.

Under the new policy, which voids the Visiting Agreement signed on September 15, 1965, any chapter can be excluded from the general sanction on fraternities" if it can "demonstrate that on the past weekend it cannot be legitimately accused of having had a boisterous, destructive, loud or otherwise embarrassing social activity," Long said.

The action of this policy will be in force until such time as the University is assured that the individual chapters and the established workable regulations or rules covering the following matters in regard to social activities:

1. The elimination of excessive noise during and after parties.
2. The control of the conduct of members and guests during and after parties.
3. The elimination of the public consumption of alcohol.
4. The cleaning of areas of litter after the conclusion of parties.
5. The creation of effective self - policing agents within each chapter and within the Interfraternity Council.
6. The specific listing of sanctions to be applied to chapters violating the social control rules.

Political Interference Not Always Bad, Moore Says

Gov. Dan K. Moore told the UNC Faculty Club Tuesday political interference with the University is not necessarily bad.

"Not all politics is bad, nor are all politicians bad," he said.

"It is through politics that we arrive at peaceful decisions. Many of those who have worked diligently to build this great University were politicians and many of its friends today are politicians," Moore said.

"So, political influence always will bear upon public education. It is our duty to see that the right kind of politics is practiced."

Moore drew his only laugh from the faculty members when he stpped before the battery of television cameras recording the speech and said, "I think this place is bugged. However, judging by the lights I think we are aware of this."

The matter of regulating campus speakers is "now a closed issue," Moore said.

"I hope and I believe this matter will remain closed," he said.

Moore told the faculty members they are "the key to the continued excellence which the University must have."

He said students, faculty, administration and trustees must cooperate in strengthening the University but "neither can run this University" alone.

Moore said it seems all his visits to Chapel Hill have been made "when some crisis was brewing."

Cooley To Deliver YDC Keynote Address Friday

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Congressman Harold Cooley of the new Fourth District of North Carolina will deliver the keynote address at the winter meeting of the North Carolina College Federation of Young Democratic Clubs to be held here Friday and Saturday.

About 150 persons from 15 schools across the state are expected for the meeting which is the first one to be conducted here since the federation was originated here in 1961.

Tom Finan, attorney general and gubernatorial candidate of Maryland, will also address the conference at a luncheon Saturday at 12:30 p.m. at the Pines Restaurant.

"Finan has done an outstanding job as attorney general of Maryland," according to Larry Robinson, chairman of the N. C. College YDC Federation. "He is considered an expert in several fields of state government including reapportionment," he said.

Cooley's address will be at 8 p.m. Friday in Roland Parker Lounge in GM. The public is invited.

Registration for the winter rally of the federation will be from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Friday in GM and the fee will be $3.50. Jerry Rutledge, secretary of he UNC YDC, said the registration fee will cover all events involved in the conference.

He said the persons attending will be guests of Morehead Residence College Friday night following Cooley's address for a combo party in the Faculty Club Room of the Monogram Club. The party and luncheon will be opened to only the persons registered for the conference.

Tom Bolch, president of the UNC YDC, urged all members of the local YDC to participate in the conference.

"It is the first one to be here since 1961," he said, "and we are looking forward to a very good meeting."

Di-Phi, GM Hold Debate

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Several major candidates in the March 22 campus elections will debate tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

The debate is being sponsored by the Di-Phi Senate and the GM Current Affairs Committee.

"I hope the debate will enliven what has proved to be the dullest campaign in the history of the two-party system on the campus," John Greenbacker, Di-Phi president, said.

The debate will involve candidates for president and vice president and editor of The Daily Tar Heel, Greenbacker said. He said no debate by the candidates had been planned this year but several groups asked that the debate be staged.

"I would like to see it become an annual affair," he said. "It's the best way I know that the electorate can get to see the candidates for some time and present questions to them. It should be a very good test for these people and how well their platforms will stand up."

Bill Purdy, UP vice presidential candidate, said he would not be able to participate in the debate because he will have to be in legislature Thursday night to present a bill on the residence college system.

"I would be more than happy to debate," he said. "That's what we've been doing in the meetings during the campaign."

He said he felt that the debate will serve no useful purpose and that the time "could be better spent" in door-to-door campaigning "meeting people who haven't made up their minds."

Love: 55 Miles To WC

"A definition of love? Are you kidding me?"

This was the average reaction to The Daily Tar Heel's survey on love.

Journalism student Ken Saunders started it when he asked eight boys to give their definition.

His results were so interesting that we decided to pursue the question a little farther. DTH Staff Writer Carol Gallant interviewed the girls.

Here is how they defined love:

Marvin Henderson, junior, Charlotte — "Love is sex, physical and emotional drive beween two people."

Roger Norman, junior, Sanford—"Love is physical passion and as soon as you get in bed together it is over."

Gary Pope, junior, Raeford —"When two people come together under the spirit of the Lord and wish to work together for the glorification of Him, that is love."

Jack Cook, junior, Liberty —"Love is: happiness, 55 miles to Greensboro, painful, a purpose for living, contentment, a personal sharing of two people."

James Whitley, junior, Selma — "Love is that feeling that someone has for someone he likes, desires or enjoys being with."

Terry Blakeslee, freshman, Selma—"Love is an attraction one has for someone with whom he feels close for some reason or another."

Anne Spears, junior, Winston-Salem "—Love is when he cares more for you than he cares for himself, or WC."

Virginia Evans, junior, Cheraw, S. C. — "Love is Fred."

Vivie Hulton, senior, Jacksonville, —"Love is not getting mad at your fellow's car when it starts for him and not for you."

Annette Randall, junior, Newton — "Love is trying to graduate a semester early."

Betsy Cunningham, senior, Charlotte — "Love is "Bit o' Heaven" in Dairy Bar."

The Honor System Is Just A Farce

First Of A Series

The Honor System at the University of North Carolina is a farce.

The Honor system includes both the Honor Code to deal with lying, cheating and stealing and the Campus Code to deal with "gentlemanly" conduct.

According to the Undergraduate Bulletin, the Honor Code "is not just another approach to the problem of conduct; it is a part of the University's educational philosophy. Its peculiar merit is not as a system of control but as a means of teaching, and the lessons it aims to teach are honesty and self-discipline.

"The Honor Code is not something which applies only to work performed for academic credit. It pervades our whole lives as residents, as teachers, as individuals. The success of the Honor Code is essential to the good character of the University. It is the duty of all to see to its success."

The Campus Code binds each student "to conduct himself as a gentleman at all times." Furthermore, each student is bound "to see that his fellow students do likewise" — insofar as possible.

"Anyone who questions the effectiveness of this system might remember that its existence and continued effectiveness are among the reasons why the faculty and trustees have left it to the students largely to regulate student conduct," the Bulletin says.

But The Daily Tar Heel does question the effectiveness of this system.

It is not sufficiently respected.

A poll of more than 1,200 coeds was taken last semester. They were asked, "Have you ever broken a women's rule?" Almost half — 47.1 per cent — said "yes." And only half of that group turned themselves in — as required by the Honor System. Almost 66 per cent of the juniors admitted breaking a rule, and just 36.4 per cent turned themsleves in.

They were also asked, "Do you know of someone who has broken a women's rule?" Most said, "yes," but almost none turned the violator in — as required by the code.

Does this sound like an 'effective" system.

* * *

The following letter was sent to the DTH by a coed whose opinions reflect those of an ever-increasing number of students.

"Having been a 'Carolina Coed' for almost three years, I would like to add my comments to the question of women's rules. When I first came here, I was bombarded with Honor Code lectures, campus moral sermons and a myriad of rules and regulations.

"The brainwashing was most effective — no one dared commit the merest infraction of the rules. Then one night, upon returning to the dorm, I discovered that I had forgotten to sign out. I huddled terrified in my room, waiting for the 'inevitable discovery.'

"Nothing happened, and I did not turn myself in. I had broken my first Honor Council rule. Next time it wasn's so terrifying, and I progressed to signing out for a campus function for my closed study night out, when I had all intentions of going to the Rat.

"Next it was the apartment rule that fell. I almost discovered that I was not alone in my 'vile deeds'— in fact, far from it.

"Now as a junior, I have little respect for the Honor System as a whole. I think nothing of violating it myself and I would never dream of turning anyone else in for what I myself have been doing all along.

"I have often asked myself, 'What happened to the ideals and convictions that I held as a freshman?' And I have come to an answer. At home, I was not given many rules, but those that were given made sense, and were strictly enforced.

"A coed here at Carolina is given many, many rules and it is inevitable that somewhere, sometime, she will inadvertantly break a rule. Then she must decide whether or not to turn herself in. If she chooses against it, the first crack appears in her conception of the 'system.' From there on, the path is mostly downhill."

* * *

The Honor System is at best a partial failure.

Future editorials will deal with why it is and what can be done about it.

DeGaulle Indicates France Has Become A Power Again

France ceased to be a great power after the First World War. After the humiliation of 1940, she was consigned, apparently forever, to the ranks of the second - rate nations. France joined the North American Treaty Organization when it was formed in 1949 to protect Western Europe from the Russian aggression that had engulfed the eastern half of the continent.

In joining NATO, France was, in effect, putting herself under the protection of the United States and admitting she could no longer protect herself. Fourteen years of political chaos under the Fourth Republic only added to the picture of a shattered, impotent country. For a proud nation, which could look back to the mighty days of Louis XIV and Napoleon and to the heroism of World War I, this image must have been difficult to accept.

One man refused to accept it. He still clung to the belief that France could be a great power once more. When the Algerian crisis finally toppled the Fourth Republic, Charles de Gaulle returned to power with the intention of restoring France to greatness.

The General proceeded to end the war in Algeria and curtail France's runaway inflation by creating a new franc worth 100 of the old ones. He made France the dominant nation in the European Common Market and triumphantly rejected Great Britain's bid for membership. Determined to make France a first - class military power again, de Gaulle succeeds in creating his "force de frappe," an independent atomic capability.

Last week "Le Grand Charles" indicated his belief that France had made her comeback: he announced that France would withdraw from NATO when the 20-year treaty expired in 1969. DeGaulle clearly feels that France no longer needs the protection that NATO has afforded, and he is unwilling to have his country continue as a "poor relation" of the United States.

The General may be right in his calculation that NATO has outlived its usefulness for France. The alliance was formed at a time when Western Europe was weak and Russia was taking over the countries in the East. The western alliance was designed to stop the march of the Soviets, and it has succeeded.

Now, however, the chances of a Soviet invasion of Western Europe seem much more remote than in 1949. The whole situation has changed: West Germany has been rebuilt into a strong nation, and de Gaulle has done the same for France. Russia has not moved to take over a European country for many years and is having trouble with China.

NATO, is in short, now functioning in a world vastly different from the one in which it was created. Our government feels that it is no longer important enough to justify the damage it does to France's pride and sovereignty.

It is too early to tell if de Gaulle is right; but is it not too early for our government to begin working out alternatives to NATO, possibly in the form of several bi - lateral treaties.

Liberalism Today Has Degenerated; No Longer Verile And Productive

"We're left with the liberal,
Pompous and glibberal:
Filed with quotations
From Reporters and Nations."
(Charles J. Prentiss)

These four lines, part of a short poem calling for a return to the excitement of radicalism, sum up very neatly the problem of liberalism today. Though once dynamic and vibrant, liberalism as it is known today has degenerated into a stagnant body of set dogmas.

The concepts that were once considered liberal — governmental regulation of business, civil rights, social security, etc. — have passed into the middle of the road. It was the function of the liberal to examine the various problems that existed (particularly around the turn of the century and during the Great Depression) and to come up with realistic and sensible programs to relieve them.

Liberalism eventually became associated with these programs in the minds of people, but it was the process of formulating them, rather than the programs themselves, that constituted true liberalism.

Liberalism is not a set of specific doctrines. It is a way of thinking. It involves maintaining an open mind to issues, looking at things realistically, and not being adverse to progress and change.

True liberalism is found today with the pragmatists of the political center. What is called liberalism today is not that at all.

Liberalism requires open - mindedness. On this account, people who look at both sides of an issue and come out with an answer, even if it may be considered conservative, may in fact be more liberally - minded than those who shut their minds to one side and who just spout cliches from the Sociological Review or the Nation. Along these lines we might ask:

Is it liberal to maintain that what is going on in South Viet Nam is a purely indigenous civil war, even though irrefutable evidence proves that not only does North Viet Nam support the Viet Cong materially, but that there are whole divisions of Northern regulars fighting in the South?

Is it liberalism to automatically condemn the views and impugn the motives of those with whom one disagrees, as is often the case?

Is it liberalism to reject the possiblity that one may be wrong?

Liberalism requires realistic thinking. Wishing that something were so does not make it that way. In order to solve a problem one must understand its true nature. One must be alert to the hard realities of the world and realize that unfortunately there are people who oppose us who do not care to enter into "dialog" and let themselves be talked out of their ambitions.

Therefore, is it liberalis mto think that if the United States would curtail its activities and withdraw its strength from around the world that suddenly peace and harmony would spring into being?

Is it realistic to think that if the United States would renounce its commitments and pull out of places as soon as some group demanded it, that a serene quiet would descend upon the earth and three billion people would happily spend the rest of their unhindered lives glorifying in the joys of a global Great Society?

Make no mistake about it: the one and only factor that has preserved freedom and democracy in the world in the last 20 years has been, and continues to be, the armed might of the United States of America.

Is it liberalism to think that even though the war in Viet Nam was going on before the United States got involved in it, if we were now to pull out it would all end?

Is it liberalism to violently condemn the use of nonlethal tear gas against the enemy, but to remain silent when a terrorist bomb destroys innocent people in restaurants, transportation terminals, hotels, and markets?

In the late 1930's and early '40's, liberals were the foremost advocates of eliminating the Nazi and Fascist aggression and tyranny in order to preserve human freedom and to "make the world finally safe for democracy". Is it then, liberalism to condemn the attempt to control similar aggression today?

Liberals are expected to be the most dedicated believers in civil liberties and democracy. But is it liberalism to ignore the fact that if the United States were to withdraw from Southeast Asia, thus allowing the enemy to have it, we would be condemning the people of that area to live under Asia communism, which is the most inhuman, horrible tyranny in history?

These examples of "liberal" softheadedness show how today's liberals fail in the two qualities requisite for true liberalism: open - mindedness and realistic thinking. It is on the domestic scene that the proof of liberalism's degeneracy into set dogmas is found.

Realizing that some groups of people are not as well off as they would wish them, but no longer capable of originating practical programs, today's liberals resort to the extreme application of older ideas. Foremost among these is the belief that if the government doles out enough money something good is bound to happen sooner or later.

Pump - priming is, of course, a perfectly sensible idea; especially in times of great distress, such as existed in the 1930's. However, I wonder about the wisdom of officials who fail to see that many who have been helped for years by governmental money are no better off than they ever were, and that many are content to live on their welfare checks and are resentful if they are a day late. Why is the emphasis still on money, rather than the far more useful educational and vocational training and retraining?

If liberalism implies solving problems with solutions that are sensible and practical, I wonder if it is liberalism to encourage illegitimacy among the poor by increasing the size of the mother's welfare check with every happy event, and yet to be reluctant to operate birth - control programs which are so obviously needed.

Is it liberalism to propose actually paying the rent for people with low incomes? Is it really liberal to talk about guaranteeing every person in this country a minimum yearly income to be paid them by the government? Is there to be no limit? The joke that it is getting more profitable to be poor than to be a working member of them middle class is no longer very funny.

Thus we have the sad plight of liberalism today. We owe the liberals much, for their past contributions have become a main part of the American way of life. But I am forced to conclude that liberalism is an anemic force at present.

No longer virile or productive of practical ideas, it relies more and more on wishful thinking, softheaded notions, and the belief that old solutions will resolve new problems if they are only allowed to be pursued to their furthest extensions. If liberalism is not to become a complete anachronism, it had better take a long, hard look at itself.

* * *

Before anyone jumps to conclusions about where I stand, be advised that next I take on the conservatives and the right-wingers.

Beware Of Reds

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Herbert Aptheker is a Communist. He is the enemy. He and the rest of the godless Communist have dedicated their lives to taking over the United States, not by war but by deceit, infiltration and skillful propaganda. Their principal targets are students.

Under the disguise of "freedom of speech" they wish to set the student's wrath against our country and its policies. If they succeed in converting one student on a campus to communism, they feel their speaking engagement has not been in vain.

Before a group of uninformed and misled students try to show off and "sue the government" of our state, they had better get hold of themselves and remember that even though Aptheker does have immunity under our Constitution to speak, what he has to say is all Comunist propaganda.

For example, he urges us to get out of Viet Nam and for one million people to march on Washington in protest. Of course, this would be advantageous for the Communists for propaganda if nothing else. His comparison of President Johnson and Hitler is completely absurd.

The best that could happen to the U. S. is for all Communists and Communist sympathizers to be deported from the country. Russia doesn't allow Americans in their country to form a political party similar to the American Communist party here in this country. Recently an American was murdered by the Communists for having wandered across the Russian border.

When are we going to wake up to what is going on? The speaker ban law is designed to keep the Aptheker - type polution away from our campuses.

I hope the students of my alma mater of Chapel Hill and on other campuses will realize that they are free to protest all they want, but in favoring Communist speakers and tending to agree and protest with them, these students are in fact Communist dupes themselves.

Sincerely,
Henry Harriss

Getting Back At Old Faunts

Throughout all this mess concerning Fauntleroy's conspiracy to cheat one thing is very evident. The master of "---" has never denied that he did in fact think about cheating if one of his predictions didn't come out right.

Well, the other morning I asked why he didn't deny it since he is so upset over the whole thing. "I can't deny it," he said. "It's true."

So there you have it.

Sabastion is the hottest contender for the job. I guess Faunts will be turned out to pasture—he's all folded up.

It Surely Has

Feet Tell The Motto Of The Quartet: Play Informally

Bare Feet Were Tapping Sunday Afternoon

Bare feet wiggled in the grass.

Other feet tapped out a sprightly rhythm as the bluegrass music lilted out over the north campus.

The four boys stood in a circle facing each other. They didn't sing, but they sure could play.

The Sunday afternoon crowd that came to listen sat in the grass, under trees, staring upwards at the four boys who came to play while the long cool shadows stretched across the campus.

"How 'bout 'Foggy Mountain Breakdown,'" says the bare foot mandolin player.

"Wait a minute, the tune'll come to me," said the banjo player who was wearing a plaid shirt and a pair of heavy engineer's boots. He fingered the wood inlay keyboard. Then the tune came back in his mind. His face cleared and then assumed a happy expression as the five string sprang to life.

The guitar player thumped out steady booming chords. He said very little.

Even quieter than he was the slender fiddler. A Carolina boy, Alan McCanless has fingers that rip lickety-split up and down the key board of the old fiddle.

The group of instrumentalists are all from State except for McCanless.

None of them did any singing. They played the songs of the country folk with an ernestness apparently uninfluenced by commercial folk rock.

While playing they often talked to one another. A conversation ran like this.

"This is a good piece for a banjer."

"For a what?"

"For a banjer. 'Depends on where you are from in the South how you say that. Some folks say bonjer, or banger, or even banner.

Regardless of how these boys pronounced the word banjo, they were highly enjoyed by those who sat in the growing dusk.

Please don't zlupf Sprite. It makes plenty of noise all by itself.

Sprite, you recall, is the soft drink that's so tart and tingling, we just couldn't keep it quiet.

Flip its lid and it really flips. Bubbling, fizzing, gurgling, hissing and carrying on all over the place.

An almost excessively lively drink.

Hence, to zlupf is to err.

What is zlupfing?

Zlupfing is to drinking what smacking one's lips is to eating.

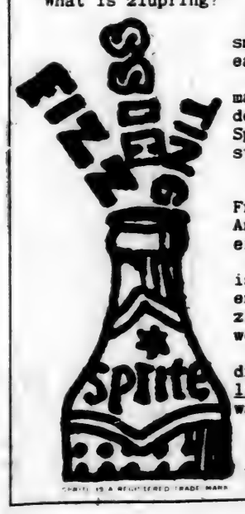
It's the staccato buzz you make when draining the last few deliciously tangy drops of Sprite from the bottle with a straw.

Zzzzzlllupf!

It's completely uncalled for. Frowned upon in polite society. And not appreciated on campus either.

But. If zlupfing Sprite is absolutely essential to your enjoyment; if a good healthy zlupf is your idea of heaven, well...all right.

But have a heart. With a drink as noisy as Sprite, a little zlupf goes a long, long way.



SPRITE. SO TART AND TINGLING, WE JUST COULDN'T KEEP IT QUIET.

Gemini Shot Is Today

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — The Gemini 8 astronauts got a clear cut go - ahead yesterday for a blast - off today into a three - day adventure that will feature a game of tag between two spacecraft and a spacewalking man.

"We have high expectations we'll be able to launch on time," reported William C. Schneider, Gemini Mission Director. The worldwide recovery force was altered to stand by for the launching.

The definite word to go ahead came as technicians turned to the intermediate countdown, and Command Pilot Neil Armstrong and spacewalker David Scott got a clear-skies forecast from weathermen.

"The only small cloud on the horizon," Schneider said, "is with one of the experiments aboard the spacecraft." A powerful television eye that Armstrong will use to search out nighttime details of earth by faint moonlight is showing some slowness in warming up.

Spacecraft trouble - shooters won their race with the clock in making safety checks on the spacecraft air conditioning system.

Technicians worked through the night installing a borrowed life - support system in the Gemini 8 spacecraft after they found a fault in the original unit that supplies oxygen and regulates temperature and humidity during flight.

They yanked the replacement system out of the Gemini 9 spacecraft that is due for flight in May. But such a major change so close to the final countdown worried officials who had to rush safety checks on the new system.

Already delayed 24 hours by a combination of troubles, the doubleheader lauching hung on an uncertain schedule most of the day before the final countdown was to start. But space officials pushed ahead.

At 10 a.m. (EST) today, a 104 - foot Atlas rocket will fire an unmanned Agena target spacecraft into a circular orbit 185 miles high.

Then at 11:41 a.m., Armstrong and Scott will blast off in pursuit on a 3 - day trek through the skies. They link up with the 26 1-2 - foot Agena target some six and a half hours and 105,000 miles after takeoff.

It will be the first time one spacecraft hooks up to another in orbital flight.

Money For Viet Nam War Commands House Attention

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress sent to President Johnson yesterday the tax bill he asked, raising $6 billion over the next 15 months to help finance the Vietnamese war.

The Senate passed the measure after House passage earlier in the afternoon. The House tally was 288 to 102.

Thus the legislators met March 15 deadline for final Congressional action set by the President.

Johnson said in submitting the bill that the new revenue was essential to bring close to balance his budget for the new financial year starting July 1.

"It is my greatest wish to some day stand here and sign another bill — one that is designed to bring progress and fullfillment to a Southeast Asia which is at peace with itself and also at peace with the rest of the world."

As the House started debate on the defense appropriation, Rep. Melvin R. Laird of Wisconsin—Chairman for the Republican Conference of GOP House Members — accused the Johnson administration of playing politics with Viet Nam.

Laird said a State Department document dealing with the legality of U. S. participation in the defense of Viet Nam "chose to distort history." It suggests, he said, that the Johnson administration "had nothing at all to do with any commitment to Viet Nam" and that U. S. involvement was made necessary by pledges of President Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy.

Harold Wilson Assails France's NATO Withdrawal

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson yesterday assailed President Charles de Gaulle's planned withdrawal of French forces from the integrated military command of the North Atlantic Alliance. At the same time, Britain charged the move is illegal.

But in a letter to the French leader, unyielding in its criticism, Wilson was creaful to slam no door to future military cooperation between France and her 14 NATO partners. De Gaulle has offered to discuss new arrangements for such cooperation.

The accusation that France would be acting illegally by pulling out of NATO's military network came from Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart.

Opening a two-day ministerial meeting of the seven-nation Western European Union (WEU), Stewart said France's walkout contravenes a 1954 series of agreements between the allies. These created the European Union in its presnt form, set the basis for West German independence and defined the limits of a German rearmament program. One of its provisions bound the signatories, including France, to assign to NATO command certain forces in mainland Europe not wanted for national purposes.

Jean De Broglie, speaking for France, tersely met the onslaught by saying:

"France's desire for changes in NATO is as great as her desire that the treaty itself (in its political context) should endure."

Indian Army Deployed To Stop Language Riots

NEW DELHI (AP) Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government took a tough stand on northern India's language riots yesterday and deployed army units to stamp out looting and arson.

Soldiers moved into the Punjab city of Ludhiana, 150 miles northwest of New Delhi, with orders to shoot on sight anyone attacking government railroads or buildings.

Meanwhile Mrs. Gandhi easily survived a censure vote introduced in parliament on the grounds that her government was incompetent in hendling the language riots that swept parts of New Delhi Monday.

New Delhi was calm, although some sections of the old city were under strict curfew to prevent renewed Hindu - Sikh clashes

Mrs. Gandhi's government came under attack from many sides because of its decision to partition the Punjab into two language states, one featuring Punjabi, the language of the Sikhs, and the other Hindi.

J. B. Kripalani, an independent member of parliament and a leading opposition voice in India, declared during the debate on the censure motion:

"It is our duty to ring the bell of revolt against this govternment and its policies."

Mrs. Gandhi was reported to be considering imposing President's Rule in the Punjab if the situation worsens. This would mean the central emergency powers, putting aside the state government, and direct all Punjabi affairs.

Indonesions Show Support Of New Suharto Regime

SINGAPORE (AP) — A million persons rallied in Jakarta yesterday in support of Lt. Gen. Suharto's regime but speakers demanded he rid the cabinet of Communists, said a broadcast from the Indonesian capital.

After the rally, anti-Communist students rode around Jakarta in trucks shouting "Hang Subandrio" — the Pro-Peking Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister. The rally was staged by eight anti-Communist parties.

Travelers arriving from Jakarta said the students gave the new regime 48 hours to announce a new cabinet and to sack Subandrio, but this could not be confirmed by informed sources here.

These sources said, however, anti-Communist students may stage new demonstrations to try to force the army to deal with Subandrio.

The students are dissatisifed by the new military regime's apparent reluctance to take stern measures against Subandrio. Their violent demonstrations against Subandrio and President Sukarno paved the way for the armed forces takeover Saturday.

The sources added that Subandrio is still under House arrest in Sukarno's summer palace at Bogor, 40 miles south of Jakarta and 16 other Communist and pro-Communist cabinet ministers are also being detained by the army.

They said it was likely Subandrio will be dropped from a new 25-man cabinet Suharto, Indonesia's new strongman, is planning.

The sources said the students want the new military regime to take immediate action against Subandrio.

"They want to score a knockout victory," one source said. "But the generals are playing it much cooler. They want to do everything in a legal, constitutional way — they want to get rid of Subandrio but they don't want to make it look as if they are adopting ruthless methods.

"The students are afraid that unless the military does adopt ruthless methods Subandrio might slip out from under their grasp."

One source said the new regime does not want a civil war and "this is why they are going through the pretense of keeping Sukarno on as head of state."

Air Action Dominant In Viet Nam

SAIGON (AP) — American bombers saturated a Communist staging area just south of the border yesterday in the wake of strikes adjudged to have destroyed 50 to 80 per cent of the buildings at two military barracks north of the border.

U. S. Air Force F4 Phantoms and F105 Thunderchiefs staged the barracks-busting attacks at My Duc and Phu Qui Monday. A fleet of B52 stratofortresses from Guam followed up on the South side of the 17th parallel, hammering at a wooded assembly center for men and supplies 60 miles northwest of Hue.

Briefing officers said North Vietnamese gunners downed two planes Monday. The first to go down was a U. S. Air Force Phantom, whose two crewmen bailed out off the coast 110 miles south of Hanoi. The other was a Navy Albatross, a twin-engine amphibian, was the first of its kind to be lost from enemy action in Viet Nam. It was hit by shells from Red mortars on the shore, two miles away. One of the Albatross' six crewmen was killed and another was listed as missing and presumed dead. A carrier-based helicopter picked up all the other Americans involved.

The men from the phantom were Maj. James M. Peerson, 34, of Burlington, N. C., and Capt. Lynwood C. Bryant, 28, of Jackson, Mich.

Negro Appointed Deputy By Alabama Sheriff

EUTAW, Ala.—(AP) — Appointment of Greene County's first Negro deputy sheriff was lauded by white leaders and condemned by civil rights forces yesterday.

The deputy, wealthy cattleman Howard Brown, said he was well received on his first day.

"I have had several congratulatory calls from both white and colored," the 45 - year - old rancher said. "And when I walked down the street this morning, several whites stopped me and shook hands."

Brown was hired Monday by Sheriff William E. Lee. The appointment was approved by the county commissioners, the probate judge, and the mayor. He is one of the few negro law enforcement officers in the state.

The sheriff said there would be no restrictions on Brown's official functions.

"He'll make arrests just like the other deputy (a white man) I've got," Lee said.

Asked why he took the job, Brown replied:

"One of the reasons is that Mr. Lee asked me to be one of his deputies. The other is that I wanted to help the county any way I can. I was not looking for a job."

The sheriff agreed that Brown had little need for the $250 a month post. The deputy owns about 1,700 acres of land and runs about 400 head of cattle, Lee said.

"He lives in a $35,000 pink house here in town and drives a pink buick," he sheriff said.

Lee said that all of the reaction he has received has been highly favorable.

County Prosecutor Ralph Banks agreed.

"I am very pleased," Banks said. "He is a very able man and I have known him all my life practically. I know he has been accepted by the community. We have made a wise choice."

The Rev. T. E. Gilmore, a Negro competing with Lee for Democratic nomination as Sheriff in the May 3 primary, Called Brown's appointment "a political trick."

"I don't think this Negro who has been hired is a Negro that most of the Negroes would have put up or wanted for a sheriff's deputy," Gilmore said.

"I think he has done it just because I have entered the race." Mrs. T. J. Kirksey, another Negro leader, said Brown's appointment "isn't satisfactory." She claimed that Brown "would do anything they tell him to do. They can manipulate and control him."

She predicted that the appointment would split the negro vote in the primary.

Rupp's Small Cats Feature Speed, Hustle, Quickness

EDITOR'S NOTE — DTH staffer Keith Drum is offering a three-part story on this year's NCAA college basketball finals beginning Friday night in College Park, Md. Today, the Wildcats of Kentudy is the subject. Tomorrow comes Texas Western.

By KEITH DRUM

A 26-1 record, a coach with 747 victories, 22 league titles, and four previous NCAA crowns face the Duke Blue Devils this Friday night at College Park, Maryland.

The Kentucky Wildcats, a team built on speed, quickness, hustle and awesome shooting accuracy, is Duke's semifinal opponent. Six times this season "Rupp's Runts" hit the century mark, with a high of 115 against Auburn. Adolph Rupp's five starters all average double figures.

Tommy Kron, 6'5 senior guard, is the team's defensive stalwart. Should Kentucky go man-to-man against Duke, Kron will likely draw All-American Jack Marin. Even in Kentucky's various zones, Kron is the key man. No slouch on offense, Kron averaged 10.5 during the regular season.

Larry Conley, 6'3 senior forward, is the quarterback of the Wildcats. His forte is playmaking and he leads the team with six assists per contest. Many coaches feel stopping Conley humbles the Wildcats. St. Louis University keyed their defense toward Conley and UK barely escaped defeat. A good rebounder and scorer (11.9), Conley has been selected for the East-West basketball game.

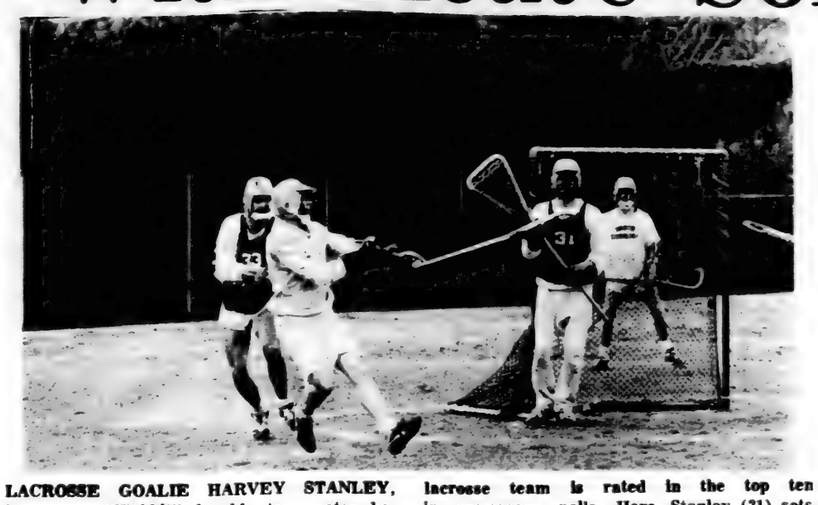
The center post is manned by 6'5, 230 sophomore Thad "Bear" Jaracz. A 13.6 scorer, strong rebounder and defender, Jaracz has keyed many Kentucky victories. He connected on three straight baskets late in the second half of the Michigan game to extinguish the Wolverines. He possesses a good hook shot and fine moves under the basket. All - American Clyde Lee of Vanderbilt stated, "Jaracz has meant the difference between a good Kentucky team and a great one."

Louie Dampier, 6'0 junior guard, ended the season with a 20.8 average. A tremendous outside shooter, Dampier is especially tough in important games. Against highly-ranked Vanderbilt, Dampier exploded for 42 points, his career high. His 34 points against Dayton ended their NCAA dreams. Last season Dampier set the Kentucky field-goal percentage record at .515. This season he did it again, .525.

The most important and consistent Wildcat is junior forward Pat Riley, 6'3. A 21.9 scorer during the regular season, he garnered 29 on successive evenings at Iowa City. He has all the moves required of a great offensive player. Riley is the leading Kentucky rebounder and also jumps center. As opposed to Dampier, consistency is Riley's trademark. He is rarely over 30 or under 20 in his point total.

Kentucky as a team shot just under 50 percent and despite their size out-rebounded most of their opponents. They possess excellent team spirit, confidence, and pride. Most of all, they have a winning tradition built by a winning coach, Adolph Rupp.

Duke's Verga Hospitalized With 'Acute Sore Throat



LACROSSE GOALIE HARVEY STANLEY, known as "Wabbit" by his teammates because of his quickness in guarding the goal, is one of the major reasons this year's UNC lacrosse team is rated in the top ten in pre-season polls. Here, Stanley (31) sets himself to block a scoring attempt.

Vic Bubas Hopes He Will Be Ready

DURHAM (AP) — Duke high scorer Bob Verga is hospitalized with a throat ailment, but Blue Devil Coach Vic Bubas is hopeful he will be able to play against top-ranked Kentucky in the NCAA basketball semifinals Friday.

"Verga is a strong boy physically and naturally we're hoping he'll come around by Friday night," Bubas told a news conference Tuesday.

Bubas said Verga, a 6-foot junior guard from Sea Girt, N. J., had cold chills Monday morning and entered the hospital with a termperature of 101.6.

"Dr. Elbert Persons said he spent a very rugged night," Bubas said, "and this morning (Tuesday) his termperature was up to 103.

"I'll be very honest with you, I'm very much concerned over his condition," Bubas added.

Dr. Persons, student health director at Duke University, described Verga's ailment as "an acute sore throat that is behaving differently from a strep throat."

First reports said Verga, who led the Atlantic Coast Conference champions with a 19.2 scoring average this season, had a strep throat infection.

"The next 24 hours will be critical ones," Bubas said, "and we'll just have to wait and see how he responds to treatment."

Bubas indicated plans were going ahead to include Verga on Thursday morning's charter plane trip to College Park, Md.

If Verga is unable to play, Bubas said sophomore Ronnie Wendelin will replace him in the starting lineup.

"He has filled in nicely for us in starting roles a couple of times and we have every confidence in his ability," Bubas said.

Wendelin replaced Verga, benched for disciplinary reasons, in two games during the regular season and Duke won both.

Verga was voted the most valuable player in the NCAA Eastern Regionals last weekend at Raleigh, N. C. He scored 43 points in leading Duke to victories over St. Joseph's and Syracuse to gain a spot in the national finals.

Goalie Harvey Stanley Boosts Lacrosse Hopes

By JIM FIELDS

Carolina's 1966 lacrosse team opens its season Monday against Yale with high hopes for having a real successful year.

One of the reasons for their high hopes is goalie Harvey Stanley. Last year Stanley was one of the finest in the country but this year he could well be the best.

"Harvey had the unfortunate privilege of being one of many fine goalies in the country last year," said coach Connie Steele. "But this year he should be the best and will certainly be the best in this area again."

Harvey, along with Jeff Parker who made third team All - American last year, will be the co-captains of the year's team.

"Harvey is the best goalie I've ever seen," Parker said yesterday. "He's a great leader on defesnse and he's very versatile and fast. We've given him the nickname of "Wabbit" because he's so quick when he's guarding the goal."

"I'm really looking forward to this season," said Harvey. "We've (the team) have had some unfortunate breaks lately in that some key players have been sick or injured, but things seem to be going our way now. Everyone on the team is looking forward to the opening of the season next week.

"Our opening game against Yale will be a real tough one. They have one of the finest teams in the East and are real strong on attack. Of course, like everyone on the team, I'm looking forward to the Maryland and Virginia games with high hopes.

"Our defense has really been improving lately and that helps me an awful lot. I think much of the credit for our improved defense goes to John Ward, Jim Bischoff and Rick Inderfurth."

Harvey has been playing lacrosse since he was in the fifth grade. He first started out on attack but soon moved to goalie where he has been every since. When Harvey first came to Carolina, there was not a lacrosse team. But thanks to Harvey and several more boys who were extremely interested in the game, it has become Carolina's fastest growing spectator sport in the last four years and now ranks fourth behind football, basketball and baseball.

The team's first game is Monday afternoon against Yale and will be played on the Navy Field starting at 3 p.m.

Scoring Pairs Meet Friday

By DICK BRUSIE

DURHAM — 2,175 points! That's the prolific production of Duke's Jack Marin and Bob Verga and Pat Riley and Louie Dampier of Kentucky, four of the principles in Friday night's NCAA semifinal skirmish at College Park, Md.

The eyes of 13,000 spectators will be on this talented quartet when No. 2 Duke, ranked No. 1 for eight weeks this past season, tackles the presently top-rated Wildcats.

Marin, a senior, has scored 506 points in 28 contests, an 18.1 per game average. Verga has tallied an even 500 in 26 appearances for a mark of 19.2.

Riley and Dampier have combined for 1,169 points with the former netting 599. They're the first pair of Wildcats ever to average more than 20 points per game in a single season.

Marin and Verga were All-America team selections by both AP and UPI. Ditto for Dampier and Riley. Marin and Riley were named to the 10 man LOOK Magazine All-America quintet.

Tar Heels, Pirates Begin Area Baseball Schedules

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina's baseball team kicks off the Atlantic Coast Conference season Friday when the Tar Heels visit East Carolina College for a non-league battle.

The North Carolina-East Carolina contest is the only baseball game scheduled this week. However, conference teams will play 23 games next week as the season gets into full swing.

The Tar Heels have 12 lettermen back from the 1965 team that won 14 games and lost 15. Coach Walter Rabb, now in his 10th season, will have among his returnees Danny Talbott, who hit .362 last spring—second best mark in the ACC.

North Carolina finished in a three-way tie for fifth place in the conference a year ago, winning six and losing eight to ACC foes.

Maryland, the defending conference champion, has 13 lettermen back from last year's club that won 16 and lost 9 over-all and was 10-4 in the conference.

Among the returning lettermen at Maryland is Larry Davis, who hit .295 for the Terps a year ago.

Clemson, which finished second in the conference last year with a 9-5 league record and 18-10-2 over-all mark. Coach Bill Wilhelm, in his 9th year as Clemson's baseball coach, has Rusty Adkins back for another year. Adkins, one of 12 lettermen, led the conference in batting in 1965 with a .444 average.

South Carolina, which finished in a two-way tie with Wake Forest for No. 3, has a new coach—Dick Weldon. In his first season at the South Carolina helm, Weldon will have 13 lettermen.

Among the returnees from last year's team, which compiled an over-all record of 16-23 and 7-7 conference mark, are veteran catcher Dan Soarpa, second baseman Joe Tonelli and left-handed pitcher Loveard McMichael.

Wake Forest, which was 14-15 over-all, but 7-7 in the conference, has 10 lettermen back. Coach Jack Stallings veterans included catcher Bill Molloy, who hit .280 in 1965.

Elsewhere in the conference:

North Carolina State, 10-10 over-all and 6-8 in the conference, has six lettermen returning. Coach Vic Sorrell, in his 21st season as leader of the Wolfpack baseball team, has among his veterans Jerry Price, a junior catcher from Greensboro who hit .323 last season.

Virginia, 10-13 over-all and 6-8 in the conference, has eight lettermen back.

Phil Rodgers Leads In PGA Prize Money

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Phil Rodgers' $20,000 first prize money in the Doral Open Golf Tournament rocketed him from 46th spot to the top in official PGA winnings this year.

Rodgers, who now has $22,377 in official winnings and $27,381 in total earnings, knocked Arnold Palmer out of the top spot for the first time this year. Palmer follows with $18,332 in official winnings but still leads in total earnings with $36,490.

Gay Brewer, who last week jumped from virtually nowhere to second place by winning the Pensacola Open, dropped to third place this week with $14,377 in official winnings and $18,313 total.

The standings of the top ten money winners, with official and total winnings, were released Monday by PGA headquarters.

Other included Joe Campbell, $13,107, $16,392; Frank Beard $12,815, $14,169; Jay Dolan $11,601, $11,601; Billy Casper, $10,890, $15,346; George Archer, 10,647, $12,342; Ken Venturi, $10,505, $11,080, and Kermit Zarley, $10,287, $10,773.

Trojans Take Scott College Crown With 51-32 Victory

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

The Teague Trojans, behind the 17 points of Dave Adeimy, won the Scott College championship in intramural basketball Monday by defeating the Teague Totalers, 51-32. Jerry Brake chipped in with 13 points and John Harper 12. Bill Lawrence had 13 and Harris Prevost 11 for the Totalers. The Trojans held a slim 29-27 halftime lead, but pulled away in the second half. They clinched a spot in the residence hall playoffs.

The Morrison I Inebriates moved to the finals of the Morrison College tournament by beating the Morrison A Rebels, 51-37. Steve Webster led the scoring with 16 points while Bill Jones added 13 and Junior Johnson 12. Ed Lackey scored 12 for the Rebels.

The Graham Bells moved into the finals of the Morehead College tournament with a convincing 58-37 romp over the Everett Rogah. Steve Balcolm popped in 23 points and Lee Clower 13 to pace the Bells. Tommy Dail had 16 and Johnny Biddle 10 for the Rogah.

Twelve points each by Bill Field and Don Richards gave the Connor Animals the Connor area championship over the Vikings, 43-21. Bill Young scored 14 of the 21 Viking points. The Animal defense limited the Vikings to just six field goals, four by Young and two by Jim Taylor.

Sigma Nu A moved into the second round of the fraternity division tournament by shading Pi Kappa Phi No. 1, 44-40. Higgins has 16 points, 10 at the free throw line, to lead Sigma Nu. Dozier had 12 for Pi Kap Phi.

Law II Blue edged Dental School A, 54-41. Bill Barr scored 14 points, Gene Sigmon 15 and Jerry Trammall 11 for the lawyers. Jim Hudock pumped in 11 for the dentists and Hedgecoe added 10 more. Law Blue had a slim 30-26 halftime lead and withstood a second-half Dental School rally to win. The victory puts them into the graduate division tournament.

Med School Blue downed Law Orange II, 35-27. Bill Jarman hit 12 Med points, with eight coming at the foul stripe. Seven other players shared the rest of the scoring. Spivey had 11 for Law Orange.

Golfers Down Davidson, 10-8

Steve Robbins from Carolina beat George Brewer 3-2. Robbins birdied 14, 15, and 16 to card a 70 while Brewer shot a 76.

Carolina's John Baldwin beat Doug McKeever of Davidson 2-1. He shot a 72 and McKeever, 75.

Dick Van Leuvan downed Walter Daniels of Davidson 3-0 with a 75 score to 77 for Daniels.

Patrick Just 'Big Legend' Says Prof

DETROIT (AP) — An Irish scholar who refuses to wear green on St. Patrick's Day said today the famous saint, as we know him, "is a big legend."

Dr. John Mahoney, 37, a University of Detroit professor two generations removed from counties Cork and Kerry, said "there were two Patricks."

"Of course, I'd be cautious about saying this in a Dublin pub," Mahoney added.

Mahoney, an authority on Irish folklore, history and legends, reads and writes the ancient languages of the Celts, Irish, Welsh, Cornish, Bretons and inhabitants of the Isle of Man.

"St. Patrick would have needed a life span of 125 years to accomplish what the records indicate," said Mahoney. "We have documents of another Patrick far too early for the St. Patrick we now celebrate.

"The first probably did part of the work we credit to St. Patrick."

Mahoney believes the first Patrick was a man named Palladius, later known by his second name, Uatricius, or Patrick.

Pope Celestine sent Palladius to combat heresy in Ireland in 431, Mahoney said. Irish annals note the arrival of a Patrick in 432, and Mahoney said "this was Palladius."

Two date are reported for the death of St. Patrick, 461 and 493. The saint's birth date is not known.

Mahoney believes it was Palladius who died in 461, and that St. Patrick took up his work.

The theory of the two Patricks has been presented to academic circles by T. F. O'Rahilly, a former scholar at the Dublin Institute for Advanced Studies, and by prof. James Carney of the Dublin Institute, a friend of Mahoney.

All this uncertainty about the saint credited with bringing Christianity to Ireland doesn't affect Mahoney's plans to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

"My wife generally bakes a greden shamrock cake," he said.

And the whole Mahoney family — his French - Irish wife and four children—"will have a sing around the house."

THE GREEN GLENS, from California, Connecticutt and Kentucky, write and sing their own songs in the musical "Sing-Out '66." They are a part of the 130 member cast which will appear here on Monday. The Quartet will be at McCorkle Place at noon and at Carmichael Auditorium at 8 p.m. The show is free.

Frosh To Present Talent Show

Singing elephants? Imported dancing llamas? A mermaid sawed in half before your very eyes?

That's right They'll all be at the Freshman Talent Show tomorrow night at 8 in Memorial Hall.

Twelve student acts, including folk singers, pop-singers, pianists, a short dramatic sketch and combos, will perform.

Tickets are on sale at Y-Court and Lenoir for 50 cents. They are the same price at the door.

Lou Heckler, chief announcer of radio station WUNC-FM, will emcee the show.

Wyatt Funeral

Funeral services for UNC coed Linda Carroll Wyatt, killed Saturday in a motorcycle accident, will be held tomorrow in Cynwyd, Penn.

Miss Wyatt, a 21-year-old elementary education major from Norbreth, Penn., died at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Hospital Saturday from head injuries.

Drive of the motorcycle, Jeffrey Russell Hackman, a UNC senior, was charged with manslaughter and reckless driving. He has been released under a $1,000 bond to appear in Chapel Hill Recorders Court March 25.

Advisor Awards

Resident Advisors in Morehead Residence College were given awards Monday night for their service to students in the college.

Jim Carpenter, a junior living in Stacy, was given a trophy designating him as "Best Senator of the Year."

The awards were presented at a banquet in Bullock's Bar-B-Que. Around 25 senators, officers, head-resident advisors and resident advisors attended the party.

Morehead Governor Tim Haithcock said the purpose of the meeting was "to promote unity between the resident advisors and student government in the area."

Woods Clearing

Saturday is the big day for that little patch of woods between Kenan Stadium and Morrison College.

Beginning around 1 p.m. residents of Nurses Dorm and Morrison will perform a face lifting for the whole area. Hopefully, by the end of the day, the woods will be a raked, trimmed and cleaned picnic area.

Bill Ross, director of grounds, has provided picnic tables to be placed in the park.

Morrison executive secretary Gary Boggs said grills for fireplaces would be put in the park later.

Boggs said, "It will not only serve Morrison and Nurses, but in the fall it will be available for use after football ames."

The park is being prepared in time for an "Old Fashioned Week End" to be held April 23.

No Bad Checks

The Student Credit Commission did not meet this week because no checks were turned over to it by either Lenoir Hall or the Dairy Bar.

Chairman Ralph Grosswald said a meeting was planned for next Monday or "some other afternoon" next week.

The Dairy Bar agreed last week to turn over its worthless checks to the commission. Lenoir Hall has been doing so for several weeks. Three checks have been handled by the commission for Lenoir.

Torch Light Parade

A "torch-light march" for University Party candidates Teddy O'Toole and Bill Purdy will start tonight after platfor mspeeches at Maverick House.

The march from Craige to Cobb is sponsored by UP and by Craige, where O'Toole has lived for three years.

Dave Kiel, vice-chairman of UP said the march was planned to draw support for O'Toole and Purdy.

It will begin around 8:30 outside Craige and proceed to campus by way of Scott College and Winston Hall.

One Camera Missing

The lousy bum who lifted a camera from The Daily Tar Heel offices in GM over the weekend has 24 hours to return it.

Owner Andy Myers says he has people looking for the camera and every pawn shop in the area has been alerted. If anyone knows the whereabouts of the 35mm Anscoset, electric eye, f2.8 lens camera please contact the DTH.

No questions will be asked if the camera is returned within 24 hours.

Nicholson Wins Nursing Grant

Mrs. Sally Win Nicholson, an instructor at the University of North Carolina School of Nursing has been awarded the Bixler Scholarship in Nursing for 1966-67.

The award was made by the Regional Committee on Graduate Education in Research in Nursing of the Southern Regional Education Board upon the recommendation of Dr. Elizabeth L. Kemble, dean of the UNC nursing school.

The scholarship is valued at $3,600.

Mrs. Nicholson has been accepted for study toward a doctoral degree at the University of Maryland.

UNC Will Get Special Organ For Hill Hall

By BEAUHAMP CARR
Special to the DTH

A pipe organ to bring back the music of Bach will be built by next fall for UNC's Music Department in Hill Hall, according to Chairman of Organ Instruction Rudolph Kremer.

Because of special mechanics linking the playing keys to the pipes, Dr. Kremer says this will be a revolutionary advance for organ study here.

Dr. Kremer commented that "far greater sensitivity can be realized on this 'tracker action' organ" because keys control pipes mechanically. Pipes on most organs are controlled by electromagnets activated by the keys, which serve as switches. The organist only turns the pipes on and offer, and cannot vary or feel action on the pipe.

It cost $15-20 thousand.

Because so much organ music was written when only tracker - action instruments were made, only organs like the early ones can truly revive that period, Dr. Kremer said.

"No study of music history is complete without some knowledge of all periods," says Dr. Kremer, "and music of the 17th and 18th centuries cannot be fully appreciated without understanding the organ music as it was performed at the time."

Dr. Kremer had a similar tracker organ when he taught at Cornell University, and he came here with the understanding that UNC would acquire one.

'Sing Out' Members Quit Easy Life To Evangelize

By CAROL GALLANT
DTH Staff Writer

Internationally acclaimed "Sing - Out '66" a two-hour "patriotic burst" of song, will be on campus Monday.

One - hundred and thirty young people from campuses and high schools all over the U. S. and students from 17 foreign countries form the singing "youth corps." Who are these young people and what prompt them to take a year out of school or work to tour the world singing?

A girl who gave up a $9,000 scholarship put it this way, "This is a small price to pay to play a part in saving civilization."

A young man just graduated from high school said, "I am ready to die for freedom in Vietnam, but are we ready to live for it? I have decided to give this year with 'Sing-Out '66' because I, for one, am ready to live, as well as die for it."

Their program includes such songs as "Design for Dedication" and "Don't Stand Still", songs which call for the young people of America to take up the cause of freedom.

They sing in 48 languages & have performed on every continent.

The members of "Sing - Out '66" emphasize need for an end to hatred, violence, and suspicion. Following are some of their comments.

Willie Storey, Indio, California: "I came up in a very tough school on the west side of Chicago. It was known for its wild kids, its hell raising and its gang fights. I participated in many of those fights. But I found it took more guts to stand up and fight for what is right than it did to take part in any of those fights.

Romona Abella, Cuba: "we did not want communism in Cuba, but it took over because we sat back and did nothing. While we went on criticizing the government, we thought it all right to continue cheating in school. All that I heard about America was sex, violence and your almighty dollar, and that's what most of the world sees. I long to see a generation in America which lives it words. I want to fight with America."

Emiko Chiba, Japan: "I support your efforts in Viet Nam. However, there is something more important than just fighting with guns & bullets in Asia. In my continent we've got to rebuild character. We feel such a fight is just as important in America as it is in Asia. The way the U. S. goes will decide tomorrow's world. Moral Re-Armament is the only weaon I know that gives an answer to the burning problems of every country. ("Sing - Out '66" is sponsored by Moral Re - Armament).

Music is their weapon, along with enthusiasm. Are such weapons effective? Do they really have something to say?

You can judge for yourself Monday afternoon in McCorkle Place and that evening at 8:00 p.m. in Carmichael.

AAUP Member Speaks

William Van Alstyne, professor of constitutional law at Duke Law School, will speak to three scholastic honorary groups on campus tonight concerning academic freedom.

All members of the Freshman and Sophomore Honors Programs, freshman men's honorary Phi Eta Sigma and woman's honorary Gamma Alpha Lambda have been invited to attend the colloquium to be held at 8 p.m. in the upstairs Faculty Lounge of the Morehead Planetarium.

Van Alstyne is a member of the American Association of University Professor's Committee, which has recently been studying the question of student academic freedom. He appeared for the AAUP at the Speaker Ban hearings in Raleigh and will discuss tonight the nature and meaning of the University in the light of current controversy over academic freedom.

Tams At Chase

The Tams are appearing at Chase tomorrow night from 8 to midnight. They are sponsored by Hell House (9th floor) of Morrison.

Arrangements have been made to reserve 300 tickets for fraternities due to their social probation.

Tickets are available in Y Court, Pine Room, Chase, Morrison lobby or by calling John Ellis at 966-5140 in 904 Morrison.

Tickets are $3 now or $3.50 at the door. Mixers will be sold.

Newsmen Needed

WUNC-TV, the University's educational television station, will conduct auditions for an on-camera newsman, who will also be responsible for editing the news. Experience preferred but not required. This position will require approximate ly 20 hours per week. Interested persons should contact David Miller, 216 Swain Hall.

Orientation Staff

The Campus Orientation Commission is holding interviets for staff positions today and tomorrow from 4 to 6 p.m. in Graham Memorial.

Positions open are foreign student coordinator, married student coordinator, secretary and treasurer.

Also, the directors of academics, receptions, medical affairs, UNC-G mixer, counsellor's manual, Student Government, publicity, religious emphasis, honor systems, activities session and weiner roast, counsellor benefits and library coordination.

Interested upperclassmen are urged to apply for these committee positions. Students should sign up for an interview at the information desk of GM.

Today's St. Patrick's Day, But Where Are The Irish?

By PEYTIE FEARRINGTON
DTH Staff Writer

It's time to pull out that green again and go, go, go for St. Patrick. But few students fall in the ranks of the wearers-of-the-green.

If it remains with only that hard-core group the—O's, it won't be many. There are not but 31 O'Keefes, O'Brians, and the like registered in the student directory.

Three of these passed the way of many good Irishmen after first semester.

Now it's about those remaining 17. Where were they Tuesday night when the DTH took its "Are-you-wearing-green - on - St. - Patrick's-Day" survey? Some say they were doing a little campaigning, and a few were practicing up their brogue in the language labs, but the majority were running around trying to find out who St. Patrick was anyway.

When the poll was taken on this matter, offense cropped up everywhere.

Anne Normant, junior, Arlington, Va. could only mumble out, "I'm a Scot," and stalk away, while Simmons Patterson, senior, New Bern, said, "The Scott don't do that sort of thing — a little antipathy between the races."

Besides those downright offended, there were those who couldn't really get worked up over the question.

Alice Gann, senior, Atlanta, said, "I'll wear whatever is clean at the time."

She was joined by Mack Schafer, freshman, Raleigh, who remarked, "Sure, yeah, if it happens to be clean and green."

There is only one hope left on campus and it comes from a young man on the second floor of Craige. When questioned, Larry Stigall, freshman, Kernersville, said, "Are you kidding?" He then turned to his buddies in the hall and said, "Hey, guys, are we wearing green on St. Patrick's Day?"

Then there was a rejoicing cry that went up to the sixth floor. It was a wild tumultous affair. Men were tearing back to their closets to plan for the big day.

Frats To Appeal Long's Decision

By STEVE LACKEY
DTH Staff Writer

Chi Psi and Phi Kappa Sigma fraternities have been excused from Dean of Men William Long's ruling on fraternity parties. At least six others plan to appeal.

In order to be exempted from the decision, the fraternities must show that they were in no way involved in last weekend's distrubances, and must agree to abide by Long's six-point program outlined in The Daily Tar Heel yesterday.

The DTH contacted 16 of the 19 fraternities and found that all were disturbed by the action. Most fraternities felt that Long did not like the fraternity system and is out to destroy it.

Most fraternities were upset about both Long's decision and "erroneous publicity" in the DTH concerning their actions over the weekend.

Members of Alpha Tau Omega, according to one officer, feel that Long's action is unfair. Since ATO is located away from Big Fraternity Court, the members feel that they should not be punished.

According to Jimmy Martin of Sigma Nu, located in the Big Fraternity Court, the weekend was no worse than some others have been.

Martin, along with other members, feels that Long has "been looking for an opportunity to crack down on fraternities."

There was some resentment of the drastic steps Long took in cracking down.

One Sigma Nu member questioned whether Long should have simply asked the fraternities involved to correct the situation within themselves rather than opening the matter to campus and statewide publicity.

Pi Kappa Alpha, which was reported to have been involved in damages to another house, denies any connection with the bottle throwing and surf-board-stuffing.

President Buddy Bishop of PiKA said none of his members were involved. He also said that he made an offer to the Pi Lams to pay for the damages and then find out who was responsible.

Bishop said that he did this to keep down undesirable publicity over the situation; not because his fraternity had done the damages.

Harold Wilson of Sigma Chi voiced the opinion of many fraternity men. He said, "Dean Long has in the past used fraternities as his whipping post."

Wilson said that Long seems to "be easier on dormitories," and saying that the Morrison pornography incident in which Long "slapped the hands" of the men involved.

Wilson stated that Long is treating fraternities "like a loaf of salami — every chance he get he cuts a slice off."

He mentioned Long's compulsory on-campus-housing for freshmen and deferred rush as two "slices."

"He'll take whatever he can get until he has cut off the whole loaf," Wilson said.

The housemother of the Pi-KA house disagreed violently with charges that there was excessive noise in the court.

A spokesman for Sigma Phi Epsilon told the DTH yesterday the ruling had been appealed by his fraternity on the grounds that they were not members of Germans and were not having a party last weekend.

TV Overcoming Major Problems

By CAROL GALLANT
DTH Staff Writer

Charles Kuralt, one-time editor of The Daily Tar Heel and now a CBS newsman, spoke yesterday to a group of 800 professional journalists assembled here for Journalism Week.

Don Carter, managing editor of The National Observer, and Kuralt discussed "Two views of the News" with Roy Thompson of the Winston-Salem Journal serving as moderator.

Kuralt outlined the main problems involved in television news coverage by discussing five major points—the shortage of people in this field who can write; the skillful use of film; the fact that an "object observed is an object altered"; the problem of too little "space", time and finally, the fact that television is not a news media to begin with.

CHARLES KURALT

The newsman said television "runs the comics on the front page. The news comes on page eight."

Kuralt emphasized the tremendous impact of the media and cited as an example the CBS story on "Christmas in Appalachia" which resulted in the National Guard being mobilized to carry in all the packages that were sent to the area as a result. "We tell the human story which is often the most important story."

Carter's remarks revolved around the changes in newspaper content which have been made, and suggested additional improvements which must be made as a result of the broadcasting media entering the news field.

While newspapermen may view T.V. newsmen as "entertainers" and the entire operation as "show business," Carter pointed out that news coverage at the network level has greatly improved.

The broadcasting news media have "eroded the 'scoop element' in newspapers and are now dipping lightly into public service." People are turning more and more to radio and T.V. as the first source of their news, he said.

"We just can't get into the homes as fast," Carter said. "However, the television commentators stimulate appetite, and we in the newspaper field can then satisfy it—put flesh on the bare bones of the news."

Carter called for a greater emphasis on interpretation, and more thought-provoking material in the paper. He also said there is a need to humanize the news; tell it in terms of the people.

Envisioning the paper as a "Giant Community Bulletin Board," Carter said that the element of timeliness could be de-emphasized. "Mr. Kuralt can tell the 'what' and 'when'; I'll tell the 'why'."

Elections Board Validates Three Of Five Petitions

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

The elections board yesterday validated petitions of three students candidates and named two more petitions as invalid.

The two petitions found worthless were Howard Cracker's, independent candidate for a legialtive seat in Craige, and Al Carlton's, another candidate for student legislature.

Arthur Hays, elections board chairman, said Cracker's petition needed 50 signatures and only 15 were found to be valid.

The other 35 either were not accompanied by the signer's address or by his class. Cracker did not sign the petition himself, a requirement of the elections laws.

Calton's petition also needed 50 names, but the entire list of 69 signatures was tossed out because none of the names had a class.

"Before we had considered any of the petitions," Hays said, "we decided to follow the strict interpretation of the law, which required the name, address, and class of each signature. For the whole petition to be valid, the candidate also must have signed it."

Approved was Alan Banov as a Daily Tar Heel editor candidate. His petition needed 145 names. "When we reached the minimum we stopped validating," Hays said.

Also found to be valid were petitions of Student Body presidential candidate Sonny Pepper, having 157 names, and of Craige legislator candidate Michael Cozza, submitted with 59 names.

Petitions found invalid may be appealed to the Constitutional Council, Hays said. Appeals must be submitted within 96 hours before Tuesday's election.

However, Hays recommended appeals be made as soon as possible, since "it would be a physical impossibility" to have names included on the ballots in such a short time.

Candidates with invalid petitions may run as write-in candidates.

Debate Format Features Questions And Answers

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

The format for the debate of candidates set for 7:30 p.m. today in Gerrard was announced today by John Greenbacker, president of the Di - Phi Senate.

The debate is being co - sponsored by the GM Current Affairs Committee.

Greenbacker said the three candidates for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, Fred Thomas, Ray Linville and Alan Banov, presidential candidates, Bob Powell, Teddy O'Toole and Sonny Pepper and vice presidential candidate, Don Wilson will be the speakers in the debate.

Greenbacker said the presidential candidates will each be given six minutes for introductory remarks and then the floor will be opened for questions for 30 minutes.

The candidates for DTH editor will be given the same opportunity and when they have finished. Don Wilson will be allowed five minutes for introductory remarks and 10 minutes will then be given for questions from the floor.

U.P. vice presidential candidate Bill Purdy will not participate in the debate. Purdy will be in Student Legislature presenting a bill concerning the residence college system.

The SP candidate Bob Powell commented yesterday on the debate.

"It's the best idea I've heard." Powell said. "to let everyone see the candidates in action. The residence hall candidates meetings have been poorly attended and as a result, little widespread publicity has been given to the campaign. This is unfortunate, since so much is at stake in this election for student government next year."

HERALD TRIBUNE Staffer Tom Wolfe will speak April 21 for the Carolina Symposium on the "American Dream."

Pop Jet Set Man Wolfe Will Speak

By JIM CHESNUTT
AND ANDY MYERS

The wearer of blue and yellow suits, the ruffled Edwardian member of the Jet Set, that card resembling a well-polished Essex — Tom Wolfe —is sure to be the most unconventional speaker at next month's Carolina Symposium.

Wolfe is not only becoming today's arbiter of Pop Culture through his outstanding magazine articles and essays, he is an integral part of it.

Writing for the New York Herald Tribune, Wolfe's vernacular ("Kandy Kolored Tangerine Flake Streamline Babu") is known by his readers as The Wowie Style of journalism.

Wolfe will speak April 21 for the afternoon session of the Symposium. His talk will explore "Myth and the American Dream."

As a reflection of serio-comic social commentary on today's Pop Society, Wolfe's examination of the American Dream should have special appeal to the Carolina social animal, if the semi - surrealism is not beyond their fringe.

The nighttime session following Wolfe will concern itself with Myth and the South. A panel will be chaired by C. Van Woodward and Ralph Ellison.

The Wolfe "Wowie School" is growing fast. Wolfeian rhetoric boldly spurns the long standing rules of short, punchy Pow; leads of the Hemingway school, and slides through an unchecked flow of metaphors, neologisms, ellipses and exclamations, enomatopoeia, references to Greek myths and Batman, Dorothy Kilgallen and Cholly Knickerboker, bootlegger - auto - racer Junior Johnson and the New York Society Social Register.

Wolfe's career as a writer bounds over eight years, from a reporter on the Springfield (Mass.) Union to staff writer for the New York Herald Tribune and a contributor to Esquire magazine.

Newsweek recently called him "the most stylized, imaginative, discussed, sought-after writer in the country."

Wolfe, 35, was raised near Richmond, Va., and educated at Washington and Lee University. He pitched for the baseball team and decided to go into baseball.

Two years of semi - pro ball might have influenced his later decision to return to school, but in any case, he received a Ph.D. from Yale in "something called American Studies."

Refusing a job as copy boy for the New York Daily News he moved on to the Washington Post, writing what he was assigned but doing it in a sort of Wolfe - Pop way.

His two - part article about The New Yorker magazine last spring criticized the publication for its "mummified aura" and called its staff writers Tiny Mummies.

Jus' Goes To Show—It's Still A Man's World!

The Women's Residence Council is waging a successful war against tennis shoes today. Inside sources reveal it might be some sort of "offense" to wear anything but leather on your feet.

The reason: today is the last day of the WRC shoeshine in Y Court and Lenoir Hall, and sneakers are hard to shine.

Last year the WRC collected more than $40 shining shoes. All the money goes to the Campus hest.

Ellen Sugg, freshman from Washington, D. C., and one of yesterday's "rag - slappers" said the job is not easy.

"I've ruined my stockings (cement is hard on the knees, too) and I've averaged about six pair an hour," she said. For her five hours' toil she claimed more than 60 shoes! Wow!

Hurry down to Y Court and pay your quarter. That means the price is 25 cents—cheap!

ERNIE McCRARY, EDITOR

Guilty By Association

Dean of Men William G. Long's handling of he fraternity misconduct issue has been arbitrary, hasty and unnecessarily detrimental to the entire UNC fraternity system.

There was a drunken disturbance in Big Fraternity Court Sunday morning. Only a few fraternities were involved.

Such misconduct should not be tolerated and an investigation is clearly warranted, with proper punishment for the guilty fraternities, prescribed either by Long or the Interfraternity Council Court. Attorney General John Ingram said yesterday that an investigation is underway and some fraternities and individuals will be charged with code violations.

Long's immediate reaction, however, was to cancel the administration's agreement to let women attend fraternity social functions — and he included all fraternities.

Apparently he based his decision at least partly on reports of wild activity at the German's Club Dance in Durham Saturday night.

A representative of the Office of the Dean of Women visited the dance for a short time and gave Long an unfavorable report of the activities. But Durham police and UNC police who were present said the affair was not disorderly.

Fraternity officials say the owner of the Planters' Warehouse, where the dance was held, has asked them to hold it there again next year.

Long has not technically usurped judicial authority belonging to students, but by withdrawing the visiting agreement he has virtually imposed social probation without the right of trial.

He has declared all fraternities guilty, incriminating the entire system in the eyes of the public.

It is up to each one now to prove it is not guilty in order to redeem itself.

Guilty until proven innocent.

Democratic justice, Carolina style.

Censorship Backfires

St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times

After strong protests by supporters of academic freedom and free speech, in a special session last year the North Carolina Legislature amended a law forbidding Communists to speak at state universities by granting the trustees and administrators of the schools discretionary authority over such appearances.

Students invited Dr. Herbert Aptheker, director of the Institute of Marxist Studies in New York, and an open Communist, to speak at the university at Chapel Hill. But the university authorities forbade Dr. Aptheker's appearance on the campus.

When Aptheker showed up anyway accompanied by the president of the student body, the chief of campus police warned that he would arrest them if the Marxist authority spoke.

What happened was almost inevitable. Aptheker protested that his rights of free speech guaranteed under the First Amendment were being violated, and then quietly walked off the campus.

He was followed by what the campus police estimated at 2,000 students, who gathered in a non-denominational church and attentively listened to Aptheker's speech.

Had the Legislature not erred in the first place by its ill-considered — and probably unconstitutional — law, and had the university administrators not compounded this error by misusing their discretionary authority, the chances are that not 200 students would have bothered to attend this speech.

Since nothing on earth is as dull as listening to a Marxist authority try to explain Marxist theory, probably none of his audience would have bothered to hear him out. And certainly the University of North Carolina wouldn't again have received nationwide notoriety as opposing free speech.

We seriously doubt that there is a Marxist expponent alive who could stand up to the sharp questioning of the glaring fallacies of Marxism which any audience of bright, skeptical American college students would produce.

The way to fight Communists is to let them talk. The more Marxist dialectic doubletalk they sprout, the less believable they are. It's only when the authorities won't let the Marxists talk that students begin to think they must have something worthwhile to say.

Negro Soldiers Must Battle Racists As Well As Enemies

Violence - prone Southern racists seem to have a knack for harrassing Negro members of the armed forces. Observe, for example, the Penn killing, where a Negro reservist was gunned down merely because of skin color.

And now the bigots have struck again, Viet Nam or no Viet Nam.

Capt. Donald Sims, 29, was about to ship out for the Asian fighting, but never made it.

Instead of being felled by the Viet Cong, Sims got shot by a sniper last week as he stood in a Bogalusa, La., phone booth.

Sims' parents, who live near Bogalusa, denied any participation in last year's racial demonstrations in the paper mill town. As for Sims himself —he had spent the past six years with the Army, which presumably kept him busy enough to stay out of trouble. After all, not even a Negro can stir up racial agitation in Louisiana while serving his country in Germany.

The Sims tragedy is but one of a series. There's also the time when a group of Negro M.P.'s guarding Nazi prisoners of war found their German charges could eat at a Southern restaurant while they couldn't. And the times Negro servicemen discovered that their children had to attend inferior segregated schools if the soldiers served in the South. And the times the Negro GIs were excluded from the better off - base housing merely because they had the wrong skin color in the wrong section of the country. To an extent, civil rights laws and military orders have eased these problems, but they persist just the same.

When Sims was shot, Negro soldiers in Asia — the ones who made it to Viet Nam without being first gunned down at home — were risking their lives to protect the rest of the nation, including Citizens Council and Ku Klux Klan members.

We can only hope that these Negroes receive better treatment after returning to the United States than did Donald Sims. If like Sims, they are shot while visiting parents and families in the South, they and other GIs might as well have never been to Viet Nam — America will have had no principles for which to fight.

Church In America Faces Crisis Today

No major issue on this campus draws as much resignation and disengagement as the question of religion. The controversial questions posed by the clergy and laymen little concern and even less worry the typical college student today. The "faith of our fathers" is held in abeyance while the educational process goes on.

The narrow circles that are concerned are either making faddist statements ("God is Dead") or pointing out that this generation is the most hell - bound yet. In this column some attempt is made to explore the main issues that face the Church.

The Judeo - Christian heritage is full of glory. Not even the devout atheist can ignore the bravery and encourage of the early Christians. They were a revolutionary force in their time. To them God was a positive agent in their lives. He inspired them in a fight for freedom. He moved them to such greatness that Christianity — despite its personal demands — became one of the lasting faiths of man.

The Middle Ages saw the church as a protector of the best of Western Civilization. In modern history, the church has sold its soul to the Establishment. The church is not a revolutionary force in the world today. It doesn't move men in the way that it moved Moses. In fact the church is moving the opposite direction. Some illustrations are in order.

For the past century, missionaries have been going around the world carrying "the word." Let me make it clear that the church has done admirable work abroad. Most of its missionary personnel, no doubt, were fine epople who were dedicated to what they were doing.

But the fact remains that the church has supported the imperialist - colonialist efforts of those whose missions were not at all "holy." To tell the natives not worry about the "things of this earth" while colonial miners were stealing the wealth of the countries is not at all commendable.

Indeed, the church should have been teaching the people proper responsibility so that nations like Ghana and the Congo (where there were lots of missionaries) would be more stable and responsible today. A strong and responsible people is a prerequisite to the discipline of Christian ethic.

No one in the South can escape the fact that the church has buttressed racism. The racism of the KKK is well documented. The most distressing fact, though, is the racism that makes Sunday at 11 a.m. the "most segragated hour" in the week. This is a sad commentary on the gospel of "love." The church's home missions have consisted, in part, of keeping the Negro "in his place."

The church's support of the "Gospel of Wealth" doctrine (that the rich are rich because they are God's stewards and the poor are poor because they are unrighteous) has been almost negated by economic realities. Some remnants remain. In short, the church has gone from being the revolutionary force to being the guardian of the status quo and the advocate of unrighteous tranquility for the nation's meek.

As with all institutions, there come some grave challenges. In the past, the church has defined for society such concepts as good, evil, work and faith. It has glorified or at least condoned war. No one seriously challenged the definitions that the church gave.

Now challenges are coming from all sides. So far the church has only answered in pious generalities. The questions and challenges remain. There are many facets to this challenge.

On the question of morals, some dissident churchmen are questioning. One question is the question of pre - marital sex relations. The church says this is always wrong. A tiny, but articulate minority are saying "not always." When "a covenant of intimacy" exists, says one Methodist bishop, the pre - marital relations may be in order if the couplre recognizes and can cope with the consequences.

On the question of race, a recent survey showed that 51 per cent of white Protestants think that the church should have nothing to do with the civil rights movement. Other churchmen violently disagree, saying that this movement is not unlike the exodus from Pharoah's Egypt and if the church refuses to join in the show its relevance to social and secular issues, then a requiem for Christianity may soon be sung.

Finally, what has been an immature challenge is beginning to grow. In the past the church has defined work as "holy." The revolution in automation may bring the day when there will be enough work for all of our working - age people.

Some people are going to have to be paid for their "leisure" activities. If the church's definition of work does not change, serious problems may develop in the church.

There are, however, some winds of change. The Vatican Council went a long way to free the Catholics from their archaic traditions. In Protestantism, the "new morality" is rubbing off on even the most obstinate churchmen.

Secularism may be the official religion of more people than the statistics would indicate. Fads such as the "God is Dead" theology serves to convince only a very few, but it does force many more to take a serious look at their ideas.

Those who are not satisfied with the church and who don't bother to ask any question continue to employ the age - old philosophies of humanism, freedom, rationality and disengagement. Whatever little worth these principles may have is buttressed by the inconstancies of the Judeo-Christian ethic in America today.

To be sure, the drama on the religious scene is not at its climax. Indeed, the rising action has just begun. Problems will become more serious before they are solved. Petty denominationalism will have to be changed. Pious generalities will have to be pinned down.

Churchmen are going to have to be seen in other places than the church if they are t ogain the respect of all the people. And finally, the church will have to recognize that everything good does not originate in the church or exist in the Christian faith. Unless these changes are made, the Judeo-Christian ethic will have to give way to a totally unholy secularism.

Letters To The Editor

Obscure Letter

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

The Daily Tar Heel has risen to new lows in judgement with the Saturday (3-12-66) publication of George Sherwood's letter. This printing obviously shows poor proofreading and that the proofreader did not know what the letter said.

The truth of the matter is that it said absolutely nothing. It was merely a mass of obscure phrases. Close inspection of Mr. Sherwood's handiwork will show that the previous charges do not lack basis as does the letter.

Mr. Sherwood begins with sweeping phrases which seem to speak about individuality in our modern society. Then he moves on to other matters which seem to have no relation to it. He says, "Everyday we become more dogmatic and less pragmatic, more theoretical and less practical, and finally more idealistic and less realistic."

Then he goes on to say, "I do not criticize personal commitment to high ideals of ethics, but rather I acknowledge the equal validity among theories." How can be avoid criticizing idealists, who obviously have brought a great deal of strife into the world whether their goals were desirable or not? And yet he refuses to condone apathy!

Either Mr. Sherwood refuses to recognize anything or he recognizes everything. It becomes increasingly difficult to see what his dichotomy theory (which after all has only equal validity with all others) is driving at.

Certainly I would not quarrel with the right of Mr. Sherwood to express his opinions. But his conceptions are so vague and their expression is so general that the result is purely chaotic. Whether he advocates an orderly chaos or a chaotic order is difficult to determine.

He does not belive, he says, in the manifestation of a temporal paradise, yet in his very next sentence he advocates a society in which a reconciliation is found between the concepts of "sincere unity" and "earnest diversity."

Thus one can see that the Tar Heel displayed extremely poor judgement in the publication of a ltter from which no amount of sense can be derived. Knowing Mr. Sherwood personally, I have always sympathized with his pitiable efforts to explain his theories of relativism. I earnestly requiest that if he again is to lay his philosophical endeavors before the public, that they be accompanied with a few appropriate footnotes.

Sincerely
James W. Small

LETTERS

The Daily Tar Heel welcomes letters to the editor on any subject, particularly on matters of local or University interest. Letters must be typed, double-spaced and must include the name and address of the author or authors. Names will not be omitted in publication. Letters should be limited to about 250-300 words. The DTH reserves the right to edit for length or libel. Longer letters will be considered for "The Student Speaks" if they are of sufficient interest. However, the DTH reserves the right to use contributed materials as it sees fit.

Bat Dean

Rumor has it that the Residence College system is looking a little better these days.

It is true that Bat Dean and Bobin were foiled Sunday morning? Yes, but they made a big come back Tuesday.

Sounds like communism to me. What's good for a few is good for all, huh?

BVP is planning to start rush tomorrow. And PTA will soon follow.

But I hear most are pledging SB and MRC—South Building and Men's Residence Council for you guys who only know Greek.

Who's Berkeley?

Several days ago this column reported that the University of Southern California was at Berkeley.

Several times, no, many times, this writer has been informed the the University of Southern California is not at Berekeley.

I humbly apologize to USC, which is in Los Angeles. I didn't mean to libel the institution.

Aha, what's at Berkeley?

Hippo

The people in a small province in Brazil don't fool around when it comes to home town elections.

They wrote in a candidate, named Hippo. Yes, Hippo is a Hippopotamus and she won.

But she can't hold office because of a certain law. All office holders in Brazil must speak Portuegese.

And 3 Plus 2

A certain publication, The Sixty-Niner, claims in its most recent issue that it is the largest publication on campus.

It says the DTH is only six pages, whereas it is eight pages. Sounds right. It's not. One page of the DTH makes two the The Sixity-Niner. That way the DTH has 12 pages.

For your information the smallest publication on campus is the Student Forum, but only because it hasn't been published this year, isn't that right Alan?

Flowers Fill Life Of Leading Men

The path of the Playmakers' next leading man is strewn with flowers. Tom Hull, who plays John Worthing in Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest," is a Durham florist; and the character he plays has a magnificent garden at his English country house.

The comedy opens Tuesday night at the Playmakers Theater and runs through Sunday, March 27. Tickets are now on sale at the Playmakers business office, 214 Abernethy Hall, and at Ledbetter - Pickard's.

TOM HULL

The role of John Worthing, who speaks with the polished elegance of a society which valued brilliant, amusing elocution, is a far cry from Old Tom, the cockney beggar in Paul Green's "The Lost Colony," another part which Hull has spiced with his own brand of humor.

In his latest play, Hull shows his comedic talent again. In one scene he gets laughs by reading a list of army officers from a military directory.

Besides his work with "The Lost Colony," and his several Playmakers roles, Hull has shown his versatility as a director, actor, and technical director with the East Carolina Playhouse, the Durham Theatre Guild, and with various community theatres in Germany, where he was stationed with the Army.

The comedian is a former graduate student in the UNC Department of Dramatic Art. For the past two years he has been studying in New York with acting teachers Gubi Mann and Eve Collyer.

"The Importance of Being Earnest" has distinguished the careers of such actors as Henry Miller, Clifton Webb, John Gielgud, and Michael Redgrave.

Appearing with Hull in major roles are Louise Lamont, Amanada Meiggs, John Jones, Marjorie Preston, Carolyn Fitz-Simons, and Jim Slaughter.

UNC Ladies Will Attend N. C. Counselors Meeting

Six UNC Ladies will attend the N. C. Association of Women Deans and Counselors meeting today at Pfeiffer College.

Theme for the gathering will be "Frontiers in Student Personnel Work."

Highlight of the day - long session will be a dinner address at 6 p.m. by Dean Martha Peterson, president of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors. Miss Peterson will speak on "Frontiers on the National Scene." She is the only woman holding the post of dean for student affairs on any university campus.

UNC representatives at the meeting will include Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael, Mrs. George Hand, Mrs. Lawrence McDevitt and Mrs. E. J. Fulghum, all of the dean of women's office; Mrs. John Allcott of the Testing Service and Dr. Mary Lane of the department of education.

Dr. Lane will be a panelist at the 2 p.m. "Frontiers on the Local Campus Scene" discussion. Miss Katherine Taylor of NC- G will be moderator.

Following the panel will be a coffee hour and business session with comments on "Frontiers on the State Scene."

Gemini Flight Terminated; Malfunction Fouls Hook-Up

CAPE KENNEDY, FLA., (AP) — The Gemini 8 pilots ran into serious trouble last night and were ordered to an emergency landing in the western Pacific — the first time a U. S.. manned space flight has been stopped early because of spacecraft trouble.

Gemini control said that it wasn't immediately known where the trouble began — in the fuel - loaded target Agena rocket, a flying bomb in space, or in the Gemini spacecraft itself. It was known that one thruster in the spacecraft stuck in "on" position. Push- the ship around.

Suddenly the two joined spacecraft began to tumble and command pilot Neil Armstrong decided to back away. Only some 30 minutes, after he and pilot David Scott had achieved the first link - up in space with another spacecraft.

Armstrong discovered he had lost some of the main maneuvering and stablization jets on the spacecraft — they would not fire—and he had to use some of the small thrusters normally reserved for control of the spacecraft position in the fiery reentry.

Details were sparse. But it seemed that there was only one set of attitude or position control jets left to guide the ship on reentry. This is essential, because the pilot must keep the blunt end of the spacecraft — the heat shield— aimed in the direction of descent. It is the only part of the spacecraft capable of withstanding the temperatures of some 3,000 degrees fahrenheit.

Without that protection, the spacecraft and its precious human cargo could be in danger of burning up.

The state of the seas in the landing area was not reported, but an HU - 16 amphibian aircraft — capable of water landing — was on its way to the scene as well.

Gemini control said that Armstrong was keeping the spaceship stable.

The system that failed consists of 16 jet rockets with thrust capabilities ranging from 25 to 100 pounds. The reentry stabilization system consists of two sets of eight thrusters each, one set already used to Armstrong.

The desperate maneuver came when Armstrong decided that the joined vehicles were doing something that he didn't like — just what wasn't spelled out.

Visiting Lecturers To Speak At UNC

Four visiting lecturers will speak here this week to representatives of collegiate schools of nursing attending a short course at the University School of Nursing.

Lecturers for the five - day course will be Dr. Ida H. Simpson of Duke University, Mrs. Peter Walker, former assistant dean of women at UNC here, Dr. James Little of the UNC Department of Education, and Harry Smith, Presbyterian student chaplain at UNC.

The short course is entitled "Principles of Administrative Organization and Leadership in the Operation of Collegiate Schools of Nursing."

Sukarno's Power Claim Is Empty

SINGAPORE (AP) — President Sukarno asserted yesterday he still is Indonesia's chief of state and the man he armed with strong powers, Lt. Gen. Suharto, army chief of staff, agreed.

Highly reliable sources in Singapore thought, however, that Suharto's statement was so much window dressing. They said the generals are keeping Sukarno as "a sort of constitutional monarch."

The official Jakarta radio quoted a message to the Indonesian people from Sukarno saying certain people are trying to force their wishes on him by ultimatum and want to topple him.

Sukarno, who signed over control of "peace and order" in Indonesia to Suharto last Saturday, claimed he still had full powers to appoint his deputies and his cabinet.

A separate statement by Suharto broadcast by Jakarta denied he had taken power from Sukarno and said the President merely ordered him to normalize the situation in Indonesia.

Sukarno's message was read over Radio Jakarta by his trusted lieutenant, Third Deputy Premier Chaerul Saleh.

In it he hinted but did not say that the people who had given him an ultimatum were trying to prevent him from having a say in the composition of a new cabinet Suharto is reported to be planning.

Sources in Sinapore have said that the Anti - Communist armed forces general led by Suharto had given Sukarno an ultimatum last week to get rid of his Pro - Peking First Deputy Premier Subandrio.

U. S. Forces Catch Reds Retreating

SAIGON (AP) — About 600 Viet Cong, pausing in a long retreat, battled four hours yesterday against a battalion of the U. S. 173rd airborne brigade in the D-Zone jungles north of Saigon. A field survey showed less than 500 lived to resume the retreat.

The American paratroopers reported 142 of the Red guerrillas were killd and three, including an officer, were captured in this first significant contact of an eight - day - old allied drive called Operation Silver City. U. S. casulaties were termed light.

The United States lost four aircraft — an Air Force F4C Phantom jet and three helicopters — in other phases of the war, a war again complicated by Vietnamese political factors.

The three helicopters were shot down by a reinforced Viet Cong company — perhaps 150 men — in a clash with elements of the 2nd brigade of the U. S 25gh infantry division in the central highlands 190 miles northeast of Saigon. All the crewmen were rescued. The infantrymen said they killed 33 of the enemy in a series of skirmishes.

The Phantom Jet and its two crewmen were reported to have vanished three miles south of Dien Bien Phu in one of a series of strikes at roads and bridges around that North Vietnamese military center, 180 miles west of Hanoi.

Shotgun-Carrying Police Patrol Watts After Riots

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An uneasy quiet settled yesterday over the Negro community of Watts, torn last night by a two - death rampage, as police tried to avert further flare - ups in the area of massive and bloody rioting last August.

The main street was blocked to all but commercial traffic. Patrol cars carrying three men with shotguns roamed the streets. Pedestrian traffic was light. Some stores were closed. School attendance was down.

The outburst was touched off about 3:20 p.m. Tuesday when a Negro threw a rock that hit a white school teacher's car. A crowd of high school students ran wild when the man cried "brutality" as he was arrested.

Over a three hour period before relative calm was restored 600 persons kept hundreds of police — hustled into the area under a plan to deal quickly with violence — busy making arrests and shooing pedestrians home.

A white truck driver was beaten and shot to death and two Negroes were accused of his slaying. A Negro man was killed by a bullet seemingly out of nowehere. Police said they fired no shots during the evening.

There was looting and scattered fires. Cars were overturned. Several persons were beaten. Twenty - six persons were injured. There were 49 arrests, 23 of them juveniles. Seventeen of the arrests were for felonies, most of the rest for failure to disperse.

John A. McCone, former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission and the central Intelligence Agency, who headed a special governor's commission that investigated August's riots, said:

"If you recall our report (on the riot), we said a contributing cause was the continuing exhortation of some leaders of the civil rights movement for extreme action to correct real or imagined wrongs. This has not taken place. Unless the Negro people are resolved to help themselves, no amount of action can help."

LBJ Pledges U.S. Will Man The Moon First

WASHINGTON (AP) —President Johnson pledged yesterday the United States will beat the Russians in putting the first man on the moon.

"We intend to land the first man on the surface of the moon," he declared. "And we intend to do it in this decade of the 1960s."

It was the first time the President has publicly made such a prediction, Dr. Edward C. Welsh, Executive Secretary of the National Aeronautics and Space Council, told newsmen. Welsh said he thinks the chances of achieving the goal are better than 50-50.

Johnson spoke after watching the television broadcast of the launching of Gemini 8—the doubleheader space venture that is designed to pave the way for the Apollo linkups so vital to moon exploration.

His predictin was made at a ceremony at which he accepted the Robert H. Goddard Trophy from the National Space Club for having "provided the leadership for United States preeminence in space."

Johnson did not give the detailed basis for his prediction that his country will win the moon race.

James E. Webb, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, told a House committee last Thursday that the Russians are moving fast in their space activities. He said:

"There is little room for doubt that they are rapidly moving toward an increased frequency of manned and unmanned flights and that their capabilities will soon reach a point where they could expect succeess in an attempt to land men on the moon."

Texas Western - Speed, Depth

By KEITH DRUM

The surprise team of the year, Texas Western, takes a 26-1 log into the semifinals at College Park, tomorrow night.

Defense, depth, speed and rebounding prowess are the Miners' ingredients for a successful season. An extremely balanced team, Texas Western has no individual like Jim "Bad News" Barnes of two seasons ago. Coach Don Haskins in his fifth season has relied on seven players, each of whom has been high scorer in the Miners' 27 games.

Not only a winning tradition — Haskins has produced a 106-26 record — but also a nickname tradition follows Texas Western.

Harry "Cricket" Flournoy, '65 senior forward, leads Texas Western in rebounding with 12 per contest. His board work and defensive agressiveness have kept TWC in the top five nationally in both team rebounding and defense. Not noted for scoring, Flournoy collected only 22 points in the Miners' three regional games.

Orsten Artis, 6'1 senior guard, is referred to as "Little O". The best outside shooter and steadiest ballplayer at Texas Western. Artis, like Flournoy, is a native of Gary, Indiana and carries a 12.2 average into the battle with Utah. His outside shooting was responsible for both TWC victories over Arizona State. Displaying his consistency, Artis hit 14, 11, and 12 points in the Mid-West Regionals at Lubbock, Texas.

Nevil Shed, 6'8 junior center, is appropriately called "Shadow". Against Cincinnati, Shed's shadow was all that remained after he was banished for fighting early in the first half. A strong rebounder and defender, Shed also scores well as proved by his 12.5 average. He possesses a good hook and jump-shot

Shed's ejection against Cincy could had been costly had it not been for 6'5 sophomore Willie Cager, the Miners' sixth man. Cager scored six markers in the overtime period, 15 in the game, to give Texas Western the victory, 78-76. His field goal with 32 seconds left decided the 81-80 double overtime battle with Kansas. Cager and Shed, incidentally, attended the same high school in New York.

Another reserve from New York, sophomore Willie Worsley, gives the Miners excellent ball-handling and passing. Worsley, who has scored in double figures more often than not, is only 5'6. Yes, five-foot-six. His 14 points and his playmaking aided the romp of Oklahoma City, 89-74. Worsley, despite his size, can dunk the ball.

Bobby Joe Hill, the Detroit compact at 5-10, 180, leads Texas Western in scoring with a 15.1 average. His 63 points in the Mid-West Regionals (3 games) earned him the MVP award. Against Oklahoma City, Hill, usually a starter, came in with O. C. U. leading, 21-13. The lefthander tossed in 13 points in six minutes to give Texas Western the lead. Against Cincinnati, Hill's free throw with four seconds left insured the victory. A junior, Hill is especially deadly on the drive.

Dave "Daddy D" Lattin, 6'7 and 240, is in the mold of "Bad News" Barnes. Only a sophomore, Lattin was high school All-American with the likes of Bob Lewis and Edgar Lacey. A product of Houston, Lattin transferred from Tennessee Tech. Lattin ranks second in scoring and rebounding for the Miners. In the stretch drive and tournament, "Daddy D" has shown his potential. He scored 64 points in regional play, 29 against Cincinnati. At the same time he snared 41 rebounds. Continual domination by Lattin could give Texas Western that "one more surprise."

'Get Well—er—real soon, fellas!'

Verga's Back; Ready To Play

DURHAM (AP) — Bob Verga, Duke's leading scorer, is expected to be released from a hospital Thursday in time to join his teammates for the trip to College Park, Md., and the NCAA national basketball finals.

The 6-foot junior guard, who is scoring at an average of 19.2 points per game, was admitted Monday to Duke Hospital in Durham with a sore throat and high fever.

Dr. Elbert Persons, student health director at Duke University, said Wednesday that Verga's temperature was "essentially normal" and he should be discharged Thursday.

Verga, whose fever was reported at 103 degrees Tuesday, did not have the fever long enough to interfere with his training status, Dr. Persons said.

The Duke basketball team, ranked No. 2 in the nation, will meet Kentucky's first-ranked Wildcats in Friday night's first semifinal game at College Park. The winner of that game will meet the winner of the Utah-Texas Western game on Saturday night for the NCAA championship.

Duke will take a 25-3 record into the finals.

Coach Vic Bubas has said that if Verga is unable to play or must be rested frequently, he will be replaced by Ron Wendelin, a sophomore who has played in 25 of Duke's games.

Wendelin replaced Verga in victories over South Carolina and Virginia when Verga was benched for missing a team curfew. "We have every confidence" in Wendelin's ability, Bubas said.

Verga, from Sea Girt, N. J., scored 43 points in last weekend's NCAA Eastern Regionals at Raleigh, N. C. He was voted the most valuable player in that two-game tournament.

Duke went to the NCAA's national finals in 1963 and 1964. In 1963, Duke finished third while in 1964 the Blue Devils lost in the championship game to UCLA, 98-83.

Illnesses, Injuries Hit NCAA Teams

By BOB GREEN

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) —They're all going to show up for the NCAA basketball championship — all four semifinalists. They'll even play.

But that's about all the various coaches were promising Wednesday as they ticked off long, mournful and impressive injury lists for the national semifinals.

Only Texas Western is healthy going into its Friday night date with Utah. The Redskins have some major problems, as do Duke and Kentucky, the other two semifinalists.

The winners play Saturday night for the title, won the last two years by UCLA. That game is scheduled for television coverage by Sports Network, Inc.

Here's the status at the moment, as the teams prepare for the trip to the University of Maryland campus:

Texas Western — no problems.

Utah — George Fisher, the team's best rebounder, broke a leg in a late season game and is out. Sophomore Lyndon Mackay, a 6-6 starting forward and one of the team's most consistent players twisted his left knee in the Western Regional and is doubtful.

Kentucky — Starting forward Larry Conley was bedded with the flu Tuesday night and 10 others, including all starters, are complaining of colds and chest pains. All are expected to be ready.

The crisis appears to have passed among Kentucky's ailing basketball players, Coach Adolph Rupp said Wednesday.

"The story is that Kentucky will probably be up to strength for the semifinal game with Duke, unless Larry Conley or Tommy Porter take a turn for the worse," Rupp said.

Ball-handling wizard Conley, a senior forward, did not practice with the team Wednesday. He shot free throws and returned to the dormitory for more rest, Rupp said.

Conley excused himself from practice after four minutes of scrimmage Tuesday, complaining of a chest pain.

The rest of the Kentucky team went through its regular workout, although 11 of the team members were suffering from flu and cold symptoms.

Rupp explained: "The boys were very tired Tuesday afternoon . . .I had a meeting with them Wednesday morning, and it appears what they needed most was rest . . . we put them to bed very early."

Hardest hit in the rash of colds that struck the top-ranked Wildcats were Conley, reserve forward Porter and starting center Thad Jaracz.

Conley and Jaracz are still suffering from chest pains, which make deep breathing difficult. Porter is bothered with a sinus condition.

Probably the most serious of them all is Mackay of Utah. He averages about 10 points a game and is the No. 2 rebounder. His size is extremely important with the loss of Fisher.

"We just don't know," Utah Coach Jack Gardner said in Salt Lake City. "He's taking treatments and we are hoping. But we probably won't know for sure until Friday night."

The Utes, with a 23-6 record, are the only unranked team in the round of four. Texas Western is No. 3 with a 26-1 record, while the first semi matches the two top-ranked teams in the nation, No. 2 Duke (25-3) and No. 1 Kentucky (26-1).

Kentucky, although troubled by illness, remains the favorite and its semifinal clash with Vic Bubas's Blue Devils ranks as the key game.

The major health problem for Kentucky is Conley, who pulled out of practice after four minutes Tuesday and was hospitalized overnight.

Chi Psi Eliminates Zebes

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

Chi Psi Red advanced to the quarterfinals of the fraternity division intramural basketball tournament by thumping the ZBT Zebes on Tuesday, 64-42. Varner collected 24 points for Chi Psi, while Neely had 10, Guy 12, Yelverton 9 and Colby 9. Kohn had 18 points for ZBT.

Zete I also moved into the quarter finals by eliminating DKE White, 50-29. Harrison neeted 17 ponts to lead the way for the Zetes and Founatin added 10 more. Whitaker was high for the DKE's with 8 points.

The Phi Gam Fijis advanced by downing Phi Delt Black, 37-26. Bill Bowman paced the attack with 10 points while John Titchener had 8. Phi Delt could score only six field goals, five of them by McChesney, who had 12 points overall. Phi Gam led at the half by only 18-14.

KA Blue crushed the TEP Tops, 44-21, to move into the quarterfinals. Butler canned 20 points and Travis 11 for the KA's. Butler contributed 13 of his points in the second half, when KA scored 29 points.

The Sig Ep Bisons got into the second round by edging Sigma Chi, 32-30. Koontz of Sigma Chi led all scorers with 18 points, but got little help from his teammates. Dail had 12 and Hook 9 for the winners.

George Chuvalo Trains For Clay

TORONTO (AP) — George Chuavlo continued the sparring phase Monday in his training for the heavyweight title fight against champion Cassius Clay, slated for March 29 at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Irving Ungerman, Chuvalo's manager, said the Canadian weighs 205 pounds, about five pounds over his fighting weight.

Clay is in training at Miami Beach, Fla., and isn't scheduled to arrive in Toronto until Friday. He is slated to appear before his draft board in Louisville, Ky., Thursday.

A University: What Is It? What's It Supposed To Do?

WILLIAM FESPERMAN
DTH Religion Editor

Practically all of us have asked the question of what the university is and what it is supposed to do. Too often our answer is rather standard and we reply in a rehearsed response. The reason is, or could be, two fold: 1) we just don't know, so we fabricate an answer that sounds sophisticated or 2) the university today is the perpetrator of a vague concept of itself.

John Dixon, Professor of Religion and Art, posed this question Sunday evening at the Wesley Foundation. The answer he arrived at, however, did not fall into the rehearsed response.

According to Dixon, what we have at the university (including this one) is a catalogue of categories of knowledge. Within this context of categories, the student is presented with a particular body of knowledge innative to the particular category. How does one approach this body of knowledge? Very simply, he goes to hear a lecture by a teacher who has that body of knowledge neatly arranged. Then, at the appropriate time and under the appropriate stimuli, the student produces the appropriate response.

What happens, then, is that truth is reduced to propositions and becomes diversed from human experience. It is, therefore, one matter to give the appropriate answers on, say, a sociology quiz and quite another matter for that material to have any bearing on one's existence.

Dixon's contention is that the root of the problem is to be found in the rationalist revolution of the Greeks. The pre-Greek question was "who." The Greek question was "how and why." Thus the center of the question shifted away from the human into the sphere of things — into the naturalistic world.

The assumption of this rationalist revolution was that man's mind is a separate instrument that can be trained independently of the rest of his being. The result was the dualism of the mind and body. Dixon believes that education today operates on the same assumption.

The last one hundred years of history have dealt the old body - soul dualism a timely blow. Beginning with Kierkegaard and his demand for decision in the midst of life, an effort to recover the totality of the individual commenced.

Dixon says that if we were to take these views seriously, we could not teach (or be students, for that matter) in the institutions we use. What these men say dissolves what we think are our basic institutions.

The consequence of Dixon's whole theory is that the student find in an institution that trains the mind and forgets about the body. That is, there is no awareness that the total person 'is' mind and body (except perhaps in the field of medicine). In a true sense, then, it is an authentic thing that the student finds more of himself in what goes on in the arboretum than in the classroom. For in the arboretum, he gives of mind and body together. In short, he knows somehing of passion (passion over and above lust). Few, very few, classes raise any passion in the student. This may mean that there is boredom in the classroom for student and professor. But there is no boredom in the arboretum, except if it be the impatience involved in discovering the suitable location for the passionate experience and experiment of sex in its various forms.

This brings the discussion back to where it began. That is, once one has an answer to what the university is and that answer turns out to be quite startling, what is to be done? The student who is caught in this artificial checkerboard of knowledge, the student who leaps from space to space to reap the learning offered in each neat little square box, what is this student to do to seek seriously and take seriously what it means to be human?

He can, according to Dixon, be indifferent, or cynical, or he can rebell against the system. There is another alternative, and that is he can be a userer of the system. That would, of course, satisfy the bourgeos criterion of education today.

But that does not really answer the question. That is, what can the student do in the face of the situation? It is certainly one question, and a vital one. But broadly speaking, what can the university do as a whole to take seriously the human being as whole, to understand that what the mind learns has a direct bearing on the body, and to break down the diffuse categories it has comfortably constructed to make learning secure?

This Sunday at 4:00 p.m. at the Wesley Foundation, the discussion will continue with some effort at a way out of the dilemma. The discussion is sponsored by the Wesley Foundation (Methodist) and the Episcopal Student Congregation.

TICKETS FOR Roger Miller are available now. You can get them two ways: You can buy them for $1 now or $1.50 at the door of Carmichael when Miller sings on March 29. Or, if you are the adventurous type, you can attempt to stuff more people into a Ford than any other group at the Campus Chest Carnival. The group from UNC which stuffs the most people in the car will receive free tickets to the concert and a chance at a $100 prize if they break the current record. The present record is 38.

Human Survival: Utilitarian Approach To Our Problems

Human survivial in a world threatened by population growth may depend on "a utilitarian approach to utiliarian problems," an internationally prominent obstetrician said here last night.

Dr. Nicholson J. Eastman, presenting the first Merrimon Lecture at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, referred to the awesome population problem with these words:

"We face just two eventualities — either drastic reduction in birth rates during the next few decades or the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse (catastrophe).

"If anyone doubts this statement, let him recall that even today, as we sit here comfortable and well fed, famine rides amok in India."

It is fortunate, he said, that birth control pills and intrauterine devices have been introduced to control fertility. "The latter," he added, "hold high promise for use in developing countries."

Dr. Eastman is professor emeritus of obstetrics at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore and a consultant to the Ford Foundation in New York City.

He devoted most of his lecture to some of the ethical and philosophical problems facing obstetricians in the areas of abortions.

"In other branches of medicine," he said, "the objective of the physician is invariably to preserve life.

"Only in obstetrics is he asked from time to time to destroy life."

Under a popular utilitarian doctrine, Dr. Eastman said that abortion might be "good" and "right" under countelss circumstances. In Japan, for example, where about half of all pregnancies are termined by abortions, the procedure is considered "right" because it "contributes to the greatest happiness of the greatest number."

Dr. Eastman recognized changing attitudes about abortion and contraception. Obstetrics, including abortion, has become a favorite topic at dinner parties and in newspapers and magazines, he said.

He cited the liberalization of abortion laws in some foreign countries and reported that both obstetrical and legal groups in the U. S. are seeking "to liberalize somewhat the abortions laws in this country."

He concluded the special lecture with the comment. "It is indelibly clear that the issues before us ,not only population growth, but the countless individual problems met by obstetricians, demand a trend more and more toward the belief that a utilitarian approach is the right course.

CPU - A Chance To Discuss Politics With Newsmakers

How would you like a chance to discuss vital issues of the day personally with such nationally-known figures as John Kenneth Galbraith, Strom Thurmond, James Reston, Averill Harriman and Ross Barnett?

Students here have that opportunity through a unique protunity through a unique the Carolina Political Union.

Its purpose is to provide sponsorship for speakers in the field of public affairs and to promote debate among the selected membership.

Thus following a speaker's main address on campus, he may be invited to appear befor 30 CPU members, who can ask questions to their heart's content. A guest need not restrain himself, for the mass media is barred from the meeting.

The CPU originated in 1936 when students in the political science classes of the late professor E. J. Woodhouse agreed there was a place in the University community for such a non - partisan discussion group. They were concerned with the changes being injected into American society by the New Deal and were anxious to do more than merely observe the rising turmoil that was Europe in the mid-30's.

The Union thrived until 1954. Up until that time it brought to UNC a number of prominent governmental leaders, among them Senators Claude Pepper and Gerald Nye, Speaker Sam Rayburn, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Congressman John F. Kennedy.

Then, in the spring of 1964, the Union was reorganized on the initiative of several student enthusiasts. They made it tough to become a member — first because of the advantages of a small group and second because of the pertinence and timeliness of the discussions.

Members are chosen by a panel who reviews applications and then issues invitations to fill the number of openings. Knowledge and interest in political affairs and the ability to be articulate in discussions are the main factors looked for in prospective members.

Irish Have No Stranglehold On Patrick's Green

NEW YORK (UPI) — The wearing of the green will be the order of the day on March 17 for everyone from O'Grady to O'Hoffman, but no one knows why for sure.

The fact is, the Irish have no monopoly on green — it's the most common color on earth.

Scholars say we really don't know how or why the color green became so closely associated with the Irish and St. Patrick's Day.

"Most probably, green became the Irish color because of the remarkable brilliance of the color in the island's vegetation and because the green shamrock became the symbol of the Trinity," says Lawrence J. McCaffrey, professor of history at Marquette University and the secretary of the American Committee for Irish Studies.

Even the Irish tricolor of green, white and orange is far from being the greenest flag in the world. The distinction probably goes to Mauritania, a West African nation whose national banner is all green with a yellow star and crescent.

Soothing Color

Perhaps just because it is so common in our environment, green is a soothing color, psychologists say. That's one reason for its new use on surgical dressing gowns and as the standard color for operating rooms. Because of green's easy - on - the eyes qualities you'll also find it on card and pool tables.

Green became the "go" color in the motor world back in 1914, when the first red and green stop - and - go light was put up in Cleveland.

Campus Carnival Has 'Vice, Sadism'

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

"Vice" has finally arrived at Carolina. "Sadism" is here.

Naturally, these two popular activities will lure every student to today's Campus Carnival in the Intramural Field.

Festivities begin at 1 and last until 6 p.m. In between times students can prepare themselves for dates tonight by:

—throwing pies at smiling faces.

—tossing loaded baseballs at weighted bottles.

—a strip show by Winston Residence Hall.

Collection activities for the Campus Chest, sponsor of the event, began Monday. The Carolina Women's Council shined shoes Wednesday and yesterday in Y-Court and Lenoir Hall.

The shoeshine collected $110.55, according to "shoeshine" chairman Ellen Sugg. Last year the event netted about $40.

Money from the shoeshine goes to the Campus Chest.

Co-chairmen of this year's Chest drive, Ellen Lentz and Dave Bruenner said yesterday more than 300 solicitors are collecting money in residence halls, sororities, and fraternities. The drive will continue through Friday.

Tuesday an auction in Memorial Hall will have up for bidding, among other things, Dean of Women Catherine Carmichael's last African Violet, a TV set and a batch of home brew.

History Professor William Geer has consented to donate his famous "most treasured possession"—a red Bull Stamp. He uses it on student quizzes when the student, well, uh, shoots too much bull.

The auction will be preceded by a fashion show at 7 p.m. sponsored by the Fireside. Clothes will be given as prizes.

Carnival Barker Neil Thomas said more than 30 booths will be set up in Intramural Field. The King and Queen will be crowned this afternoon.

Money from the Campus Chest goes to the N. C. Heart Association, Murdoch Center for the retarded children at Butner, O'Berry Center in Goldsboro, Cerebral Palsy Hospital in Durham, and the World University Service.

The goal this year is $12,000. Miss Lentz said this comes to about $1 per student.

GALE HUNTER, Diane Longino and Sandy Kelso (left to right) are practicing in the Fireside for the Campus Chest Fashion Show. It will be given before the big auction Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Universities Must Prove Value–Sharp

DESMOINES, Iowa (AP) — Former UNC Chancellor Paul F. Sharp, new president of Drake University, said Thursday American universities are on trial today and must prove their relevance and value.

In his first appearance before Drake faculty and students since assuming the presidency on Tuesday, Dr. Sharp said.

"Higher education has raised such high hopes among so many of us that now we call upon it to prove its relevance and its value, to demonstrate its vitality and its leadership in a fast-changing, increasingly complex and unfamiliar society."

Sharp talked about the touchstones by which a university and the system of higher education is judged.

He listed these touchstones as ". . . the university's freedom, its quality of instruction and learning, the depth of its productive scholarship, research and creativity, and finally, the significance of its services to the larger world of which it is a part."

American universities are on trial, at least in part, he continued "because their expectations are distressingly conventional, their ambitions march with chain gang precision and their corporate images fit gray patterns of conformity lacking in distinctive character and personality."

Long Approves Cobb Proposal

Cobb Residence Hall is now an official member of Morehead Residence College. This is the first women's residence to be admitted to the college system.

Voting in East and West Cobb took place last week and the proposal to join Morehead passed unanimously. Dean of Men William Long approved the move.

Morehead College is now composed of Graham, Everett, Lewis, Stacy, Aycock and Cobb.

Morrison College and Nurses dorm are considered "brother-sister halls," but are not members of the same college.

Senators have been elected from each hall in Cobb to represent the residence hall in the college senate.

Drusylla Murray was elected Secretary of Morehead in a vote Tuesday. Representatives to the senate from the other residences will be elected in the general elections Tuesday.

At the Morehead Senate meeting held Tuesday night it was announced that a combo party would be held March 6.

The House and Grounds committee of the college announced plans to plant flowers around the lower quad and to place benches between Lewis and Aycock halls.

Taylor Wins Scholarship

Michael William Taylor, a sophomore from Macon, Ga., is next year's Paris Exchange scholar with the Ecole Superieure d'Electricite. The son of Dr. and Mrs. O. W. Taylor is a Greek major and plans to become an archaeologist.

Taylor is a member of the Academic Affairs Committee, the Baptist Student Union, the Student Party, Phi Eta Sigma the NROTC and the Sophomore Honors Program.

He will go to France in early July for intensive study of the French language and will begin teaching English at the Ecole Superieure in October. He plans to study Greek and archaeology at the Sorbonne in Paris. He will return here to continue his studies in the summer of 1967.

YMCA Interviews

Interviews for YMCA officers will be held Monday through Wednesday from 3-5 p.m. in room 203-A of the Y Building. Anyone interested in applying for president, vice president, secretary or treasurer should come by the YMCA offices and sign up for an interview time.

Counselor Picking

Freshman Orientation Counselor selection will be next Wednesday through Friday. Intested persons may sign up for interviews at GM information desk any time beginning today. They should complete an application blank which should be brought to the interviews.

Interviews will be from 5 to 8 p.m. except Friday when they will be from 5 to 6 p.m.

Library Schedule

Wilson Library has announced its schedule for the spring holidays:

Saturday, April 2—7:45 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Sunday, April 3—closed
Monday, April 4 to Friday April 8—9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Saturday, April 9—9 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Sunday, April 10—closed
Monday, April 11— 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Tuesday, April 12—resume regular schedule.

Medicare Blanks

They are available in the search of the Social Security Administration to contact 3.1 million senior citizens before a March 31 deadline imposed by the Medicare law.

Initially, some 2.5 million application blanks were distributed to nearly 34,000 main post offices. Additional forms are available as needed.

The supplemental program costs $3 a month and provides doctor bill and other benefits. Everyone 65 or older is eligible for the basic hospital benefits under Medicare.

Senior citizens who reached 65 before 1966 face a two year delay if they do not sign up by March 31.

Candidates Needed

Some residence halls do not yet have people running for senate and other offices. Election of these officers will take place in the spring elections Tuesday.

MRC President Lew Brown said any residence hall president not having candidates running from his hall should contact Brown before Tuesday.

'Sing Out '66' Packs Coliseum

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

CHARLOTTE — "Sing Out '66" drew the largest crowd in the history of the Coliseum here Wednesday night and had more than 14,000 people on their feet applauding them for the last 15 minutes of the show.

Charlotte police estimated they turned away more than 1,000 cars filled with people who were trying to get into the free two - hour show.

The group of about 120, who range in age from 15 to 24, will be at the University in Chapel Hill for two shows Monday.

The turnout in Charlotte was so large that the stage's background curtain had to be taken down so people who were sitting behind the stage could see.

The show, sponsored by WBTV in Charlotte, began with the cast of 120 charging on to the stage and singing a loud and fast version of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Dressed in blues, yellows, reds, greens and many other colors, the rainbow - like group sang for two hours without stopping. Their songs are loud, fast and inspiring.

No writing can describe the just plain good feeling that comes from the group. One thing is obvious, the cast has the best time of all.

The group consists of Negroes, (one an ex-street fighter and one a refugee from Watts), Cubans, Scots, English, Finns and many others. They are about evenly split between girls and boys.

All the songs they sing except two, were written by members of the cast. Since they started touring the country last fall they have written over 50 songs. Shortly before their show in Charlotte they composed one for North Carolina — it's great.

Of the group 48 of them are high school age. But they aren't missing any of their education. They have a traveling school with them and study about eight hours a day.

One of the girls, Cati Quinn, is the daughter of Anthony Quinn and the granddaughter of Cecil B. deMille.

Another is the daughter of Bob Richards, the Wheaties man on television.

But all these young people have dropped their past. They are looking to the future, and a young lady named Kathe Green can tell you about it better than I can.

"I was chased down the freeway at 105 miles per hour by the sheriff of Los Angeles. He never caught me, but his idea did. Entertainment has always been my line, but rebellion is my nature. I was chucked out of 11 schools, and left home at 15.

"When I got the invitation to travel with "Sing-Out '66" I decided to check my priorities. If American youth could create a new image of America at a time when anti-Americanism is growing so strong, the whole course of events might change. I knew the thing was to channel all my energy in the right direction. My idea of Moral Re-Armament is to do just that."

Frats 'Hold Breath' Awaiting Decision On Social Ban Rule

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

All 24 of UNC's social fraternities will regain women's visiting privileges today if Dean of Men William G. Long signs the new "Interim Fraternity Visiting Agreement 1965-66."

The agreement, voted into IFC by-laws last night, will include seven new sections agreed upon following the disorder last weekend.

The IFC also unanimously passed a resolution stating its outrage at the way in which the investigation has been held concerning the action of a few irresponsible individuals during the course of last weekend.

The resolution states that the "unfortunate incidents have been misrepresented as being indicative of the conduct of the fraternity system as a whole."

The Council expressed concern that the entire fraternity system has been unfairly indicted for the misconduct of a few individuals as a result of the "injudicious and unorthodox manner in which the incidents have been handled by the Office of the Dean of Men."

The solution states that irrepairable damage has been done to the image of the fraternity system in the eyes of the public due to the incidents of last weekend and the manner in which they were handled resulting in inaccurate, exaggerated and biased accounts of what actually happened.

The normal established procedures for the investigation have not been followed. Events such as those of last weekend are subject to investigation by the Attorney General of Student Government, and the suspected individuals are subject to a subsequent trial by the appropriate judicial body.

The IFC made the modifications in the Women's Visiting Agreement realizing that such modifications will improve the fraternity system, the IFC and the University community at large.

The additions to the new Visiting Agreement are:

The president, officers and executive board of each house will be held accountable for the maintenance of gentlemanly conduct by their members and guests at their respective fraternity functions.

Any fraternity agent guilty of violating the state or local laws with respect to the public consumption and display of alcohol will be subject to IFC Court disciplinary action which shall include a fine of at least $10.

A fraternity which fails to clean its grounds by 9 a.m. on the morning following a fraternity function will be subject to an automatic fine of $25 to be imposed by the IFC Court.

Any fraternity in violation of Chapel Hill Noise Ordiances will be subject to trial by the IFC Court. (This includes the loud playing of music between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.)

The IFC and its court recognize their responsibility in enforcing this agreement. Representatives of the IFC will be assigned to be responsible for each fraternity on Friday and Saturday nights and for morning clean-ups. Specific IFC representatives will inspect the public areas at each house prior to closing hours.

Violations of the rules and regulations under the visiting agreement will be subject to the jurisdiction of the IFC Court or of the Men's Honor Council.

Lindsay told the Council that he would notify them if the new agreement was not signed today.

Candidates Picked For College Vote

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Candidates for offices of a residence college made up of Joyner, Alexander and Connor residence halls have been chosen. Nominations will be opened, however, for all offices until 8 p.m. today.

Candidates chosen Wednesday night by the present residence hall officers included Governor Ken Giles, of Alexander; Social Lt. Governor, Sandy Hobgood of Joyner; Academic Lt. Governor, Wayne Justesen of Joyner and Mel Manson of Connor; Secretary, Steve Rusmissel of Joyner; Treasurer, Andrew Mackie of Alexander and Dave Baughn of Connor.

Rick Draper of Joyner, acting governor of the residence college which has not yet been named, said prospective candidates can submit petitions signed by any 50 residents from the residence college to him by 8 p.m. today for approval.

The residence college senate will be made up of 14 members including four senators and president from Joyner and Connor halls and three senators and president from Alexander hall.

The residence college treasurer will handle the money from all the halls in the college. "This will make it less likely that the hall will overdraw its financial accounts," Draper said.

The Men's Residence Council has handled the funds for residence halls in the past.

Harry Day, housemaster of Alexander, said, "The residence college system will provide a better academic and social atmosphere for the people in the residence college area. We hope to get the residence college constitution ratified, officers elected and our residence college in full operation with the elections Tuesday.

"The name for the residence college is to be chosen later," Day said.

Colleges Get Money Late

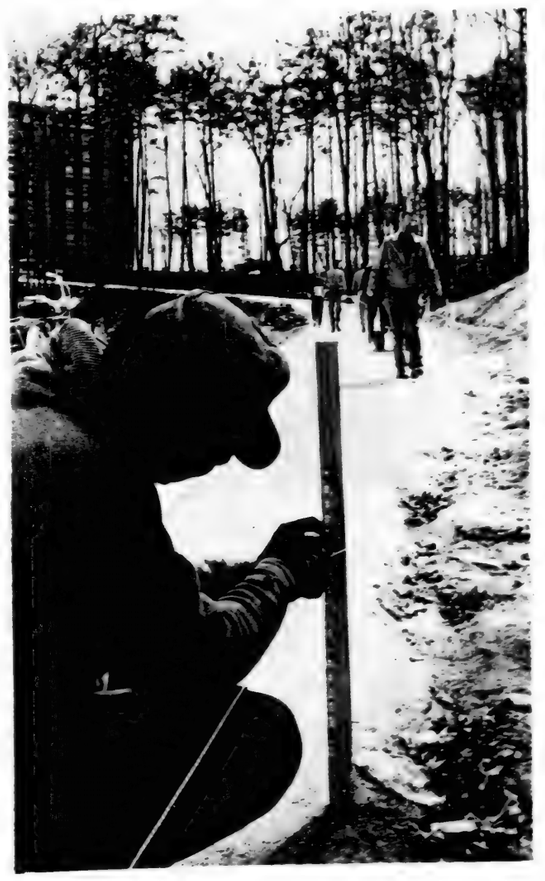
Funds earmarked for residence colleges are being released now after a two-month delay.

Scott College (composed of Parker, Avery and Teague) received their money Monday after their constitution was approved by the dean of men and the MRC.

The major hold-up in the funds came as the result of a requirement by Dean of Men William Long that each college have an approved constitution and duly elected officers.

Long said his requirement was to "assure financial stability" in the structure of each college.

The allocation of funds to the colleges was approved in a campus-wide election last fall.



A SIDEWALK AT LAST! Work started yesterday on the sidewalk between Morrison and Kenan Fieldhouse. Here a worker is setting up a string to make sure the walk is straighter than the one Morrison residents built last week. Bricks in the background were part of the old walk which was taken up Tuesday.

Harold Cooley Will Address YDC Gathering

Rep. Harold Cooley of the new Fourth District will speak at 8:30 p.m. today in Roland Parker Lounge.

Cooley's address will be a part of the winter rally of the North Carolina College Federation of Young Democratic Clubs which begins here at 4:30 p.m. today with registration in GM. Over 100 students from colleges across the state are expected to attend the rally.

he rally which is the first one to be conducted here since the federation was established in 1961, is being co-sponsored by the Carolina YDC and the Orange County YDC.

Cooley's address tonight will be his first in Orange County since the country became a part of the Fourth District which Cooley represents.

His address is opened to the public and a reception will follow in GM. After the reception there will be a combo party featuring the Seductives in Graham Residence Hall social room.

Tom Finan, attorney general of Maryland, will address the conference at 12:30 p.m. Saturday at The Pines.

Misgivings About MRA

"Sing Out '66' comes to Carolina Monday: While we wish the students in this particular group well, The Daily Tar Heel cannot endorse the program.

We cannot, not because of the attitudes of those directly involved — we believe they are sincere in their desire for a better America and a better world — but because of their association with Moral ReArmament, Inc. of New York.

Moral Re-Armament is an ideology based on four points: purity, love, unselfishness and honesty. With these concepts we have no quarrel. But these are only slogans — slogans to disguise Moral Re-Armament's desire for, in the founder's own words, a "God-controlled fascist dictatorship."

Athletic Director Chuck Erickson, on the recommendation of a friend, invited them to appear in Carmichael Auditorium. He raised almost $5,000 from friends — friends whose names he will not divulge — to pay their expenses and he took care of the arrangements.

Lt. Col. Kenneth Slaker and Capt. Rex W. Warner, who head the ROTC units here attended the organizational meeting two weeks ago.

At that time they promised to have their men turn out in uniform for the Sing Out tomorrow night, according to Slaker. In return for their attendance, the AFROTC men will get "points in leadership."

We think these two men, like Erickson, have made a mistake.

Bud Linthicum, John Ruffin, two of the three who came here this week to lay the final groundwork for the appearance of Sing Out, oozed enthusiasm.

They doubled up their fists on the table, they talked in the declarative, they preached the cause — Moral Re-Armament.

They said it is not against anything. It is for. For God and mother and country and honesty and goodness and dedication and determination — for the other life here and now.

They say Sing Out is just a platform from which students from dozens of campuses caught up in this movement can sing out their dream for a new America.

But is it?

Or is it instead, a fine group of youngsters who are being used by Moral Re-Armament Inc.? This is a question over which newspapermen, religious leaders and political activists from the right and left are puzzling.

Part of the question is money. Where does MRA get it and where does it go. MRA, a tax-free "non-political" organization, isn't saying. Part is motivation. What else, besides God, mother and country, does MRA stand for?

One thing is certain, Moral Re-Armament, Inc. is drawing some fire.

Allen Hoffard, a spokesman for the U. S. Justice Department, told the DTH he thought Moral Re-Armament is "silly."

"They go out and hold meetings and tell everybody to be good and everything will be all right," he said. "It is a pseudo-religious operation following an illusion."

Curtis Gans, a former editor of the DTH who is now executive director of Americans for Democratic Action asked, "Have you ever had any cotton candy? Well, that's what Moral Re-Armament is. Tastes good, but that's all there is to it."

Gans described the group as being part of the "muddled middle" politically. "The National Review and the Socialist Party have both torn them apart," he said.

Honesty is supposed to be one of the basic concepts of MRA, yet its spokesmen are not honest with you.

They deny, vigorously for instance, that MRA has any religious or political overtones.

Either they are kidding or they do not know the history of the organization for whom they are busy raising money and making converts. We hope — and fear — it is the latter.

The New York World-Telegram on Aug. 26, 1936, quotes the Rev. Frank Buchman, a Lutheran minister who founded Moral Re-Armament as saying, "I thank heaven for a man like Adolf Hitler, who built a front line of defense against the anti-Christ of Communism. The world needs the dictatorship of the spirit of God. They (social problems) could be solved within a God-controlled democracy, or perhaps I should say theocracy, and they could be solved through a God-controlled fascist dictatorship."

Buchman has not been repudiated but rather is now revered as the great, beloved, founding father. In the light of this, need we say more?

We believe that Nelson Schwab is a man who will represent the Class of 1967 in such a way as to bring credit to the Senior Class and to the University.

His ability to serve as Vice - President of this class is easily shown by his past activities. Nelson served on the Men's Council for two years and is presently serving on the Interfraternity Council Court. He has served on the Elections Board and on the Campus Chest and has been an orientation Counselor.

Nelson is well respected by his classmates and by us. You may ask who we are; we are the following:

Charlie Shaffer, President of the Class of 1964
John Harmon, President of the Class of 1966
Armistead Maupin, Vice - President of the Class of 1966

Social Chairman

Martha Menefee – UP

What is a Social Chairman? We believe a girl running for this position must possess the social graces necessary to plan and carry out the social function which will bring both credit and money to the Senior Class.

Martha Menefee is a pert lass from Durham who will keep the Senior Class smiling with her ingenuity and Southern Charm.

She has already accomplished a great deal as a member of the Orientation Committee, the Campus Chest, and the student Credit Committee.

In high school she served on the talent show committee and was head cheerleader. She also received the Gold Letter Certificate for outstanding service to the school.

We think that Martha will do a great job; and in addition here is who "we" are:

John Harmon — Pres. of Class of '66
Armstead Maupin — Vice Pres. of Class of '66
Carol Payne — Sec. of Class of '66
Samantha Townsend — Social Chairman of Class of '66
Kathy Cannon — Treasurer of Class of '66
Lindsay Freeman — I. F. C. Chariman-elect
Tom White — Treasurer of Student Body
Dave Bruenner — Chairman of Campus Chest
Joe Goodman — Pres. of Old West
George Simpson — Pres. - elect of Sigma Alpha Epsilon
Jean Miller — Pres. elect of Pi Beta Phi
Mary King — Homecoming Queen '66, C. U. Queen '66
Bob Hunter — Chairman of M. R. C Court
Tom Roberts — Co - Capt. Varsity Soccer Team

Presidential Candidates

Jim Brame – SP

As you knew, the spring election for many campus offices takes place next Tuesday. We are interested in the outcome at the polls and want to share some of our thoughts with you.

The office of Senior Class President differs from most class offices in that there are actually some responsibilities which the Senior President must perform. Among these are the many preparations which must be made for commencement. A Senior Class President must be willing to devote himself wholeheartedly to his job.

Of the two candidates for the office, we feel that Jim Brame is the more qualified. Jim was the president of the class of 1967 during the freshman and sophomore years. He has served in the Student Legislature, was chairman of the Campus Affairs Committee, co-chairman of the UNC delegation to the State Student Legislature, and delegate to the National Student Congress.

In addition, Jim has served on the staff of Freshman Camp and was an orientation counselor. Scholastically, Jim is a Dean's List student and is a member of Phi Eta Sigma.

Jim Brame knows the problems of the Class of '67. Through his experience and perseverance we feel that he can best lead the Class of '67 during its final undergraduate year at Carolina. We ask you to join with us in supporting and voting for Jim Brame for Senior Class President.

Sincerely,
Bryon McCoy, Governor of Morrison College
Jerri Moser, President, Carolina Women's Council
Leith Merrow, Chairman, Women's Honor Council
Sherry O'Donnel, Student Body Secretary
Mel Wright, President of Junior Class
Brit Gordon, Student Body Vice President

Rick Crowder – UP

What is the President of the Senior Class for? He is supposed to plan the class activities both social and cultural for the year and is supposed to work industriously to present a class that is more than admirable in the eyes of the University.

As we have said before, this man needs to be industrious, for with a class office accomplishments are hard to come by. We believe that Rick can do things with the Senior Class that have never been done before. He has good ideas and the industry with which to carry them out.

Rick's industry has been shown already in his class activities. He has served well on the Men's Honor Council for two and one - half years in addition to working as a full - time undergraduate assistant in the Intramural Department. He has sacrificed a great deal of time in both capacities devoting his entire energy to carrying out these specific jobs well. This is precisely the reason that he will serve well as the President of the Class of 1967.

We urge our fellow classmates to do as well and vote for Rick Crowder.

Misgivings About MRA

"Sing Out '66' comes to Carolina Monday: While we wish the students in this particular group well, The Daily Tar Heel cannot endorse the program.

We cannot, not because of the attitudes of those directly involved — we believe they are sincere in their desire for a better America and a better world — but because of their association with Moral Re-Armament, Inc. of New York.

Moral Re-Armament is an ideology based on four points: purity, love, unselfishness and honesty. With these concepts we have no quarrel. But these are only slogans — slogans to disguise Moral Re-Armament's desire for, in the founder's own words, a "God-controlled fascist dictatorship."

Athletic Director Chuck Erickson, on the recommendation of a friend, invited them to appear in Carmichael Auditorium. He raised almost $5,000 from friends — friends whose names he will not divulge — to pay their expenses and he took care of the arrangements.

Lt. Col. Kenneth Slaker and Capt. Rex W. Warner, who head the ROTC units here attended the organizational meeting two weeks ago.

At that time they promised to have their men turn out in uniform for the Sing Out tomorrow night, according to Slaker. In return for their attendance, the AFROTC men will get "points in leadership."

We think these two men, like Erickson, have made a mistake.

Bud Linthicum, John Ruffin, two of the three who came here this week to lay the final groundwork for the appearance of Sing Out, oozed enthusiasm.

They doubled up their fists on the table, they talked in the declarative, they preached the cause — Moral Re-Armament.

They said it is not against anything. It is for. For God and mother and country and honesty and goodness and dedication and determination — for the other life here and now.

They say Sing Out is just a platform from which students from dozens of campuses caught up in this movement can sing out their dream for a new America.

But is it?

Or is it instead, a fine group of youngsters who are being used by Moral Re-Armament Inc.? This is a question over which newspapermen, religious leaders and political activists from the right and left are puzzling.

Part of the question is money. Where does MRA get it and where does it go. MRA, a tax-free "non-political" organization, isn't saying. Part is motivation. What else, besides God, mother and country, does MRA stand for?

One thing is certain, Moral Re-Armament, Inc. is drawing some fire.

Allen Hoffard, a spokesman for the U. S. Justice Department, told the DTH he thought Moral Re-Armament is "silly."

"They go out and hold meetings and tell everybody to be good and everything will be all right," he said. "It is a pseudo-religious operation following an illusion."

Curtis Gans, a former editor of the DTH who is now executive director of Americans for Democratic Action asked, "Have you ever had any cotton candy? Well, that's what Moral Re-Armament is. Tastes good, but that's all there is to it."

Gans described the group as being part of the "muddled middle" politically. "The National Review and the Socialist Party have both torn them apart," he said.

Honesty is supposed to be one of the basic concepts of MRA, yet its spokesmen are not honest with you.

They deny, vigorously for instance, that MRA has any religious or political overtones.

Either they are kidding or they do not know the history of the organization for whom they are busy raising money and making converts. We hope — and fear — it is the latter.

The New York World-Telegram on Aug. 26, 1936, quotes the Rev. Frank Buchman, a Lutheran minister who founded Moral Re-Armament as saying, "I thank heaven for a man like Adolf Hitler, who built a front line of defense against the anti-Christ of Communism. The world needs the dictatorship of the spirit of God. They (social problems) could be solved within a God-controlled democracy, or perhaps I should say theocracy, and they could be solved through a God-controlled fascist dictatorship."

Buchman has not been repudiated but rather is now revered as the great, beloved, founding father. In the light of this, need we say more?

Morse: Goldwater Would Be Better

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said yesterday he now thinks "the American people would be much better off it Barry Goldwater had been elected President" in 1964 instead of Lyndon B. Johnson.

Goldwater, Morse told the Senate, wouldn't have had a Republican - controlled Congress, but a Democratic-controlled House and Senate which would have imposed checks on escalation of the war in Viet Nam.

Democrats, he said, have been in "a whiplash position" giving partisan support to a Democratic administration.

Morse said Johnson was elected in 1964 because he took campaign positions on Viet Nam "directly opposite of the positions of Barry Goldwater."

He added that when he campaigned for Johnson in 14 states "I didn't have the slightest idea he would out-Goldwater Goldwater."

Morse made his statements in a long Senate speech in which he renewed his demand that Johnson go before the United Nations and propose a cease-fire in Viet Nam, to be policed by U. N. peackeeping forces.

Morse said the United States is not making "a good faith attempt" in the United Nations to see what the Security Council will or will not do to bring about a cease-fire.

He said the United States made its proposal for U. N. debate on the Viet Nam war "with an olive branch in one hand and bombs in the other."

Indonesian Students Protest Communists In Government

SINGAPORE (AP)— Thousands of Indonesian students took to the streets of Jakarta yesterday in anti - Communist demonstrations and occupied two government ministries, informants in Singapore reported.

The students ignored a broadcast plea by President Sukarno urging the people to cooperate with the armed forces in restoring calm and stability to the nation.

The students demanded the resignation of Pro-Communist members of the cabinet, including Sukarno's right hand man, First Deputy Premier Subandrio, who also is foreign minister.

The Singapore sources said the demonstrations were staged as Sukarno was reported resisting pressure from the new military regime to set up a new cabinet that will drop Subandrio.

Americans Had To Shoot Vietnamese Who Panicked

WASHINGTON (AP) —Panic broke out among Vietnamese mountain tribesmen in a Communist-besieged Special Forces camp last week, it was learned yesterday, and American servicemen shot about seven of them during evacuation operations.

Ten more tribesmen were killed by one of their own grenades during another panic two days later, just before the Reds overran and destroyed the Ashau camp.

It was understood that military authorities in Saigon are conducting an investigation to determine what went on in the mud and log fortress 375 miles northwest of Saigon, near the Laotian border.

Preliminary reports reaching here said the trouble began on March 10 when helicopters began evacuating wounded from the threatened camp.

These reports said that some o fthe hired civilian irregulars, called Montagnards, panicked during the loading and tried to force their way aboard the aircraft.

The Green Beret Americans beat and kicked them off and finally were forced to shoot about seven, the reports said, before the helicopters could take off with four wounded Americans.

When the evacuation aircraft returned the next day there was more panic and confusion among the tribes, but this time the Americans managed to beat them off with rifle butts.

On the third day one of the tribesmen, apparently in a dash for a helicopter, threw a grenade that killed 10 Montagnards.

The reports said that of 400 defenders at the camp, 190 were evacuated over the three-day period. Seventeen of these were U. S. Special Forces troops including five who died.

The Communists, estimated at battalion size of about 600 men or more, eventually overran the camp, destroying or burning every building in the outpost.

Injunction Prohibits Klan Rally

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Dan Moore yesterday said an injunction has been issued blocking a Ku Klux Klan rally scheduled near Maxton March 27.

Moore told newsmen a hearing would be held later on the injunction, but, "I don't know the date or any other facts of the court order at this time."

Negroes Plan March For Today

EDENTON (AP) — Negro leaders planned a 14-mile march down busy U. S. 17 from Hertford to Edenton this morning, defying a request from Gov. Dan Moore to negotiate their protests before marching.

Meanwhile, David S. Coltrane, chairman of the State Good Neighbor Council, worked with Edenton Mayor John A. Mitchner Jr. and W. E. Bond, chairman of the Perquimans County Commission, to name a 15-member biracial group Thursday.

It will discuss 15 desegregation demands made by the Negroes. Coltrane said it would meet "at the earliest opportunity, either Thursday night or Friday morning."

Col. Charles A. Speed, State Highway Patrol commander, said in Raleigh, "No additional manpower will be used for the march."

He said the regular contingent of patrolmen in the area would patrol the march route "to handle traffic and keep law and order."

Coltrane said he did not expect any trouble during the march.

Gov. Moore also opposed plans to use school children in the march.

Federal Segregation Guidelines

HICKORY (AP) — North Carolina's superintendent of public instruction said yesterday the new federal guidelines on school desegregation appear "considerably more restrictive than those applicable last year."

Dr. Charles F. Carroll made the observation in an interview following a meeting of Western North Carolina school officials and officials of the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"School officials recognize that these rules are more strict," Dr. Carroll said, "And are asking important and intelligent questions seeking clarification."

He declined personal comment on the guidelines, saying many of his questions are the same school administrators and their attorneys are asking.

The federal guidelines have as their main purpose the elimination of dual school systems, one for Negroes and one for whites.

"They require more pupil integration and more faculty integration," Dr. Carroll said, "and the world substantial is used.

"All we knew was that substantial is somebody's idea of something sizeable."

U.S. Death Toll In War

WASHINGTON (AP)—More than 2,000 American fighting men have been killed in combat in Viet Nam and nearly 10,000 wounded since President Johnson ordered U. S. ground units into the war on a big scale last midsummer.

Almost half of the slain have fallen and more than half the wounded have been hit in the first 10 weeks of this year.

A report yesterday of Viet Nam casualties in the week ended last Saturday showed 100 U. S. servicemen killed in action and 808 wounded.

The killed total for that period was well below the 240 carried as a record for this year. That figure was reached in the seven - day period ending last Nov. 20 and included casualties in the big Ia Dang battle near the Cambodian border.

The wounded total for last week, though high, did not set a record. In the week ended Feb. 28, the pentagon counted up 849 wounded in action.

The new weekly report brought the over-all roster of U. S. combat dead in Viet Nam to 2,559 since Jan. 1, 1961 — the point in time from which the Pentagon charts the human cost of U. S. involvement in the Viet Nam war.

The roll of wounded rose to 12,706 names in the week ended last Saturday.

Of these wounded, 168 have subsequently died — a rate of only about 1.3 per cent. This is the lowest even in any U.S. WAR.

The Army, with the greatest number of men involved in ground combat, has taken the most casualties so far — 1,694 killed and 8,452 wounded.

The Marines, with both ground and air units in action, rank next in casualties with 616 dead and 3,529 wounded.

The Air Force had 155 dead and 397 wounded.

Gemini Was In Trouble

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — "We have serious trouble here," came the calm voice of command pilot Neil Armstrong. "We're tumbling end over end."

That was the dramatic message flashed to earth from the disabled Gemini 8 spacecraft Wednesday night signalling the start of one of the most dangerous episodes in the U. S. space program.

The tape recorded communications were made public yesterday — after being withheld 19 hours by space officials for study. The two weary Gemini astronauts are now homeward bound.

Space officials said they could not tell from the conversation exactly what went wrong — and wouldn't know until the onboard tapes from the spacecraft and the astronauts returned for debriefing.

The voices of Gemini 8 pilots Neil Armstrong and David Scott were calm and crisp despite the rapid - fire series of events that clipped the flight short.

It happened when the spacecraft was out of touch with the ground over China at about 6:42 p.m. (EST). The spacecraft was connected to the Agena target ship which the astronauts had linked up with just a few minutes earlier.

It was the first time two spacecraft had linked together in space — and the first time that spacecraft trouble had forced the early termination of a U. S. manned space flight.

The Gemini astronauts gave the first word of trouble to the tracking ship Coastal Sentry Quebec. The tapes were badly garbled but the best explanation of what happened seemed to come from command pilot Armstrong at the controls:

"It's rolling and we can't turn anything off."

The roll was to the left, and there were indications that a hand control that fires the maneuvering jet thrusters had struck in "on" positon. Armstrong quickly separated from the fuel-loaded Agena, backing his spacecraft away with spare trusters.

Position control jets were turned on in the Agena and target vehicle. Finally, aboard the Gemini spacecraft, Armstrong was able to stop the roll and stabilize the ship.

As the tapes were played, the homeward - bound astronauts neared the first stop on the trip back to Cape Kennedy.

Officials said it would be ten days before the Gemini 8 astronauts would be allowed to talk to tha public. Flight directors want the time to wring out the memories of the astronauts on the trouble sequence. Future flights hang in the balance of what they find out.

Bomb Found

PALOMARES BEACH, Spain (AP) — A U. S. H-bomb missing since it fell from a crashing nuclear bomber two months ago has been found in 2,500 feet of water on the Mediterranean Sea bottom five miles off this shore, authorities said last night.

Americans Seeking Viet Cong Regiment

SAIGON (AP) — A broad American quest for native Viet Cong in the D-Zone jungles turned into an urgent hunt yesterday for a regiment of North Vietnamese regulars. Intelligence agents said the regulars were deployed in the zone only 35 miles north of Saigon.

U. S. B52 jets saturated the suspected staging area with hundreds of tons of bombs. They struck only about four miles ahead of the vanguard of nearly 10,000 troops slashing paths with machetes and jungle knives toward a showdown with the regiment — perhaps 1,200 men.

This was one of 40 air assaults in support of Operation Silver City, a ground drive launched 10 days ago.

U. S. Air Force and Navy air raids on North Viet Nam stirred up a few surface-to-air missiles and also some enemy jets believed to be Soviet-built MIG21S, supersonic fighters. But the pilots evaded the missiles and the MIGS elected not to challenge them.

One F105 Thunderchief fighter-bomber and its pilot were lost, apparently to corventional ground fire, in a raid on a highway bridge at Dien Bien Phu, 180 miles west of Hanoi. Other raiders said the plane plunged into a hill and burst into flames.

House Subcommittee Rejects Scrapping Of NDEA Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House education subcommittee rebuffed President Johnson yesterday in his attempt to cut federal funds for a college loan program.

The subcommittee, composed of six Democrats and three Republicans, voted unanimously to insist that the administration spend the full $190 million already authorized for the program under the National Defense Education Act.

It was the strongest action yet taken in a Congressional revolt against Johnson's intention to ease the strain on his budget by cutting three long-standing education programs.

The other two help land-grant colleges and schools which have enrollments swollen by heavy federal employment in their districts. Both proposals also are in trouble in Congress.

Johnson already has been forced to retreat from his original plan for phasing out the NDEA student loan program this year in favor of a new federally guaranteed and subsidized commercial loan program.

Protests from the banking community that it couldn't pick up the program that quickly led the administration to propose a one-year extension of the NDEA program, but with the federal contribution limited to $150 million. And in order to get any of that, colleges would have to show they could not meet loan needs from private sources.

I'm worried.

Rumors have it that I'm to be fired and replaced by some unknown by the name of Sebastian.

All I'd like to know is, who's going to fire me? You see ballfans, this kid is his own boss. Sure, papers can refuse to print my column. But you know and I know that in so doing they'd be throwing all their readership right out the window.

I'm worried for a different reason.

Today I face the supreme test of my career. All week I've been here at College Park, Maryland. All week I've hung around camera crews and NCAA officials trying to find out information about tonight's games.

See, I have this string going. Seven for seven in the ACC tourney. I'd kind of like to close out the basketball season with four more correct picks.

But it's really tough. I've been flipping coins all week. I even dressed up as an old lady and sneaked around to local motels reading the palms of sleeping players.

Most of the people around here are going with Kentucky over Texas Western in the championship game. They predict close games tonight, but they're sure of the outcome.

I'm not so sure.

Last night I sacked out hoping for some edifying vision to seep into one of my dreams. But some guy in the next room had a TV turned up to a glass-shattering level.

For the first time in my life my confidence is really shook. To tell the truth ballfans, I just can't be sure who is going to win.

However, I've been watching Duke all year. They play up to the standard of the competition and they refuse to choke. Pick DUKE.

So I guess I'm out on a limb.

The next question is, who will face Duke in the final game tomorrow night?

I'm betting on Texas Western.

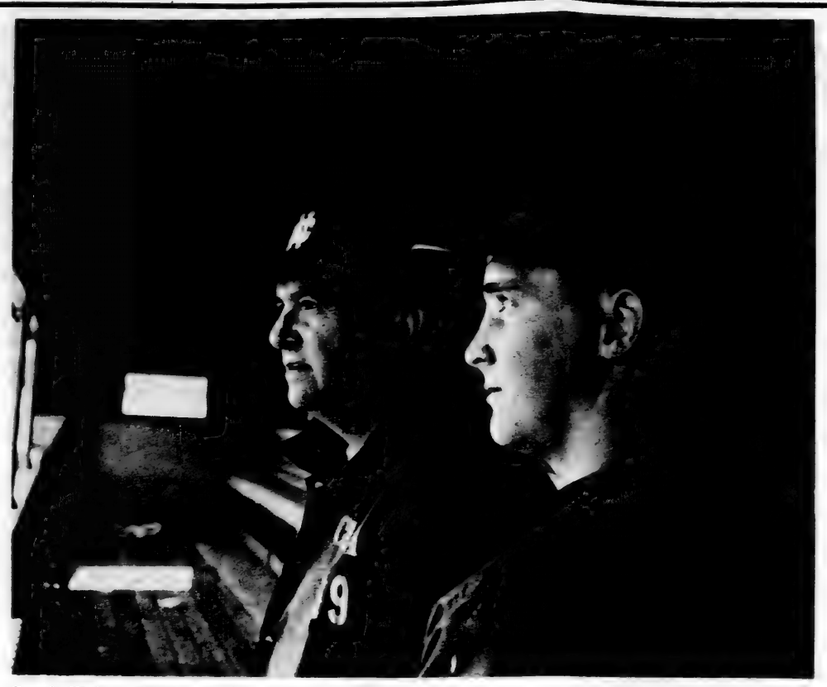
Now that I've made up my mind my confidence is flowing back to me. I haven't flipped my lid, ballfans.

DUKE over Kentucky and TEXAS WESTERN over Utah.

Then Duke will beat Western and Kentucky will beat Utah and that will be that.

See if I'm wrong. If I am I'll step down from my throne and Sebastain can take over.

But I'm not worried (much).



Coach Walter Rabb and first baseman Danny Talbott look ahead to North Carolina's baseball opener today at East Carolina. Rabb is beginning his 10th season as head coach at UNC, and Talbott hopes to duplicate or improve on last year's totals, when he batted .362 with 24 RBI.

Redskins-Run, Shoot

By KEITH DRUM

The nation's fifth highest scoring machine, revolving around the tenth highest individual marksman, joins the three top-ranked teams at College Park this weekend. Unranked but not unproven Utah, with a 23-6 record pits its 96.5 average against Texas Western's high-rated defense in tonight's second game.

Utah, also a great rebounding team, thirteenth nationally, was handicapped when 6'7 senior George Fisher suffered a broken leg. Fisher was Utah's second best rebounder and scorer.

Still Coach Jack Gardner, a veteran of 19 years and 551 victories at Utah and Kansas State, can field a formidable five and substitute freely.

Lyndon MacKay is a 6-6 sophomore forward who averages in double figures, rebounds well, and does a good job defensively. Unfortunately, he suffered a pulled tendon against Oregon State and may not be at full strength.

Jeff Ockel, 6'7 sophomore, replaced Fisher and provided the spark in the regionals. Against University of Pacific's high-scoring Keith Swagerty, he scored 10 points and checked Swagerty at 16. More important, Ockel, a 225 pounder, held his own on the boards with the nation's third leading rebounder. Ockel has appeared in all of the Redskins' games and carries a 7.0 average.

Sophomore guard Mervin Jackson, 6'2, is the potential energy in Utah's attack. Jackson threw in 19 against UNC, several on spectacular "stuffs." A great leaper, Jackson must play to his potential if the Utes are to take the crown.

Richard Tate, 5'11 senior guard, is the key to the Utes' attack. He directs the offense and alerts the defense. A fine outside shooter (12.5), Tate is a flawless ball-handler and pinpoint passer. His size, 180, makes him tough in close situations. Tate's denfese of Texas Western's Bobby Joe Hill will be vital to the outcome.

The most dominating player in the tourney will be 6'4 senior Jerry Chambers. At 27.7, Chambers finished tenth among the nation's scorers. His 73 points in the Far-West Regionals (2 games) lifted his overall average to 28.3. More than a great shooter, 56 per cent from the floor, Chambers gathers in 11.9 rebounds per game and plays a ferocious denfese.

Another great leaper, Chambers was Player of the Year in the Western Athletic Conference and earned MVP in the regionals. Jerry, who needs 69 points at College Park to surpass the four-game tourney mark of 141 set by Clyde Lovelette of Kansas in 1952, hails from Washington, D. C. Although overlooked by selectors of All-American teams, Chambers has been looked-over by pro scouts.

Utah loves to run and shoot and tallied triple-digits eleven times this season. The Redskins hit their high mark with 131 against New Mexico State. Utah connects on 48 per cent of their field goal attempts. If the sophomores continue to blend with Tate and Chambers, Utah could keep the NCAA crown in the West.

Carolina Opens Season Against Pirates Today

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer

The Tar Heels journey to Greenville today to face East Carolina College in the season's opener.

An old hackneyed phrase says that "ya' can't win 'em all unless ya' win the first one," and the first one looks pretty tough.

The Pirates have been rated by the AP pre-season polls as the probable champions of the Southern Conference.

The Tar Heels will face a battery of Jim Raynor and Richard "Rooster" Narron.

PROBABLE LINEUP

1b—Danny Talbott
2b—Butch Watts or Charlie Thomas
3b—L. E. Sawyer or Rod Thompson
SS—Bruce Bolich
LF—Gene Link or Bob Hume
CF—Charlie Carr
RF—Bob Bonczek
C—John Shaw
P—Mike McLaughlin

Raynor, a junior who was ineligible last season, is the right-handed ace of the Pirates pitching staff. Narron is their catcher and outstanding sophomore. He was a high school All American.

East Carolina has eight letterman returning from a club which posted a 16-7 record last year.

Their offensive attack is lead by co-captains Fred Rodriquez and Bob Kaylor. Rodriquez, a second baseman, hit for a .307 average last season. Left-fielder Kaylor posted a .319 average.

Rabb will employ the strength of the Tar Heel pitching staff today. Co-captain Mike McLaughlin will start. McLaughlin will be backed up by Danny Walker, Beattie Leonard and Mike Flannigan.

The Tar Heels open at home next Wednesday against Springfield College.

Graham Bells Down Lewis, Win Morehead Championship

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

The Graham Bells won the Morehead College intramural basketball championship by blasting the Lewis Browns on Wednesday, 61-35. Steve Balcolm led the Bells with 23 points while Bob Coleman had 11. Charles Hamrick had 15 for the Browns.

The Morrison C Cavaliers won the Morrison College crown by downing the Morrison I Inebriates, 64-47. Scott Peterson rifled in 26 points for the Cavaliers while Mack Shipper had 14 and Glenn Cuthrell 12.

DKE Blue moved into the quarterfinals of the fraternity division as they squeezed by Phi Delt White, 37-35. Stewart Hap scored 11 points and Norton Willis 10 for the DKE's. Harry Stovall had 11 for Phi Delt. The Phi Delts held a 19-17 halftime lead, but Willis and Hap took over for the DKE's to lead the come-from-behind victory.

In the graduate division, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes ripped the Stat Grads, 79-41. Bill Edwards hit 24 points, Frank Gibbs 20, Jim Byrd 14 and Bob Sutton 10 for the FCA.

On Tuesday, Med White defeated Med Yellow.

It's just as one of our old customers said the other day, when back in town for a visit. The old emporium really doesn't seem to change very much.

The stock is always being replaced, of course, and our student helpers seem to move along with each graduation march.

But the shelves are still bulging with a fine variety of reading matter of all sorts. And the new helpers pitch in to give our famous quick, cheerful service.

We've grown with the town, we've become perhaps a bit more efficient. But rest assured that years from now the Intimate will still be the fine personal bookshop it is now.

Which Way America?

CHARLOTTE — An American soldier in his last letter home before he was killed asks a very interesting question. Here is his letter which is printed in the program from "Sing Out '66."

* * *

Dear Family,

I don't know when mail from home has meant so much to me. As I write, the sun is setting on one of those beautiful Pacific days that more than makes up for the rainy ones. It's got me to thinking about our country.

The American people have emerged today with more power and prestige than any country in the family of nations. Mankind is knocking at our gates, seeking wisdom from our leaders, the hope of peace from our people. Before we can fulfill our destiny to lead the world to sanity and harmony, we shall have to rebuild the fiber of our national life.

Suppose we as a nation find again the faith our fathers knew. Suppose our statesmen learn again to listen to the voice of God. Then we shall know once again the greatness of a nation whose strength is in her obedience to the moral law of God, whose strength is in the spirit of her people.

There is only one other road. Those who divide and conquer, those who would make money and materialism the philosophy of our national life, pride and power the goals of our living, they too have a road to offer — and at its end is racial and class warfare and national suicide.

America, choose the right road. Unless there is born again in our people the spirit of sacrifice and service, of moral responsibility, my comrades and I who will fight on the beaches and those of us who will die here will have been exploited and betrayed and fought and died in vain.

It is the eleventh hour. By your choice you will bless or blight mankind for a thousand years to come.

Which road will it be, America?

* * *

Some very important people are condemning this group. Some other very important people are praising them. Walt Disney, Pat Boone the prime ministers of Japan and Korea are a few of the praisers.

I have seen them, talked with them and I believe them. I might even join them if I thought I could give up smoking.

* * *

But you must judge for yourself. And the only way to do that is to see their show — it's worth a million Apthekers.

Church Architecture Topic Of Discussion At Ackland

By WILLIAM FESPERMAN
DTH Religion Editor

The Departments of Religion and Art will present a discussion on church architecture and its meaning tonight at 8:00 p.m., in the Ackland Art Center, Rm. 115.

The speaker for the evening will be Peter Hammond, a leading authority on modern church architecture. His subject will be "Domus Ecclesiae."

Protestant theologian Paul Tillich has said "Religion is the substance of culture and culture the form of religion." The first part of the statement deals with the metaphysical: that in which the meaning of the culture is grounded.

The second part of this quote deals with that which is a visible manifestation of this substance. One of the most readily visible "forms" of this substance is church architecture.

Church architecture can rise and fall with the meaning of religion in any age. The poet W. H. Auden has equated architecture with how God takes the seriousness of man's attempt to renew himself from the standpoint of the religious question. In a prayer (Sonnet XXX) he says, "look shining at New styles of architecture, a change of heart."

Also, the great architect Frank Lloyd Wright has said in his book The Living City that traditional church architecture must "be buried . . . deep". Wright saw the new church architecture combining two elements: 1) "intellectual vision (the brilliant light of the West)" and 2) the "softer, more earth - loving and deeper feeling for nature (the glowing light of the East)".

Hammond was born in 1921 and studied at the Bromley College of Art, Merton College, Oxford, the University of Salonica, and Cuddesdon College.

After ordination in 1951, and after a period on the staff of St. Thomas in Longon, he became recotor of a country parish near Cirencester, where the New Churches Research Group was founded in 1957. He has been at Hull since 1962.

He is the author of Liturgy and Architecture and The Waters of Marah and editor of Towards a Church Architecture.

THE TAMS will be at Chase Cafeteria from 8 p.m.-12 today. Tickets are available in Y Court, Pine Room, Chase, and Morrison lobby. Tickets are $3 now and $3.50 at the door. Mixers will be sold. The Tams are sponsored by Hell House of Morrison.

Ray Linville

Newspaper Should Provide Service For Each Student

A campus newspaper should serve each student and his needs. The Daily Tar Heel must increase its personal relationship to the student body to make it more of a student newspaper.

Ray Linville, candidate for DTH editor, seeks a newspaper that will work with the student body. He proposed a plan to increase the efficiency of the DTH by having one key man on the DTH staff to coordinate the news from different areas of campus: one man for fraternities, sororities and residence colleges and halls; another for student government activities; another for campus organizations.

Linville, running as an independent, seeks a non - political, unbiased DTH which is not obligated to one segment of campus but is responsible to the University as a whole and can criticize any area of campus activity fairly and freely.

A more dynamic sports page is another of Linville's goals. He seeks better intramural reporting, better ACC coverage, service function for the studor sports on campus, and better use of the Associated Press in relation to national sports and collegiate games.

The DTH should perform a serfice function for the student body. Linville proposes an orientation feature - series in the fall to introduce freshmen and junior transfers to Carolina traditions, activities, and events on campus. He would like to see the DTH distributed free to libraries of North Carolina high schools so high school students can become acquainted with the University and this would also increase the communication between Chapel Hill and the rest of the state.

RAY LINVILLE

Not only is Linville acquainted with the technical aspects of journalism, but the has also been involved in student activities, since he feels that the editor of any campus newspaper should understand the workings of student organizations. He has served as an orientation counselor, on the MRC, on a class finance committee, on Student Governemnt communications committee, as managing editor of the UNC Journalist, on the DTH staff, as a member of the UNC Press Club and Sigma Delta Chi professional journalistic society. He is a candidate for the honors program in the School of Journalism.

Linville, a junior from Winston - Salem, is the most coplete candidate running for the office of editor. He is acquinted with both student acitivites and journalism. He is the only candidate running who is endorsed by the Publications Board and is a rising senior.

Fred Thomas

Candidate Vs. Candidates- Not Candidates Vs. Paper

The faults of this year's Daily Tar Heel are many and are easily rcognizable by every reader of the paper. I do not support the policy which has governed the DTH's operation in many instances this year. In fact, I expressed my displeasure with the present institution when I resigned as news editor in November.

But the issue of this campaign is not one of candidate versus present newspaper. It is rather, a matter of candidate versus candidate.

If one were to check the platforms of editorial candidates for the past decade, he would find virtually the same promises being made by each of them. The concept of journalism ethics — the idea of an editor's responsibility to his readers — has long been defined. This is no candidate's orignal idea. Nor is there anynew in the proposed means of carrying out these ideals.

I do not contend then, that my ideas and goals are original. My platform has arisen from complaints and demands from students involved in every aspect of campus activity. It is my ambition to see that The Daily Tar Heel meet the needs of and measure up to the standards imposed by the students of our campus.

I pledge myself to give you complete, accurate, timely and object coverage of all campus news.

I seek an editorial policy aimed in a constructive direction, working with student government, the MRC, the WRC and all other campus organizations in an effort to help our University. Let criticism be less venomous and more objective. Let The Daily Tar Heel deal with issues more than individuals. Let the editorial page be an open forum for the expression of anyone's viewpoint, whether it coincide or clash with the editor's stand.

I promise better sports coverage; keeping tabs on the ACC; giving adequate attention to the minor sports; concentrating on better intramural coverage with pictures.

Bear in mind that if any editor is to accomplish the big tasks he proposes in a campaign, he must be capable of coping with the innumerable small problems that hang over his head every day.

The Daily Tar Heel is your newspaper. It affects — or should affect — you every day. I urge you to think very seriously before you select a person for editor.

Consider the opinions of other journalists who have worked with and for each of the candidates. Look at qualifications at experience, at accomplishment.

Then choose the person who you believe can and will give you the best newspaper every morning next year.

Alan Banov

Paper Should Supplement Dailies - Not Replace Them

The Daily Tar Heel must be improved greatly, to regain its traditional position of prestige and respect on campus. It must concern itself more with student life, since it is a student newspaper — a supplement, not a replacement for the state's dailies.

I present for your approval a Five - Point Program of 1) More Complete Campus Coverage, 2) Excellent Sports Reporting, 3) Fair, Unbiased Student Government Coverage, 4) More News of Cultural Affairs, and 5) a Dynamic, Articulate Editorial Page.

To improve campus coverage, I will have a four-beat system of City, Administration, Student Government, and Campus Affairs Reporters who will know their beats well. The Campus Affairs Reporter will operate stringer system of Residence College Editors; a fraternity editor will report more fraternity news in the DTH; and a Women's Editor will cover women's organizations, dormitories and sororities.

For excellent sports reporting, I plan to have athletes as advisers to the sports staff and interview the players more. I will have better intramural coverage, with pictures and much more emphasis on the "minor" sports which do so well here. I will provide more ACC coverage and team statistics.

I can provide fair Student

ALAN BANOV

Government reporting because I belong to both campus parties and plan to comment on Student Government issues on the issues themselves, not on a personal or party basis. Having been Assistant Press Secretary of Student Government this year, I have acquired a thorough knowledge of the good points and weaknesses of Student Government.

For better cultural affairs coverage, informed columnists will review Playmakers plays, review free flicks and cover Graham Memorial functions better. I will hold a DTH All-Star Jazz or Folk Poll, so students can help select entertainers for Carolina. I will provide a weekly summary of concerts and entertainment in the dating area from Greensboro to Raleigh.

A "dynamic, articulate editorial page" means taking strong, easily - identifiable stands on issues in editorials, using columnists of all political persuasions who are articulate enought to stimulate interest in campus and extra - campus issues, and extracting very few editorials from the state's dailies. I plan to use as many letters as possible, correcting them for typographical and spelling errors, leaving out the embarrassing "sic."

Now is the time for The Daily Tar Heel to rise up out of the trash cans on campus to provide more student news, entertaining reading and provocative articles on improving student life.

If you approve of my platform, I would greatly appreciate your vote on Tuesday.

ALAN BANOV

Debates Draw Few Students To Gerrard

By GLENN L. MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

The candidates spoke but few were there to listen when the debate of the candidates was staged Thursday evening in Gerrard Hall.

About 40 persons including the candidates showed up to hear the platforms and proposals of the candidates discussed and tested with questions.

Moderator John Greenbacker, Di-Phi president, commented, "The turnout was an indication of the apathy surrounding the campaign. The party members didn't even come."

He thanked the body for the interest shown and told the persons attending to "get other people interested in the campaign. It's ridiculous that people show so little interest in the spring elections."

"The people elected are the representatives of the student body to the people of the state. Considering the crises of the past year, the student body would be well - advised to get to know all the candidates before they vote Tuesday."

Greenbacker also noted that the party organizations should do all they can to stir more interest in the current campaign.

Earl Hadden, chairman of the GM Current Affairs Committee, co - sponsor of the debate, said there has been more apathy in this campaign than any since he has been at UNC. "Nobody seems interested in the elections," he said.

Debating were presidential candidates Teddy O'Toole and Bob Powell, and Fred Thomas, Ray Linville and Alan Banov, candidates for editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Don Wilson, SP vice presidential candidate, also made some statements and answered questions concerning his platform.

Sonny Pepper, independent candidate for student body president, and Bill Purdy, UP candidate for vice president, did not participate in the debate. Both attended Student Legislature.

Powell outlined four issues in his platform, including the speaker ban controversy, academics, residence halls, and campus publications.

Powell said the lack of understanding of the University by the people of North Carolina should be erased. "I want to convince the people of the state that there is something right here at UNC," he said. "Someone has to speak for the Student Body and the student

Junior Injured In Car Accident

John Redmon, a junior at North Carolina, was injured yesterday afternoon about 5:30 in a two - car collision.

According to an eye-witness, the car driven by Redmon was beckoned by a policeman onto Raleigh Road from the Campus Carnival parking lot.

Redmon's car collided with another automobile traveling on Raleigh Road. Neither car was damaged extensively.

Redmon was taken by a friend to the student infirmary and treated for cuts on his head.

Bill Criticizes UNC Students

A bill introduced Wednesday in the North Carolina State University student legislature asked that the students at Chapel Hill "cease immediately their fighting with the university administration over the invitations to Dr. Aptheker and Mr. Wilkinson."

The bill, entitled "Administration Support Resolution," reminds students that their primary concern should be the welfare of the university.

It was introduced by graduate senator Roy Broughton, who attends State but lives in Chapel Hill.

Bill Fishburne, Editor of The Technician, said that the bill had little chance of passage.

There was no debate on the first reading. The bill is not in committee and will be reintroduced, debated and voted on Wednesday.

Long Signs Agreement Restoring Privileges

CAMPUS CHEST Carnivals are a lot of fun for most of us, but for others, well, pledges don't mind a little mud, do they? Especially when the reward is a sip of that foamy refresher. — DTH Photo By Andy Myers

Pact Gives Frats 'New Responsibility'

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

Dean of Men William G. Long signed the new "Interim Fraternity Visiting Agreement" yesterday restoring women's visiting privileges to all 24 of UNC's social fraternities.

Under the new agreement seven additional sections have been added to establish guidelines for the conduct of fraternity members. Each fraternity will be responsible for the actions of its members during and after the parties and also for the clean-ups the following morning.

Pig Chasing, Car Stuffing Highlight Campus Carnival

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

This year's Campus Carnival, judged by Student Body President Paul Dickson to be the best in UNC's history, was a big success.

Over 25 organizations participated in yesterday's festivities. Activities ranged from a pig chase to a car stuffing contest.

The Pi Kappa Phi occupied the first booth. They offered a free beer to anyone who could ride a skateboard 597 inches. They were plagued with "experts."

In the next booth Tau Epsilon Phi was charging 10 cents a shot to anyone who wanted to knock a bowling pin off a platform with a baseball for a beer. They made over $10 the first hour.

One of the dirtiest booths was manned by pledges from ATO fraternity. Pledges walked a narrow log above a muddy hole. The public got two chances for 25 cents to knock them into the mud with balloons. They made the splash repeatedly.

Next, one fraternity was offering students chances to ram a surfboard down a chimney as a parody on German's week activities. The game was too hard, so they had few customers.

One of the most imaginative booths was manned by the KA's. They had six rats borrowed from the psychology department and were taking bets on them in a rat race. Winners got a beer.

In the next booth coeds from Winston residence hall were holding a "strip show." Although the girls who manned the booth were attractive, perceptive students deserted this booth as soon as they discovered nothing was coming off.

Scott College featured a chicken race. The chickens were named Dean Long, Gov. Moore, Otelia and Kitty. To everyone's surprise Kitty (after the Dean of Women) was the fastest. She broke loose and was caught just before she managed to enter the car stuffing contest.

SAE fraternity had the "stinkingest" contest. They had two pledges who were targets for raw eggs. Many contestants hit dead on.

Then there was the booth judged by Burl Ives to be the most imaginative in the carnival — the Maverick Pokey.

In this booth students from Craige residence hall offered to put any friend or enemy in jail for 10 cents. It cost 25 cents to get them out. To have them put into the stocks the charge was 25 cents. The charge was also 25 cents to have them released from the stocks.

SL Passes Vetoed Bill

By LYTT STAMPS
DTH Staff Writer

The Student Legislature unanimously overrode Paul Dickson's veto of the bill which suspended a provision of the by - laws of student government in its Thursday night's meeting. Fraternities and sororities which have approval of the Deans of Men and Women can get funds for televisions under the bill passed two weeks ago. They do not have to submit their by - laws to the Student Legislature for approval. Dickson had vetoed the bill because he said it was unconstitutional.

Other bills passed included the approval of Arthur Hays as chairman of the Elections Board; John Grotgen, Douglas O. McKeown, Bill Adams, Tom Ragsdale and Andrew Haltom as members of the Elections Board; and appropriation of $200 to cover expenses for last spring's computerized course evaluation program.

The vote on the chairman of the Elections Board was 18 to 0 but was not recorded as unanimous. Objections came from UP Floor Leader Ed Wilson and Don Carson.

In a statement to The Daily Tar Heel, they said, "We object not to Mr. Hays, but to the manner in which President Dickson has used the Elections Board for the purpose of political pay offs.

"This attitude on the part of the Student Body president is unprecendented and we hope we shall never see it again."

The statement also said they felt that Hays has "probably devoted more service to Student Government than any other person on campus."

A bill chartering residence colleges was held in the Ways and Means Committee. Chairman Sandy Hobgood (SP) reported the committee felt the bill was unnecessary as the colleges are already functioning.

Dean of Student Affairs C.O. Cathey said he thinks the new agreement is a very fine document and improves the old agreement by a great deal.

"The IFC has put some teeth into the new agreement," Cathey said. "I appreciate them taking on this new responsibility."

Cathey stated that there had been some confusion about the new agreement being made with Dean Long. Cathy said, "The new agreement has been made with the University and not with any particular member of the administration.

"The actions taken by the University were not a trial. It was the renewal of an agreement with the fraternities that had obviously been ignored."

Bob Kepner, assistant to the Dean of Men said, "The new agreement states that the responsibility of the actions of fraternity men will lie with each fraternity.

"The power of the IFC has been inhanced because particular sanctions for violations of the agreement have been more clearly explained."

The new visiting agreement will be in effect through this summer. A new agreement will be drawn up next fall as it must be every year.

Dean Cathey said, "I feel that there will be a better situation for everyone concerned now that this new interim visiting agreement has restored women's visiting privileges, the IFC Court is beginning to gather information for its investigation of the incidents of last weekend.

The investigation will include questioning of any persons affected by the actions of any fraternity member last weekend.

In the future any violations of the rules and regulations under the visiting agreement will be subject to the jurisdiction of the IFC Court and the Men's Honor Council.

These violations include any fraternity member breaking state or local laws concerning the public consumption and display of alcohol. This violation carries a $10 fine with the disciplinary action.

A News Analysis

Nobody Knew About MRA

By PAT STITH
DTH Managing Editor

"Sing Out '66" has a lot going for it — youth, enthusiasm and a clean-cut All-American image. But the biggest thing in its corner is the fact that nobody knows much about it or its parent, Moral ReArmament, Inc., of New York.

The President of the Consolidated University, William C. Friday, told the DTH he didn't know. Athletic Director Chuck Erickson, who invited the group to the campus, said he didn't know. Some members of the cast of "Sing Out" don't even know, according to Allen Starmont, a spokesman for "Sing Out."

Dr. Samuel S. Hill of the UNC Department of Religion is different. He told the DTH yesterday that Moral Re-Armament is a surrogate, a substitute religion combining certain elements of the Judio-Christian religion on its moral side with a kind of ultimate respect for enthusiasm as a way of life.

"I do not think it is subversive either on the right or the left," he said, "but I think it is socially unhealthy because it outflanks some issues and oversimplifies many others. I am especially troubled by its identification with the All American middle class type and its Madison Avenue approach."

So are a lot of other people.

Father Cuthbert Allen, president of Belmont Abby College, told the DTH, "I think Moral ReArmament is a threat to organized religion — this is implicit in its literature. What bothers me is that I think it ("Sing Out '66") is an exploitable group — if not now, then later."

Buchmanism (after its founder, Rev. Frank Buchman) has gathered momentum essentially because it shows certain people a way to interpret their personal troubles without endangering their status. It has been referred to as "the Salvation Army of the middle class."

It is 20th century evangelism without the dogma and doctrine which distinguishes formalized groups. As a result, it can recruit members from all faiths without theological conflict.

And recruit it does. "Sing Out" is a first class, professional production. It drew the largest crowd in the history of Charlotte's Coliseum and thousands were turned away Wednesday night.

No doubt it will pack Carmichael — and draw raves — next Monday.

You don't pay anything, you don't join anything, you simply start living by MRA standards — absolute purity, honesty, love and unselfishness. There is no place for subtle philosophy in full-of-life MRA — its all testimony and action.

For the DTH, the quest to learn about Moral ReArmament led through parts of half a dozen library books, two books and a magazine put out by the organization itself and long distance calls to Durham, Raleigh, Charlotte, Belmont, Washington and New York.

We talked with the office of Pat McNamara, senior Senator from Michigan. Through him we had the Library of Congress prepare a nine page report on the pros and cons of Moral ReArmament. We talked with the director of Group Research Inc. of Washington. We attempted to get a financial statement on Moral Re-Armament Inc. of New York from an accounting firm there.

From these sources we conclude Moral ReArmament is built on emotional rather than intellectual conviction. It is prone to exaggerating its successes and denying its shortcomings. It is over-sensitive to criticism and needs to add humility to its other "absolutes."

"Sing Out," we think, is a terrific show. When it comes here Monday be sure to go — but take along a grain of salt.

ERNIE McCRARY, EDITOR

Honor By Convenience

SECOND IN A SERIES

What's wrong with the Honor System?

It is supposed to "pervade our whole lives as students, teachers and individuals," according to the Honor System handbook.

Obviously, the system falls far short of this goal.

Why?

Is the system itself bad? Or does the fault for its failure lie with those who are supposed to uphold it?

The problem is muddled. A precise distinction cannot be made between the effects of poor rules and the effects of poor attitudes.

The result is the same in both cases — a meaningless code of ethics.

Before any set of regulations is accepted it must be respected. Violating any of the rules, however small, undermines respect for the system as a whole. The process can continue until a state of social and moral anarchy is created.

The reasoning goes something like this: "Well, this is just a little rule. It's really unnecessary — I don't like it — and nobody will find out if I break it, or they won't care if they do find out."

The next step, of course, is to violate a slightly larger rule. The firecracker shooter easily slides into the ranks of the class roll falsifiers.

There are regulations against gambling and drinking alcoholic beverages in residence halls. But not a night passes on the campus without a poker game being played or a bottle of beer being consumed.

Residence hall advisors wink at the infractions. "As long as things don't get out of hand, it'll be all right," they say. "Just so they aren't disturbing anybody else."

They might be right in their thinking, but how does this affect the freshman who is told by day to uphold the Honor System and taught by night how to break it? Whatever it does, it does not build respect for the rules.

The logical conclusion which any student can draw is that if laws apply only in extreme cases they can be violated in minor cases — and maybe even in extreme cases if there is little likelihood of getting caught.

Our Honor System is honor by convenience. Honor by commitment is hardly known.

To the average student, the Honor Council is a fearsome mystery. It seems to be a small group of God-like students sitting on lofty perches, from which they pass down judgments, ranging from slaps on the wrist to indefinite suspension.

Too often, this image is borne out in fact. Many members of the judiciary will freely admit that the attitude with which members of the councils — students themselves — approach a student on trial is "guilty until proven innocent."

They defend this by saying most offenses will not be reported unless there is unarguable proof to back the charge, therefore there is more certainty of guilt.

This is a hollow excuse, and contributes strongly to a lack of faith in — and even contempt for — the system.

What is to be done?

Minimize nit-picking rules, especially for women. Eliminate hypocrisy. Either remove the regulation against drinking, or enforce it. Let all Honor Council trials be open to the press to safeguard defendants from prejudicial trial, even though names would be withheld on request.

A discussion of these and other needed changes will be the subject of future editorials.

The Daily Tar Heel

72 Years of Editorial Freedom

The Daily Tar Heel is the official news publication of the University of North Carolina and is published by students daily except Mondays, examination periods and vacations.

"Forget The Campus Chest–What About Mine?"

Vice President

Bill Purdy–UP

We are indeed happy to have this opportunity to publicly express our unqualified support for Bill Purdy as the next Vice President of the Student Body. Last year leaders of both political parties agreed that Bill was the most outstanding freshman class president in many years. By encouraging and securing wide participation in class projects he raised more money and initiated more success class activities than any other freshman president.

This year, Bill has represented Ehringhaus Residence Hall in Student Legislature and has become a highly respected spokesman for residence hall and residence college interests.

A well-rounded individual, Bill is not only a successful student and a Morehead Scholar, he also has a fine athletic record in wrestling and football. We feel that Bill's personal integrity and honesty in dealing with others, as well as his proven abilities for leadership, make him the obvious choice for the vice presidency.

Ed Wilson, Minority Floor Leader, Student Legislature

Don Wilson–SP

We, the undersigned, would like to state our unqualified support for Don Wilson for the office of Vice President of the Student Body. We feel that experience and proven leadership are prerequisites for this office and that Don Wilson meets these prerequisites.

Don has served this campus for the past three years in the Student Legislature, he has helped organize the Morrison Residence College Senate and has served as Speaker of the Morrison College Senate. As President of the UN Model Assembly for the South he has increased his knowledge of legislative bodies.

An outstanding parliamentarian, Don has served for two years as Parliamentarian of the Di-Phi Senate. He has provided his caucus with much needed leadership as Majority Floor Leader of the Student Legislature.

Don has worked tirelessly as Chairman of the Student Party and as a member of the Men's Residence Council for the welfare of the Student Body. His administrative ability is evidenced by his successful work as the student organizer of the 1965 Reidsville Student - Faculty - Administrative Conference, Chairman and Co-Ordinator of the 1965 Residence Hall Officers Conference and as Administrative Assistant to the Chairman of the Carolina Forum.

Don Wilson has been recognized for his service to Carolina by his membership in the Order of the Grail and the Amphoterothon Society.

Don Wilson is not satisfied with his past record. He wants to continue working for the Student Body in the most effective position available. We believe that Don Wilson can best serve Carolina as Vice President of the Student Body and feel that he is without question the best qualified candidate for this office.

Letters Of Endorsement

President

Teddy O'Toole–UP

Why are we among the many who will vote for Teddy O'Toole for president of our Student Body? Let us share our reasons with you:

Teddy O'Toole brings to the office of the presidency not only a broad base of experience, but also the energetic approach that is needed to overcome the problems that continuously face Student Goverment.

As a member of Student Legislature for three years and chairman of the Rules Committee, as a member of the Orientation Commission, as an executive in class government, and as a leader in Craige Residence College, Teddy gained the intimate knowledge of Student Government that is manditory in a presidential candidate.

His work as chairman of the Carolinas-Virginia Region of the National Students Association has equipped him to deal responsibly with the statewide issues that now challenge the University and higher education in the state.

But more than this, Teddy brings a fresh approach and fresh ideas to Graham Memorial. He will attack Student Government problems in a realistic and straight forward manner. He will return Student Government to the students; he will find, in his administration, a place for the talents of all those who are sincerely interested in Student Government.

These, then, are the reasons: great experience, a wealth of energy, and, most of all a new approach to insure the highest standard of leadership for Student Government next year.

Sonny Pepper–Ind.

We, the undersigned, would like to publicly endorse the man we consider to be the most qualified, experienced, and capable man for the office of Student Body President. We honestly feel that Sonny Pepper is the best man for the office. His record of excellent service cannot be matched by any of the other candidates and his active interest in Student Government is a known fact.

We urge our fellow students to carefully examine all the candidates — look at their qualifications, their records of accomplishment, their overall experience in the areas of representation and leadership, and their programs and proposals — then there should be no question — Sonny Pepper is obviously the only man for the office. We urge you to vote for the best man — Sonny Pepper.

LETTERS

The Daily Tar Heel welcomes letters to the editor on any subject, particularly on matters of local or University interest. Letters must be typed, double-spaced and must include the name and address of the author or authors. Names will not be omitted in publication. Letters should be limited to about 250-300 words. The DTH reserves the right to edit for length or libel. Longer letters will be considered for "The Student Speaks" if they are of sufficient interest. However, the DTH reserves the right to use contributed materials as it sees fit.

Editorial Candidates Get Support

Alan Banov

We, the undersigned, fervently believe that The Daily Tar Heel must pull itself out of the mire of mediocrity and regain its old position of prestige and respect on campus.

We want a student newspaper which will inform us much more fully about campus activities, cover student Government completely and fairly, and challenge us to think about the important issues on campus and around the world.

For these reasons and because of his experience in journalism and in student activities, we enthusiastically endorse Alan Banov for Editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Alan Banov, an individual with great honesty, enthusiasm, and creativty, has pledged himself to improving The Daily Tar Heel, though it will hinder his career plans, rather than aiding them.

A senior now in terms of hours, Banov is majoring in political science and history and has been a Dean's List student. He has served on the Summer Tar Heel as reporter and sports editor and on The Daily Tar Heel as reporter, columnist, and news editor.

As a freshman in high school, Banov helped found his school's publication and was its editor his senior year. He was also his school's regular reporter, to the Charleston (S. C.) Evening Post, and, since coming to Chapel Hill, has been a correspondent for the Charleston newspapers.

This year Banov has been Assistant Press Secretary of Student Government, writing many local and state - wide press releases, and is serving on the Honor System Commission. We has also worked on the Attorney General's Staff and has been Vice - President of Sigma Delta Chi Professional Journalistic Society.

Howard Gebeaux, Former Candidate, DTH Editor
Allen Shepard, Governor, Ehringhaus Residence College
Charles Morgan, President, Avery Dormitory, Member, Student Legislature
Steve Williams, President, Graham Dormitory
James Hough, President, Lewis Dormitory
Dehaven Cleaver, Student Legislator from Teague
Steve Rosenblum, President, Tau Epsilon Phi
Dave McFadden, State Affairs Commitee, Phi Eta Sigma
Forrest Mercer, Speaker of Senate, Craige
Scott Goodfellow, Editor, Freshman Class Newspaper
Jeff Davis, NSA Delegate
Gary Nordan, Vice - President, Men's Residence Council
Pat Taylor, Chairman, Honor System Commission
Frank Hodges, Former Student Party Chairman
David Broadhurst, Vice - president, Beta Theta Pi Executive Committee, UP
Frank Minard, President, St. Anthony Hall
Dave Beck, Editor, Mangum Newspaper

Ray Linville

We, the undersigned, endorse Ray P. Linville, a junior journalism major from Winston - Salem, as our candidate for the editor of The Daily Tar Heel. We do this because of his experience in both student affairs and journalism and because of his plans for a better DTH.

He has proved to us his interest in the University as a whole and his abilities to give the student body a non - political, unbiased paper seeking objectivity, accuracy and maintenance of high ethical standards.

A Dean's List student and candidate for the honors program in journalism, Linvolle, we feel, can handle the position of editor better than the other candidates. He is the only candidate who is both endorsed by the Publications Board and is a rising senior.

We support him and his plan for a constructive DTH that will benefit all students, fraternities, residence halls and colleges, sororities, and their activities, We favor Linville's plan to make the DTH a student newspaper and to increase the personal relationship of the DTH to each individual student. We support his program for better student government, campus news and sports coverage and for a more constructive and informative editorial page. We feel his endorsement by the Publications Board is well deserved and we add our own personal endorsement and support to Ray Linville's bid for editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Joseph H. Goodman, President of Old West
Charles H. Stover, President of Sigma Delta Chi
Charles Dozier, President of Pi Kappa Phi
Bill Nucciarone, Junior Class Vice - President
Allen McDonald, President of Westminister Fellowship

Fred Thomas

We, supporters of Fred Thomas for Editor of The Daily Tar Heel, represent diverse segments of campus interest and activity. We are looking for different qualities in the person we choose for this job.

Those of us from the DTH staff are concerned with journalistic excellence and the ability to command the respect of a staff — in short someone for whom we would be proud and willing to work. Others of us are involved in Student Government and other campus organizations.

We want to support the candidate who is not only qualified, but willing to work to make the DTH the effective organ that it should be, providing objective, complete and knowledgeable news coverage and editorial comment on the programs we will be trying to institute for the campus — one who will not allow political bias and personal feelins to mar his editorial and news policy.

Finally, there are many of us who are neither journalists nor organization members. Our only connection with The Daily Tar Heel is in reading it each day. We want an editor who will give us an informative and interesting DTH. We want the news from our residence halls, fraternities, and sororities to get proper coverage.

All of us have looked carefully at all three candidates, weighing the qualifications and platform of each. There is no doubt in our minds that Fred Thomas is far and away the best all - round candidate, and we whole - heartedly endorse him for the position of Editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Art Historian And Curator Will Give Talk On Titian

Egon Verheyen, curator of paintings and assistant to the director, Alte Pinakothek, Munich will give an illustrated lecture on Titian's "Vanity" in Room 111, Murphey Hall Monday at 8 p.m. The lecture is open to the public.

Dr. Verheyen, distinguished art historian, studied first at Mainz University and later at Wurzburg University where he received the degree of doctor of philosophy in 1961.

That same year he assisted in the cataloguing of the medieval sculptures in the collection of the Germanishces National Museum, Nuremberg. In 1962 he was on the staff at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton and from 1963 to 1965 he did research on Corregio's mythological paintings.

He has assisted in several excavations in Germany including those of Roman settlements in the lower Rhineland. He is the author of numerous publications on the history of art.

Officials Giving Up Then Bomb Found

PALOMARES BEACH, SPAIN (AP) — One source connected with the recovery of the wayward American H bomb said yesterday the device was located just as officials were trying to decide how to tell the world it might never be found.

"The find couldn't have come at a better time," this official source commented. 'It came when we were trying to decide just how to tell the world the H-bomb was still missing and possibly would stay that way."

The bomb and its gray parachute were found by the miniature submarine Alvin in 2,500 feet of water five miles off the coast of Spain. Officials said it was "most certainly" the missing bomb — one of four aboard a U. S B52 that crashed after colliding with its refueling plane Jan. 17. The other three weapons were recovered quickly on shore.

U. S. Navy experts began the delicate job of raising the last one today—a task a lot like lifting a fresh egg with pliers while blindfolded.

There was no danger rough handling might cause a nuclear explosiong, but one of the detonators could be set off, breaking the case and possibly letting some radiation escape. Reliable sources said the bomb was resting on the slope of a 70 - foot underwater hill in an area of strong currents.

The two men aboard the Alvin were to use the little craft's mechanical arms to attach cables to the bomb. Then the Fort Snelling, a landing ship (dock) with two cranes, would try to life the weapon to the surface and take it aboard.

Technicians said it was vital that the cables be attached without disturbing the bomb's position on the hillock. It will be lifted through strong Mediterranean currents which could pull and tug at the weapon and its parachute and perhaps drop it deeper into the sea.

Secrecy was imposed over the opeation after an official decision to say nothing more until the weapon actually is recovered. U. S. Ambassador Angier Biddle Duke was to m with newsmen early yesterday but signals were changed. A spokesman said no new statement would be made "until we have positive identification and recovery."

It was expected special Navy Task Force 65, commanded by Rear Adm. William Guest, wuld be able to recover the bomb by the first of the week.

Reynolds Rescinds Hike

NEW YORK (AP) — A major cigarette manufacturer said it has rescinded a price increase at the request of President Johnson.

In a statement R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. said:

"The rescinding of increases is in accordance with the urgent request of the President of the United States and in cooepration with his effort to avoid consumer price increases at this time."

The company had boosted its prices effective Tuesday. On most brands the boost amounted to 40 cents per thousand cigarettes.

Reynolds said it has told its dealers that effective immediately the list price of its Winston, Salem, Brandon, Tempo and Cavalier brands will be $9 per thousand, less a 2 per cent cash discount and the list price of Camels, regular size, will $8.80 per thousand, less a 2 per cent cash discount.

Pope Paul Eases Vatican Restrictions On Marriage

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI eased yesterday some of the ancient Vatican restrictions on marriages between Roman Catholics and persons of other faiths.

He wiped out a rule that had obliged the Non - Catholic partner in an interfaith marriage to make a signed promise that children of the union would be reared as Catholics.

He also lifted excommunication of Catholics who have married or will marry outside the church, and provided for common prayer and the presence of Non - Catholic clergy at mixed marriages performed in Cahtolic churches.

Non - Catholics have long maintained that the written promise rule was a degrading restriction and a major stumbling block to better relations between the Catholic church and other faiths.

But the Pope's action did not alter the church's basic opposition to mixed marriages nor its insistence that marriage between a Catholic and Non - Catholic is licit only if performed before a Catholic priest.

It also retained the church's insistence that children of a mixed marriage must be brought up as Catholics. With the changes, however, the church now places the burden of rearing the children as Catholics on the Catholic partner in the marriage.

North Carolina News Roundup

Primary Fight Shapes Up

RALEIGH (AP) — Brisk primary fights shaped up in the 4th and 5th Congressional Districts yesterday as the filing deadline for statewide contests expired.

The state's 11 congressional races drew 33 candidates, many of them political unknowns. Five Democrats and one Republican paid their filing fees just before the books closed at noon at the State Board of Elections.

One of the last minute filers was T. Lamar Caudle, former Truman Administration official once convicted of influence peddling. He entered the Democratic race in the 8th District.

Republicans, who expect to pick up at least two seats in Congress from North Carolina, placed candidates in five races. There are two GOP candidates in the 9th and 11th Distrit contests.

Seven Republicans and five Democrats will automatically be in the November general election.

Incumbent Rep. Alton Lennon of the 7th District has no opposition and will be elected to a new two-year term.

Republican John Shall Cross, a wealthy Smithfield manufacturer, filed to oppose incumbent Sen. B. Everett Jordan, a Saxapahaw Democrat, in the general election.

Veteran th District Rep. Harold D. Cooley, drew fresh opposition in the May 28th Democratic primary. Bill Creech, former aide to Sen. Sam Ervin and now a Raleigh in the primary against Cooley. Creech had been expected to enter the contest for sometime.

The Democratic winner will meet James Gardner, former state GOP chairman and a Rocky Mount businessman. Gardner gave Cooley the closest race of his 16 terms in 1964.

Probably the hottest Democratic fight will occur in the 5th District, where incumbent Ralph Scott did not seek re-election.

Four Democrats will battle it out in that district, the winner to face Republican Fred Steele of Durham.

Cigarette Smuggling 'Mammoth'

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — A top Maryland official says the running of bootleg cigarettes between North Carolina and northern states has ballooned into a "mammoth operation to rival the old days of Al Capone.

Edward F. Englebert Jr., head of Maryland's sales tax division, also says the tough types who drove the truck in the gangland movies have been replaced by mild-mannered novices—including women.

He notes that part of the problem may be Maryland's misdemeanor law aimed at combatting the traffic in contraband cigarettes. Conviction carried only a suspended sentence and a fine in a case recently.

Maryland state police and tax authorities have confiscated more than 50,000 carton of cigarettes since last summer and they estimate this represents only a small percentage of the total illegal traffic.

Englebert said most of the cigarettes, purchased for $1.85 a carton in North Carolina where there is no cigarette tax, are destined for New York where a pack of cigarettes costs 45 cents.

Smuggled cigarettes from the South meant an estimated $25 million lost in tax revenue to New York and some $750,000 lost to Maryland last year.

Englebert believes the smuggling operations are backed by organized crime. He also believes the absence of a North Carolina cigarette tax is a factor in the increased smuggling.

"They just don't care down there," he said. "Why should they? They manufacture most cigarettes; they make money; they don't care where they're going."

Although jurists have thus far been reluctant to hand out the maximum sentence, Maryland law could mean a fine of $25 for each carton confiscated and five years imprisonment for the offender. The law prohibits carrying more than one carton through the state or more than two packages into the state by a resident.

Returning Astronauts Have More Trouble In The Air

HONOLULU (AP) — Astronauts Neil Armstrong and David Scott, fresh after rest in Hawaii, flew to Cape Kennedy last night to help scientists determine why their Gemini 8 space flight was forced to end prematurely.

The Gemini 8 pair spent the day in isolation on the eighth floor of Tripler Army Hospital near Honlulu, sleeping and undergoing debriefing and physical checkups.

An official of the National Aeronatuics and Space Administration said the astronauts were not expected to make any apearances before their departure at 6 p.m. HST ((11 p.m. EST) from Hickam Air Force Base by C135 jet ransport.

Military officials disclosed that one engine on the jet transport that flew Armstrong and Scott to Hawaii from Okinawa was shut down when trouble developed with oil pressure. The plane landed without the trouble being noticed by newsmen.

Scientists at Cape Kennedy will spend three days with Armstrong and Scott, trying to learn what caused Gemini 8's gyrating gymnastics after they had successfully docked with an Agena satellite.

Armstrong, a civilian test pilot, was forced to fight for control of the space craft. The trouble forced their man - in - space flight to end unexpectedly after only 6 i-2 orbits with the spalshdown near Okinawa.

Scott, an Air Force major, and Armstrong looked fresh and jovial as they arrived. Rear Adm. Henry S. Persons, who commanded the recovery force which pulled the astronauts from the pacific, placed red carnation leis around their necks. They were not allowed to talk with newsmen.

NASA said the layover in Honlulu was made so mechanics could check the Air Force jet and crewmen could rest.

The only ill effect suffered by the astronauts in their dramatic reentry and recovery was some seasickness while their capsule bobbed around nearly three hours on the Pacific before the destroyer Leonard Mason reached them.

It may take weeks for scientists and missile technicians to pin down what caused the Gemini trouble.

The difficulties developed when a radio command was sent to turn on a tape recorder in the Agena satellite to which the astronauts were moored.

Gemini 8 began tumbling crazily. Armstrong reported to a controller aboard a ship in the Pacific:

"We have serious trouble here. We're tumbling end over end. It's rolling and we can't turn anything off."

Something went berserk in the spacecraft's main jet thruster control system. Armstrong had to use an emergency system and managed to stabilize the craft after a 30 - minute battle.

Later, the flight captain reported part of what happened to the ground station in Hawaii.

Armstrong said that after docking he had used the Gemini jets to make a 180 - degree turn. The spacecraft control system was shut down just before a series of commands were to be sent to use the Agena jets for maneuvers.

When he pressed a button to send an electrical signal starting the Agena tape recorder, the Gemini - Agena hookup began bucking.

Fellow Astronaut Walter Schirra, who felw to Okinawa to meet Armstrong and Scott and then flew back to Hawaii with them, termed the landing the best "so far in the Gemini project."

The trouble has not been isolated, Schirra told newsmen.

"As we see it now, they had control problems while they were docking, and this was complicated by a rocking motion. They were not able to isolate the trouble, and they decreased their rate (of speed) to a point where they could separate from Agena."

Schirra said they are taking to Cape Kennedy "all the equipment . . . for review and briefing. This includes our on-board film and our on - board data from the mission."

NASA officials said the jet carrying Armstrong and Scott is scheduled to arrive at Cape Kennedy around 8 a.m. EST today.

Allied Sweep Finds More D-Zone Dead

SAIGON (AP) — A U. S.-Australian sweep turned up 20 more dead communists in the D-Zone jungle yesterday amid indications that other enemy troops, harried by air and ground fire, have chosen to abandon their old haven north of Saigon.

U. S. 1st infantry division patrols probed a base camp vacated in such haste that scores of guns and a huge pile of field radio equipment were left behind. The arms included 36 crew - served weapons —grenade launchers, recoiless rifles and heavy machine guns.

Viet Cong terrorists struck for the third time this year against famers in the Tuy Hoa rice bowl area on the coast northeast of Saigon, where U. S. and South Korean troops have made repeated sweeps to protect the rice harvest.

A. U. S. spokesman said a 20 - pound mine killed 15 farmers riding on bicycles and motor scooter along a country road. A blast beneath a truck killed 57 peasants a month ago. Another blew up a cart driver and his house.

NATO Allies Proclaim Support For The Alliance

WASHINGTON (AP)— France's 14 Atlantic allies publicly and unanimously took issue yesterday with President Charles de Gaulle's move to dismantle the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"The North Atlantic Treaty and the organization established under it are both alike essential to the security of our countries," the 14 said. "We are convinced that this organization is essential and will continue."

The manifesto was issued simultaneously at the White House and at the other 13 capitals as a reaffirmation of faith in the present NATO integrated setup in the face of De Gaulle's challenge.

Joining the United States were Belgium, Canada, Denmark, West Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxemburg, the N etherlands, Norway, Portugal, Turkey and Great Britain.

While not objecting to the Alliance, formed in 1949 under the threat of possible Soviet aggresson against Europe, De Gaulle says the integrated NATO military defense system formed under the treaty is no longer needed. He says it infringes on national sovereignty, and France will have no part of it.

The French chief has sent notice to the other allies that France will pull her forces out of NATO and wants NATO Military headquarters, now in the Paris area, and NATO bases removed from her soil.

Suharto Appoints Anti-Red Cabinet; Is Sukarno Out?

SINGAPORE (AP) — Lt. Gen. Suharto appointed the nucleus of a strong anti - Communist Indonesian cabinet yesterday in a move that seemed to leave President Sukarno shorn of power.

Suharto, the army chief and Indonesian strongman, earlier in the day had detained Deputy Premier Subandrio and 14 other Pro - Communist cabinet ministers, all favorites of Sukarno.

Diplomatic quarters in Singapore said Sukarno, 64, had lost the last round of his struggle for power with the military. He had resisted army demands that he fire Subandrio and the others.

One source even went so far as to say "Sukarno is finished" but the general belief was that the President still will be used as a figurehead.

Persons in Singapore familiar with Indonesian developments said the military had taken Sukarno to his palace at Bogor, 40 miles south of Jakarta, "for his own protection."

Suharto named one of Indonesia's most respected men, Ham Engku Buwano, Sultan of Jogjakarta, as first deputy premier in place of Suandrio, Sukarno's trusted Pro - Peking lieutenant, Jakarta Radio said.

A leader in the fight for independence from the Dutch, Buwono thus appears to be the most powerful civilian in the Indonesian heirarchy. Sukarno fired Buwono as defense minister in 1955.

Jakarta Radio said all appointments were temporary and the action was taken on orders of Sukarno. But it said Sukarno was not at a meeting of the generals at his Jakarta palace.

China Fears U.S. Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Red China now believes a chain reaction of intervention and attack may widen the Vietnamese war and eventually bring down U. S. nuclear weapons upon her, an Asian affairs expert said yesterday.

While the Chinese are anxious to avoid nuclear war, Morton H. Halperin told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, they are determined not to see their Communist cause retreat in Viet Nam.

"In Peking," the Harvard University professor declared, "no less than in Washington, the desire to avoid another Munich is a major preoccupation of political leaders."

Retired Marine Brig. Gen. Samuel B. Griffith II said China's army is a potent regional force — but a paper tiger outside the Peking regime's own neighborhood.

But Griffith forecast a long struggle for the United States in Southeast Asia. "The Chinese are willing to sit on this situation until hell freezes over," he said.

Both Halperin and Griffith generally endorsed President Johnson's policy in South Viet Nam.

"We're going to be there a long time," the general said.

But both men also said the United States should drop its opposition to Red Chinese membership in the United Nations.

"Let's get the monkey off our backs," said Griffith.

From Nationalist China's Madame Chiang Kai - Shek, meanwhile, came a call for bombing of Red Chinese nuclear installations. She told the National Press Club conventional bombs should be used against China's nuclear facilities.

Kennedy's Ole Miss Speech Blames Barnett For Riot

OXFORD, MISS (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy told University of Mississippi students yesterday that former Gov. Ross Barnett must take full esponsibility for the 1962 Ole Miss desegregation riot.

The New York Democrat, regarded as a political demon by some militant secgregationist organizations in Mississippi, was greeted by a standing ovation when he entered the campus Coliseum.

In a question and answer session after his speech, Kennedy discussed in detail the uproar of 1962 after a federal court ordered Ole Miss to admit a Negro student, James H. Meredith.

The riot, in which two men were killed and hundreds injured, erupted on a Sunday at dusk, right after the late President John F. Kennedy made a talk to the nation on the Ole Miss situation.

"It was the governor who suggested that we bring Meredith to the campus on Sunday," said Kennedy, who was U. S. Attorney General at the time.

"That decision was not made by the President or me, but by Gov. Ross Barnett. He wanted 300 or 400 marshalls for a show of force but said he would be responsible for law and order."

The students and faculty listened intently as Kennedy spoke. They burst into frequent applause and laughted at several references to Barnett.

Asked what the Department of Justice might have done to head off violence, Kennedy said:

"We might have sent in troops earlier but we had taken Gov. Barnett at his word that he would keep law and order. I was reluctant to send in troops. The President was reluctant and Gov. Barnett said it wasn't necessary."

"The basic question was whether the orders of the courts of the United States were going to be obeyed," Kennedy added. "I don't believe that there is anyone here who would do other than what we did."

The Senator said that, prior to Meredith's arrival on campus, he had 25 long distance telephone conference with Gov. Barnett and the President spoke with Barnett two or three times.

There was laughter when Kennedy told the audience that at one time Barnett complained it would embarrass him politically for Merdith to be enrolled, because he (Barnett) had run on a platform of segregation.

University officials said over 5,000 of the 6,500 students at Ole Miss were on hand.

Hickey Shuts Door On Spring Practice

Coach Jim Hickey opened spring practice here this week by shutting the door. The Tar Heels of North Carolina will work behind closed gates throughout 19 of their 20 days of allowed practice.

"I feel the only way to get the maximum out of our drills is to prevent any distractions," said Hickey. "We have much to learn from our newcomers to the varsity. We also may do some position shifting."

Hickey will have 31 lettermen available next fall, but a number of his veterans are participating in spring sports, limiting the experience for the current working crew.

The job is wide open for a punter during the spring practice. Bill Edwards, who did most of the kicking for the past three years (compiling a 39-yard average over the span), graduates. Danny Talbott, who booted some last fall, is a member of the UNC baseball team.

"Our plans are to have Talbott do the punting next fall unless we come up with someone better over the next few weeks," said the coach. "We are well situated with kickoff and field goal men. Billy Dodson, a freshman back, looks like a first-rate field goal kicker."

The Tar Heels will wind up spring duty on April 30 with an intra-squad game. Hickey will work his men 10 afternoons and then call for a vacation break on April 2. They will reassemble on April 12 for another 10 workouts.

Carolina Will Open Lacrosse Monday

By PETE CROSS
Special to DTH

UNC's lacrosse team clashes with highly - touted Yale Monday afternoon on Navy Field. Coach Cony Steele is "optimistic" about the opener — and the entire season.

Of the eight - game slate his men will play this year, Steele says, "If anything, we are optimistic. They'll be close, but I think we can win them all."

Right now though, Steele's squad is pointing only toward Monday's encounter with a Yale team which finished 13th nationally last year. It will be the first meeting between the two clubs.

"They've got a very strong offense with three real good attack men," said Steele, "Two of their men were chosen for All - American honors last year."

Carolina will counter with its own strong attack line and A-A material. Attack center Jeff Parker was selected for the honorary team last year, and goalie Harvey Stanley must be considered a choice candidate.

Last year's lacrosse squad was ranked 19th in the nation in only their second year of varsity competition. That edition finished with a 5-2 record and provoked a great enthusiasm among the student body.

'We've got an even tougher schedule this year," said Steele, "we'll be the underdog in five of our games." Of the student support which seemed to swell during the season last yar, Steele noted, 'We're hoping for the same support this year."

"Lacrosse has come into its own very quickly here. I think it will remain on solid footing. It's appealing to the spectator much like basketball."

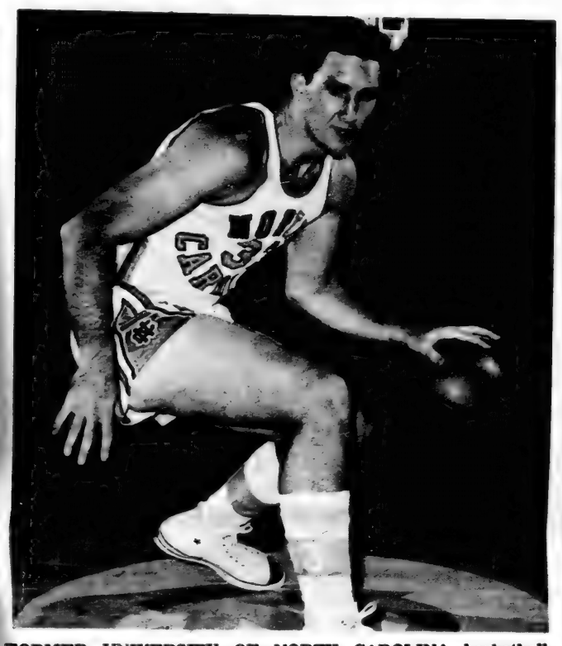
"The game provides speed, body contact and stickwork—also there's an important element of free lancing," continued the coach. "I also think it helps that students can identify with such fine boys as Parker and Stanley."

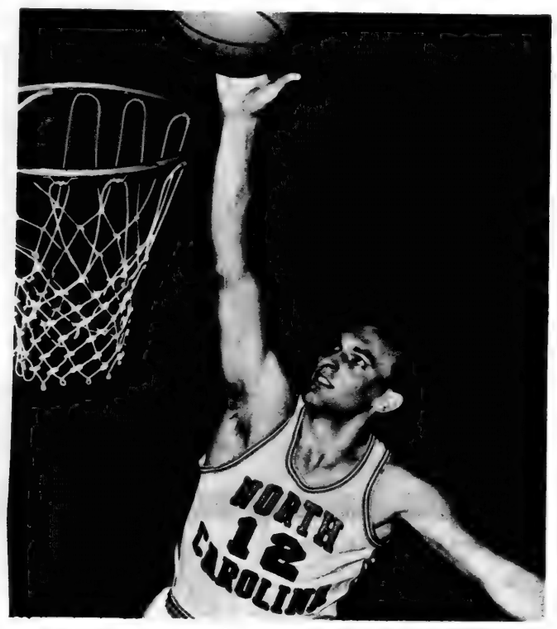
Parker and Stanley serve as co - captains for the team. Both are seniors, and both merit their tutor's praise.

"Harvey is our coach on the field," said Steele, "Of course that's the responsibility of all goalies, but he's better than any I've ever seen."

No scholarships are awarded for lacrosse, and this makes the team's success even more creditable. In the first year of competition (1964) the lacrosse team topped Duke, and this single victory enabled UNC to claim the Carmichael Cup by one - half pint.

Presently, only Maryland and Virgina field teams among ACC schools, but both finished within the top ten nationally.





FORMER UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA basketball greats Jim Hudock (left) and Ray Respess will represent UNC once again next Tuesday night at Duke Indoor Stadium in Durham when the All-Star Alumni teams of Duke and UNC meet. Joining Hudock and Respess will be other former Tar Heel performers: Larry Brown, Pete Brennan, Dan Lotz, Charlie Shaffer, Dick Kepley.

Former Tar Heel Basketball Greats In Alumni Game Battle Blue Devils

DURHAM — Residents of the Triangle Area get their last opportunity to see college-level basketball until next fall when the All - Star Alumni teams of Duke and UNC meet Tuesday night at 7:30 at the Duke Indoor Stadium.

Stars of Duke's (No. 1 National Champions) (Finalists in the National Championships) who will make their final appearance on local collegiate floors incluse Steve Vacendak, AACAC player of the year, Phil Allen and Bill Zimmer. Stars of former years include R. Haskell Tison, Howard Hurt, Doug Kistler, Scott Williamson, Buzzy Harrison, Ron Herbster, Jay Buckley and Jay Beale. The Duke team will be coached by Art Heyman, collegiate player of the year in 1963.

Carolina's team is headed by Larry Brown, star of the Championship U. S. 1965 Olympic Team, as well a Pete Brennan and Dan Lotz, both members of the UNC team that won the National Championship in 1957.

Of more recent vintage, Charlie Saffer, Art Katz, Dick Kepley, Yogi Poteet, Mike Cooke and Ray Respass will represent the older guard, and seniors John Yokley, Jim Hudock, Jim Smithwick, Bob Bennett and Mike Smith the current generation.

The game, an annual event sponsored by the Durham Academy DADS, drew a capacity crowd in last year's thriller. Proceeds are applied to language laboratories, arts, music and phsyical education equipment for the school's new campus.

Special guests will include the entire 1966 NCAA (finalist) (Championship) squad.

Referees are Lou Bello and Joe Mills, both of the ACC.

Burl Ives, a frequent visitor to the area, will throw the first ball, and active participant will be Bones McKinney, who retired recently as head coach of the Wake Forest Deacons. Sound effects will be proviced by the cheerleaders and pep bands of both schools, and an amateur contest between Durham and Chapel Hill disk jockey promises the college teams little in athletic competition but much in the line of entertainment.

Tickets to the contest are available in Durham at all three Kerr - Rexall drugstores and at Connelly's on West Main Street. Outlets in Chapel Hill include Sloan's, the Sports Shop, Danziger's, Record Bar, Crowell Little Ford, and Dr. Lou Vine's Veterinary Hospital. Tickets are priced at $1.00 (50 cents for children under 12) when purchased in advance — $1.25 and .$75 when purchased at the box office. Proceeds will be applied to language laboratories, arts, music and physical education equipment for the school's new campus.

Grail Jamboree Heads Campus Sports Scene

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

A combined team from Pi Kap Phi - Mangum won the ninth annual Grail - Mural Sports Jamboree Thursday night. Pi Kap Phi - Mangum totaled 104 points to win. Phi Delt - Teague was second with 92. Sig Ep - Connor third with 87 1-2, TEP-Craige C fourth with 87 and ZBT-BVP fifth with 83.

There were seven events and a different winner in each one. Phi Kappa Sig - Mangum II won the foul shooting contest. Fernstrom and Cortes both hit 22 of 25 shots for a combined score of 44. Second was Chi Phi - Graham with Snipes and Balcom scoring 43.

In half - court basketball, the team of ATO - Old East came in first. The ATO members were George Tennielle and Brad Munday, while Alan Tew and Jon Anderson played from Old East.

The relays were captured by Pi Kap Phi - Mangum. The members of the team were Bill Early, Bob Adams, Mac Hur, Buddy Sessenbach, Andy Holland, Ted Gardner, Steve Robinson and Chester Connor.

DKE-Morrison D won the handball event with Churchill and Baxter the participants. Table tennis was won by Sig Ep - Connor, with Bill Cole and Essa Abdulla batting the ball across the net better than anyone else.

Frank Rakestraw and Mercer Reynolds won the badminton contest for Phi Delt - Teague.

Swimming finished in a tie between Beta I-Stacy and KA-Morrison C.

Athletics Will Open ROTC Military Week Activities

Athletic events will open the annual Military Week of the local Air Force and Navy day, March 21.

In the past the competition in these athletic events was between the Air Force and Navy. However this year, "to develop team spirit within the units" and not against each other the competition will be between classes.

The teams will be composed of half Air Force cadets and half Navy cadets.

On Monday, March 21, the Military Week begins with tag football and softball. The cadet seniors will play the juniors and the sophomores will take on the freshmen.

Volleyball and basketball games will be played Tuesday with the same pairing as in football and softball.

The winners will pair up for the championship Thursday and Friday.

In case of a tie between two classes, there will be a playoff on Saturday.

As an added attraction, there will be a volleyball game between the NROTC and AFROTC staffs on Friday afternoon.

This week of athletic events will be climaxed with the annual Military Ball, Saturday, March 26 at the American Legion Hut.

These activities are being sponsored by the Scabbard and Blade, a national military honor society of Air Forde and Navy ROTC cadets here.

Carolina Falls To Pirates, 5-3

East Carolina College pcked up five runs in the first two innings of yesterday's baseball game to beat the Tar Heels, 5-3.

Starting pitcher Mike McLaughlin ran into control trouble in the first inning walking the first three batters. Mike Flannigan relieved McLaughlin but the Pirates scored four runs in the first inning.

East Carolina scored another run in the second on a home run.

Carolina picked up their first run in the third. They scored again in the sixth inning on a double by Bob Bonczek and a single by Charlie Carr.

The Tar Heels threatened to take the game in the ninth but was able to plate only one run with two men stranded.

A more complete account of the game will be in tomorrow's paper.

Duke Blue-White Tilt Ends Practice

DURHAM — A month-long spring practice for 70 Duke University football aspirants ends at 2:30 p.m. today with the playing of the annual Blue-White Game in Duke Stadium.

New head coach Tom Harp has named "specialists" who will appear on only the first offensive or defensive team. "But, I'm sure there'll be some changes made after the coaches finish film evaluation," said Harp.

"Just because a boy will be going both ways doesn't mean we are not going to take a good look at him." In more than one past contest an "unknown" has turned in a fine performance and replaced a seasoned veteran.

"We're still seeking our 22 best players," said Harp.

On the defensive line will be senior Bill Serravezza and Bruce Wiesley and junior Bill Phipps at end, juniors Robin Bodkin and Bob Lasky at tackle and junior Bob Foyle at middle guard.

With 34 lettermen and a host of non-lettermen and newcomers seeking to grab places on the top-rated elevens, early practice sessions have been spirited and competitive.

"We have revised our offensive and defensive units somewhat," Harp disclosed Wednesday. "And there likely will be a few other personnel changes before the spring drills are completed."

The new Blue Devil coach, who will field his first Duke edition against West Virginia on Sept. 17, stated that Larry Davis, a junior of Portsmouth, Va., has been shifted from the quarterback corps to a halfback position.

"He's a fine runner, and we feel that he will be of more value to us as a halfback," Harp noted.

Another position alteration was necessitated due to a practice injury to Roger Hayes last week. Bill Phipps, a 6-2 rising junior of Orlando, Fla., has been converted from center duties to replace Hayes on the first defensive unit.

Hayes, a Monroe product who lettered in 1965, underwent surgery on his knee and will be sidelined for the remainder of the spring practice sessions.

"He should be entirely healed by next fall," Harp said.

The players, all new to the watchful eyes of Harp and the assistants, are aware that the Blue - White skirmish will be a golden chance to display their wares in hopes of grabbing a coveted place in the lineup.

Most of Duke's graduation losses depleted the defensive specialists.

Track Team Meets Tigers In Opener

By DRUMMOND BELL
DTH Sports Writer

After a successful indoor track season the Carolina thinclads begin their outdoor season in Columbia, S. C. against the Clemson Tigers today.

Coach Hilton feels that this will be no easy task since Clemson appears stronger in the spring season than they were indoors as a result of the added field events.

In the past, the javelin which is strictly an outdoor event has been a fairly strong point for Carolina.

This year Coach Hilton has returning letter man Pat Tone and Tom Perry, who last year threw 190 feet. These two, if they perform up to par, should strengthen the field events.

Another event, the discus, which is not included indoors, has Barney Varner, Bo Wood, and Ron Short as its entries. Wood placed fourth in this event at the Penn Relays last year and has great potential.

Coach Hilton will go with Ron Short, Felix Alley, and possibly Barney Varner in the shot. Alley, who did well in the ACC Indoors Games is the strong contender in this event for the Tar Heels.

In the high jump Carolina has been given additional strength with the return of Jim Frye, who won the Big Four Freshmen meet last year in this event. Tilden Bridges has shown fine improvement. Indoors, Bridges cleared 6'2" to take fifth in the ACC. Frye and Bridges are strong performers in the high jump and have a fine chance to take first place laurels.

Lester Hyder and Archie Hicks are Carolina's entries in the pole vault. Indoors Hyder did reasonably well, but Clemson is strong in this event, and both of these men will have to vault better in order to give Carolina needed pints.

In the broad jump the thinclads have a strong performer in Gary Iverson, who placed second in the ACC Indoor Games. Iverson is also the mainstay of the Hop, Step and Jump, which is an event of extreme difficulty. However, Iverson has the competitive spirit needed to win.

Indoors, the running events were the Tar Heels forte. Outdoor is no exception. Mike Williams, a highly touted sophomore who won the ACC Weil Trophy for his victory in the mile, is centered in the half -mile and mile.

In the mile Bill Bassett and Co-Captains Jim Meade will give Clemson a hard time along with Williams. All of these runners' are capable of running in the 4:20's and Williams has shown that he can beat the best in the ACC.

Co - Captain Bill Janowitz, who did not do extremely well indoors in the half is ready for the outdoor season and the cinder track. Tom Carpenter, who placed second in the 100 yd. run in the indoors games, gives Carolina a very strong trio in the half. Carpenter runs consistently under 2:00 as do Williams and Janowitz.

Gary Mead, Jim Frye, and Richie Ambrose give the thinclads a strong contingent in the high hurdles. Mead and Ambrose are great competitors, and Frye who won this event, plus the high jump as a freshman in the Big Four, will be hard to beat in the hurdles.

The 440 yd. low hurdles are stricly an outdoor event. Richie Ambrose and Bill Mitchell are Hilton's picks. Ambrose has experience in this race and must only overcome a weak kick in order to become a strong contender for the ACC crown.

The 100 yd. dash is led by Jon Levin, who won the ACC 60 yd. dash title this winter. Levin will be hard pressed since Clemson has a pair of fine dashman. Backing up Levin are Winborune King and Gay. King is a new addition to the team and has shown fine speed in early season workouts.

In the 220 yd. dash Levin will again be Carolina's first man. Steve Kropelnicki and Ed Daw will hopefully press Levin and give Carolina additional points. Daw is Hilton's mainstay in the 440 yd. dash. He has run under 50.0 throughout the past year and is faster indoors. Frank Kurth, who ran the 880 indoors has moved down to the 440 for this meet to give Carolina more depth in this race which has always been a strong one for the Tigers.

The two mile run should go to Carolina. Co - Captain Jim Meade is back to his old form, and Trip MacPherson and Charlie Worley, next year's captain's elect of Cross Country, are out to stay with Meade and finish near the top.

On the whole, Carolina has an advantage in the distance events. However, they will meet strong opposition from Clemson in the dashes and field events. Last year Clemson won this meet, but Carolina seems to be stronger this year and with good effort, should register its first win of the outdoor season in Columbia.

Asheville Motel Makes Bid For Falcon Training Camp

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A firm building a $1 million motel at the Asheville Airport announced Friday it is trying to get the Atlanta Falcons of the National Football League to hold summer training in Asheville.

Ernest L. Harris, president of Hallmark and Co., Inc. of Charlotte said if the deal goes through, his firm would build training facilities, including a practice field and housing for the players in conjunction with the 150-unit motel.

The City of Asheville will lease the property for the motel and training facility to Harris' firm. The motel will be built even if the team does not train in Asheville, Harris said.

German Finds Chapel Hill 'Like Home'; Girls Differ

By CAROL GALLANT
DTH Staff Writer

Gerhard Ducker arrived in New York City last fall from Goettingen, Germany, carrying a large, heavy suitcase. He spent four days there before boarding the bus for Chapel Hill.

Gerhard is one of the two Goettingen scholars at UNC this year. Each year Carolina sponsors an exchange program (two students) with Goettingen University.

Born in Leipzig, East Germany, Gerhard has lived in Goettingen since 1961 and Chapel Hill smaller than Goettingen, is almost "like home."

"When you come from Europe your impressions of America is New York and Chicago, from the pictures you have seen. When I arrived in Chapel Hill I saw how much it was like my own countryside." he said.

He has found differences in the girls here, students in general, professor - student relations, and acadmic life.

German University students generally have their own room. This is Gerhard's only real complaint about living in a dormitory (He is a "Maverick House" resident).

In Germany there are few restrictions on the German students; they may or may not attend class as they please. But at the end of their senior year the German student must take a week - long test, including both oral and written work. Each senior also submits a thesis.

When Gerhar who is studying Economics and Business Administration, returns to the University in Germany, he will have an additional year and a half to study. When he graduates he will have the equivalent of our Masters Degree.

Gerhard was delighted to find the "small classes" here. He says it is impossible for 4-500 students to show up for a class which has seats for 300. "Often the classes are so large you cannot ask questions. Out of class the professors are too busy to see you. I have never found that so here."

Gerhard's first impression was that meeting American students was easy, "but in reality it is not that easy." "Everyone says 'Oh, hi! How are you?' and you believe they mean what they say. You see them the next day and they don't remember. At first you are disappointed, but then you learn to distinguish between those who just say it, and those who mean it.

"Girls? Well, the German girls are more active. If you say, 'What would you like to do? they will suggest something. My experience here is that the girl will answer, 'What wuld you like to do?'

"Also, the German girls are more independent. That may be a result of the different educational system. There are no dorms. Girls can have apartments. There are no differences between the rules for girls and boys. This does not mean they have lower standards, but that they are more on their own because they make their own decision. Students entering the University in Germany are older, 19 or 20."

Bawden Named Dentistry Dean

Dr. James W. Bawden, a member of the dental faculty here since 1961, was appointed yesterday as dean of the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry.

University trustees made the appointment effective July 1.

Dr. Bawden becomes the second dean of the school. Dr. John C. Brauer, who came here as the first dean when the school was established in 1950 has resigned to return to teaching. He will continue as professor of pedodontics after a year's leave of absence beginning in July.

He is a professor of children's dentistry, assistant dean and coordinator of dental research at the dental school here.

In addition to his teaching and administrative duties since joining the UNC dental faculty, Dr. Bawden has been the principal investigator for a research study of the mechanisms by which a mother transfers calcium, flouride and other materials to her baby during pregnancy. Pregnant sheep and smaller laboratory animals are being used for the study.

- O'Toole, Powell Debate -

government should be one to do it."

In his program on academics, Powell said a curriculum evaluation should be made furthering the course evaluations conducted in the past.

He said a general business course should be offered without having to go through the accounting department. Powell also advocated a homemaking course for girls. "It's entirely possible," he said, "for a girl to graduate from college without knowing how to fry an egg."

Powell also advocated the establishment of a complaint board for students to voice complaints about the grading system.

He announced plans for a lobby group at the state legislature to get more money for residence halls. He said the room rent is increasing rapidly and that more funds should be allotted by the state for residence halls.

Powell said the University Book Exchange should also be eliminated because of the large profits it makes.

He also advocated adding a Carolina magazine to the publications here.

O'Toole advocated better facilities in residence halls, a better laison between the administration and the IFC, private telephone privileges for women, a graduate student center, a shuttle bus system from south campus to the main campus, and a high-rise parking facility.

He also said he would like to see the campus radio issue return. "I'm willing to work for it again," he said. O'Toole said the size of the Carolina Forum should be reduced too.

He said the shuttle bus proposal is being discussed by the administration and for each dollar student government gives to the project, the administration will give two.

O'Toole said, "We must get the role of higher education across to the people of the state."

Wilson said his program as vice president would involve an active student government in developing the University, which he termed "one of the greatest resources North Carolina has."

He said student government should work to get more money from the state. He said only 43 per cent of the budget comes from the state legislature now, but more funds are needed.

Wilson also said there is a need for women to be incorporated in all phases of student government. "We must turn to the students," he said, "and try to improve the life of the student at the University."

The candidates for editor of the DTH each advocated extended coverage of student affairs in serving the student body in reporting and interpreting the events of the campus.

Banov outlined a four-beat system for covering campus news. He stressed the importance of the editor taking a stand on campus issues.

Thomas said a "constructive editorial policy with less venom and more insight is needed." He said an open-minded policy is essential.

He also advocated better sports coverage and more extensive campus coverage.

Linville said a more efficient staff is necessary and outlined several phases of student affairs which would be covered extensively by the DTH.

He said sports should be more dynamic and more imagination should be used in intramurals. Linville also said orientation features should be used in the DTH in introducing students to UNC as well as sending the DTH to high school libraries across the state.

Talent Show—No Llamas, Just Singers, Slapstick

By PEYTIE FEARRINGTON
DTH Staff Writer

Talent was the word Thursday night when the curtain went up for the Freshman Talent Show.

Lou Heckler, freshman, Pittsburgh, Pa. emceed the show before an audience of 200. Referring to the somewhat less than capacity crowd, Heckles began. "Thank you for that wonderful round of applaud." Congo beat combos, tap dancers, guitars and singers came and went in too great profusion, but the audience stayed for Heckler's entertaining dialogue.

A third of the way through the show, Heckler again commented, "For those of you who just came in, this is the freshman talent show — not a sit-down strike."

The audience booed and hissed Heckler's puns which were so bad they were funny.

At one point, five boys on the front row got up and walked out. Heckler said, "You really know how to hurt a guy!"

When the audience got out of hand, the host commented "I thought my name was Heckler."

So it went until Rob Phillips, senior, Greensboro, saved the talent division with his piano and a skilled rendition of "Exodus."

Leland Schwante's sophomore, Charlotte, "Who Can I Turn to?" and Gene Rector's, senior, Cramerton, "Ol' Man River" also gave the audience a lot of what they paid for.

Talent ran in the normal veins before Pat Hurley, freshmen, Canton, and his friend Michael O'Flarity came on stage. Ventrioloquists don't usually get the laughs, but this one did with comments as. "To me, 007 is not a spy but a q.p. average," and "The thing I like best about Bond is he always gets his women—that's a lot more than you can say for the fraternities around here."

Hurley asked the dummy what the frats should do about the situation, and O'Flarity replied, "They'll just have to get together and, u . . . get together, and, uh . . ."

Heckler returned after the act and defined the UN Book Exchange as a bookstore that racks more customers than books.

Later a pie - throwing brawl was introduced by, "You won't believe this next act — you haven't believed any of the rest of them."

Heckler kept the audience until the last act, and this group could have kept them all night. Sammy Howell, junior, Ellerbe, and Dave McFadden, sophomore, Hickory, sang and strummed guitars, Buck Malcolm, junior, Winston - Salem, accompanied on the base, and Terry Forest, a senior at Hillsborough High School, added the voice, glitter and appeal of the most professional show.

The group was mellow, quiet, simple, yet sophistated as they sang out "Brandy, Leave me Alone" and a medley of Peter, Paul and Mary favorites.

The three - plus - one killed some of their freshness by sticking too close to the PP&M tradition which they physically resembled. No doubt, this came from the phenominal fact that they had only been together for a week, and Malcolm joined them 30 minutes before show - time.

Credits for the evening go to Marie Harriss and Chuck Brenner, who organized the show, Jerry Merritt, who directed, and Ben White, president of the freshman class, who initiated it.

WHC Holds Public Trial

The Women's Honor Council, in their first open trial of the year, Thursday night, gave a junior an official reprimand for being two hours and 35 minutss late getting back to her dorm last Sunday morning.

The offense was a violation of the campus code and the campus wide late permission of 2 a.m. for Saturday night.

The coed reported she had unintentionally fallen asleep in an apartment Sunday morning and didn't wake up until 4 a.m. She checked in the dorm at 4:35 a.m.

At 10 a.m. today there will be a panel discussion concerning the problems of the federation. The discussion will be conducted in Roland Parker Lounge in GM.

College YDC members from across North Carolina are attending the rally, which is the first one to be held here since the federation was founded here in 1961.

Twelve Named Wilson Fellows

Twelve students at North Carolina have been named recipients of Woodrow Wilson Fellowships. Two others received honorable mention.

The fellows get their tuition and fees paid for one year at any graduate school, a living stipend of $2,000 and allowances for their dependent children.

The graduate school they attend receives an additional grant from the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

Over 11,000 students were nominated for the grants this year. These applicants were screened by college teachers and administrators in 15 regions. Only 1408 of the 11,000 received the fellowships.

The purpose of the grants is to increase the number of college teachers.

Among other North Carolina schools, Duke had 12 recipients also to tie UNC for top spot in the state. Wake Forest and Davidson both had four. UNC-G, East Carolina, Salem and Catawba had one each.

The fellows and their majors are Brenda G. Bethel, English; George N. Buck, English; Mary E. Daniell, comparative literature; William A. Graham, comparative literature; James D. Hartman, French; and Kenneth R. Henry, psychology.

Also, Alexander B. Holmes, economics; David A. Lane, history; Miriam R. Lane, (sister of David Lane) political science; William P. Robinson, musicology; Penn R. Szittya, English; and Spencer F. Tinkham, mathematics.

The two honorable mentions are John R. Leonard, English; and David H. Swanson, economics. — WAYNE HURDER

"Sing-Out '66"

Group Hits Campus; Big Show Tomorrow

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

"Sing-Out '66," a musical show made up of 130 young people from 17 countries, will explode on campus tomorrow with two performances.

Their first appearance will be in McCorkle Place at noon. They will have an evening show in Carmichael Auditorium at 8. Both shows are free.

The group is part of Moral Re-Armament, Inc. It is their idea to show a positive image of American Youth, who want to put freedom and democracy on the offense. They are concerned with the quality of leadership that ought to represent the West if it is to take the offense.

The two - hour performance consists of songs, dances and a few short speeches. The whole program is aimed toward their idea of Moral Re-Armament.

They sing about 30 songs, all of which were written by members of the group except the National Anthem and "Shenandoah."

The group has appeared all across the nation, in Japan and Korea.

In North Carolina they have played in Charlotte, Fort Bragg, Winston - Salem and in Raleigh. After appearing here they will be at Duke and again in Raleigh.

The group is led by the Colwell Brothers who say the group hopes "to surpise and excite you with their torrent of talent, in scenes, songs and skits which have come out of the heart and the deep-rooted convictions of the young Americans and their friends from abroad who are the cast.

"Of one accord, they want to sing out to America and the world the answer they have found for their generation," the Colwell Brothers say.

Last August "Sing - Out" was sponsored in Washington by about 100 members of Congress.

This young group has been received well almost everywhere they go. However, religious leaders and other people are questioning the motives behind Moral Re-Armament.

The cast of "Sing - Out" is made up of many different talents. Drummer Bob Quesnel holds the world record for continuous nonstop drumming — 100 hours, 23 minutes and 15 seconds.

"SING-OUT '66" with a cast of 130 from 52 campuses and 17 countries will appear tomorrow at noon in McCorkle Place and at 8 p.m. in Carmichael Auditorium. The show of songs and music will feature the Colwell Brothers from California.

YDC Hears Talks By Cooley, Finan

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Two political figures outlined the achievements and the future of the Democratic Party in addressing the annual winter rally of the North Carolina Federation of College Young Democratic Clubs here Friday and yesterday.

Congressman Harold Cooley of the new Fourth District of North Carolina and Tom Finan, attorney general of Maryland and gubernatorial candidate there, were the featured speakers at the rally.

Cooley, who addressed the opening session, said Orange County has a lot in common with the other counties in the Fourth District and "I'm glad to represent the people of Orange County."

Orange County was placed in the Fourth District in a special reapportionment session of the State Legislature several months ago. The reapportionment is being taken to the U. S. Supreme Court.

The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee outlined several achievements of the Democratic party in the past few years which have spurred the national economy. "The nation is on the move," Cooley said.

He said the government is about to embark on a new program to combat hunger in the world. "We won't accept nakedness and hunger any longer as a way of life," he said. Cooley said the program is important because "America can't exist on an island of plenty surrounded by hunger and poverty. We will strengthen our own security with this program."

He said two - thirds of the world population is under-fed and one - third is overfed. "Starvation is rampant in the world," he said, "and we can't close our eyes to it."

Cooley said crop controls must exist to preserve the national economy but retiring fertile crop land cannot be done "while part of the world starves." He said he was not in favor of eliminating the federal milk program in the public schools.

Finan addressing a rally luncheon Saturday said the Government is attacking the problems of our society on a "sophisticated plane more than ever before."

He said crime is being attacked by going to the roots of the cause poverty and lack of education. Finan also cited reapportionment legislation which is resulting in better representation of the people. He pointed out that international concern is also being shown in the Peace Corps.

"The Democratic Party is the party that cares and understands," he said, "and the role of the young Democrats excites party leaders." He said the future is in the hands of young people.

Larry Robinson of Wake Forest, chairman of the North Carolina Federation, and Tom Bolch, president of the UNC Young Democratic Club, expressed encouragement at the enthusiasm shown at the rally. "We feel that the rally was very successful," Robinson said.

UNC Junior Hospitalized

David Buchanan, a junior here from Greesboro, is listed in "unfair" condition at Memorial Hospital where he was taken after his sports car ran out of control late Thursday night on Farrington Road (near Clearwater Lake) and hit a tree.

Robert Frost, a freshman from New London, Conn., was only slightly injured. He was thrown from the car. Frost was released after an overnight stay at the hospital.

N. C. Highway Patrolman Guy Gentry investigated the accident. Patrolman Edward Robinson, who stopped by to assist Gentry, said Buchanan was still wearing a seat belt at the time of the accident.

Kenan To Get Social Room

Kenan Residence College, composed of Spencer, Manly, Mangum, Ruffin and Grimes, is on the verge of getting a new social room.

The room, to be built by joint administration - student funds, will be located in the basement of Mangum hall.

At present the basement room is used for a study area for Mangum residents. The heat and water pipes are exposed and the walls are rough concrete.

But hopefully, after $7,100 has been spent on the renovation, the old study room will be a modern looking party room for these five residences.

Steve Jolly, legislator from Mangum, explained yesterday the cost is so high because Mangum is an old building and any reworking of the room will require extensive labor.

Jolly said that if student legislature passed the bill to appropriate their part of the cost ($2,366), work would begin immediately and possibly be completed by Jubilee weekend.

Kenan is the second college to have a woman's residence hall as a member. Morehead College was the first two weeks ago when Cobb joined Aycock, Graham, Lewis, Stacy and Everett.

Morrison Sets Clothes Drive

A clothes drive will be held March 28 - 31, by residents of House A of Morrison Residence College.

The group, headed by Hugh Stevens, will collect old, unused clothing from all residences on campus and donate them to either the Interchurch Council or various church world relief programs.

The original plans were to seek donations from Morrison only, but House President Don Eason decided that a campus wide drive would be more worthwhile.

The coordinators plan to contact the presidents of the various residence areas for aid in gathering the clothing. The group is now in the process of finding a truck in which to carry the donations.

Blood type cards for those who donated blood during the campus drive recently are now available, according to blood drive chairman Sonny Pepper.

The cards of those living in fraternities, sororities and residence halls have been sent out through campus mail.

All other cards will be distributed in Y Court today from noon until 4 p.m.

O'Toole, Powell Take Stand On Issues

TEDDY O'TOOLE

BOB POWELL

Seldom in the long tradition of Student Govrernent has it been more incumbent on the student body to ask the question: what is the role of student government at this University? I feel that the primary role of student government is to function as student agency, and that as such its leaders should adopt an approach that assures top priority to the achievement to direct, tangible benefits for the student body.

Concomitant with this approach, the University Party has offered a platform that incorporates as its guiding philosophy the return of Student Government to the realm of the students.

My experience, as our platform, begins in the Residence College System. Student government must not fail the budding residence colleges during the coming year.

Three years of work in Student Legislature have brought home to me two pressing needs: 1) The urgency of allocating more of the $217,000 budget to programs such as orientation, the Toronto Exchange, the Symposium, and our proposed Campus Humor Magazine, and 2) The need for new grassroots proposals, as a shuttlebus system and washing machines for men' residence halls, to utilize the now - fallow $69,000 General Surplus.

As chairman of the Rules Committee, I both support the extension of women's privileges and recognize the practical complications which the WRC encounters in this area, and I question the authority of the administration in its recent unilateral decision which jeopardized the integrity of the IFC in regulating fraternity affairs.

In the area of academics, our platform includes the implementation of a major awareness program, a student tutoring service and an investigation of the possibility of reorganizing the semester system in order to have exams scheduled before Christmas.

The approach of student government to the present state relations crisis must be characterized by primarily, a responsible attempt to cooperate with the administration in obtaining a non - restrictive speaker policy and a large scale program to focus attention away from distorted views of our campus to the real issue, which is the role of higher education in the state. My work as regional chairman of USNSA leads me to believe that these goals could be best accomplished by a concerted effort through a North Carolina Student Body Presidents Conference.

But perhaps most indicative of my approach to student government is my feeling concerning the cardinal sin of student government: that there are willing, capable people who are refused the privilege of participation. There must be a steady stream of people from the campus to Graham Memorial. I promise an administration in which no student who is sincerely interested will be denied a position.

The most fundamental problem that student government and the University must continue to face next year is our relationship with the state of North Carolina.

The issue of academic freedom has been the source of so much tension since the passage of the Speaker Ban Law in 1963 that everyone in Chapel Hill is quite ready to see a just and reasonable solution to the problem as soon as possible. But in our haste to solve the problem we must not sidestep it next year with any half-hearted, token concern, but must be willing to spend as much energy and time required to do two things.

First, it is imperative that the image of this University and our rapport with the state be rebuilt, using every means available to student government to communicate with the state. My experience in this area for the past two years has convinced me that the mass - media, including radio and television, and student speakers can be effective in rebuilding this image if we can expand these programs.

Second, the student body President must be an effective spokesman for the student body in defending the right of our university to be free from arbitrary political interference.

As your president, I shall be firmly committed to presenting our views as students firmly and responsibly to the state.

On campus, we must continue the close relationship between student government, MRC and our residence halls that has resulted in the development of the Residence College System, and major residence hall improvements this year.

The need for social facilities, academic programs and a host of physical improvements will be the most important campus problem next year's administration shall face.

My program in this area is aimed at one specific goal — tangible benefits.

In the area of academics, I want to begin a joint student-faculty evaluation of our curriculum, a long - overdue project. In addition, our grading system should be examined with the goal in mind of reducing the pressure for grades that often interferes with the actual learning process.

Course evaluation has shown that students can exercise a meaningful role in improving academic life, and I want to expand this role next year.

The important point that I want to emphasize is concern — concern with both the large issues such as academic freedom that affect the direction and quality of education in Chapel Hill, and concern with the little things, such as a tile floor for the Joyner social room or paved sidewalks for South Campus.

In asking for your support, I am asking for the opportunity to translate this concern into a highly successful and productive administration for the student body.

Perfect Spring Day Helps Carnival Net Over $1,400

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

This year's Camups Carnival added more than $1,400 toward Campus Chest's $12,000 goal, drive co-chairman Dave Bruenner announced yesterday.

Bruenner said the Carnival proceeds may total more than $1,500 when all the money is turned in. The Carnival made much more money than he had expected. Last year's Carnival made only $750.

He attributes the success this year to "a combination of weather, imaginative booths and excellent planning by the Carnival committee."

Ginger Prince was crowned Carnival Queen. Charley Evans is the new Carnival King.

The Carnival proceeds brings Campus Chest funds to nearly $3,000. Next week the drive committee will collect funds in residence halls, fraternities, sororities and Victory Village, Bruenner said.

Part of the proceeds from Friday's Campus Chest Carnival will go to the World University Service, an organization which was originated in 1920 to help students gain an education in war-torn Europe.

Since 1946 WUS has expanded to include 50 member nations from every continent. With its base in Geneva, Switzerland WUS works on campuses all over the world to help students help themselves.

It is both a non-sectarian and non - political program. Four of the Cagetories of projects it sponsors are:

—Student health. WUS raises money to supply matching funds for clinics, medical supplies and health education campaigns.

—Student housing and food. Matching funds are offered for building projects.

—Educational facilities and activities. Money goes to books and equipment for mimeographing and reproducing educational materials. Students are then able to set up amateur publishing houses in areas where books are scarce.

—Individual and emergency aid through scholarships and loans. WUS carried out an extensive project to relocate refugee students from Hungary in 1956. Similar aid goes to other disaster areas.

UNC has long played an important role in WUS activity. In 1947-48 a WUS drive netted $4,216.

Other money from the campus chest goes to N. C. Heart Association, Murdoch Center for the retarded children at Butner, O'Berry Center in Goldsboro and the Cerebral Palsy Hospital in Durham.

Stuff-A-Ford Or HELP!

By CAROL GALLANT
DTH Staff Writer

Granted, Roger Miller is a great performer, but would you believe what some of the students on this campus were going through just to win free tickets to his concert March 29?!

Crowell Little and Graham Memorial had supplied the Campus Chest with an innocent enough looking Ford and free tickets to the Roger Miller concert for the lucky group (lucky?) who could pack the most of its members into the standard four-door Ford.

I don't consider myself a particularly brave person, a little foolhardy perhaps, but not brave. It occurred to me as I was resting comfortably with my feet on the steering wheel, radio knobs in my back, and head dangling loosely above the floorboard that this kind of thing could have been used as torture during the war. Many a brave man would have cracked under the pressure, and I don't mean that just figuratively.

One word of advice. If you have claustrophobia do not—I repeat — do not enter a car stuffing contest. When the first body was tossed in after me it was alright. Even the second wasn't too bad because one eye at least was pressed against the wind-shield.

"Yes sir. There are my friends outside and here I am in here. In here! I've got to get out! Let me out of here."

The only consoling thing was a head resting contentedly on the floorboard smiling up at me. "I'll change places with you," it said pleasantly. I counted my blessings, including being alive, as the judges counted the crumpled bodies falling or being dragged out of the window.

Bonnie Cone Accepts Post

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Bonnie E. Cone has accepted the vice chancellorship of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. She has been serving as acting chancellor.

Chancellor-elect D. W. Colvard, in announcing Miss Cone's acceptance Saturday, said he 'is especially hapyy that the university will continue to enjoy the benefit from the enthusiasm and rich experience of Dr. Cone."

Dr. Colvard, now at Mississippi State University, will report on the Charlotte campus April 1.

The appointment has the approval of Dr. William C. Friday of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, and the university's trustees' executive committee.

The 1965 General Assembly elevated Charlotte College to university status.

"I have given careful consideration to the offer as outlined to me by Dr. Colvard and the duties and responsibilities associated with it," Miss Cone said. "Knowing of the great needs of our institution in these areas, I am happy to accept this challenging offer."

Dr. Colvard said Miss Cone would play a major role in guiding the affairs of the institution as it develops into a full-fledged campus of the university.

Miss Cone joined the Charlotte Center of the University system in 1946 and became its director in 1947. She was director when the center became Charlotte College in 1949 and became its first president in 1961.

She began her professional career as a mathematics instructor in high school of the Carolinas and at Duke University.

She has served as president of the North Carolina College Conference, the Southern Association of Junior Colleges.

MRC Will Become Coordinating Body

By STEVE LACKEY
DTH Staff Writer

The Men's Residence Council is undergoing changes that will result in its becoming a coordinating rather than a policing body.

According to new MRC President Lew Brown, the residence college senates will take over the previous function of the MRC, being responsible for both discipline and legislation in the residences.

The changes outlined by Brown are as follows: The MRC will be composed of the governors of the eight residence colleges; the academic lieutenant governors, social lieutentant governors and speakers of the senates of the colleges; the four officers of the MRC elected two weeks ago; and the president and vice - president of the MRC Court.

These 38 members will coordinate the functioning of all residence areas, with the goal of improving life in the colleges.

They will also arrange the social programs on the college level, support the various college newspapers and attempt to improve conduct in residence halls through an orientation program for freshman.

The MRC Court will consist of eight members — one from each residence college.

Brown said the goal of the new court will be "trying to be more consistent . . . setting an overall pattern for student conduct."

Bob Hunter, retiring MRC Court Chairman, said he felt the court has gained more respect this year from the students than in the past.

"The MRC representatives have certainly done their job," he said. "We have had about two or three trials each week. There were not as many last year."

Hunter said sentences handed down by the court have been more severe than in the past, "especially in cases where pranks endangered students. Waterfights, firecrackers, fires and damage to residence hall property were the reasons for most of the trials."

Brown said he expected the new MRC and MRC Court to be "much more effective, much more influential on campus." He feels action by the new bodies will mean more than it has in past years.

At present not all residence halls have been incorporated into the college system, but after spring elections Tuesday there will be officers for all eight colleges.

These colleges are Morrison College; Scott College, composed of Avery, Parker and Teague; Morehead College, composed of Cobb, Graham, Everett, Stacy, Lewis and Aycock; Craige College; Ehringhaus College; Wolfe College, composed of Connor, Alexander and Joyner; Kenan College, composed of Grimes, Mangum, Manly, Ruggin and Spencer; and Davie College, composed of Old East, Old West, Battle - Vance - Pettigrew and Carr.

Brown said all residence halls would still have their own officers, but that the coordinated college program would increase the financial resources of all residence areas, thereby making their overall programs better.

A Lesson In 'Administration'

In approving the new fraternity visiting agreement Friday the UNC administration has merely proved that its earlier response to last weekend's fraternity fiasco was short-signted and needlessly harmful.

The problem is now being handled as it should have been from the start — with the student judiciary investigating the possibility of Men's Honor Council and Interfraternity Council Court trials of those involved in the disturbance, and with a pledge from fraternities to police themselves better.

At a time when respect for the University is hardly at a peak, no good relations with the state were built by news stories reporting the "thorough investigation of the whole fraternity system at the University of North Carolina after a weekend of drunken disorder." At least one state newspaper reported "orgies" in Chapel Hill.

The DTH does not deny that some of the conduct that weekend was absolutely inexcusable and indefensible, and it vehemently condemns such excesses.

However, some administrative reports of what went on at the dance in Durham — on which the decision to break the visiting agreement was partly based — were exaggerated, according to police who were there.

A further injustice was done to the entire fraternity system when every house was penalized by breaking the visiting agreement. No visiting agreement, no girls.

"Prove you didn't have anything to do with this trouble," the administration said, in effect, "and we'll let you entertain girls at your fraternity again."

But students are naive enough to think they should be innocent until proven guilty, and they were justifiably antagonized by this sort of ruling.

The IFC met and drew up an "interim visiting agreement" which makes the fraternities more accountable for their behavior. The administration has approved it and all 24 fraternities are back in the fold — with female guests this weekend.

The uselessness of it all is so apparent that it is painful.

What has the administration (referring particularly to Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson, Dean of Student Affairs C. O. Cathey and Dean of Men William G. Long) accomplished?

1. It has implied to the state that the whole fraternity at UNC is rotten, with practically uncontrollable behavior. Whatever truth there might be in the statement, it still comes under the heading of Washing Your Dirty Linen in Public.

2. It has drawn the unified wrath of every fraternity man, and many other students.

3. It has taken an awkward stand, and placed itself in the rather embarrassing position of reversing it for the sake of common sense.

4. It has a new visiting agreement with fraternities.

This agreement is perhaps the key to present and future problems. Fraternities have pledged to police themselves. If they cannot keep the drunks out of the streets, the noise level below a roar, the litter out of the yards, cars off the porches and surf boards out of chimneys, the administration will.

And it should.

Award Of The Week

The Daily Tar Heel is giving just one award this week, and it goes to East Tennessee State University for having the best student government organization in the United States.

Those folks over there in Johnson City are tending to problems that really concern students. They aren't fooling around playing junior politician. They're getting to the seat of things.

What are they accomplishing at ETSU?

Well, two weeks ago a bill was introduced in the student senate demanding that the school provide softer toilet paper.

The Liaison Council approved the bill and it has been sent to the business manager.

The UNC Student Government claims to be one of the best in the nation, but has it done anything lately that can top this?

Heed Politicians, Or Go Your Own Way

"Hah, hah!", says the monkey.

"Funny as hell, ain't it?"

Politicians break into your cavern in the mammoth marvel of neo-penal architecture and draw you, Faust-like conjuring the monkey on your back, from Shakespeare and religion to hear the New Gospel as force-fed by St. O'Toole.

And ye shall hear, and, hearing, ye shall know. Knowing, ye shall put on a shirt and go downstairs and vote next Tuesday. Voting, ye can get bent, or go to the tenth floor and watch the feature show (Durham — it's camp) or wrestle the monkey and be your apathetic and, God love you, happy self.

It's an art, and it's a craft. It's something you can choose to do, a function to keep the society going as necessary as picking up the garbage or playing in an orchestra.

Something you go to watch, it is, or something to do if that's what you're after.

On their side, they'll call you the apathetic students who don't even want to be party hacks much less devote the time and energy to break into an essentially closed structure to seize a particular kind of power.

On your side, you can care and care and still be a villain. You can want things, fellow tucked away in your cavern, without wanting to do the things you have to do to get them, like walking with your ambition on your sleeve and zooming in on a grin and a vote, like stopping whomever you meet and stroking the dead albatross tied about his neck all so you can — hypocrit! — purge the albatross that lies rotting on your own breast. Your monkey would scorn you if you did these things, your own individual citizen different monkey.

Ends and means, eternal dipole. Does the monkey let you, even if you could, play the game?

No, no, no. Psyche the books, join the Y and tutor little kids, do the small things where you want to do what it takes.

So long as the monkey who won't let you do what escape the "apathetic" label whispers in your ear, you're okay.

So sit in your cavern, apathetic snerd, like a coal out of the fire who'll eventually burn out because he doesn't get his kicks from being red hot. Sit alone, pre-med major who needs a 3.5 to get into med school, and listen to the good, brown monkey on your back, telling you:

Go your own way. You must do what you really want.

Have faith.

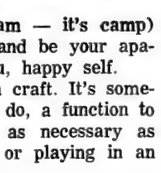
Fraternities Without Parties

Hell-raising has always been popular among Carolina students, especially fraternity men.

After hearing Dean Long's ruling against excessive noise at parties and excessive consumption of alcohol, many Greeks probably threw up their arms and exclaimed: "Dorn — if the situation's that bad, we might as well transfer to Wake Forest!"



Furthermore, on top of everything else, came the barring of women from social activities. Which means the Greeks would have been hard-pressed for entertainment unless they could somehow convince the Dean they weren't among the German's weekend troublemakers; and doing this seemed pretty impossible.

Less booze! No broads! Looks as if many fraternities might have had a difficult time attracting new members. I can just imagine the scene during fall rush.

STUDENT: I'd like to join your fraternity, except I'm told you fellows aren't having fun any more.

FRAT MAN: Of course we are. There are plenty of clean, wholesome things to do that don't anger Dean Long. Only last week our house started a volleyball league. This month, we learned how to build a fire without matches. And we're eagerly looking forward to our nature hike, if we can obtain permission from the Dean.

STUDENT: Where are you going?

FRAT MAN: We have been giving serious consideration to the arboretum.

STUDENT: Isn't there anything else to do?

FRAT MAN: You must be missi ng out on the fun in life. Yesterday, the entire house went to Kenan Stadium.

STUDENT: I bet you and your dates really enjoyed the football game.

FRAT MAN: Oh no — there was no date and no football. We were merely doing our daily five-mile run.

STUDENT: Boy! That telescope over there by the window sure must give you a good view of the women's dorm near here.

FRAT MAN: Women! Certainly not. Bird-watching, you see, is very popular among the brothers. Even more so during the spring.

STUDENT: Doesn't spring mean anything else to you?

FRAM MAN: Yes — spring is when the fraternities hold Germans' Weekend.

FRAT MAN: Of course. You'll especially like the main attraction of Germans' Weekend this year.

STUDENT (excitedly): What's going to happen?

FRAT MAN: Billy Graham has agreed to preach here.

STUDENT: But I thought Germans' Weekend was when everybody danced while musicians played spicy music.

FRAT MAN: Then you'll love it this year. After Billy Graham delivers his sermon, the merrymakers will march through Fraternity Court to the rhythm of a Salvation Army band.

STUDENT: Does your fraternity have any service projects?

FRAT MAN: We teach woodcraft to the local school children.

STUDENT (skeptically): I still don't like what you folks have to offer, but at least it's something different. Guess I'll pledge.

FRAT MAN: Repeat after me — I pledge allegiance to the flag . . . one nation under God . . . mentally alert . . . physically strong . . . morally . . .

STUDENT: ?

FRAT MAN: Congratulations! You've just joined the Boy Scouts. Lemme introduce you to our Scoutmaster. (Turns head) Dean Long, come here a second — we've got a new recruit.

A View from The Hill

FACULTY MEMBERS, has your job left you UNEASY, QUEASY? Does a NEW POSITION beckon you from afar? Do you want to resign in HIGH STYLE?

YOUR WORRIES ARE OVER!

Now you, too, can feel the THRILL OF MARTYRDOM in just a few short minutes.

THE REDDI-RIGHTEOUS RESIGNATION FORM is the answer to your problems.

* * *

To whom It May Concern:

With an ardent sense of Social Comitment to the concept of Academic Freedom, I am hereby regretfully resigning from the:

(a) Political Science Department
(b) Sociology Department
(c) Psychology Department

During my tenure, I have diligently served the University as:

(a) a grader
(b) an assistant grader
(c) a social commentator

I have held this position for well over:

(a) four months
(b) six months
(c) eight months

I am acutely aware of the fact that my resignation will:

(a) lower the prestige of my department
(b) cause consternation among my distinguished colleagues
(c) cause the University to lose its accreditation

Nevertheless, despite my unceasing dedication and intellectual fervor, I find that I can no longer tolerate the stifling influences of:

(a) filthy, warmongering, Fascist Capitalists
(b) vile, ignorant, race-baiting, rednecked Southerners
(c) unthinking name-callers

Admittedly, this University was once a great citadel of Truth, but one cannot dwell forever on the enlightened days of:

(a) Frank Graham
(b) Junius Scales
(c) both of the above

It is indeed unfortunate that, after my departure, there will be no one to carry on my extensive research in the field of:

(a) Criminal sub-cultures of the stickleback
(b) Medicare among the M'bwatizes
(c) the right-wing tendencies of Little Orphan Annie

It will not be an easy task for me to leave Chapel Hill, for I have spent many rewarding hours:

(a) picketing South Building
(b) eating peyote
(c) listening to Louis Lipsitz

As a meagre token of my rational commitment to the Committee for Free Inquiry, I am leaving a substantial contribution of:

(a) poster paper and magic markers
(b) sandasl
(c) tape recorders

The intellectual inadequacies of the current climate at Chapel Hill have driven me to accept a position as Department Head at:

(a) East Pasquotank State Teacher's College
(b) Herbert T. Mortmain Junior High School
(c) the Joan Baez Institute of Non-Violence

I realize that my decision was a monumental one, but I have acted in good faith, so:

(a) please don't try to change my mind
(b) please, please don't try to change my mind
(c) please, please, please don't try to change my mind

Yours in Free Speech,

* * *

When you have completely filled out the REDDI - RIGHTEOUS RESIGNATION FORM, simply send it in to us.

To save you time and trouble, we will mimeograph your form and mail it to the following persons: the Chancellor, the President of the Consolidated University, the Governor of North Carolina, the Trustees of the University, the SDS, the members of your department, Herbert Aptheker, and your mother.

Don't DELAY another day.

RESIGN NOW!

Letters To The Editor

Limits To Partying

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

You have questioned Dean Long's action as a result of the fraternity parties last weekend. you suggest that he has his facts wrong.

My wife and I happened to drive by one of the fraternity houses here in town a little after 5 p.m. on Saturday afternoon. We saw a scene on the front lawn that astonished us. It appeared that all the good furniture in the house — overstuffed chairs and tables — had been carried out onto the lawn. A swinging party was in progress. The lawn was literally carpeted with discarded cans and bottles.

Carolina needs fraternities just as it needs all activities that bring students together in small groups. Parties are fine things too, but there are limits to partying, especially in full view of the public.

Very truly yours,
Donald B. Upham

End 'Factiness'

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

A student at Chapel Hill has access to some of the finest educational materials and facilities in the South, and yet, many feel as I do, that they are more often stymied than encouraged in their pursuit of knowledge.

This feeling quite often develops into apathy or resentment or both and is usually followed by either disgust and "grade-grubbing" or total resignation.

Generally, these feelings can be traced to a situation I should like to call "Factiness." Factiness can best be defined as the condition of assigning over-importance to a selected group or relatively unimportant pieces of information and can readily be compared with "missing the forest for the trees."

Most professors are aware of the fact that it is all but impossible to develope an awareness of government fiscal policy by examining a dollar bill, and yet many spend the majority of class time and too often all of test time "examining dollar bills."

When 45 per cent of a political science final examination is based on one-sentence definitions you have Factiness. When an industrial managemnet test asks, "Which is more efficient, a mercury vapor lamp, a fluorescent lamp or a GE 75 watt bulb?" you have Factiness.

Whenever you have a true-false, multiple choice or matching test, you have Factiness. Factiness is spelled OBJECTIVE and it is "teaching," not encouraging a student to learn.

The practice of Factiness is an attempt to quantify knowledge and as such sets absolute standards on a non-absolute. It glorifies trivia and discourages investigation. It sets the goal at memorizing data and plays down the importance of understanding and comprehending.

It cheats the student who wants to learn!

Isn't it paradoxical that so many professors here at Chapel Hill should jump on the "academic freedom" bandwagon over the speaker ban controversy and then return to their classrooms only to supress that ideal by charging their students to memorize trivia — to fill their students study time with the dreary job of assimilating often obsolete and generally useless information?

How many times a day does a student come away from the all too frequent quiz speaking of ambiguity and pointlessness? How often does a student ask a deep probing question only to be answered "Don't be concerned with that, it won't be on the test."

What do they mean, "Don't be concerned with that?" Why not? Should the student's search for knowledge end with the trivia that will be on the test? Does the student learn to think or does he learn to pass tests?

How many students would prefer a course based on a reading list of six or seven books? A course that dealt with concepts and sought understanding? A course which only required attendance at one, two or three hour seminar a week? A course which had no tests and based its appraisal of student accomplishment on a 5,000-word paper dealing with an area of the student's interest? Wouldn't such a course encourage learning and enhance the student's grasp of the material?

Factiness forces many students to learn in spite of the University, not because of it and I suggest that if we are unable to change some of our "teaching" methods we ought to change our name — from the University of North Carolina to the Fact-ory of North Carolina.

Yours very truly,
Kenelm H. Winslow

Opening Of Music Festival Stars Smith-Wesleyan Choir

The opening concert of the Contemporary Music Festival, sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha, presents the Smith-Wesleyan Concert Choir in Hill Hall Thursday evening, March 24.

The Choir numbers 60 selected voices from two colleges in the northeastern United States—Smith College in Northhampton, Mass. and Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn. Their appearance here marks an important part of their first southern concert tour.

Featured in their concert here will be a work written for them and given its world prere last year — Lutowslowski's "Trois Poemes." Its performance here is being made possible through the cooperation of a group of 21 local musicians who are serving as an orchestra especially for this performance.

The Concert Choir, under the joint direction of Professors Iva Dee Hiatt and Richard K. Winslow, is comprised of 35 women from Smith and 25 men from Wesleyan. This southern tour, undertaken during their spring vacation this year, will feature four concerts other than their UNC performance, including one at Duke on March 23.

Their only other performance of the Lutowslowski work will be with the University of Jacksonville Symphony on March 30.

The two colleges have been singing together for about 15 years. The group has toured in New England extensively and has appeared in Mexico twice. The group is heralded as one of the finest choral groups in the United States. They are particularly noted for their versatility in being able to present works of widely varing styles and ages in one concert.

Other works featured on the UNC program include Charles Ives' three short choral works, "Serenity," "At the River," and "He is There;" Bach's "Cantata 106"; and Schutz, "Motet for Double Chorus."

Composed Verse For Lovelorn

Slave Wrote Poetry On Campus

By MARTHA McMAKIN

The most popular figure on the UNC campus in the days before the Civil War was a slave who composed verses for lovelorn students to send to their sweethearts back home.

George Moses Horton, the Black Bard, was the first North Carolinian able to support himself with money earned from his writings.

The state's first Negro poet also has the distinction of being the first southern Negro to publish a book and the second Negro ever to publish in the United States.

The "Illiterate Genius," as he was called, was born in Northampton County about 1798, the property of William Horton who also owned George's mother and her nine other children.

At the age of six, the boy moved with his owner to a plantation in Chatham County, about ten miles from Chapel Hill.

Young George was put to work in the fields as a "cowboy," work he found very disagreeable and which was no doubt boring to a young man with a quick mind and an ear for verse.

As he worked, he often paced his movements to the tunes of hymns he had learned in Church and soon was putting new words to the old melodies.

Passion to Read

Young Horton soon developed a passion to learn to read, and although state law forbade the education of slaves, he managed to scrape together a Methodist hymnal, a Bible and a Blue Back Speller and began his self-education.

With the help of white children who were sent to school, George mastered his letters, but the process was long and painful, especially since he was able to study only at night and on Sunday afternoons.

In his autobiography, Horton tells how he looked forward from one week to the next to Sundays when he could bring out all the scraps of paper he had found the week before and study the writing on them.

Although he learned to read without too much difficulty, writing came hard to the young man, so he recited his verses each night to someone in the "big house" who recorded them for him.

In 1815, William Horton decided to divide his slaves among his children. Lots were drawn and son James Horton fell heir to George. One of George's new duties as James' slave was to carry fruit to market in Chapel Hill. The students there became fond of the fun-loving Negro and encouraged him in his poetry writing.

Legend has it that James K. Polk, class of 1818, was one of the first to recognize Horton's talents.

Wrote Verse

Although his new owner was unaware of his accomplishments, George continued to compose and preserve his copies of his verses for several years. A few of these early poems were published in the old Raleigh Register and brought the poet considerable prestige in the county, but little money.

By 1829, at the age of 31, George had written enough poems to fill a small book. The Hope of Liberty, a collection of his works, was published that year by Joseph Gales and Sons of Raleigh.

Horton hoped to use the proceeds from the sale of the book to buy his freedom and to sail with other free Negroes to Africa and settle in Liberia. Unfortunately, the book was not a financial success, and its author was forced to return to the fields for three years.

In 1832, James Horton died, leaving his property, including his slaves, to his son, Hall Horton. Possessed of a keen eye for the dollar, Hall thought that writing poetry had ruined George as a field hand and referred to him as that "worthless nigger."

George, taking advantage of his earlier experience at Chapel Hill, offered to pay his master 50 cents a day for his freedom if Hall would allow him to move to the University. Since Hall could hire two field hands for 50 cents per day, he galdly consented to George's plan.

Soon after arriving at the University, George became friends with President Joseph Caldwell who provided him with food and shelter. Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentz, wife of a faculty member and poetess in her own right, helped Horton in his studies and the students in general adopted him as the campus legend.

As soon as his talents were discovered, George was commissioned to write love poems on behalf of the students who then sent them to their sweethearts in their own names.

In his "History of the University of North Carolina," Dr. Kemp P. Battle writes that "When his employer was willing to pay 50 cents, the poem was generously gushing. Twenty-five cents procured one more lukewarm in passion." Many a young girl's heart beat faster at the sight of one of the poems composed by the Black Bard.

One of his poems, "Poet's Petition" was brought to the attention of Horace Greeley by a school teacher in Warrenton, a Miss Cheney, who had become interested in Horton's work and used her influence with her fiance, Greely, to have the poems published in the New York Tribune. This poem, like so many by Horton, is a plea for freedom.

"Bewailing mid the ruthless wave
I lift my feeble hand to thee
Let me no longer be a slave,
But drop the fetters and be free.

Why will regardless Fortune sleep
Deaf to my penitential prayer
Or leave the struggling bard to weep,
Alas, and languish in despair?

He is an eagle void of wings,
Aspiring to the mountain's height,
Yet in the vale aloud he sings
For pity's aid to give him flight.

Then listen all who never felt
For fettered genius heretofore,
Let hearts of petrifaction melt,
And big the gifted Negro soar."

Wrote Greeley

In a letter to Horace Greeley written from Chapel Hill on Sept. 11, 1853, Horton petitioned the editor to free him from the "loathesome fetters," by purchasing Horton's freedom for $175. In return for his kindness, Horton promised to "endeavor to reward your generosity with my productions as soon as possible." Greeley did not respond.

Before long, George was making several dollars a day and was also flooded with gifts by admiring students. He is said to have been as well dressed as any student on campus as the result of having been given cast-off suits. Books were also acceptable gifts and the Bard's library came to include works by Milton, Virgil, and Shakespeare as well as Johnson, Walker and Sheridan's dictionaries.

Among the other gifts, the students also gave Horton such a love for drink that aside from the 50 cents each day for his master, almost all his money went for whiskey. George once said the students "fattened me into the belief that it would hang me on wings of new inspiration, which would waft me into regions of poetical perfection."

According to one of Horton's critics, the admiration of the UNC students and faculty caused Horton to become "intoxicated with his own cleverness which he tried to impress upon others." It is interesting to note that on more than one occasion Horton tried to prove his own genius.

On Sept. 3, 1844, he wrote to the editor of a Boston paper asking that he "be allowed to submit some poetry (in order to) gratify your curiosity in resolving the problem whether a Negro has any genius or not."

No Schooling

As testimony he offered this statement, that he "never had one day's schooling in all the course of my life . . .I was early fond of hearing people read and by that means learned them in this book." The letter is signed, "George Horton, of colour."

Early in 1865, Michigan Cavalry Volunteers invaded Chapel Hill and quartered on the University campus. Horton welcomed the troops as his liberators and wrote for the soldiers as he had for the Carolina students.

One of the officers, Captain Will H. S. Banks, took an interest in the poet and offered to take him north when the troops pulled out. In May the troops left Chapel Hill and were encamped around Lexington until July when Capt. Banks fulfilled his promise and took George with him to Philadelphia.

In the city, Horton published the last collection of his poetry with the help of Banks. The preface included the author's statement that "this work will be offered to the public as one of the many proofs that God in his infinite wisdom and mercy created the black man for a higher purpose than to toil his life away under the galling yoke of slavery."

With the publication of the book, George Moses Morton, became a celebrity and for a few years basked in the admiration of critics who celebrated his works as being comparable to those of Phyllis Wheatly, the famous Negro poetess.

On Aug. 31, 1866, a special meeting of the Banneker Institute of Pennsylvania was held, "the object being to receive Mr. George Horton of North Carolina, a poet of considerable genius."

Unfortunately for the poet, as the furor over abolition died, so did interest in his poems and he was forced to work at odd jobs to support himself and his family.

He died in 1888, place unknown.

Movie Program Raised Questions

By MYLES ERIC LUDWIG

Tuesday evening marked the end of a three-day affair called "A Film Festival" by its sponsor (The Graham Memorial Film Committee) which brought to the campus five contemporary films of divergent intent and quality.

It is not my purpose to criticize the films separately, i.e. to analyze each one and present my opinions of it, but rather, I wish to discuss the event as a whole because the "festival" has brought up many questions on the nature of film as an artistic medium and its place in our current vocabulary of culture.

Rather than do this in the form of a narrative, I prefer to contend with each item as if it were a note on the total matter.

(1). Whether or not the event in Chapel Hill really fulfilled the function of a "film festival" is a question to consider. I think that a university film festival ought to bring before its public and best and most representative of contemporary film-making. And I don't believe that our event did that.

Instead, we were given a kind of grab-bag containing containing one "old master," three "young experimenters" and one combination "story-teller-stylist." What guided the selection of the films? Why was Goddard ommitted? Why were Mekas and Warhol left out?

One can go on dropping names, but the point is that the films shown were not really festival fare. Two have already enjoyed wide commercial succeess and the "underground" selections, well, they're not so subterranean as one might think.

(2). As we all know, the film has a very short history as a medium of artistic espression; however, contemporary film-makers have already built up quite a large vocabulary of cliches. Does every camera have to look through a window? Does every "art film" have to be concerned with the lack or breakdown of communications in our society?

Bergman's film, "The Silence," is saved from oblivion only by his technical mastery; the story—however original or nonoriginal his setting gimmicks might be — is frighteningly shopworn. "Babo 73" reminds me of the "Realist."

Yes, it is clever and it makes its points, but haven't those points already been made? And what of "Georg," the cinematic diary of a madman? Does it really tell us anything about madmen or, for that matter, sane men? "Scrambles" can be seen almost any Saturday afternoon on the Wide World of Sports; why bother with it?

Only "Knife in the Water" means to tell us something specific about people and, therefore, about life. But even this film wraps itself in a shroud of self-consciousness and runs aground . . . if you'll forgive the metaphor.

The art of film is not only the art of style. And, at a time when western theatre, particularly American theatre, has directed itself into a tight corner of intellectualisms, we need the film . . . need it very badly to show us the subtleties, the nuances of life, even if they are magnified 40 or however many times.

(3). The most distressing moment of the evening came when I attended a panel discussion on the films. On the stage at Carroll Hall sat, among others, three members of the Radio, Television and Motion Picture faculty . . . two of whom dismissed the experimental films in terms and tones reminiscent of those who used to say that any monkey could paint as well as Pollock.

It is indeed disheartening to see this kind of stodginess exhibited at a university, a place which should be considered the womb of experimentation. What are you protecting, gentlemen?

But perhaps we can see what they are protecting. Professor Hardy stated that although the audience reaction seemed to be at its greatest height during certain passages of dialogue in "Babo 73," he was not at all disturbed by the language. And, as if to show how sophisticated he was, Hardy tossed off some of the slang and waited for the tittler that he expected to follow.

But, somehow, he failed to use the single word—that famous one of four letter which nobody is supposed to know—which, perhaps, was the filmmaker's fundamental comment. One is left to think that either the Professor feared to use the word or failed to grasp the message.

Space prohibits further wonderings and that might be just as well. Now that the film has been given official recognition by the university, we hope that next year's event will be a real festival.

If you are receiving your degree during 1966, we invite you to join this select group. At TRW you will work on major projects such as Pioneer interplanetary spacecraft, OGO satellites, Mars mission studies, Apollo/LEM descent engine, LEM inertial guidance system, underwater defense systems, communications satellites for military and commercial use, advanced ballistic missile studies, Vela nuclear detection satellites, advanced space probes, and Apollo mission planning and analysis.

TRW will assist you in your career planning by encouraging you to continue your development through the many educational opportunities offered by major colleges and universities in the Los Angeles area. You may participate in TRW's Development Programs as you assume greater responsibilities.

Please make arrangements with your Placement Office for an interview; or you may write College Relations at the address below. TRW is an equal opportunity employer, male and female.

Buddhists Want Reform In Viet Nam Government

SAIGON (AP) — The Buddhist Institute's chief called last night for governmental, social and economic reforms and — for unity in the war effort — a return of purged generals from abroad to resume duty with the other officers.

"They must be united, united to fight against the Communists," Thich Tam Chau told a rally of more than 10,000 persons that overflowed into streets around the Institute.

Highest ranking among the exiles are Lt. Gen. Nnguyen Khanh, last reported in Europe, and Maj. Gen. Duong Van (Big) Minh, who is in Thailand

Both are former government leaders. Both were originally sent abroad on diplomatic missions — Minh to Asian neighbors and Khanh to the United Nations in New York.

Ky under attack

Both, like most of Viet Nam's people, are Buddhists.

The Institute rally was one in a series of meetings, strikes and demonstrations touched off last week by the ouster of another strongman, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, from a seat in the military government and his command of South Viet Nam's 1st corps area.

Chief field action was a clash between entrenched Viet Cong and a company of the U. S. 9th Marine regiment at Bich Nam, a hamlet eight miles south of Da Nang. The Marine suffered moderate casaulties and lost a helicopter in a 12-hour fight. They killed 10 Viet Cong.

President Johnson Signs Trouble-Shooter Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) —president Johnson has signed a bill authorizing an additional $275 million in foreign aid for South Viet Nam and lesser amounts for their trouble spots.

The funds for Viet Nam are for two main purposes: $175 million to combat inflation through financing imports and by other means, and $100 million for public works, agriculture, refugee relief and other projects.

Other funds in the $415-million bill include $25 million for the Dominican Republic, $15 million for Loas and Thailand, and $100 fr a contingency fund to meet emergencies anywhere.

Johnson signed the bill Friday night, but the White House did not disclose his action until yesterday.

Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., who introduced six anticrime bills in the last session of Congress, is chairman of the subcommittee.

He announced yesterday that Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach will be the leadoff witness, followed by David C. Acheson, now a special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury and formerly U. S. Attorney here.

One of McClellan's bills would provide that a confession otherwise admissable would not be rendered inadmissable solely because of delay in arraignment. Another would make membership in the Mafia or other similar criminal organizations a federal crime.

Other bills he introduced would outlaw private wiretapping but permit it by law enforcement agencies under strict controls, provide the Attorney General with authority to grant immunity from prosecution for certain crimes in order to secure testimony to help convict major law violators, and establish procedures for treatment of narcotic addicts.

McClellan said in a statement that other measures he introduced on March 9, in line with the recommendotions in President Johnson's anticrime message, will be considered by the subcommitteed at an early date.

Chariman Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., said last night the Senate Commerce Committee will open hearings next Friday on bills designed to make kidnapping of pets a federal crime.

Magnuson said in a statement that public opinion has "turned . . . sharply against those who take pets from their owners and sell them for profit," and he added:

"No high-sounding purpose provides an excuse good enough to remove a dog or cat from a child or that child's parents. If science needs animals, then petnapping isn't the way to provide them."

Astronauts Arrive At Kennedy

CAPE KENNED Y(AP) — The Gemini 8 astronauts arrived here yesterday determined to "get to work" and find out why the United States nearly suffered its first space disaster with them at the controls.

Astronauts Neil Armstrong and David Scott wasted no time beginning an intensive three - day huddle with project officials aimed at piecing together the elusive event that sent their capsule tumbling wildly 185 miles above the earth with an Agena target satellite hooked onto its nose.

"The liftoff, launching, rendezvous and docking were really tremendous. We were really looking forward to the whole mission," Scott told a crowd of about 200 persons who greeted them at the air strip inside the restricted area of Cape Kennedy.

"We had a magnificent flight for the first seven hours," Armstrong agreed. He told officials who called the plays on Wednesday's successful doubleheader blastoff that "it was a magnificent launch — without a doubt one of the best there's ever been."

The spacemen declined to talk with newsmen about any specifics of the harrowing ride which caused the first emergency landing in the U. S. man - in - space program.

After the brief reception at the air strip, they and project officials immediately delved into a technical review of the play-by-play of their shortened mission.

The spacemen landed here at 7:58 a.m. (EST) aboard a four - engine C135 military jet transport.

North Carolina News Roundup

Dr. Strangelove In N. C.

EUREKA (AP) — People in this tiny Eastern North Carolina Farm community have stopped worrying about the bomb.

They may never come to love it, but they have learned to live with the idea that somewhere under the marshy land near Eureka lies buried part of a nuclear weapon.

It was lost Jan. 25, 1961, when a B-52 bomber from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, near Goldsboro some 12 miles away, crashed, spilling its nuclear pay load over a 12-acre field. One of the weapons broke apart on impact.

In many respects, the incident parallels that of the recent loss of a U. S. nuclear bomb near Palomares Beach, Spain. And, both planes were from Seymour Johnson.

Part of the Eureka bomb never has been recovered.

Behind the town's seeming indifference to the whole thing are the assurances of military and civilian experts that there is absolutely no danger.

"The missing part is totally inert; it can't explode and it isn't radioactive," explained 1st Lt. Richard Kline, director of information of the Strategic Air Command's 16th bomber wing at Seymour Johnson.

Civilian radiologists from the North Carolina Department of Health confirmed there was no radioactivity danger after numerous tests of soil, water and vegetation in the area.

The Air Force didn't give up its search for the missing bomb part without an intensive combing of the crash site.

"They dug a hole big enough to bury the town in," recalled Jimmy Rose, who operates a combination service station and general store in Eureka.

The Air Force dug as deep as 40 feet over a three-acre area. The search was called off when heavy equipment bogged down in the water-logged fields.

"Things go churned up so bad all I can grow in the field now is hay," said Charles T. Davis, who owns the 106-acre tobacco and cotton farm where the crash occurred.

Davis said he has asked the Air Force to compensate for damages, but no settlement has been reached.

Kidnapping Case Appealed

MONROE (AP) — Lawyers for four persons convicted in Monroe's 1961 racial kidnapping case say they have petitioned the U. S. Supreme Court to review lower court decisions ordering the forfeiture of bonds.

The petition challenged a North Carolina Supreme Court ruling upholding a Superior Court order ordering forfeiture of $37,500 in bonds.

Mrs. Willie Mae Mallory of New York City, John C. Lowry of Flushing, N. Y. and Harold Reep and Richard Crowder of Monroe were convicted in 1964 of kidnaping a white couple during a race riot.

The State Supreme Court set aside the convictions, holding there was racial discrimination in jury selection. A new jury list was drawn and new indictments prepared. Late last year a Superior Court judge ordered the bonds forfeited when the defendants failed to appear.

The judge's order was scheduled to become absolute last Thursday, 90 days after the issuance of the order. Now the appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court will postpone it.

Lawyers contend that voiding of the indictment by the State Supreme Court discharged the defendants and voided the bonds.

A fifth defendant in the original case, Robert Williams of Monroe, fled to Cuba to avoid prosecution.

Williams, along with Mrs. Mallory, Reep and Crowder, are Negroes. Lowry, a white man, was a Freedom Rider at the time of the riots.

Navy Begins Operations To Salvage Lost H-Bomb

PALOMARES BEACH, Spain (AP) — A U. S. Navy task force began operations yesterday to nudge a 20 - megaton H-bomb off a precarious slope 2,500 feet down in the Mediterranean and place it in a more suitable position for recovery.

It was believed the tiny submarine Alvin, with three men aboard, was attempting the job on a rough bottom billed with deep canyons.

Once the bomb is moved to a better location, surface vessels with huge cranes are expected to lift it up by cables, thus ending an operation that began shortly after the collision of a U. S. Air Force B52 and a jet tanker during a refueling operation over Palomares Jan. 17. Three other bombs were recovered on land after the planes crashed.

On Wednesday the Alvin, nosing its way along a steep submerged slope, found and photographed the bomb, still shrouded in its parachute.

Adm. Williams S. Guest, commanding the special task force which included Jon Lindberg, son of the famed aviator, said the bomb was so precariously placed on an extremely steep slope about five miles off this beach that he proposed to move it to a more favorable spot for recovery.

This operation began immedaitely and officials here said they were hopeful — unless delays intervene — that formal announcement of the missing bomb's recovery could be made next week.

Barnett Calls Kennedy An 'Unbearded Beatnik'

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Former Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett yesterday charged Sen. Robert Kennedy, D-N.. "twisted statements or willfully misrepresented the facts" in describing the Governor's role in the 1962 University of Mississippi integration crisis.

Kennedy, who was Attorney General when riots erupted at Ole Miss Sept. 30, 1962, drew cheers from a crowd of 6,000 in a speech at the University Friday when he said Barnett asked for marshalls to draw guns on him before admission of James H. Meredith, a Negro.

Barnett said: "It ill becomes a man . . . who was responsible for using 30,000 troops and spent approximately $6 million to put one qualified student in Ole Miss to return to the scene of this crime and discuss any phase of this infamous affair," Barnett said.

Barnett rebutts RFK

Barnett said Kennedy twisted or misrepresented facts every time he spoke.

In his statement, Barnett, considered a sure candidate for Governor next year, asked:

"Why didn't he tell the people of the fact that I pleaded with him and the President time and again to keep Meredith away from Ole Miss after I had blocked his entrance three times.

"Why didn't he tell the people that he and the President both told me that they would put Meredith in Ole Miss even if it took the whole army of the United States."

Meredith, the first Negro enrolled and graduated by Ole Miss, was brought on the campus by U. S. marshals to carry out an order of the 5th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Barnett said Kennedy was "a hypocritical, left - wing beatnik without a beard." He said Kennedy puts politics ahead of principles.

Leaders Ask For Peace In Indonesia

SINGAPORE (AP) — An Indonesian military leader called on organizations in Jakarta ysterday to do nothing that could cause trouble, Radio Jakarta reported.

Presumably the appeal from Brig. Gen. Amir Machmud, military commander of Jakarta, was meant for both Anti-Communists and Communists.

Anti - Communist organizations have demonstrated for weeks against First Deputy Premier Subandrio and other Pro - Communists in the government of President Sukarno.

The new military regime placed Subandrio and 14 other cabinet members under arrest this week.

According to radio Jakarta, Machmud called in the heads of larger organizations in Jakarta and briefed them on the moves the military regime is taking to purge the cabinet of Communist elements. He urged the leaders to "show social discipline and leave it to the armed forces to deal with the situation."

He said it is not necessary for the organizations to copy "the brutal style" of the Communists in dealing with events in Indonesia.

Machmud added, however, that he will not hesitate to take action against those who disobey his advice and instructions.

In a separate broadcast, Radio Jakarta announced a ban on travel abroad by Indonesians, except by officials with government permission and pilgrims going to the Moslem shrine at Mecca in Saudi Arabia.

Informants in Singapore reported, meanwhile, that Jakarta appeared calm on the heels of Subandrio's arrest. They said the troops that Lt. Gen. Suharto had ordered to the capital during the arrests now have left the city.

Suharto is the military chief who is running the nation in place of Sukarno.

Russia May Be Building Missle Defense System

MOSCOW (AP) — Large, mysterious structures in the countryside near Moscow and Leningrad indicate the Soviet Union is installing a defense system against intercontinental missiles.

This would be a significant development in the "Balance of Terror" between this country and the United States. Each now has the ability to destroy the other with nuclear missiles. Other countries, from West Europe to China, are moving toward limited destructive capabilities with missiles.

Informed quarters here doubt the Soviet Union is capable of deploying a completely effective system of protection against missile attack on its two main cities. The technical difficulties of coping simultaneously with multiple missiles is believed to be too great.

But even a limited defense could affect Kremlin thinking about the risks it would be reasonable to accept in any future confrontation such as the 1962 Cuban crisis.

The present Soviet leadership has appeared more cautious than Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev was and less likely to take risks. A decision to build an anti missle defense could be part of that caution rather than indicating any intention of taking out insurance for future risks.

Indications that the Soviet Union has decided on installation of an anti missile system have appeared recently. The large structures seem to be of an electronic nature. They apparently are radar control and guidance systems. Interceptor missiles themselves are not apparent.

Sophisticated radar networks, needed to detect approaching missiles at long range and to guide antimissile missiesl to them, cannot be hidden underground. They might be the mysterious structures, with the interceptors below ground.

Just how good a Russian antimissile system might be is unknown outside tight Soviet circles. Khrushchev claimed several years ago he had an antimissile missile that could "hit a fly in the sky." Western experts doubted the claim at the time.

But the claim has been repeated since. Last year the Russians displayed in Red Square rockets they said could intercept ballistic missiles hundreds of miles from their targets. Informed observers here are cautious in trying to evaluate this. They say the Red Square displays could be only test models.

Finals were held last week in the table tennis tournament. DKE Blue won the fraternity division by beating the TEP Tops, 2-1. Van Wyck of DKE defeated Grosswald in one singles match while Zuckerman of TEP beat Holderness in the other. Edgerton and Swenson won the title by DKE by beating Statler and Goldstein in the doubles match.

Connor Blue defeated Old West 3-0 for the residence hall championship. Essa Abdulla beat Enoch Ping Wei and Dan Dworkin won over Dave Harris in the singles matches while Joe Haseman and Bill Field took the doubles over Ron Funderburk and Roy Alexander.

The graduate division crown went to Med School Blue as they blanked Law Blue II, 3-0. Brick Oettinger downed Veal and Walt Sabiston beat Gwaltney in singles while George Bensch and Sam Harris took care of Guller and Huse in the doubles.

* * *

The residence hall basketball tournament will get under way this week as all eight residence college championships were nailed down last week. First round games will pit Ehringhaus B-2 (7-1) against the Morrison C Cavaliers (6-0) and the Mangum Mugs from the Upper Grad area (6-0) against the Scott College kings, the Teague Trojans (6-0).

The other first - round games match Morehead College champs Graham Bells (8-0) against the Connor Animals (7-0) from the Connor area, and Battle - Vance - Pettigrew (4-1) from the Old Well area against the Craige C Alkaceltics (5-0). All games in the first round are Wednesday night.

There is no clear-cut favorite in the field, but teams that bear watching are the Graham Bells, the Teague Trojans and the Morrison C Cavaliers.

* * *

The fraternity tournament has cleared up considerably since last week's mess. Two quarterfinal games are set for sure, KA Blue I (6-1) against Zete I (6-0), and DKE Blue (6-0) against Chi Psi Red (5-1). The Phi Gam Fijis (7-0) will play the winner of the Phi Delt Blue-Sig Ep Bisons game and Pi Kappa Phi No. 3 (6-1) meets the winner of the Sigma Nu A-ATO I contest.

There is a rumor that the Phi Gams are going to arrive by surfboard. Another story says that if the Phi Gams lose their quarterfinal game, they are going to stuff the other team down their chimney and light the fire.

The rumor that Dean Long will referee the fraternity games is unfounded. There might be a few passes going astray.

* * *

Replacing the fraternity tournament as the most confused is the graduate division affair. So far, it Med Blue in one quarterfinal game appears the Med White will play while FCA will meet the Navy Dolphins in another. Beyond that is anyone's guess. The Peacocks are in the quarterfinals and so is Law IV, but their opponents are still unknown.

Kalamazoo Kicks Off Tennis Schedule Monday Afternoon

VARSITY TENNIS, probably UNC's most successful sport, begins another season Monday afternoon at 2 against Kalamazoo on the varsity courts. Coach Don Skakle will be seeking his seventh ACC championship team in eight years as the UNC tennis head man. Last year's club compiled a 21-0 record on their way to the ACC championship. This year's team could do just as well with veterans everywhere. Pictured above are: (L-R) Gene Hamilton, Kenny Oettinger, Nat West, Coach Skakle, Bronson Van Wyck, Tommy Chewning, Jim Wadsworth and Bob Davis. — DTH Photo by Jock Lauterer.

North Carolina's tennis team, fresh from a 21-0, ACC championship season last year, begin their 1966 drive Monday afternoon against Kalamazoo. Action begins at 2 p.m. on the varsity tennis courts.

The match with Kalamazoo sets off a full week of activity for the Don Skakle-coached team. Following Monday's match, UNC will face Williams here on Tuesday; Dartmouth here on Wednesday; Williams again on Thursday and Clemson here on Saturday. All matches begin at 2 p.m.

Coach Skakle is optimistic about this year's team. Only O. H. Parrish is gone from last year's undefeated club—the first perfect tennis mark since 1941.

Returning from last year's team are:seniors Kenny Oettinger and Andy Goddard; juniors Bronson Van Wyck, Nat West, Tom Chewning and Jim Wadsworth. Van Wyck and Oettinger are co-captains.

But if these returning veterans are not enough, a host of sophomores from an undefeated freshman team are around to push for positions. Sphomores are Gene Hamilton, Rich Holderness, Bob Davis, Billy Trott, Ray Pietersz, Smoky Swenson, Bob Stuhler, Pete Whalen and John Egbert.

"Things seem to be falling into place," said Coach Skakle. "The more experienced fellows are working well with the sophomores. Everyone has taken practice seriously the past two weeks.

"The morale is real good," he said. "There seems to be a real determination to duplicate last year's record."

Coach Skakle had a few comments on Monday's match with Kalamazoo.

"They gave us a pretty good match last year. They probably haven't been outside too much as yet, but I'm sure they have been working quite a while indoors."

Coach Skakle will be seeking his 118 victory since becoming UNC tennis coach. He has lost only 15 times. Only a 5-4 loss to Maryland in 1964 prevented him from taking the ACC championship seven times in succession.

East Carolina's Early-Inning Surge Proves Fatal To Heels In Opener

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer

Six walks, two singles and a home run in the first two innings of play put five runs on East Carolina's side of the scoreboard and it looked like it was going to be a long afternoon for the Tar Heels in Greenville Friday.

Carolina chopped away at the Pirates lead but stranded two men on base in the ninth inning and lost by a final score of 5-3.

The game began before a noisy crowd of home team supporters after a long wait for the umpires to arrive at the field.

About half an hour after the game was scheduled to begin, a car pulled up and the men in blue walked onto the field accompanied by a loud chorus of boos.

An old record played the national anthem through the PA system and the two eams nervously prepared to get their '66 seasons under way.

The Pirate's pitching ace Jim Raynor put the Tar Heels down in order in the first inning. Then Carolina's co-captain Mike McLaughlin walked onto the mound. McLaughlin was troubled by a problem which has plagued his pitching throughout his varsity career-control. He walked the first three batters he faced and worked a 2-0 count on the fourth when Coach Walter Robb walked to the mound and signaled to the bullpen.

Mike Flannigan took over in his first varsity appearance. Flannigan walked Britton, the Pirates left fielder, and gave up singles to Hedgecock and Smith before retiring the side.

Fred Rodriquez, the Pirate's co-captain, hit a home run in the second which accounted for East Carolina's fifth and final run.

Danny Walker did a solid job for the Tar Heels from the third inning on. He kept the Pirates scoreless and gave up only two hits.

Carolina broke the ice in the third and capitalized on an error and two singles off the bats of Danny Talbott and Bob Hume.

The Tar Heels struck again in the sixth inning. Bob Bonczek doubled and Charlie Carr's sharp single down the left field line drove in Carolina's second run.

With one out in the top of the ninth, Butch Watts doubled and Danny Talbott reached base on an error by the shortstop. Bob Hume doubled in Watts and moved Talbott to third. But Bruce Bolick and John Shaw popped the ball up to the infield and the ball game was over.

The Tar Heels collected eight hits and played errorless ball in the field. East Carolina hit the ball safely five times and commited three errors in the field.

AAU Basketball Tourney Attracts College Stars

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Many of the finest collegiate basketball players in the country, headed by two-time All-America Cazzie Russll of Michigan, will perform in new uniforms in Denver, beginning Sunday.

Most of the 16 teams entered in the 58th National AAU Tournament have turned to the campuses to beef up their squads for the four-day meet.

The title will be defended by the Armed Forces All-Stars. The other 15 teams are from 11 states, stretching from New York to Washington.

All 16 will play Sunday in an eight-game program running from 12:30 a.m., EST, to almost midnight in the Downtown Auditorium Arena. Monday's quarter-finals will begin at 5:30 p.m. and Tuesday's semi-finals at 7:30 p.m.

The two survivors will clash for the championship Wednesday night after a consolation game at 7:30 p.m. between Tuesday night's losers.

Russell will come here with the Dtroit Mustangs outfit, the lone Michigan entrant.

Tournament officials announced that the Syracuse, N. Y., Saltines, an earlier entrant, would be unable to come to Denver for the meet and would be replaced by the Arkansas City, Kan., May Builders.

The Elizabeth, N. J., Burry Biscuits, representing the New York metropolitan area, will have Joe Cook of Pennsylvania, Marty Forrek of Seton Hall and Tom Boose of New York University.

Such stars of Deep South basketball as Clyde Lee of Vanderbilt, Dick Snyder of Davidson and Jack Marin of Duke will compete for the Tennessee entrant, the Knoxville Contac-Caps.

The Ottawa, Ill., Flastaffs have signed Don Freeman of Illinois and Charley Brown of Creighton, and the Denver Capitols, one of two home city entries, have strengthened their forces with Chuck Gardner, Big Eight Conference scoring champion from Colorado, and Lonnie Wright of Colorado State University.

Other teams entered include the Tacoma, Wash., Cheneys; Columbia, Mo., Coronados; Cushing, Okla., Gas; Bartlesville, Okla., Phillips; Dayton, Ohio, James; Akron, Ohio, Goodyear; Denver Ice; Torrance, Calif., MacDonald, and California School of Medicine at Berkeley.

Between halves of the championship game Wednesday night, Bill Bradley, Princeton's two-time All-America, will be presented the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy as the nation's outstanding amateur.

BYU Captures NIT Title

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Jimas took over for ace Dick Nemelka and sparked a spurt at the start of the second half that carried Brigham Young to a 97-84 basketball victory over New York University Saturday in the final of the National Invitation Tournament.

The title is the second for the Cougars, whose 1951 team won the NIT in its first appearance. NYU was seeking its first crown in eight appearances, but could get only its second runner-up finish.

Villanova won third place by defeating Army 76-65 behind the 29-points performance of Bill Melchionni.

Jimas came into the game for Nemlka, who has averagd 24 points a game, when the six-foot guard drew his fourth personal with 1:45 left in the first half.

The 6-1 sub started the second half and scored the Cougars' first point on a free throw. He then passed to Craig Raymond for a layup and scored himself on a jump shot, taking Brigham Young from a five-point halftime advantage to a 53-45 lead.

With Raymond dominating the boards and Jeff Congdon passing brilliantly, the Cougars went on from there to make a runaway of the contest. The top-seeded Westerners led by 17 points late in the second half.

Stan McKenzie kept NYU on the scoreboard, getting 19 of the Violets' last 23 points.

Howvr, th bst h could do was get th Violts to within 10 points, 82-72, with 5:21 remaining.

The 6-foot-11 Raymond hit shots from all over the field. He also grabbed 18 rebounds and kept the Violets from getting too close to the basket.

Congdon's passing continuously set up Brigham Young field goals and kept the Violets looking the wrong way.

McKenzie was the Violets' high scorer with 27 points while Steve Kramer added 20 for Brigham Young.

The Cougars, runners-up in the Western Athletic Conference, finished the season with a 20-5 record. NYU, which had won eight of nine games going into the final, finished at 18-10.

For leading Villanova to third place, Melchionni was named the tournament's most valuable player. The 6-foot-1 senior scored 109 points, in four games, the fifth highest total in the tournament's 29 years.

Villanova, which lost to St. John's in last year's title game, did not have too much trouble with the Cadets, who had upset San Francisco and nearly repeated against Brigham Young.

Junior, Senior Level

Faculty Award Established

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

A Distinguished Teacher Award of $1,500 has been established for a faculty member awarded for outstanding teaching on the junior and senior level.

The award to be given each year for the next three years has been made available through funds from Nicolas Salgo, a successful executive.

Any full-time member of the faculty "who is primarily engaged in teaching juniors and seniors" is eligible to receive the new award.

Nominations for the award may be made by any student. These nominations and their supporting statements must be sent to Wright Doyle, 517 North Street by the end of the week.

Doyle is a member of the Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Teaching in the Curriculum. He will present these nominations to this joint faculty-student committee.

This committee will then consider the student nominations, along with nominations from the faculty and alumni, and will present recommendations to Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson.

All nomination ballots, other than student ballots, must be mailed to Professor David G. Brown, 212B-Carroll Hall by March 31.

Sitterson will select the recipient of the award. The winner will be announced at the June commencement ceremonies.

Salgo is making the award available to be "given in recognition of the recipient's teaching excellence as evidenced by his classroom effectiveness and ability to motivate and inspire students, and for his contribution to their intellectual development."

Nominations for the recipient of the Tanner Award — a similar prize — must be mailed to Professor David G. Brown by April 10. Teaching excellence is rewarded with $1,000. Undergraduates do not nominate for this award, however.

Nominations may be made by the faculty, alumni and members of Phi Beta Kappa, Order of the Golden Fleece, Order of the Grail and Valkyries.

In recent years as many as four awards of $1,000 each have been made. Some professors have won the award more than once.

ROGER MILLER, along with the Good Time Singers pictured here, will be in Carmichael Auditorium Tues., March 29 at 8 p.m. Student tickets are $1 and general admission $1.50 and may be bought at Thiem's Record Shop in Raleigh, Page Auditorium box office in Durham and at Graham Memorial. All tickets at the gate are $1.50.

Library Joins TWX Network

The library at the University Health Center here has joined a teletypewriter exchange network (TWX) to speed up the exchange of information and material between the five medical school libraries in North Carolina and Virginia.

Miss Myrl Ebert, director of the Division of Health Affairs Library, said the system is expected to be used in a program of cooperative acquisition of library materials and to speed up interlibrary loan transactions.

Mrs. Mary Thomas, assistant reference librarian, is in charge of the program for the library. Mrs. Jacqueline Buttelman, secretary, will handle all calls for use of the TWX.

"The system already is being used to transmit information on new journals as they are acquired in the five participating libraries," Miss Ebert reported.

The teletypewriter provides access to more than 60,000 TWX subscribers in the U. S. and Canada.

LIFE EXPECTANCE

The North Carolina Heart Association reports that research has shown that life expectancy may be shorter for people who are markedly over their normal weight.

More Names For Letters

Jim Brame — Bob Lewis, Varsity Basketball.

Bill Purdy — Byron McCoy, Governor, Morrison Residence College.

Sonny Pepper — Byron McCoy.

Alan Banov — John Wall, Chairman, Student Government Committee on Honors; Christian A. Herter, III, Freshman Lacrosse; Guy C. Read, President, Christian Science Organization, Miriam Dorsey, Student Legislature, Cobb, Assistant to Student Body President, Former President, East Cobb; Jerry Wagner, Student Legislature; Doug McKeown, Elections Board.

Bill Purdy — Judy Fletcher, Bi - Partisanly Endorsed Candidate for Secretary of the Student Body; Don McPhaul, Bi - Partisanly Endorsed Candidate for Treasurer of the Student Body.

John Ellis's name should not have appeared on Wilson's letter.

Candidates' Expenses Due Monday

All candidates in Tuesday's election must turn in expense account reports to the elections board by noon tomorrow.

Board Chairman Arthur Hays warned there would be 24 hours after the deadline to get the expense accounts in. A $5 fee will be charged to late accounts.

No candidate will be eligible unless he submits this account, Hays said. Account blanks may be picked up at the Graham Memorial information desk.

Copies of the election laws and absentee ballots are also available at the desk.

UP Hootenanny

The Phi Delt's newly organized singing group will lead a traveling hootenanny this afternoon for UP candidates in Tuesday's elections.

They plan to be at the McIver Quad at 2 p.m., Winston Quad at 2:30, Cobb at 3, and Nurses Dorm at 3:30.

Red Flick Here

The UNC Slavic Club Tuesday night will show the film "The Inspector General," based on a short story by Nikolai Gogol.

The film will be shown in 111 Murphy Hall at 7:30 p.m. It is a biting satire of 19th Century Russian provincialism and bureaucracy, according to Guy Read of the Slavic Club.

"It is generally acknowledged as one of Gogol's best short stories," Read said. The film is in Russian with English subtitles. The public is invited.

Recruiting Here

The following companies will recruit on campus this week:

Monday: TRW Systems; Rayonier, Inc.; Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit; Merck & Co., Inc.; Dan River Mills, Inc.; American Photograph Corp.

Tuesday: Pan American Petroleum; Phillip Morris, Inc.; Atlantic Refining Co.; Sears Roebuck & Co.

GM Flights

Space is still available on all the GM-sponsored European flights. Four dates are June 8-July 7, June 9-August 18, June 9-September 5 and July 21-September 5.

The fare is $300 (round trip New York to London). Students and staff at any of the four UNC campuses are eligible to go.

The June 9-September 5 flight is approaching capacity and interested persons are urged to make reservations without delay.

Details are available at GM, 933-2170.

Coed Counselors

Interviews for Women's Orientation Counselors will be Wednesday through Friday. Appointments for interviews may be made and application forms may be picked up at GM information desk.

Interviews will be from 5 to 8 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday and from 5 to 6 on Friday.

Seats Filled

Honor Council seats from several districts have been filled because candidates did not have any opposition.

Elections Board Chairman Arthur Hays said candidates for Honor Council positions have to be endorsed by the Council and no write-in votes are allowed.

Unopposed candidates include John Lawrence, MD VI; Elder Witt, WD I; Robert Dornbush, MD I; Sharon Rose, WD III; Harry Uhrich, MD X; William Pittman, MD XI; and Bill Miller, MD IX.

Hays said ballots for honor council will be available in only three districts, MD III, WD IV and MD XII.

Albert Ellis and John Corne are competing in MD III, Karen Hill and Cheryle Lynn Sedlacek in WD IV and Richard Irving, Thomas Haney, James Lenz and Dave Hardy in MD XII.

Outdoor Dramas

Over 150 young performers from North Carolina and nearby states auditioned for roles in the nation's major outdoor historical dramas on campus yesterday. Final interviews will be held today.

State directors and choreographers from seven leading outdoor drama companies auditioned in the annual program sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers and the Institute of Outdoor Drama.

On hand for auditions are representatives from North Carolina's newest drama, "Till the Day Break," slated to open in Winston-Salem this summer as part of the city's 200th Anniversary Celebration.

Directors from "Horn in the West" at Boone, "Unto These Hills" at Cherokee, and Manteo's "The Lost Colony" are auditioning also. Out-of-state companies taking part are "Cross and Sword," St. Augustine, Fla.; "The Legend of Daniel Boone," Harrodsburg, Ky.; and "The Common Glory," Williamsburg, Va.

McAllister At Forum

Hugh A. McAllister J. of Lumberton, a senior medical student, has been selected to represent the University of North Carolina School of Medicine at the annual Student Research Forum in Texas.

The forum will be held at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston on April 29.

What's Happening At UNC

TODAY

Service of Worship for the university community in the Wesley Chapel, 214 Pittsboro St. Robert L. Johnson will deliver the sermon on "Moral Disarmament and Christian Faith."

Professor John W. Dixon Jr. will be the speaker at the Sunday Afternoon Symposium at the Wesley Foundation.

Catholic students: election of all Newman Club officers after the regular dinner meeting and program in Chase Cafeteria's Delta Room at 5:30 p.m. Anyone is eligible and all are urged to attend this important meeting.

The Carolina Political Union, members only, will have a business meeting at 8 p.m. in the Grail Room. At 8:30 p.m. guests are invited for the evening's program. Dr. Dan Pollitt, UNC Law School, will lead the Union in a discussion of the constitutionality of University speaker polices.

Susan Quinn, mezzo-soprano, and Michael Kelly, pianist, will share a Hill Hall recital at 8 p.m. Both are juniors in music.

Dr. John Schnorrenberg of the UNC Art Department will speak at the weekly dinner meeting of the Lutheran Student Association at 5:30 p.m. today at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church. The public is invited to attend.

MONDAY

The Cosmopolitan Club will meet at 6 p.m. in Lenoir Hall. James A. Morris will talk about the Dominican Republic, where he was a Peace Corps volunteer. Morris is a political science graduate student at North Carolina.

The Graham Memorial Publicity Committee will meet in the Grail Room at 5 p.m. This is an important meeting.

The Academic Affairs Committee will meet in the Grail Room at 4 p.m.

Egon Verheyen, curator of paintings and assistant to the director, at the Alte Pinakothek, Munich, Ger., will give an illustrated lecture on Titian's "Vanity" in Room 111 Murphey Hall at 1 p.m. The lecture is sponsored by the Department of Art and is open to the public.

Interviews for YMCA officers will be held Monday-Wednesday from 3-5 p.m. upstairs in room 203-A of the Y-Building. All those interested in applying for president, vice president, secretary, or treasurer should come by the YMCA offices and sign up for an interview time.

Freshman Orientation Counselor selection will be Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. If interested, please sign up at the Information Desk at GM and fill out an application blank which should be brought to the interview.

The Carolina Political Union will hold membership interviews March 23-25. Sign up now, in advance, at the GM Information Desk for an appointment and to receive an application form.

The Slavic Club of UNC will present Gogol's Film "The Inspector General," Tuesday, at 7:30 p.m. in 111 Murphey Hall. In Russian with English sub-titles. All are welcome.

CPU To Fill 8 Vacancies

By ANDY MERS
DTH STAFF Writer

Students who have washed out of interviews for membership in the Carolina Political Union shouldn't be discouraged.

According to Eric Van Loon, chairman of the Union, there is a very good chance that those turned down by the group were not accepted only because of space limitations.

Former Gov. Terry Sanford tried to apply three times to the CPU as an undergraduate at Carolina and finally was accepted on his fourth application.

The group is limited to 30 members. Van Loon said yesterday eight vacancies must be filled by the end of next week.

Interviews will be held Wednesday through Friday in Roland Parker I, he said. The Graham Memorial information desk will have the times of interviews next week.

"We have to limit membership if we're going to have any kind of discussion," he said.

This year the CPU, which works closely with the Carolina Forum, has heard figures like Charles Weltner, Congressman from Georgia on the House Un-American Activities Committee, and Charles Kuralt, NBC newsman.

Last year the CPU listened to a debate between George Cabot Lodge, former assistant Secretary of Labor for international affairs, and Henry Kissinger, a defense expert who has traveled to Viet Nam.

Debates between the CPU members and their guests after the speeches are usually the best part of the session, Van Loon says.

The CPU this year is seeking to expand beyond what Van Loon calls an "extension" of the political science and history departments.

Bury The Old Tomahawk, Join'um Up With The Klan

RALEIGH (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan has decided on a new approach to the hostile Lumbee Indians — if you can't lick 'em, recruit 'em.

The proud, fiercely individualistic Lumbees broke up a Klan rally near Maxton with gunfire and warwhoops in 1958. The KKK hasn't held a rally in Lumbee territory since.

Now the Klan is offering membership in the hooded brotherhood to the Lumbees. And Robert Shelton, the KKK Imperial Wizard from Alabama, plans a recruiting trip to North Carolina this week.

The KKK had scheduled a cross burning next Sunday at the site of its humiliating rout, but a Superior Court issued an injunction against the rally after getting reports the Indians were stockpiling weapons.

J. Robert Jones, Grand Dragon of North Carolina said, "We want to ally with the Indian and see he gets some civil rights from the government. The Indians have never had an ally and if we're going to give civil rights to the Niggers, we're going to give them to the Indians."

Simeon Oxendine, a Lumbee leader who lives in Pembroke, scoffed at the Grand Dragon's pronouncement, "I don't think Jones is in a position to give anything to anyone. I think the constitution gives us our rights."

The Lumbees have long opposed the Klan's racist philosophy, and it is doubtful they will accept KKK membership.

Tribe members live mostly in Robeson County and surrounding areas in the southeastern part of the state. They do not have a reservation.

State officials received police reports that the Lumbees were buying high-powered rifles, telescopic sights, shotguns, dynamite and even grenades.

Dr. English Jones, President of Pembroke State College, near the rally site, said he received a card threatening the Lumbee Indians "with scalping if they appeared at the rally." The card was signed KKK, he said.

Strummin', Clappin', Singin' 'Torrent' Roars At Noontime

By RICK NICHOLS
DTH Night Editor

"Sing Out 66," 70 strong, swarmed to the front of Graham Memorial yesterday afternoon.

For half an hour soundmen had been setting up speakers and drum sets. And for half an hour students, who thought the thing was scheduled for noon, drifted around McCorkle Place collecting all the wooden park benches.

Then red dresses, blue dresses, green dresses and navy blazers came running. Drums started pounding. Guitars splonged, tamborines jingled.

The whole mass bounced and swayed and clapped . . . and sang about "freedom" in the hot, March sun. It was a little like Jubilee.

One girl in black tights and and blue dress puffed her soul into a trumpet; another, draped in a Japanese kimono, shouted out for America.

At 12:45 there was a minor exodus from the crowd as students left for classes. They exited to the tune of "Up with People." Others took their place.

Most of the 400 people evaporated toward the Dairy Bar or class, but a few stragglers lingered.

Some were puzzled. "They sing 'Which Way America?', but they don't tell you which way," mused Norman Gustaveson. He thought that "Sing-Out" needed to clarify and explicitly define its goals.

Some were amused. Chan Lane, from Greensboro, said "I think they are trying to get me to go to Viet Nam."

Under Silent Sam and on the green benches sat a few older folks. The sun didn't seem to bother them.

They watched the singers leave. They watched the mandolins, trombones and big, gray speakers get packed away.

And when nearly everyone else had gone, they still stayed staring at the emptiness.

A boy was winding his tape-recorder, a stage-hand was slowly coiling some long, black wire.

On the benches sat the graying men. It was warm and they looked very peaceful, very content.

"Sing-Outers" Learn Lessons Well

By PEYTIE FEARRINGTON
DTH Staff Writer

Moral Re-Armament learns its lessons well. From 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. "Sing-Out '66" reserved Roland Parker Lounge for their studies.

Robin Powere, a senior in high school, from Boston, tells of their classes, "We take several courses from an accredited extension program from the University of California at Berkeley. The courses depend on what year we are in school. "I'm taking French III, solid geometry and English literature. I was taking Latin, but I dropped it."

This was the trend with most of the students. Few are carrying a full high school load of four courses.

Linda Rustin, a junior in high school from Ft. Lauderdale, said, "About one third of us are high school students and two-thirds, college students. We all are making better grades with our programmed instruction than we did in high school."

Rustin continued, "I'm doing much better in American history, because my tutor spends so much time with me."

This same idea was reinforced by Kathy Bohaker, a 22-year-old college graduate of Western College for Women, "Most of the students make better grades and can go faster — or at least at their own rate. The one teacher for every three students also speeds up the process."

When asked about facilities for schooling the college students, Bohaker continued, "It's impossible for us to have college instruction because we cannot have a library or laboratories. The college students who travel with 'Sing Out '66' have to give up a year to come along. Most of the college students only stay one year, but the high school students will probably stay longer."

The "Sing Out" students attend class six days a week from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., but this is the exception rather than the rule. With two shows given on many days, the classes are held at random when snatches of time can be found."

Missing Books May Be Found At Booketeria

By STEVE LACKEY
DTH Staff Writer

Stolen textbooks have been turning up at the Book Exchange in increasing numbers this semester, according to Book Ex Manager Tom Shetley.

Since the beginning of February alone, six students have been tried by the Honor Council for stealing books at Lenoir Hall and reselling them.

He feels that probably more thefts than six have occurred, but the people whose books have been taken have not reported it.

The Book Ex has a "foolproof" method of catching anyone who tries to pass stolen books as their own.

First the student who has lost the book comes to the Booketeria and looks through the shelves to locate his text.

Then the manager looks at the coded numbers inside the cover and identifies the student who sold the book.

Shetley says that all that is needed then to catch the thief is report him to the Dean of Men.

The problem in the past has been that very few students knew the Book Ex could trace the seller of a particular book.

Shetley cites one case. A student could not find his books after eating at Lenoir so he went immediately to the Book Exchange.

The book had been sold only five minutes before he got there. Herbert Watson, the man in charge of purchasing old texts, decoded the numbers and identified the person who had stolen the text.

By the time the guilty person could get to Y-Court to cash the voucher he had received, Shetley was waiting.

The Intimate Bookshop and Five-Points Bookstore in Durham always identify the seller at the time of the transaction.

Chapel Hill Boy Dies In Stream

A 10-year-old Chapel Hill boy drowned in a creek near Finley Golf Course Saturday.

He was Andy Penick, son of George Penick of Coker Drive.

According to Chapel Hill Police Chief W. D. Blake, Penick was accompanied by several other boys. He slipped off a log over the creek and was penned under the log. The other boys went for help but by that time he was drowned.

Chapel Hill Police Lt. Charlie Edmonds investigated the accident.

Light Vote Expected In Today's Election

Run-Off Election Likely March 29

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Over 150 candidates are running for offices in today's elections but a light voter turnout is anticipated according to Elections Board Chairman Art Hays.

Up for grabs are all the student body offices, 50 seats in student legislature, NSA delegates, honor council positions, president of the Carolina Athletic Association, senior class officers, editor of The Daily Tar Heel, chairman of the WRC and CWC and dormitory and residence college offices.

Hays said the only problem encountered thus far was that of securing poll tender lists. The chairman said he anticipates overall about the same number of voters as there were last year when approximately 5,300 votes were cast.

Hays said he anticipates the necessity for at least one run-off election, which if it becomes necessary, will be conducted next Tuesday.

If there is a run-off election the two top candidates will be allowed to run if they want to do so.

The candidates seeking offices today include: Student Body President, Teddy O'Toole, Sonny Pepper and Bob Powell; Student Body vice president, Bill Purdy and Don Wilson; Student Body secretary, Judy Fletcher (unopposed); student body treasurer, Don McPhaul (unopposed); NSA delegates, Ann Brownlee, Paul Dickson, Karen Gibbon, Phil Kirstein, Bill Miller, Champ Mitchell and Eric Van Loon.

Seeking seats in legislature are: Md-1, Dick Capps, Juan E. Carvajal, Robert Crowder, Bill Faison, Bill Gordon, Don Morgan, Bill Scott, Heywood

Poll Tenders BMOC Today

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

The polls will be opened from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. today as the annual spring campus elections determine the student leaders for the coming year.

There was "organized confusion" in the elections board office in GM yesterday, according to board chairman Art Hays.

"We didn't have any really big problems getting ready for the election," he said, "but there were some minor things which caused some confusion."

Hays said getting the lists of poll tenders was the biggest problem the board faced.

The chairman outlined the voting procedure yesterday this way. Students must vote in their respective districts since there are district offices to be filled.

He said dormitory residents will vote in their own residence halls except residents of Kenan and Kerr residence halls. Kenan residents will vote in McIver and Kerr residents will vote in Old East.

Women students in non-university housing will vote in WD-1 box at GM or Y-Court. Victory Village residents and men outside the Chapel Hill city limits will vote at the MD-1 box at the Victory Village Housing Office.

Men in non-university housing living within Chapel Hill but east of Columbia Street will vote at MD-2 box at GM or Y-Court. Men residents in Carrboro and Chapel Hill west of Columbia Street and north of Cameron Avenue will vote at the MD-3 box at the Scuttlebutt or at Y-Court.

Court Case Goes On Docket Soon

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

"The court case concerning the University's refusal to allow Aptheker and Wilkinson to speak on campus will be placed on the court docket in a week or two," Student Body President Paul Dickson said yesterday.

"We have been talking to eight lawyers in five cities across the state. No formal engagements have been made yet.

"As soon as we engage our coalition of lawyers, suit will be filed in this case defending our right to hear and Aptheker's and wilkinson's right to speak."

Frank Wilkinson, chairman of the Committee for Abolishing the House Un-American Activities Committee, was not allowed to speak on campus on March 2, resulting from a decision made by Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson.

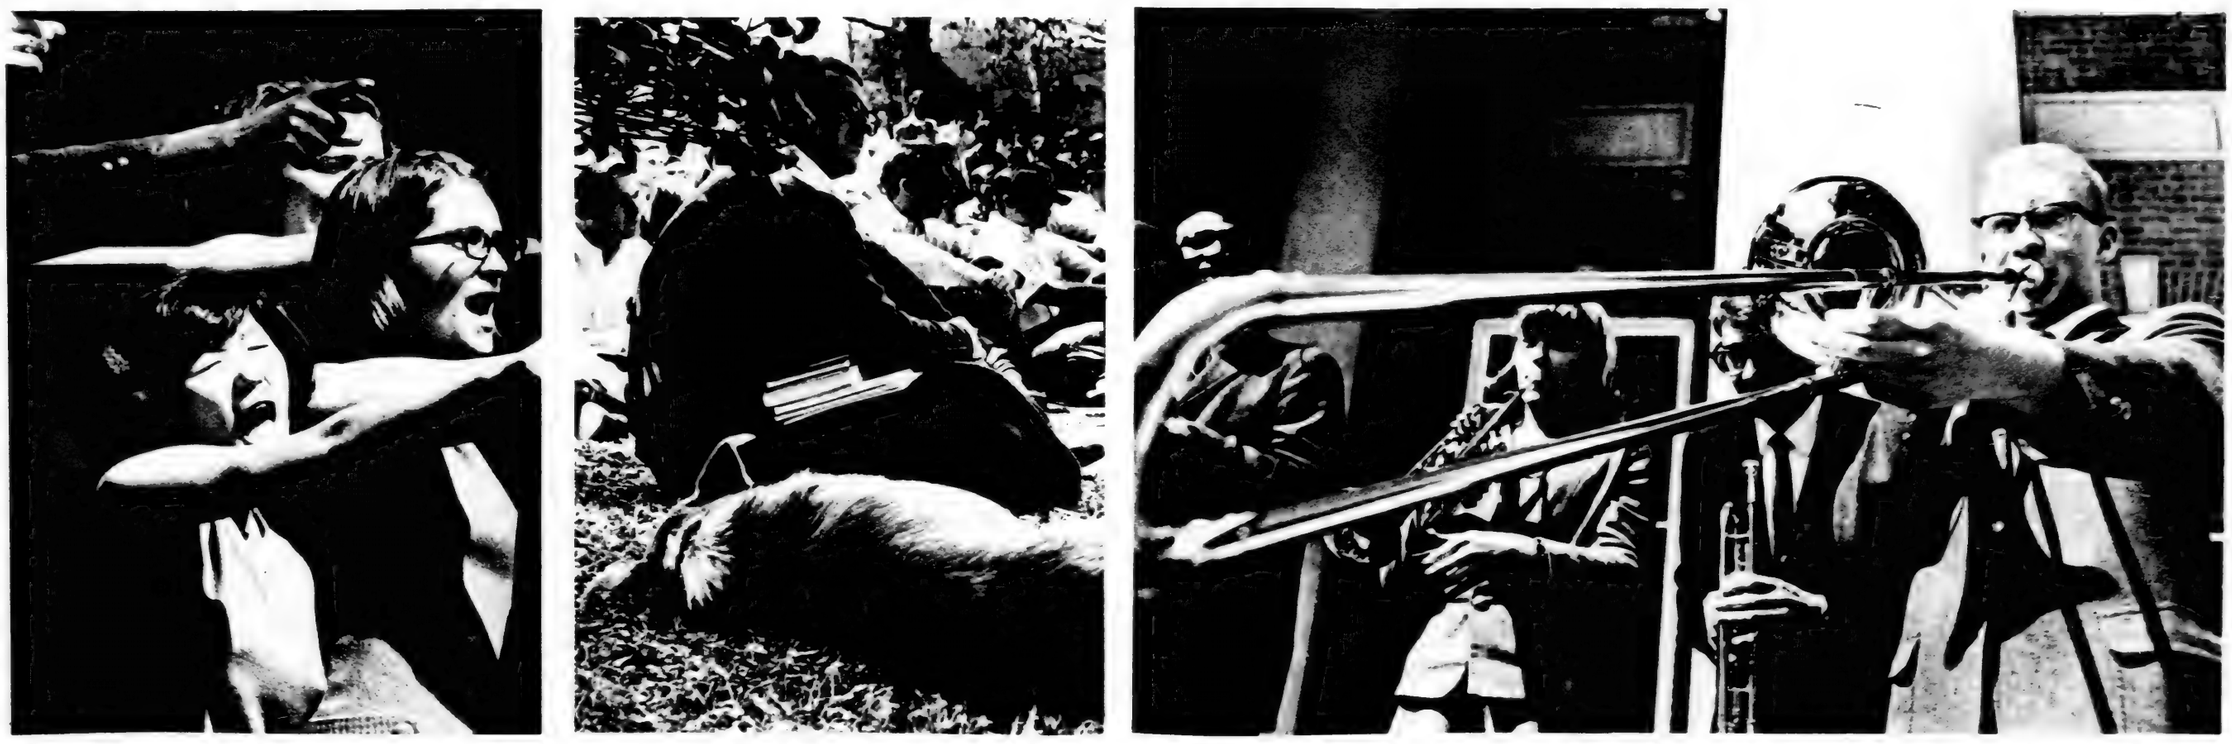
Sitterson also refused to grant permission for Herbert Aptheker to speak here on March 8. Aptheker is the head of the Institute of Marxist Studies in New York.

Fifty dollars has now been collected toward the $2,000 goal needed for the expenses that will be incurred in the proceedings of the court case.

"After the election confusion subsides, we will begin a strong drive for funds," Dickson said. "So far we have not made any great efforts to collect the money."

The new drive for funds will include booths set up in Y Court and Lenoir in addition to a door to door campaign.

Electric Guitars Twanged, Dog Slept At Sing-Out '66 Preview



THE MUSIC RESOUNDED across McCorkle Place yesterday afternoon as Sing Out '66 cut loose their repetory on the walk in front of Graham Memorial. Students liked it, dogs slept and the Sing Out Folks seemed to be enjoying it the most.

The Daily Tar Heel

Opinions of The Daily Tar Heel are expressed in its editorials. All unsigned editorials are written by the editor. Letters and columns reflect only the personal views of their contributors.

ERNIE McCRARY, EDITOR

Read 'Em And Rejoice

Dull.

That is how it has been in Chapel Hill during election campaign time.

About the only thing that can be said for this year's campaigns is that they were unobstrusive.

Whether or not this is tragic or merciful is open to debate, but the fact remains that an almost unprecedented number of voters is still undecided.

And today is election day.

Part of the problem is that most of the candidates are relatively unknown. This situation certainly is not abnormal, but it is worse than usual this spring.

The Daily Tar Heel hereby attempts to shed some light on a rather dark subject.

* * *

In a year of close, non-controversial candidacies, the vice-presidential race is the easiest to predict. Don Wilson, the Student Party nominee, ran for the same post last year and was rather easily beaten by Brit Gordon. Wilson was more experienced but Gordon outdrew him as a more attractive candidate.

Wilson is in about the same position again this year. His University Party opponent Bill Purdy is the "complete candidate." Morehead Scholar, high school athlete, Student Legislature experience, strong voter appeal.

Pre-election polls by both parties show Purdy far ahead, even in Wilson's own residence hall.

* * *

The presidential election is a real tossup.

UP nominee Teddy O'Toole has appeared to be the most vigorous campaigner. He was running hard before either of the other two candidates made a move. He took the University Party nomination away from Sonny Pepper by going for the grassroots delegate support. He has a solid background in Student Legislature and residence hall activity, and an outstanding academic record.

SP nominee Bob Powell, another Morehead Scholar, has been a quiet worker in Student Government for two years. He is chairman of the State Affairs Committee and during the campaign has stressed the importance of the University's role in the state. A top-notch speaker, he makes a good appearance, which is important considering the fact that the student body president is pretty much of a public figure.

He seems to be more mature and better able to handle sticky problems than his opponents, but his talent in really getting things done is largely untested.

Sonny Pepper's candidacy has been one of the most confusing in history. He saw the UP nomination whisked away, decided to drop the idea of running, saw the slate amendment (which would have barred his candidacy or at best, made it more complicated) overturned and decided at last to fight it out.

He got a late start and has been limited in his campaigning because he has no party organization to help. Neither of the other two presidential candidates has had to put up his own posters.

Pepper, now president of the Men's Residence Council, has more experience with residence hall work than any other studen on campus. He is a proven organizer and hard worker —when he wants to be. His support in the election is an unknown quantity. He is strong in the 1,000-man Morrison Residence College, his home district—which is normally SP. He can count on considerable support from the "old-line" UP members who favor him over O'Toole.

Polls by both parties show about 30 per cent of the voters undecided in the presidential election. O'Toole has been consistently ahead of Powell by a small margin until the past two days, when Powell edged ahead with more than 40 per cent of the decided voters. Pepper has trailed badly in all samples taken.

The accuracy of the polls, of course, is questionable, and the only sure thing they indicate is that there is a whopping undecided bloc.

At any rate, give the edge to Powell in a run-off with O'Toole.

* * *

The undecided vote figures even more prominently in the DTH editorship race — more than 50 per cent undecided, with Fred Thomas and Alan Banov both drawing about 20 per cent each. Ray Linville is "way behind," said an SP pollster.

The race is unusual because all three have worked for the DTH at one time or another, but are not on the staff now.

Linville was religion writer for the DTH last fall. He produced little work and showed a notable lack of enthusiasm. He left the staff without ever having really been a part of it. Linville has some newspaper experience with the Winston-Salm Sentinel, but he admits most of his work was as a copy boy. He is, as he has pointed out in his campaign, the only candidate who is both a rising senior and endorsed by the Publications Board, a major factor in his favor.

Alan Banov is the candidate who is best prepared for the election. He has been running actively for months and passively for a year—since he was dismissed from the DTH staff by co-editors Fred Seely and Hugh Stevens. The reasons are their business.

The best thing that can be said for Banov is that he is very enthusiastic and has campaigned hard. The editor of the DTH, however, needs a little more.

Fred Thomas was news editor of the DTH last fall. He quit after a policy dispute with the editor, saying he also needed more time for academic work. The work he did as a staff member was highly competent.

His biggest disadvantage in this election is the fact that he is a sophomore. He lacks the maturity that an extra year as a student would provide, and a DTH editor needs all the maturity he can scrape up.

He probably made a campaign blunder by having a "Students for Thomas" pamphlet distributed which violently attacks both Banov and Linville.

The editor, along with the student body presient, must be elected by a majority vote. It is very likely that a run-off election between Banov and Thomas will be necessary, and Linville's support — especially after the pamphlet attack — will almost certainly go to Banov. If Thomas and Banov are as closely matched as the polls indicate, this could mean Thomas' defeat in the run-off.

Best bet: A write-in vote for Norwood Pratt.

Political Outlook Grows Dimmer For Democrats

The political prospects of the Democratic party, so bright a year ago, are growing dimmer by the day. The Republicans, left for dead after the massacre of November, 1964, are showing definite signs of coming back to life.

The monkey wrench in the works of Lyndon Johnson's political machine is, of course, the Vietnamese War. The President has the support of most of the people, but there are violent disenters. One of the first casualties of the escalated fighting was LBJ's cherished "consensus."

Johnson has been unable to gain the support of his entire party for his war policies. The most outspoken critic of the American role in Viet Nam is, of course, Sen. Wayne Morse, an Oregon Democrat. A much more serious defection, however, is that of Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas.

Fulbright, a highly respected man, is Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, obviously a key position where war is concerned. The President would doubtless trade several other Congressmen for Fulbright's support.

To make matters worse for the President, he is aced with making several unpopular decisions before the November elections. First, he cannot avoid asking for a tax increase to finance the increasing spending and cut down on inflation. Tax hikes are not noted for their popularity, and the President would like to get at least past the elections before being forced to recommend one. He probably won't make it.

Searing war costs added to spending for welfare programs and the pace race are putting a strain on the econmy. Inflation is becoming a serious problem, as indicated by the steepest rise in the February price increase since the Korean War. Various plans are being proposed to make the tax increase equitable, but whatever plan is adopted is sure to irritate some voters.

Another unpleasant action that Johnson has so far resisted is a call - up of the reserves. The Joint Chiefs of Staff have long recommended at least a partial mobilization of the reserve forces to provide manpower required by the war effort. Johnson and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara have maintained that a call-up was not yet necessary, but they are not likely to be able to further escalate the war without the reserves.

If Johnson is forced to mobilizd the reserves before the election, he may pay at the polls. Such a step would further underline the seriousness of the war. It is also unlikely to be popular with the men called up and their families.

Endorsements For NSA Candidates

Ann Brownlee–SP

To represent the University of North Carolina at the NSA Congress it is essential that we send the best representative of our student body. Because of her interest in student affairs, her valuable service in Student Legislature, and her enthusiastic participation in all areas of campus life, we feel Ann Brownless to be most highly qualified to serve as one of Carolina's representatives.

In order for our delegation to be truly representative of the University which is a coeducational institution we also feel it is important that one of the delegates to be a coed. We therefore ask you to join with us in supporting Ann Brownlee for NSA:

Emily Cathy, Chairman C. W. C.

Karen Rawling, President Kenan, Past Delegate to NSA

Frank Hodges

Anne Belcher, Vice - President Nurses, Student Legislature

Jan Wuerhmann, President KD House

Mary Haversotck, Chairman Rules Committee, WRC, Past President McIver

Sharon Rose, Student Legislature

Betsey Price, President, McIver

Sandy Hobgood, Chairman, Ways and Means, Student Legislature

Bob Powell, Chairman, State Affairs

Karen Gibbon–UP

We, the undersigned, would like to state our unqualified support for Karen Gibbon for delegate to NSA. Karen has been active in student affairs, serving in orientation, as Secretary of the Sophomore Class and on the Women's Residence Council. We feel that, as a representative to the national convention, Karen would be a credit to the University and to its students.

Karen realizes that, after last year's vote to remain in the NSA (which organization had been considered too radical by many), and because the deteriorating image of a picketing college student is becoming more widespread, Carolina must make itself heard within the Association.

Because of our confidence in her interest, ability and willingness to serve, we urge you to vote for Karen Gibbon for delegate to NSA.

Bill Robinson, Chairman, Men's Honor Council

Emily Cathey, Chairman, Women's Honor Council

Kathy Cauble, Former NSA Coordinator, ECC

Mary King, Secretary, Carolina Symposium, Former NSA Delegate

Penny Scovil, Chairman, Women's Residence Council

Bill Long, President, Sophomore Class, Chairman, Men's Orientation

Jeri Moser, Chairman, Carolina Women's Council

Ellen Allen President, Spencer Dorm, SL

Rick Kramer, President, Carolina Athletic Association

Phil Kirstein

We are supporting Phil Kirstein for NSA delegate because he has three qualifications necessary to make a good delegate. The three are:

1) A delegate should be familiar with NSA and particularly with an NSA Congress. Phil attended last year's Congress where he learned how the Congress operates, but more important many of the delegates he met will be back this year. This delegate contact will be important when the voting starts and Carolina is looking for friends to vote for their resolutions.

2) A delegate should be familiar with the problems that Carolina has so he can seek ideas for solutions from delegates whose schools share or shared similar problems. Because Phil has worked in Student Government since his freshman year, on committees and as a committee chairman, he is well aware of the problems facing Carolina.

3) A delegate needs to be knowledgeable in current affairs so he can vote intelligently on the resolutions. Phil has this knowledge as demonstrated by his membership in the Carolina Political Union, and he also has the ability to stand up and speak for his ideas.

These are the reasons we are supporting Phil Kirstein for NSA Dlegate. We hope that regardless of political party you will join us in voting for an extremely well qualified and serious candidate.

Tom White, Treasurer of the Student dent Body

Sherry O'donnell, Secretary of the Student Body

John M. Harmon, President of the Senior Class

Mary King, Secretary of the Symposium

Frank Hodges, Former Chairman of the Student Party

Ed Wilson, University Party Floor Leader

Frank Martin, Past President Interfraternity Council

Kathy Cauble, Co-Chairman, Orientation Commission

Sharon Rose, Stuent Party Legislator

Nicky Nicholson, Chairman Carolina Forum

Bill Miller–SP

The National Student Association is a controversial issue at UNC. Our delegates to the Congress this year must be well qualified and most willing to justify to Carolina students our continued affiliation with the organization.

We believe Bill Miller is a well qualified candidate. As a sophomore, Bill currently serves as Vice - Chairman of the Men's Honor Council; a member of the Constitutional Council; Vice - Chm. of the National Merit Scholarship Committee; Treas. of the State Affairs Committee; and Vice-President of Phi Eta Sigma. Bill has maintained a 4.0 average while being in the Freshman and Sophomore Honors Programs.

Bill is eager to see our Student Government derive full advantage from membership in NSA. Because of his wide, varied, and considerable experience in SG, he has a broad awareness of our needs. He would like to take these problems to NSA where he has pledged all his energies to uncover solutions and to bring these directly to Carolina students.

We know Bill is competent to do just this. We support Bill Miller for NSA.

John Ingram, Attorney General

Bryon McCoy, Governor, Morrison Residence College

Emily Cathey, Chairman, Women's Honor Council

Jerri Moser, Chairman, Carolina Women's Council

Bob Wilson, Chairman, Orientation Commission

Sherry O'Donnell, Secretary, Student Body

Ben White, President, Freshman Class

Bill Long, President, Sophomore Class

Jim Aplin, Assistant Attorney General

Jim Medford, President, YMCA

Champ Mitchell

The major criticism Champ Mitchell has received is that he is not "a big politician," How detrimental is this to his ability to represent you? True he does not have his finger in every pie on campus, but it would seem to us that this would give him more time to devote to doing the job he is interested in, giving you responsible representation at the National Student Association Congress.

We do not wish you to get the idea that Champ Mitchell is without experience in Student Government. He is serving on the Men's Honor Council and State Student Legislature, a practice that has done much to heighten his sense of responsibility.

His maturity of judgment is reflected in his statement that "the two - fold job of NSA is to provide the students first with tangible benefits such as an exchange system and student discounts, then to take a reasonable and responsible position on national and international affairs that may have some positive effect on this nations policy makers."

For a man who is interested in doing a good job rather than just holding an office vote for Champ Mitchell.

Frank Hodges, Chairman of the Student Party

Armistead Maupin, Vice - President of the Class of '66

John Harmon, President of the Class of '66

Ben White, President of the Class of '69

Van MacNair, Chairman of the MHC

Lew Brown, President of the MRC

Jim Smith, Student Legislator from BVP

John Ingram, Atty. General

Tom White, Treasurer of the Student Body

Sharon Rose, Student Legislator

Treasurer's Endorsement

Jody Wright–UP

The Treasurer of the Senior Class needs to be a person with a mind that operates like a cash register. We have noticed that class treasurers have the ability to take money from the students and leave them smiling.

With Jody smiling at them, the students will feel no pain, as they cheerfully hand their money over to the Senior Class.

Jody has had a lot of experience at the knack of raising money while serving as Treasurer of her Freshman Class at UNC-G and as Chairman of the Fund Raising Committee for the Calina Symposium.

She will also be able to fall back on her experience as Treasurer of the Student Body in high school, as Sophomore Represenatative on the Finance Board, and as a member of the Finance Committee of the Junior Class to get ideas for fund raising projects.

For these reasons we hope that you will support Jody; we will, and "we" are:

Grey Reeves, Women's Attorney General

John Harmon — Pres. of Class of'66

Armstead Maupin — Vice Pres. of Class of '66

Carol Payne — Sec. of Class of '66

Samantha Townsend — Social Chairman of Class of '66

Kathy Cannon — Treasurer of Class of '66

Lindsay Freeman — I. F. C. Chairman-elect

Tom White — Treasurer of Student Body

Dave Bruenner — Chairman of Campus Chest

Joe Goodman — Pres. of Old West

George Simpson — Pres. - elect of Sigma Alpha Epsilon

Jean Miller — Pres. elect of Pi Beta Phi

Bob Hunter — Chairman of M. R. C. Court

Tom Roberts — Co.-Captain Varsity Soccer Team

Liz Scott — Secretary of Current Jr. Class

Becky Tatum — Social Chairman Current Jr. Class

Susan Warren — Treasurer of Current Jr. Class

Kelly Roberts — Pres. - elect Panhellenic Council

Brenda Ballard — V. Pres. East Cobb; V. Pres. Panhellenic Council

Bil Nucciaroni — V. Pres. Current Jr. Class

Eleanor Shaffer — Pres. elect of Alderman Dorm

Jim Aplin — Assistant Attorney General

Gusty Russell — Pres. Chi Omega

Students Can Dig England

The dirt's going to fly again this summer in Winchester, England.

Archaeological dirt; and students from all over America and England will work like mad to make 'finds' among the rubble of old English castles and Roman houses.

Finds include such things as coins, art works and building remains.

This will be the third season of collaboration between UNC and Duke University to sponsor these excavations.

Dean George R. Holcomb of the Office of Research Administration extends invitations to all college students and faculty who would like to take part. Applicants need only be 18 years old and in good physical condition.

Pay for participants is, if you'll excuse the expression, dirt cheap, but room and board are provided all workers once they get there.

Participants spend a ten week summer in England and may take two weeks off for travel.

Applicants received by April 1 will be given preference.

"Such work is not easy," says Dr. Holcomb, "but the satisfactions are considerable, and some workers return year after year."

Martin Biddle, a lecturer in Medieval Archaeology at the University of Exeter in England, will again direct the project.

Statements By VP, Senior Class Candidates

Vice President

Bill Purdy—UP

This has been a year of turmoil and misadventure for the University in general and Student Government in particular. The turtle's pace at which residence hall improvements have been advanced, as well as the recent arbitrary action against our fraternity system by the Dean of Men's Office, serves only to emphasize the ineffectiveness and lack of concern for campus welfare which have characterized the current administration.

Although I disagree with the childish manner in which present Student Government leaders have failed to cooperate with the University Administration in seeking an acceptable policy for visiting speakers, (even to the point of recording private conversation in the Chancellor's office) I firmly believe that the right to hear persons representing any and all political philosophies and ideologies is fundamental to the educational process.

If elected I shall use the influence of the office of the Vice President to see that Studnt Government continues to seek a solution to this problem, but in a reasonable and prudent manner.

One of the primary duties of th Vice President is to act as the Speaker of Student Legislature. Few people deny that partisan political interests have seriously retarded the progress of the legislature this year.

Our legislative committee system (particularly the finance committee) is so outdated that only a fraction of the bills which are introduced ever reach the floor. The general statures of Student Government are badly in need of revisio nand codification.

I believe the next Vice President must provide the leadership and direction to effect the necessary structural changes in the legislature and to prevent a recurrence of unnecessary partisan warfare.

Experience has given me many opportunities to gain the knowledge necessary to carry the responsibilities of Vive President. In addition to my service in the Student Legislature, I have served as speaker of the North Carolina National Forensic League Senate and received the National Forensic League's highest award for debating.

Next year Student Government needs not only good leaders but also a wide base of active support from the student body in order to begin rebuilding its reputation and influence. Your support will give me the opportunity to provide a part of the leadership in this rebuilding.

Don Wilson—SP

Fellow Students, I am presenting myself as a candidate for Vice President of the Student Body for two reasons; (1) I believe that there is a significant difference in my experience and record of service to this University and that of my opponent, and (2) I desiere to be able to use my experience in completing many of the vital programs started this year and in implementing those new and necessary programs outlined in the Student Party Platform, programs which will significiantly improve the life of every student at Carolina and preserve the integrity of this University.

As your next Vice President I would readily speak out on behalf of the student community I represent. I would insist on academic freedom and freedom of inquiry as those basic necessities for quality education.

I would be a conscientious, hardworking and experienced supporter of a strong Residence College system incorporating both men and women. I would also work for the strengthening and independence of the fraternity and sorority systems.

My attention would be directed toward judicial reform to insure a judicial system that is equitable, a system that can be respected. I would work to improve the image of the University by means of an effective public relations campaign and by acting responsibly while in office.

On campus problems such as parking, the Book Exchange, dorm rent, faculty advisers, campus publications and poor residence hall facilities would receive my immediate attention as Vice President and every effort toward solving them would be expended.

I would not neglect married students, town students, and graduate students. I would be willing to listen and do something about the many problems facing this segment of my constituency. The Legislature, which is the heart of Student Government, would be led by a Vice President who has vast legislative experience and the respect of the legislators over whom I would preside.

I would insist on an efficient legislature that is not stifled by partisan politics. I would also insist on legislative investigtive committees and special sessions if they are needed to insure rapid and effective solutions of programs which threaten the welfare of the student community.

Above is my concept of what a Student Body Vice President should be. I now pledge to you that I will follow the above guidelines, I will expend all of my energies in solving the problems mentioned in order to insure a better college life for every Carolina Student and I pledge myself to act representatively and responsibly on your behalf.

I now ask for your support so that I may continue to serve this University community as effectively and responsibly as possible.

Class Officers

Jerry Houle—SP
Candidate for Vice President

Class officers are the perennial topic of criticism because so often they serve no useful purpose. For next year, I and the other Student Party candidates for Senior Class officers have made practical plans for the coming year.

Among the plans we have formulated, are a Senior Weekend which will include several combo parties. In connection with Senior Weekend will be an entire week of activities for Seniors.

As Vice President, I would work very closely with the President and would help him formulate ideas of the class, and to implement these ideas.

One aspect of the class that I intend to emphasize is enthusiasm. As head cheerleader this year, I realize what a beneficial affect enthusiasm can be in any stituation. Enthusiasm in the class would help us to accomplish the goals we intend to pursue.

Trey Vars
SP Candidate for Treasurer

Being Treasurer of the Senior Class involves more than approving expenditures. In fact, its main responsibility lies in the area of raising money. I have several ideas for fund raising projects for the Senior Class, including selling mums, refreshments at Jubilee, and if worse comes to worse, an underwear sale.

I believe that my experience with handling money and in business organizations qualifies me to be Treasurer, and I believe that with the other Student Party candidates for Senior Class, we will be able to provide a worthwhile and entertaining program for our class, concentrating on the Senior Weekend before graduation.

My qualifications include being vice president of Delta Upsilon Fraternity, assistant chairman of the Junior Class Finance Committee and a member of the G.M. Social Committee.

Vote Student Party for your class, and thus insure a dynamic and memorable Senior year.

Alice Deemer
SP Candidate for Secretary

I would like to introduce myself to you. I am Alice Deemer. I would like to serve you as Secretary of our Senior Class. I think I am capable, and I know I am willing to work. I hope my campaign will show you both.

I have been a clerk-typist for a government agency for the past two summers, and this year at Carolina I have been on Women's Residence Council, vice president of my pledge class and a volunteer worker at Memorial Hospital.

We can have a swinging, social senior year and also make worthwhile contributions to Carolina. Our relationships to our class and to our University are mutual ones. We are the Senior Class. We are the University. We can make what we want of both if only we are willing to try.

We are nearing the end of our organized education and our organized social and living groups. We will soon be on our own. Next year, as seniors, let's make one last organized effort—for ourselves, our class and our University. Start now by going to the pils and voting.

Carolyn Hopper—SP
Candidate for Social Chairman

As Social Chairman of the Senior Class, I will emphasize the Senior Week that the Student Party Candidates for Senior Class officers are advocating in our platform. The week would culminate in a large Senior Weekend with a concept in the forest theatre, combo parties, and possibly a formal dance.

In order to get some top entertainment, we will have several fund raising projects during the year, such as continuing the mum sale during football weekends, selling concessions for Jubilee and having a raffle.

I would also work to improve the relations between graduating Seniors and the faculty by having some social function.

I would also like to see the Senior Class sponsor some charity drive. It would help the Class and the University.

WUNC HIGHLIGHTS

THE ARTS: USA — THE NOVEL — 8 p.m. — "Saul Bellow: The World of the Dangling Man" The heroes of Saul Bellow's six novels — from his first "Dangling Man" to his most recent, "Herzog" — are analyzed by Commentary magazine editor Norman Podhoretz during this third in a series examining the American novel.

THE FRENCH CHEF — 8:30 p.m. — "Brioches" Julia Child notes that the "proof of the Brioche is in the eating" — proceeding to make a delicious French Brioche, "a fancy light yeast dough rich with eggs and butter."

THE TURN OF THE CENTURY — 9 p.m. — "The New Woman" Visiting America in 1899, Rudyard Kipling observed that American women "were clever and could talk." Furthermore he said, it was reported "that they think." Indeed, the turn ot the century ushered in the "new woman." For this program Max Morath portrays a music critic for a woman's magazine, and Robert Benson, the magazine's publisher, as they talk with a fictional composite of the new woman, played by Jan Farrand.

Three New York Newspapers Merge

NEW YORK (AP) —Three of New York City's major dailies announced yesterday plans to merge their operations, combining two afternoon newspapers into one and two Sunday papers into one. No date for the amalgamation was set.

The proposed new publishing firm will be know as World Journal Tribune Inc.

The afternoon field in Manhattan will be shared by the new World Journal and the tabloid New York Post. The morning lineup will remain the Herald Tribune, New York Times and the tabloid Daily News. Sunday newspapers will include the Times, Sunday News and World Journal and Tribune.

It will mark the first alteration in the city's newspaper pattern since Hearst's tabloid Morning Mirror discounted daily and Sunday publication in October, 1963.

"The economics of the newspaper industry in New York compel this move," said a joint merger announcement.

Increased production costs and a change in the pattern of metropolitan newspaper competition were believed major factors in what the announcement described as a cooperative amalgation. The merged papers will operate eventually with combined production facilities, out of a single plant.

The three newspapers had a total daily circulation last year of 1,230,000 compared to 1,679,000 in 1950. Sunday circulation of the Herald Tribune and Journal-American totaled 1,172,000 compared to 1,738,000 in 1950.

The three papers now employ 5,700 persons and the merger announcement said there will be "dislocations of some of our employes." No figure was given.

"We expect to reach complete agreement on all issues prior to the operation of the new corporation," said a statement from 10 unions which represent emplyes on the three dailies.

The merger along lines announced yesterday has been the subject of considerable discussion within the newspaper industry for the past year or more. Notice of the realignment will be given to the Justice Department today.

The proposed realignment would leave Manhattan with two afternoon newspapers — the New World Journal and the tabloid, New York Post. The latter, with a circulation of about 325,000 and published six days a week, is the oldest continuously published newspaper in the city, founded in 1801 by Alexander Hamilton.

Sukarno Asks To Return To His Birthplace In Java

SINGAPORE (AP) — The new military regime in Indonesia has rejected President Sukarno's request to return to his birthplace in eastern Jva —possibly to retire, informed sources in Singapore said yesterday.

These informants said they were unaware of Sukarno's reasons but that possibly he wanted to retire from politics, or to make contact with pro-Communist remnants in an effort to whip up resistance against the new regime.

Wile they thought the first reason he most likely, one source observed: "Sukarno is a political maneuverer of the highest quality. It is hard to believe that he will give up so easily."

Sukarno handed over the last of his political powers last Friday to the new strongman in Indonesia, Army Chief Lt. Gen. Suharto, a strong anti-Communist.

Suharto immediately moved against Sukarno's trusted advisers and friends, including pro-Peking First Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Subandrio and Third Deputy Premier Chaerul Saleh. Subandrio was locked up in a military stockade but some reports say Saleh eluded arrest.

Sources here said Sukarno now is little better than a constitutional monarch with no real power.

You Got Troubles!

PAINTSVILLE, Ky. (AP)— It was bad enough that his home caught fire but that was only the beginning of trouble for Sam Branham.

He was away when the blaze started but a neighbor spotted the flames and tried to telephone the fire department 10 miles away.

The flames snapped the line and cut off service so the neighbor jumped in his auto, drove to another telephone five miles away and placed his call. En route to Branham's house, the fire truck ran out of gas.

The house was destroyed by the time help finally arrived.

Branham said he has just paid off the mortgage and was changing insurance on the house "So I guess I'm not covered."

Branham also lost $800 cash in the place. He had brought home the money to complete a deal on another piece of property.

Top Men In FDA Resign Under House Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP — The two top men in the Food and Drug Administration's bureau of medicine resigned yesterday, effective at the close of business today.

This was a speedup in the plans of Dr. Joseph F. Sadusk Jr., the medical director, who had intended to step out April 15. There had been no previous indication that the Deputy Director, Dr. Joseph M. Pisani, intended to leave.

Drug clearance and suveillance procedures of the bureau have been under criticism from a House committee.

The new commissioner of food and drugs, Dr. Jesm L. Goddard, is the first physician to head the regulatory agency in years. Some observers had specualated this would have the effect of downgrading the importance of the post of medical director.

Goddard also has under way a reorganization of the entire agency, including the bureau of medicine.

Monroe Beauty Very Fast

MONROE (AP) — The new Miss Monroe has a reputation as the fastest girl on the Wingate College campus.

Sherry Sellers, who was named Miss Monroe Saturday, beat all comers last year in the 75-yard dash at the campus field day.

The Darlington, S. C., native, however, won the contest on her beauty and talent — not her track abilities. She has brown hair, dark brown eyes and her vital statistics ate 35-23-36.

As for her 75-yard dash, she says:

"I took quite a ribbing about that. It took about two days for everyone on campus to start calling me 'speedy' and I still haven't lived it down."

State Had 30 Million Tourists

STATESVILLE (AP) — Gov. Dan Moore disclosed yesterday that 30 million out-of-state visitors traveled through North Carolina in 1965, helping boost the value of the state travel industry to more than one billion dollars.

Moore said 1965 was the second successive year that travel and tourism topped the one billion mark. But, he added, North Carolina still has not reached $1.22 billion, an increase of $127 million over 1964. Of last year's total $1.1 billion represented receipts of travel service businesses and $52 million resulted from passenger transportation.

The out-of-state visitors, the governor continued, contributed $115 million to the personal income in North Carolina and another $23 million to state revenue.

Moore said one problem in the tourist industry is "failure to hold our visitors very long after they enter North Carolina. Last year," he added, "the out-of-state travelers spent an average of $11.50 each. Just suppose we could have enticed each of the 30 million to spend one dollar more."

Steps are being taken, Moore said, to eliminate this problem. He pointed out the State Department of Community College is making available short-course training for those who serve the traveling public. The department also is adding a two-year curriculum leading to an associate degree in hotel-motel management technology.

Filing Deadline Stands

GREENSBORO (AP) — A panel of federal judges refused yesterday to interfere with the filing deadline for this year's North Carolina congressional elections.

A three judge panel denied a motion to extend the filing deadline pending the outcome of an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court on a congressional redistricting case.

Renn Drum Jr., a Winston-Salem attorney, and nine Eastern North Carolina residents asked for the extension of the deadline pending their appeal to the high court.

In an order filed in U. S. Middle District Court at Greensboro, the three judges said:

"The court is of the opinion that in the event reapportionment for the current election is ordered by the Supreme Court appropriate relief can and should be granted at that time.

"If, however, no reapportionment for the current election is ordered then irreparable injury will be done to the orderly election procedure of the state by disrupting the existing schedule at this late date. The motion is therefore denied."

The North Carolina General Assembly presented to the three judges a congressional redistricting plan. The court said Feb. 18 that while the plan was not constitutionally valid it would be allowed to stand for 1966. The court said that a new congressional redistricting plan must be presented not later than July 1, 1967.

In their appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court, Drum and the others want the court to throw out the congressional redistricting plan approved by the legislature and realign the 11 districts immediately. Their appeal is based on a Feb. 25 ruling in a Florida case where the Supreme Court ordered immediate reapportionment of the legislature despite the nearness of the 1966 elections.

The Supreme Court has not yet acted on the appeal filed by Drum and the Eastern North Carolina group.

Drum filed the initial suit that resulted in the General Assembly realigning along population lines both houses of the General Assembly and the congressional districts.

Drum based his original suit on the Supreme Court's one-man one-vote ruling.

Pope's Visit Means Better Vatican-Italian Relations

ROME (AP) — Pope Paul VI made an important visit yesterday to President Giuseppe Saragat, Italy's first Socialist Chief of State. The event marked a new high point in relations between Italy and the Vatican.

The Italian government laid on a full program of pomp and pageantry for the visit. Horse soldiers in gleaming breastpage and plumed helmets accompanied the 16-car Papal motorcade as it moved over the two-mile route from the Vatican to the presidential Quirinal Palace. Soldiers and military bands lined the streets.

Pope Paul called on Saragat to thank him for Italy's hospitality to the 2,300 prelates who attended the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

But the visit had meaning far beyond that. It came at a time of growing cordiality between the Vatican and the Socialists, members of the center-left government who have long opposed the Roman Catholic Church on many issues. For years, Italy's marxist Socialists have looked askance at what they considered Vatican conservatism.

Just a year ago this month the Socialists were pushing hard to revise the 1929 concordat between Italy and the Vatican on the ground it was outmoded in a modern Democratic State.

Now the atmosphere has changed. The tone of Socialist opposition has eased considerably, helped by efforts of the Vatican Council to confront pressing problems of today's world and by Pope Paul's personal peace initiatives. Saragat and the Pope are known to have acquired a deep sense of personal mutual regard. Friends say they respect each other as sincere men of peace.

Three-Man Apollo Crews Are Named

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two veteran astronauts and a space-flight rookie — Virgil I. Grissom, Edward H. Whitfell and Roger B. Chafee — yesterday were named the nation's first three-man Apollo crew.

The space triplets will orbit the earth for up to 14 days, hopefully by the end of the year, testing an Apollo spacecraft like one planned to someday fly men to the moon.

Named backup crewmen — the astronauts who will train side by side with the primary team — were Air Force Lt. Col. James A. McDivitt, Maj. David R. Scott and Russell L. Schweickart.

In another announcement, the Space Agency said that Navy Cmdr. Charles Conrad Jr. and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Richard F. Gordon Jr. would fly Gemini 11, the next-to-last mission in the Gemini program.

For the maiden manned voyage of an Apollo spacecraft, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration drew on some of its more experienced pilots.

Grisson, an Air Force lieutenant colonel, served as command pilot on the three-orbit flight of Gemini 3 last March 23, the first manned flight in the Gemini program.

As one of the seven original Mercury astronauts, he became the second American to fly in space, taking a 15-minute sub-orbital flight July 21, 1961. He is 39.

Russia Attempting Space Rendezvous?

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union yesterday launched its second apparently unmanned Cosmos satellite within a week. Scientists at Bochum Observatory in West Germany speculated that the Russians would try a rendezvous in space.

But there was no indication here of any plans for a rendezvous.

Cosmos 113, launched yesterday, followed a widely different orbit from Cosmos 112, launched last Thursday.

Reports from Bochum said the orbit of Cosmos 113 was being synchronized with that of Cosmos 112.

This left open the question of why the Russians would launch Cosmos 113 in a different orbit if they planned an eventual rendezvous.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, announced the laungh-ing of Cosmos 113 in routine fashion, saying it was designed to carry out scientific research. There was no elaboration.

Western analysts believe the Cosmos series may be used for reconnaissance.

Supreme Court Strengthens Its Obscenity Standard

WASHINGTON (AP) — The censor's hand was upheld yesterday by the Supreme Court as it ruled sexy tracts designed to exploit their "salacious appeal" may be banned from the mail as obscene.

The effect of the court's decision in three cases is to give broader sweep to its 9-year-old obscenity standard — and possibly open new avenues to suppress erotic literature.

Publishers "who would make a business of pandering to the widespread weakness for titillation by pornography" are liable to imprisonment, Justice William J. Brennan Jr. said as the court upheld, 5 to 4, conviction of Ralph Ginzburg, publisher of Eros magazine, under federal obscenity law.

"Eros was created, represented and sold soley as a claimed instrument of the sexual stimulation it would bring," Brennan said.

With similar reasoning, the high court voted 6 to 3 to affirm conviction of Edward Mishkin, a book dealer from Yonkers, N. Y., under a New York state obscenity law.

H-Bomb Recovery Delayed By Weather, Tricky Cliff

PALOMARES BEACH, Spain (AP) — Bad weather and a tricky 70-degree undersea cliff on which a missing H-bomb is sitting combined yesterday to delay recovery of the U. S. nuclear weapon.

A strong east wind whipped the Mediterranean into such large waves that U. S. task force 65 was forced to suspend its deep-water operations just as it seemed about to cap its work of weeks with success.

Officials here acknowledged that the bomb and its attached parachute had slipped deeper into the area from the 2,500-foot level where the midget submarine Alvin found it last week.

Francisco Simo, 40, the Spanish fisherman who pinpointed the bomb's location and directed the Alvin to it, told newsmen in an interview the 16-ton midget sub twice almost had the bomb in the arms. But something happened.

"It seems the parachute got in the way or something," Simo said, and the Alvin was forced to abandon its efforts and return to the surface.

Vexation rather than disappointment was the spirit of the task force as its dozen ships and hundreds of men awaited better weather.

1966 NCAA Final Goes To Miners

By BILL ROLLINS Assistant Sports Editor

Most viewers felt that the University of Kentucky had gone long enough without a national basketball championship, and that this was their year to pick the lock on the throne room door.

Many felt, however, that it was title time in Durham.

A few outsiders gave Texas Western a solid shot at the crown.

And nobody gave Utah as much as a whisper-of-a-prayer.

That's more or less the way the pre-semifinal figuring stacked up in College Park last week, and when the midnight hour struck on Friday, the majority of the figure-filberts were right on the money.

But, arrived the bewitching hour on Saturday, and the "outsider" refused to play Cinderella's riches-to-rags reversal.

An no matter how many times that title clash is "replayed"; regardless of how many times people say "IF . . ."; and make-no-nevermind of the wails that tell the world that Kentucky's Wildcats could not possibly have lost THE most important game of the year —despite all these things, Texas Western reigns as the basketball champion of the National Collegiate Athletic Association for 1966.

And Duke, once again, is just a bridesmaid.

These four teams came — Duke from the East, Kentucky from the Mideast, Texas Western from the Midwest and Utah from the Far West — to one of the nation's finest basketball showplaces late last week. They came, each dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal and that it was now up to each of them — not the ratings — to prove which was truly the nation's Number One.

Nationally, the consensus was that the winner of the Kentucky-Duke match, which kicked off the annual extravaganza, would win over the second-round victor, probably Texas Western.

So, much like the Democratic primary in Southern politics, the first primary of the four-game weekend struggle was supposed to decide the titlist.

The nation watched with tower-tall interest as Duke was relegated to the consolation round by Kentucky (83-79), and then eased back in its seat as Texas Western disposed of Utah by 85-78.

This set up the No. 1 versus No. 3 meeting, and people were saying that sure Kentucky would win. But wasn't it odd that the 'Cats eventually had to beat the two teams rated right behind them?

In the next night's battle for third place, Duke barely edged past Utah (79-77). People smiled and praised the Utes for their courage after having lost their only big man, and they were saying that Jerry Chambers (who broke the four-game playoff record with 143 points) was the best player in the field.

And, my goodness, wasn't Duke beginning to look like the old New York football Giants—so near almost every year, but yet so far! Tsk tsk.

But consolations were over, and now the stage was set. This was it.

Scores of sports writers sat at their typewriters and their fingers were on fire to write about how "Rupp's Runts" had scurried their speedy and sharp-shooting way to a national championship despite being out-sized by nearly ever team they played.

It would have been a warm and fascinating story.

Yes, it would have been. But it was never written, because the Miners struck it rich and beat Kentucky to the cache which was the championship trophy.

The pre-game script cast TWC into the role of the little school which had made it to the big stage for the first time, but would fall apart in the face of the swift Kentucky attack and be remembered as ". . . the team that Kentucky beat for the championship in 1966."

But the original script was lost somehow, and when the directors left it up to the po' li'l Miners to ad-lib, the whole production turned into quite a different tale altogether.

Instead of rolling with the Kentuck tide, TWC played its game to perfection, and it was the mighty Ruppermen who lost their poise and began throwing the ball to shadows and Miners.

Kentucky was neither able to solve the super-tenacious Texas Western defense, nor to stop the Miners' free-lance offense, and the outfit hailed as college basketball's best began to foul excessively and to rush its shots, the result of which was that Western was able to hold the lead from the time it scored its very first field goal.

The Wildcats made almost twice as many personal fouls as did the Miners, 23-12, and, statistically, that is where the balance of the game lay.

Outscored from the field by 27 goals to 22, Texas Western made 28 of a whopping 34 tries at the foul line. They gave Kentucky just 13 charity chances, of which it made 11.

And the Miners won.

The final was 72-65, and no matter what arguments may be raised in Kentucky's behalf, they will all be meaningless.

Because when two teams meet head-to-head and each puts its best men on the floor, the best usually wins.

And so it was.

Rookie Cunningham Receives Lauds

They're starting to talk — louder and with a more complimentary tone — about "The Kid."

"The Kid" would be Billy Cunningham, the former Carolina star who has hit the professional National Basketball Association this year with a good deal more success than was predicted of him in preseason look-me-overs.

The latest tribute to Cunningham's big splash in his rookie year with the Philadelphia 76ers is an article which appears in this week's copy of The Sporting News, a national sports weekly out of St. Louis which is probably the top publication of its kind.

Writer Jim Heffernan begins by talking about the way Philadelphians feel about the rightful owner of the rookie-of-the-year award:

". . .if you happen to be around Philadelphia . . . cool any ideas you might have about San Francisco's Rick Barry . . . if you want to join the 'in' group here, Billy Cunningham is the password."

Here's what Dolph Schayes, Billy's coach, has to say about his first-year star:

"Cunningham has progressed so well this season, that right now, he's the best sixth man in the NBA.

"This boy is composed of pure basketball. If a doctor operated on Billy, I'm sure he would find he is made up of basketball genes. Billy's a schoolyard player. He's loose. He does everything a rookie must do to make it big.

"First, he thinks under pressure. Second, he's a great competitor who loves to go to the boards. And, finally, he goes all out, with or without pain . . ."

Writer Heffernan offers an illustration to back up Schayes' tall talk about what the coach calls "our pick-'em-up guy."

The 76ers had muddled through a poor first quarter against the St. Louis Hawks when Schayes called on Cunningham, and here's what happened; as the writer describes it:

"In the short space of five minutes, 19 seconds, southpaw Billy ran, leaped, drove and rebounded through the bewildered Hawks for 15 points. That's right, 15! The 76ers. . . coasted to their fifth straight victory."

This, says Hefferman, was ". . . one of the great off-the-bench performances that Coach Dolph Schayes and local fans have come to expect of Billy."

NORTH CAROLINA'S LACROSSE TEAM, rated in the nation's top ten in pre-season ratings, fell to Yale 8-5 here yesterday afternoon. Yale led all the way although the Tar Heels did manage to close the gap several times. UNC pulled to 5-4 and 6-5 but could never pull ahead.

Carolina's Smith Selected For Billiards Tournament

Carolina's Charles Smith, the billiard whiz, has been selected as one of the four finalists for the men's pocket billiard division of Intercollegiate Association of College Unions tournament.

Smith was notified by mail from the Tournament Director, R. E. Froeschle.

The tournament will be held in Coral Gables, Florida April 28 to May 1.

Smith will be flown to the tournament and will be housed and fed at the Univesity of Miami.

Earlier this month, Smith won the district five pocket in Knoxville, Tenn. Schools from North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee were represented in the tournament.

The Henderson native won sponsored by Graham Memorial, February 13.

Smith graduated from East Carolina College where he majored in Physical education. He received his masters degree from Carolina last year.

Presently, Smith is working beyond the master's level in physical education and is a part-time physical education instructor.

Killer Deadline

The "Daily Tar Heel" deadline caught yesterday afternoon's lacrosse and tennis matches before the full reports could be compiled.

Wednesday's edition will contain Drummond Bell's account of UNC's 8-5 lacrosse loss to Yale.

Sports Editor Gene Rector will have the complete story on yesterday's matches with Kalamazoo.

'White, Groat Give Phillies Best Club Ever' Says Mauch

By JACK HAND

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP)— Gene Mauch thinks the addition of Bill White and Dick Groat has given him his best club ever in his seven years as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies. He confidently expects it to be in the thick of the National League race.

"White and Groat give us more of the air of professionalism," said Mauch in his tiny office at Jack Russell Stadium. "They talk in terms of winning games. With a nucleus of Johnny Callison, Cookie Rojas, Richie Allen, Jim Bunning and Chris Short, seasoned performers like these two guys give us something that is healthy.

"There is no question about this being my best club. In the infield we've got four guys who have hit .300 plus Callison and Tony Gonzalez in the outfield. And Jackie Brandt hit .290 twice. If they all get a year like they are capable of having, it could be a lot of fun."

White, the perennial All-Star first baseman whose trade by St. Louis shocked the baseball world, gives the Phils the best first baseman they have had in years. Cookie Rojas, a general handyman, ousted Tony Taylor from second base last June and hit .303, eighth best in the league.

Groat had a horrible year at St. Louis and slumped to .254 but Mauch expects him to bounce back at shortstop and play 120 to 125 games. If he weakens, there is Bobby Wine to fall back on.

Allen packs tremendous power at third base. Unless complications arise, the contemplated switch of Allen to the outfield and Groat to third base will not take place. Much depends on the outfield situation. Phil Linz, the Ex-Yankee, will back up Rojas. Taylor is on the available list.

Callison in right field is the only set outfielder. If Brandt, ex-Baltimore Oriole, can make it in center and Gonzalez in left, Mauch sayd, "I will say good luck to both of them." If they don't make it, Mauch will platoon Brandt and the left-handed hitting John Briggs in center and Gonzalez and the right-handed batting Adolfo Phillips in left.

Catching is somewhat of a problem. Mauch would like to use Clay Dalrymple both ways but he hit .213 and only .142 against southpaws. Bob Uecker, acquired from St. Louis with White and Groat in the deal for Alex Johnson, Art Mahaffey and Pat Corrales, may catch against left-handers.

Mauch's major problem admittedly is finding a fourth starter behind Bunning 19-9, Short 18-11 and Ray Culp 14-10. At the moment the manager is high on the chances of Darold Knowles, a 24-year-old lefty from the Baltimore organization who had an 11-5 record at Rochester. John Boozer 9-13 at Little Rock and Bo Belinsky 4-9 and Ray Herbert 5-8, 1965 disappointments, are possibilities.

'Import' Of Being Earnest' Tonight At Playmakers

The Importance of Being Earnest, the Carolina Playmakers' latest production which depicts life in Victorian England, opens tonight at the Playmakers Theatre at 8.

There will be seven performances running through Sunday. Performances will be each night at 8 plus a matinee Sunday at 2:30.

Tickets are $2 and can be bought at 214 Abernethy Hall, Ledbetter-Pickard, or at the door.

Tom Hull of Durham holds the lead as John Worthing, the elegant, young wastrel who has invented a dissoluate younger brother named Earnest whom he impersonates when he goes on a fling.

James Slaughter, a graduate student in Dramatic Art from Kannapolis, will play Worthing's madcap friend, Algernon Moncrieff, who has invented a sick friend named Bunbury on whom to blame his own "devil-may-care" excursions.

Amanda Meiggs, assistant instructor in the Department of Dramatic Art from Moyock, will appear as Worthing's fiancee, the Hon. Gwendolyn Fairfax. In creating the role of the professional acting experience including off-Broadway, network television, and a period of study with the internationally famous drama coach Lee Strasberg.

Two Chapel Hillians will fill the remaining principle roles. Louise Lamont, a long-standing Playmaker veteran, will play the brittle - witted dowager, Lady Bracknell, who believes a man must have some occupation, "even it it's only smoking." Carolyn Fitz-Simons will portray John Worthing's ward, Cecily, who knows much more about life than her sheltered surroundings would indicate or than her guardian would care to admit.

Miss Prism, Cecily's spinster schoolmarm, and the Rev. Chasuble, who has a gay-dog wink in this canonical eye, will be played by Marjorie Preston of Bacup, England, and John Jones of Red Springs.

MARJORIE PRESTON stars as Miss Prism and Jim Salughter portrays Algernon Moncrief in the Playmaker's fourth production of the season, "The Importance of Being Earnest" which premiers tonight at 8 in the Playmaker's Theatre. Tickets are $2.

'Chug-A-Lug' For Tickets

Graham Memorial is sponsoring a "Chug-A-Lug" contest in connection with Roger Miller's appearance here next Tuesday night.

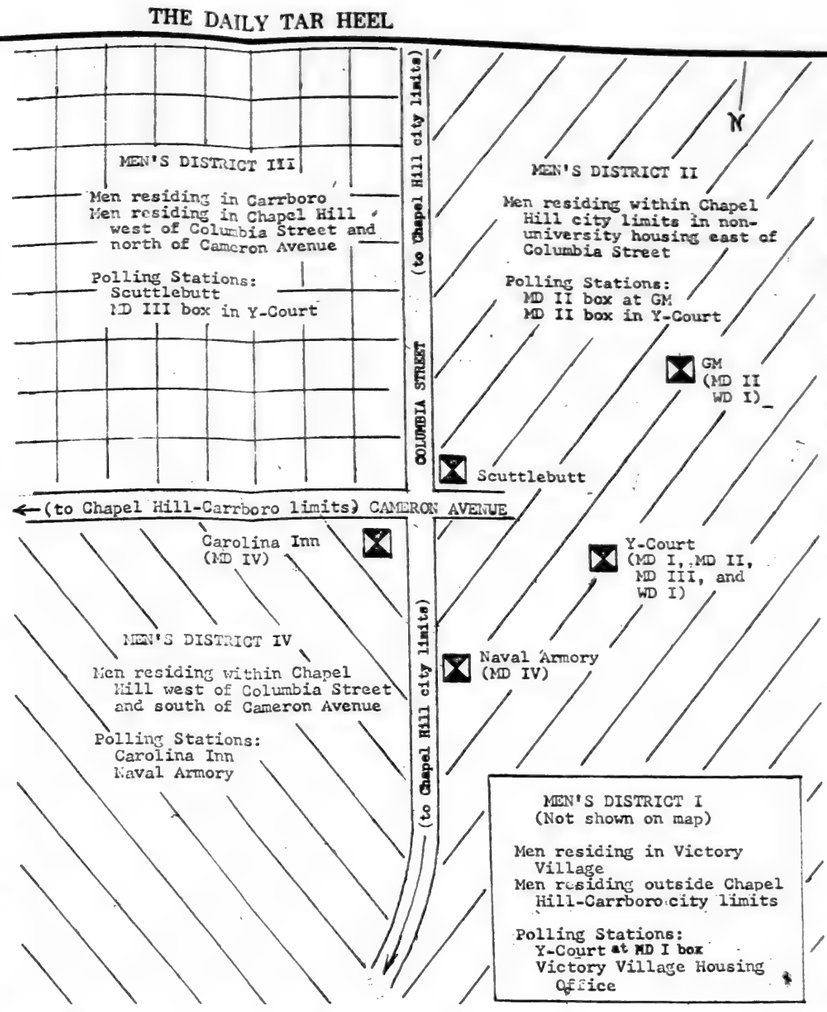
The contest will be held on Thursday in front of GM from 4-6 p.m. Two free tickets and a Roger Miller album will be given to the person who can chug the fastest a gallon of cider.

Tickets will be given to the second and third place winners. Separate prizes will be given for the best male and female "chuggers."

Arthur Beaumont, chief of the campus police force, will be one of the judges.

Professors can also win free tickets to the show. G.M. is offering two complimentary tickets to any professor who postpones or cancels a quiz scheduled for the day after the Roger Miller Show. In order for a prof to be eligible, though, five of his students must report to GM that he has called off his quiz.

Tickets to next Tuesday's Roger Miller show are on sale at Chase Cafeteria and GM for a dollar.



STUDENTS who do not live in University owned housing (except Victory Village) vote in the places designated on the map.

Simpson To Head Institute

Dr. Richard L. Simpson, a member of the University of North Carolina faculty since 1958, has been appointed acting director of the Institute for Research in Social Science.

The announcement was made today by Dr. Carlyle Sitterson, acting chancellor of the University. The appointment is effective June 1.

Dr. Simpson becomes the fourth director since the Institute's founding in 1924 by Dr. Howard W. Odum. The new acting director will succeed Dr. Daniel O. Price who has held the post since 1957.

Prof. Simpson is a specialist in several areas of sociology: occupations, organizations and education. At present he is studying the factors that affect the degree of professionalism in the attitude and behavior of public school teachers.

The Institute for Research in Social Science is a research facility of the university which provides services not normally available through departments.

Carolina Coeds Too Bashful?

With all the lovely home-grown Chapel Hill girls in school at Carolina, why aren't any of them entered in the Miss Orange County Pageant to be held this Saturday night?

Penny Clark, Miss North Carolina for 1966 was enrolled here last year. She has a full schedule this year with her commitments as Miss N. C., but plans to return to UNC next fall.

What's happened this year? Why isn't a Carolina coed in the Miss Orange County pageant?

Campus Chest Auction Tonight

Three live chickens and a puppy, a Jubilee survival kit, Danny Talbott's jersey plus a football and a dart board with your favorite political figure.

They'll all be acutioned along with many other valuable items at the Campus Chest Auction tonight beginning at 7 in Memorial Hall.

In addition to the auction, there will be a fashion show and entertainment from the O'Berry School, Goldsboro.

Even those who are interested in the election returns can get them without fighting the mob in the Rendezvous Room. The UNC Radio Club will have the returns piped into the hall.

Other items to be auctioned will be two dates plus pizza at the Rat; meals for two at the Country Squire, Villa Tempesta and the Ranch House; a used television; a movie projector; an umbrella of surprises; a 30 minute phone call in the United States; clothes; albums; a silver tray; books and a painting; and a Bell and Howell Tape Recorder.

Admission is free and there will be door prizes.

Bad Checks–No Diploma

Student Credit Commission Chairman Ralph Grosswald announced yesterday he plans to seek the authority to withhold grades and diplomas from all students not paying for worthless checks they have written.

The Commission did not meet this weekend because no new checks have been turned over to it. Grosswald said he plans to meet at the end of the week.

No meeting has been held in two weeks since the commission announced their intenitions to hold weekly meetings.

Carolina Symposium Differs Because 'It Opens Minds'

By MIKE JENNINGS
DTH Staff Writer

"The Symposium excites students — gets them fascinated by a single theme."

This, said Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson, is why the Carolina Symposium is different from the other speaker programs. "I think the key implication of the Symposium is that it opens the minds of students to new and varied implications on a topic and makes them want to know more," he said.

Sitterson spoke in his office last Tuesday in an interview with George Butler, chairman of the Symposium Committee. This year's Symposium, concerned with the topic "Man, Mind and Myth," will be held April 17-21.

Butler agreed that the Symposium is unique, and added that this has given it an academic reputation. "When we invited Galbraith (Harvard economist John Kenneth), he wanted to know if this was the Carolina Symposium. We told him it was, and he accepted the invitation," Galbraith will speak April 17.

Sitterson said the Symposium is patterned to accomplish things that speaker programs like the Carolina Forum cannot.

"The Forum concentrates on individual appearances," he said, "and the speakers usually give a pretty standard speech.

"The Symposium, however, provides more opportunity for original theory. It challenges speakers to give something new on a theme, to lead down byways and open up new avenues."

Sitterson said over the years the Symposium had brought many famous people to the campus — and, more important, had gotten from them outstanding performances.

Butler said the Symposium's feature of being presented as a unit, covering only a few days, helped attract speakers. "When they hear the names of the other people who are coming they may become eager to appear on the same program."

Both Sitterson and Butler stressed the Symposium's potential of involving a large university community. Butler said the numbers involved in preparing and presenting the Symposium made it a campuswide endeavor.

Sitterson said the "myth" topic of this year's program would help the speakers to avoid rehashing old ideas and to strike out on their own.

"The fact that it is an abstract topic," he said, "provides more opportunity for original theory."

The Symposium, Sitterson said, gives a student the opportunity to look on—even to participate—as some of the world's best minds tackle a momentous topic.

"It is a wonderful opportunity for the student."

Thomas Gains Hearst Award

Fred Thomas, junior from Concord and candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, has tied for fifth place in this month's National Hearst Awards contest for interpretative news writing.

His two-part series about the future of fraternities at Carolina won him $125. The same amount goes to Gary Brown, a junior at Fresno State College in California.

Four other Carolina students have placed in this year's Hearst contests. They are DTH Editor Ernie McCrary, staff writers Ed Freakley and Andy Myers and Fred Harwell.

Communist Claims U.S. 'Aggressive'

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

A leading Communist from the Soviet Union told UNC students yesterday that the United States employs an "exploiting and aggressive kind of imperialism in the Viet Nam war.

The Soviet Communist, invited here by the political science department, spoke to three classes and to a public gathering last night in the Morehead Planetarium.

VLADIMIR ALEXANDROV

Dr. Vladimir Alexandrov, a history teacher at the Moscow State University, was flown to North Carolina at the request of Prof. Gordon Cleveland.

His appearance was permitted because he comes under the "educational purposes" clause of the adopted speaker ban law.

Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson, who approved Alexandrov's appearnce, has also approved an invitation to Dr. Hanus Pappousek, a scientist from Prague, Czechoslovakia, and now at the University of Denver.

He will also speak to classes on specific subjects in May. Since he was given the power last month Sitterson has denied forums to Dr. Herbert Aptheker, a Communist, and to Frank Wilkinson, head of a committee to abolish HUAC.

Alexandrov told a press conference in Caldwell Hall that he teaches Russian students that this country is a "capitalist and imperialist" nation.

"The main difference between our educational systems is that our education is based on a Marcist - Leninist ideology," he said.

Dressed in a conservative black suit, Alexandrov gave the appearance of an articulate historian. He is in this country on an exchange basis, doing research on American history at Indiana University in Bloomington.

"It is strange to be in a Student community again after 11 years of teaching," Alexandrov commented. His Russian degree of "Candidate of Historical Sciences" is "a little higher" than our Ph.D., he said.

Alexandrov does no teaching in this country. "I spoke at and Oberlin College (Ohio), but I do only research work here."

The Soviet Union views the United States's position in Viet Nam as "imperialist" the Communist party member stated, in response to a question.

Asked about the official Soviet position concerning Red China in the war, Alexandrov said the war was not due to China but to the United States.

"This war must be stopped and a settlement must be reached," he said.

Religion in Russia "does not play a very big role," according to the Russian. He denied there was a "supression" of organized religion but said "religion is a private business in each person."

His country is opposed to our private enterprise ideology, he said, but he did not attempt to explain this further.

Describing the U. S. as "imperialist," he said, "By imperialism we mean that the dominant position in your country goes to private monopolies."

Alexandrov has a wife and child in Moscow. He left Russia last September and plans to return in June.

Commenting on his talks earlier in the day to Carolina students in history and political science classes, the Russian felt their reaction "was very friendly."

Earlier, he evaded questions about the Soviet Union during a question period. A student asked him "why religion is suppressed in Russia?"

"You must ask those people who told you. I didn't tell you about it," he said. "Nobody supresses religion in our country. According to the constitution and laws everybody has a right to religious beliefs."

He described the Soviet form of government as a "socialist democracy," adding "there are mistakes in our political system. I mean all the years of Stalin, when there were some things against our democracy." He did not explain this further.

"Why were there so many Russians coming to the U. S. after World War II?" a student asked.

"There was no immigration

MRA Group Will Hold Meet Here

By BOB HARRIS

Members of "Sing-Out '66" will hold a meeting in Gerrard Hall today at 10:30 a.m. to answer students' questions about Moral Re-Armament and the "Sing-Out."

Accoring to "Sing-Out" Co-Producer Steve Caldwell, the "Sing-Outs" grew out of a weekly program produced for students attending the Moral Re-Armament school last summer at Makinaw Island, Mich.

Caldwell said he found that students wanted to say something in a fresh way, "so instead of marches and sit-ins they decided to hold 'Sing-Outs.'"

He first came into contact with MRA at a MRA produced musical in Los Angeles. He was in college at the time.

Caldwell and his two brothers, all residents of San Marino Calif. "felt the world was at stake and decided to do something about it."

"MRA has no set political views," Caldwell said. "It is organized in such a way as to represent all ethnic groups and all religions."

Caldwell said MRA had "never been a pacifistic organization."

In answer to those who have questioned MRA's relation to fascism, he said: "It is significant to note that the Gestapo banned MRA in Germany during WW II.

"In fact," he continued, "MRA is the answer to all 'isms'." Our purpose is to create a new image of the United States to the world—more than that, to create a better world.

"This will take a complete change and this change can only be based on absoltute moral standards."

Caldwell said "Sing-Out" members did not pretend to be "angels with flapping wings.

"We don't pretend to know all the answers, either," he added. "The real fight is to raise a generation with a real aim and purpose. If we do this generation lives and believes these ideas compellingly enough, then the situation that needs changing will change.

"We hear talk about the 'Great Society,' but unless we work to build it, we will never have it."

Barbette Knight, a Negro "Sing-Out" member from San Bernadino, Calif., agreed with Caldwell on MRA and the "Sing-Out."

She said she joined MRA because she saw a lot of things wrong in the world and nobody doing anything about it.

"We always hear about what the Russian youths are doing, or about what the Chinese youths are doing, but we never hear about what the American youths are doing—unless they are rioting or staging marches or sit-ins. I felt it was time to do something about it."

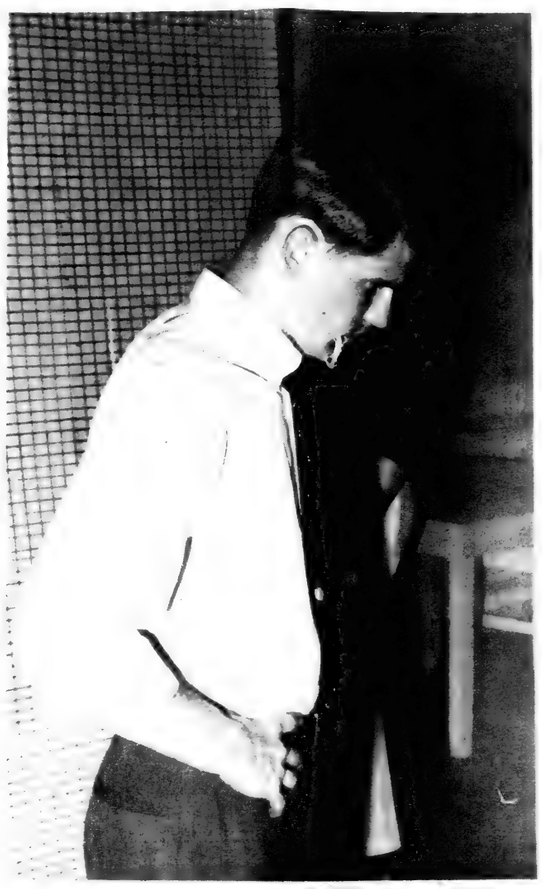
"The MRA," Barbette continued, "is a group in which young people can work to improve America's image."

She said she became acquainted with MRA through a high school assembly program.

A program will also be held in conjunction with today's question and answer session, but its content has not been announced.

Powell Holds Small Margin; Faces Run-Off With O'Toole

Purdy Wins VP Position; Editorship Race Close



By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Bob Powell and Teddy O'Toole will be in a run-off election for president of the student body, elections board officials said last night.

With about 75 per cent of the votes counted Powell was leading O'Toole by about 200 votes. Independent presidential candidate Sonny Pepper had polled about 20 per cent of the vote. Powell had obtained about 42 per cent and O'Toole 38 per cent.

The only sure winner was Bill Purdy, UP candidate for vice president. He was declared the winner after about 20 per cent of the votes were tallied. He had opened up a 500-vote margin over Don Wilson.

Fred Thomas, with about 75 per cent of the votes tallied, appeared to be the winner in the editorship race for the Daily Tar Heel. Alan Banov was running in second place with Ray Linville coming in third. Whether or not a run-off is necessary will be determined today.

Powell and O'Toole issued statements last night saying they would wage strong campaigns during the coming week.

"The results are incomplete," Powell said, "but it appears that a run-off will be necessary. I'm going to continue to seek the active support of everyone for the election next Tuesday and I want to thank everyone who has supported me thus far in the election. The campaign is not over yet. I plan to work even harder this next week to be elected."

O'Toole said he felt that the election was close because he had not been able to see everyone. "During the coming week," he said, "I want to tie up the loose ends and win next Tuesday. This is all coincident upon the fact that there will be a runoff. I'm very happy with the support everyone has given me and I hope that we will be able to maintain this support and add enough to win."

Ed Wilson, UP floor leader, said he feels O'Toole will win in the run-off.

Neil Thomas, UP chairman, said, "I'm pleased with the results of the elections. The run-off depends on the Pepper vote, and there's a good chance we can corner the Pepper vote."

Election officials estimated the voter turnout at approximately 6,000. They had predicted a light voter turnout the day before the election.

Counting of the ballots did not begin until shortly before 9 p.m. although polls closed at 6 p.m. Elections board chairman Arthur Hays said the slow counting of ballots shows a definite need for reforming the entire election process. "The process is too de-centralized."

He said the election laws also need to be completely revised eliminating several positions from the ballots. Hays said class officers should be abolished. "For the amount of time, attention and talent they take, they're not worth the effort," he said. However, he said he did not feel this would be done.

About 50 counters were tallying the votes last night and the counting will continue today. Hays said more counters will be needed today. Anyone who can assist is asked to come to Roland Parker Lounge in GM.

The full results of the elections will be reported in tomorrow's Daily Tar Heel.

Supporters Throng G.M. For Returns

By WAYNE HURDER
DTH Staff Writer

It was a slow campaign and the same went for the returns. Counting started about 9 p.m. with about 15 tables in Roland Parker Lounge of Graham Memorial, each filled with three counters.

They went about their work slowly, double checking every ballot and recounting votes when totals didn't tally.

About 10 returns began to be written on the board and people crowded around the door of Roland Parker whispering rumors.

Bill Purdy, UP vice presidential candidate, was the first of the politicians to show. He started the night off anxiously while fellow party-member Don Carson exuded confidence.

Carson's confidence was well based. Early returns showed Purdy to be running strong. His victory was assured after about 75 per cent of the vote was in.

About the time things eased up for him pressure began to build for the others. Towards 11 p.m. the halls and the Rendezvous Room began to fill with anxious supporters.

Upstairs in Roland Parker, Paul Dickson sat at a table taking the tallies and calling them downstairs (over a two-way radio) where they were posted on the board for 60 or 70 crowding, pushing people.

About 11:30 p.m. definite trends began to take shape and onlookers became either jubilant or downcast.

Neil Thomas, UP chairman, stood near the board snapping his fingers at every favorable return in a nervous confidence.

Pepper and SP members either didn't come or remained silent through the whole evening as the presidential race shaped up into a Powell-O'Toole run-off.

Upstairs legislative candidates and their friends waited nervously for a count to begin, while the word spread that no legislative votes would be counted until the next day. Their number slowly dwindled as they headed back to their dorms for sleep, leaving the others pacing the floor and shifting from foot to foot as returns filled the chart.

Course For Prof-Haters

If you are the type who likes to take his frustrations out on other students or even a professor, then Speech 44 is the course for you.

Normally the course is kind of cut and dried — five speeches a day . . . several days a week.

But the assignment in one section this week was for each student to select a controversial topic from The Daily Tar Heel and deliver a short speech on it.

That is not such a bad assignment, except that the speaker was to be confronted with heckling from his audience . . . a type of on-the-job training, I suppose.

The heckling got off to a slow start, but after one person was bombarded with paper balls balls and another was hooted off the platform it was "on."

One speaker, expecting the worse, threw lollypops to each listener when the "static" began.

The climax came after all students had finished their speeches. The instructor walked to the platform to begin his lecture and "caught" 20 paper balls and folded DTH's.

Of course, all this experience may come in handy some day . . . especially if they have to speak in Memorial Hall or McCorkle Place.

Draft Test Set For UNC In May

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

College men eligible for the draft will be considered on their class standings and on the results of the Selective Service test to be given here May 14 and 21 and June 3. The cut - off point concerning class standing has not yet been decided.

William H. McCachren, head of the Selective Service System for North Carolina, said, "The national headquarters of the Selective Service in Washington, D. C., has notified me that the criteria, including the cut - off point for class standings, concerning the draft will be issued around April 1. As soon as I receive it, I will send it out to all the local draft boards."

Raymond E. Strong, director of the Office of Records and Registration said the class ranking to be used for the draft boards will not include the grades of women students.

"This will lower the class average of all classes, but will especially affect the junior and senior class rankings," Strong said.

This list of cumulative averages will not be compiled until the end of this semester. It should be finished by the middle of July.

The class rank of the student will not be sent to the local draft board until the student requests that it be sent to be included in material the board in using for considering him for service.

Any student wishing to take the Selective Service Test must obtain information and applications from the local draft board and have the application postmarked by April 23 and sent to the Science Research Associates of Chicago.

The applications have just been received by the state board, but will be in the hands of the local boards by Monday.

Chapel Hill does not have a draft board. The closest boards are in Durham at 302 Morris Street and in Hillsborough on Churton Street. Students can secure applications from these draft boards or from any other draft boards.

The test being given at 1,200 colleges and universities across the nation is completely voluntary. The test scores will not themselves determine eligibility for deferment.

McCachren urged all students to take the test.

The applicants will have the choice of where they want to take the test, but the Chicago research firm will assign the date.

The 150 - question multiple choice test can ve taken only once. It lasts three and a half hours and will last from 9 a.m. -12:30 p.m. on the three dates it is offered.

The test includes sections on comprehension of short expository passages, understanding of word meanings and of relationships between words, ability to read simple graphs and skill at solving mathematical problems.

In this same type of test given from the Korean War through 1961, students scoring in the 70th percentile were usually deferred.

Local draft boards in Washington believe the standards will be similar to those previously used.

Applicants are urged to answer all questions on the test, even if they guess at some, since scores are based only on the number of correct answers.

Each applicant will be finget - printed when he reports for the test. No one who is without his Selective Service registration certificate or notice of classification will be admitted.

If someone is found cheating, he will not be allowed to finish and his local draft board will be notified of the reason.

There have been many speculations as to where the cut off point for class ranking would be in connection with the draft. The greatest estimate has been that the bottom half of the college men will be drafted.

The class averages for the past semester including women was 2.176 for the freshman class, 2.156 for the sophomore class, 2.250 for the junior class and 2.281 for the senior class.

The cumulative class ranking sent to the draft board will be lower since the women's predominantly high grades will be excluded.

Tennessee Has Rockets; And N.C.—Dan Moore?

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. and Mrs. Dan Moore joined about 2,000 state employes and other spectators early Tuesday for the "Sing-Out '66" songfest on the steps of the State Legislative Building.

At the end of the 15-minute program, which included original compositions, Gov. Moore thanked the young people for coming and commended their purpose. He urged the state employes to go back to the office and "put in a good day's work."

The selections included an original composition dedicated to North Carolina. Titled "I feel like a Tar Heel," it included references to North Carolina's flight by the Wright brothers, to the long leaf pine and concluded:

"Tennessee has her rockets but North Carolina has Dan Moore."

Miss Orange County Show Features Burl Ives

By DENNIS SANDERS
Special to the DTH

Ten entrants from Hillsborough and Chapel Hill will compete for the Miss Orange County beauty title in Memorial Hall Saturday night at 8 p.m.

The contest will complete a day of activities, which open with a Hillsborough parade at 10 a.m., coming through Chapel Hill at 11:30.

Motion picture and television star Burl Ives has agreed to appear at the pageant. The former star of TV's "O. K. Crackerby" show is visiting in Durham.

The winner of the Miss Orange County pageant will receive a $250 scholarship and a $200 wardrobe. She will represent Orange County in the Miss North Carolina Pageant later in the year in Greensboro.

Art Exhibit Announced

Drawings depicting our cultural heritage from the time of Benjamin West and John Singleton Copley in London up to the time of Emil Ganzo and Raphael Soyer in New York City will be on display at the Ackland Art Center through April 16.

Forty-six drawings were selected for this exhibition from the collection of John Davis Hatch by Jacob Rosenberg, Harvard University.

The galleries are open to the public Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from 2-6 p.m.

Recruiters Here

The following companies wil recruit on campus this week:

Today—Federal Power Commission; Sears Roebuck & Co.; Proctor & Gamble; Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.; Rich's Inc.

How To Win The World

But somehow, it wasn't morally re-arming.

The Sing Out '66 performance in Carmichael Auditorium Monday lived up to its advance notices—it was wholesome, unconcealed, all-American propaganda by rhythm.

Every song was a message, every message was a sermon.

The point of it all apparently is to straighten out this morally degenerate world and set it on the path away from destruction. "If you're a nice guy, everybody else will be nice guy, too," the Sing Outers seemed to be saying.

No single word could describe the content of the show. It had a little of everything—Sunday school theology, country and western music, opera, original compositions, American Indian and Oriental dances, hot drum numbers, camp ground testimony.

The DTH finds the Sing Out message intellectually offensive. It takes considerable gall to suggest to university students, or anyone else for that matter, that the adoption of moral absolutes of purity, honesty, love and unselfishness will alone solve the problems of the world.

Even the least perceptive of minds ought to be able to see that, unfortunately, things just aren't that simple.

Some of the songs, and most of the between-song sermonettes, were offensive because they were so blantantly directed at grammar school mentality and emotions.

Any good actor knows that a cardinal sin of the profession is over-acting.

Sorry, Sing Out. We're for God, country and flag, too, but you laid it on a bit too thick.

Put It In The Round File

It wouldn't be a best-seller, but a Daily Tar Heel editor could write a book about the mail he receives.

The name of the paper finds its way onto some pretty strange mailing lists, ranging from the Sierra Club Magainze (published by a conservation group) to the American Civil Liberties Union (which always wants contributions.)

Normally prepared for anything, the editor was, however, somewhat surprised when he opened a large envelope last week and a 127-page book dropped out—New Program of the Communist Party U.S.A.—A Draft.

Could it be that somebody up in party headquarters in New York had seen a copy of a DTH editorial which defended the right of a Communist to speak on campus, and had mistaken it for an indication that the DTH had "joined the cause?"

Far from it. An enclosed letter explained that the draft, written by Gus Hall, was being sent to editors of 700 college newspapers and "we would appreciate the observations of yourself and other students before the final document is written."

It certainly was thoughtful of them to ask, but it is doubtful that they really want to hear the DTH's suggestions about what the Communist Party ought to do. They wouldn't do it, anyway.

And to prove that Communist public relations men are sitting in ivory towers up on West 26th Street, they included this paragraph in the letter:

"This also raises the possibility of a Communist speaker coming to your campus—and possibly under the auspices of your publication or some other institution or campus organization—to speak on the Program and to answer any and all questions as to the Communist viewpoint. Surely this is in keeping with the pursuit of knowledge and intellectual advancement. We are prepared to provide authoritative and capable Communist speakers for campus meetings of students and faculty."

Yeah, send your speakers on down. We have a sidewalk reserved for them in Chapel Hill.

Nevertheless, the editor wishes to express his sincerest thanks to the CP for sending the book. After reading most of it, he found the perfect use for it.

There was a big hole in the bottom of his trash can.

It needed to be plugged.

It has been.

Campus Ministers Express Skepticism Concerning MRA

Moral Re-Armament crusaders, who visited UNC Monday, claim they are promoting greater religiosity, but campus religious leaders of three major faiths are very skeptical about MRA's purposes and goals.

Rev. Bill Coats, Episcopalian pastor, said this week. "From what I know of MRA, I would say it's simplistic . . . MRA attempts to paint the world in absolute colors.

"MRA people aren't very clear about what they mean or want. I'm not sure exactly what they're discussing when they talk about a 'God-controlled' world.

"I always worry about people with four or five absolutes," Coats said, referring to MRA's saying that honesty, love, purity and unselfishness are all that is needed to improve the world. "Eventually, words like honesty' may wear off.

"Also," he declared, "I think MRA is of an evangelical nature — the way these people tell their audience how many followers they have and what famous people are involved. I believe MRA is using a Madison Avenue approach."

Father Francis Murphy said: "MRA may have some worthy objectives . . . The difficulty is that they may not always agree with Catholic techniques . . . "We don't believe Catholics have to go outside their church for advice or support on the means of knowing or observing a moral code.

"In our church," Father Murphy continued, "we have our own structure for observing the laws of morality. "We don't know what (groups outside the Catholic church) would do; they might, for example, come out for abortion, euthanasia or contraceptive practices of which the church disapproves.

"They might water down certain concepts we hold as Christians so that the principles of morality might be weakened rather than strengthened."

Rabbi Howard Rabinowitz of the Hillel Foundation said: "My knowledge of this organization is limited, but after discussing it with other campus chaplains at our meeting last week. I believe that the groups of MRA are doubtful their doctrines specious It's kind of a pseduo - religious crusade

"What disturbs most of the chapalins is that the University is promoting this crusade instead of letting the regular campus religious organizations have the attention

"MRA claims they're a religious group, but I see (their singing) as merely entertainment . . . like Johnny Mathis.

"I am somewhat disturbed by the Buchman quote," said Rabinowitz, discussing a statement made 30 years ago by MRA's founder indicating pro - Nazi sympathies. "That makes the organization suspect. Why should the University promote them if they have this type of background?"

Norman Gustaveson of the YMCA told the DTH: "I have talked with members of this group for the past 15 years; and, after listening to the people at Graham Memorial (part of the MRA group which visited the UNC campus), I am just as unclear as ever as to what they stand for.

"When I was talking with one member of the group, the leader cut the conversation short," said Gustaveson. "When you talk to people in this idealistic movements, it's very difficult to know their stands.

"But they're not subsersive. The people involved are very committted."

Referring to "Which Way America?"—a song sung by the MRA performers — he said: "They sing that, but then they don't tell you which way. Lyndon Johnson has a way. Barry Goldwater has a way. And Al Capone? He was for motherhood."

Gustaveson stated that merely saying America should have a purpose is "very ambiguous . . . innocuous."

The question, he said, is: "What's this purpose?"

"Another thing that concerns me," he declared, "is Schick (the razor company) supplying funds for the Sing - Out . . . I don't want to appear prejudiced, but I'm suspicious when MRA is backed by a company that has contributed to the John Birch Society."

My own opinion of the MRA?

Need I say anything?

Contradictions Haunt Conservatives

Russell Baker once defined the "New Conservatism" as "a political philosophy born under the conjunction of Arizona, Yale, and Adam Smith; it holds that the United States must get tougher with the Communists and expand its influence around the world while cutting the budget, dismantling the Federal government, and bringing the boys home, thus turning a tide of events that has been running against the country since the last Federalist Administration."

Between the lines of this pointed statement can be found an example of the unrealistic and contradictory thinking which is so evident in the conservative, and eserate conservatives and the right-wingers,

There will always be a place for the moderate conservatives who want to wait and be 150 per cent sure of what the government is doing before it makes the slightest change in the precious status quo. They act as useful instruments to restrain or delay the forces of impulsivism. However, I am concerned with the more - than - moderate conservatives and the rigth - wingers, who view change as something suspicious and to be feared, and who view humanitarianism as part of some gigantic conspiratorial plot.

It is not necessary for me to question whether or not conservatism is open - minded, as I did for liberalism last week. As a rule, strong conservatism is so resistent to even the thought of change, that to discuss whether or not it even considers itself open - minded would be ludicrous.

Paradoxically, the same conservatives who have to be dragged kicking and screaming into glum resignation whenever an important change is made, eventually come to accept the new situation and begin their fighting anew when it is threatened with change.

Is it sensible to fear change for its own sake? Even if some feel that "this is the best of all possible worlds," is it so perfect that no improvements can ever be made on it?

We can ask if forceful conservatism is realistic in its thinking. A political philosophy must be realistic or its contribution to society will have no lasting value. We could start by wondering about the realism of suspecting all progressive change.

Of what value is the non - constructive obstructionism that goes beyond the bounds of the useful restraining of whims? Is it realistic to believe that all progress is somehow inherently bad? We might also ask:

Is it realistic to suppose that the U. S. Consitution is so crystal clear and so permanently perfect in its original context, that in something like 700 words there is the answer to every question that may arise in generations to come without the need for fresh interpretations?

Is it realistic to decry the growth of the national government "at the expense of the states", but to ignore the fact that on the state level the state governments are growing in power at the expense of the counties and the towns, which proves that the aggregation of power at the top is an inevitable modern phenomenon?

Is it realistic to believe that the kind of government which we enjoy is possible in places like Southeast Asia, where there is widespread ignorance and illiteracy, two factors that make democracy impossible there?

(Because of this, we can't be fighting for freedom or democracy in South Viet Nam. What we are fighting for is the independence of that country so that it will have the potential to eventually develop into a recognizable free and representative country. If we do not fight and win the war, this potential will be wiped out and Viet Nam will never develop into a free state.)

Russell Baker's definition of conservatism includes goals that have actually been proposed by the followers of that philosophy. It is obvious that there is much contradiction in their plans. How can you expand our influence while cutting down the size of the national government? How can you take all the forceful actions proposed and still reduce the Federal Budget?

Other contradictions can be found. How can you be for human rights and yet be reluctant to enforce laws guaranteeing them? How can you stand for government based on the Constitution, yet be suspicious of people exercising their First Amendment right of free speech, and to decline the right to speak to people invoking the protection of the Fifth Amendment which is part of the Constitution and thus presumably they have a right to use?

How can you be for "constitutional government" and to declare illegal the use of the Fifth Amendment which is part of it? These and the above are by no means the only examples of contradiction in the conservative mind, but they serve to illustrate the nature of it.

For real fun and excitement, let us consider briefly the extreme right wing, as epitomized by such groups as the John Birch Society, without whose constant vigilance the United States would surely have fallen to atheistic communism eons ago.

These are the advocates of the "100% red-blooded American" (whatever that is) and who are suspicious of anything in the least "foreign" (while failing to consider the fact that fully one-sixth of the men who drew up the U. S. Constitution were of foreign birth).

These are the groups who were alert enough to sound the alarm in 1960 that the Pope was waiting in a submarine in the Potomac River for John F. Kennedy to be elected President of the United States so that he could take over the country.

These are the folks whose policy statements sound like the titles of editorials in the New York Daily News (actual sample: "Don't Just Stand There, Start Shooting"). They are the ones who get emotional about "States' rights," and fail to realize that a state is an institution established by people, and that states don't have rights (only authority)—only people have rights.

They are the ones who equate communism with socialism, socialism with the welfare state, the welfare state with social legislation, social legislation with liberalism, and then declare that liberals (whose worst crime may be softheadedness) must be purged from the country before they destroy it.

They are the ones whose bible is the Constitution, but who are ignorant of almost every aspect of it in regard to what the government can or cannot do, and what provisions and guarantees it makes regarding civil rights and liberties.

They are the paranoids who see conspiracy from every quarter, traitors everywhere (in government and out), and danger in anything that didn't exist before 1930. Based on letters to U. S. Senators by these superpatriots, former New York Senator Kenneth Keating in 1963 drew up a list of the terrible dangers to our national security which these citizens were deeply concerned about.

"And so, now, to the list of subversive individuals, institutions, and ideas, which presently included the United Nations, the income tax, the Chief Justice of the United States, the Girl Scouts of America, flouridation of the water supply, the last four (now five) Presidents of the United States, beatniks, Harvard University, civil rights demonstrations, expenditures for mental health, the Arms Control and Disarament Agency, coffee houses, every Secretary of State since William Jennings Bryan, professors of anthropology, back-door spending, metro government, Jews, Time magazine, the Council on Foreign Relations, firearms registration, the Protestant clergy, the two United States Senators from New York plus between 77 and 83 of their colleagues, and proposals for Federal aid to mass transportation—to this list of Communist-inspired persons and ideas we must now add, merciful heavens, American folk music. And who knows what lies ahead?"

These Right Wingers are the ones about whom a book could be written, entitled, "None Dare Call It Reason."

Experimental Film

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Re: The panel discussion over the three experimental films last Monday night.

Anyone who is acquainted with Faulkner's "The Sound and The Fury" is aware that the portrayal of the abnormal mind is a valid artistic device.

The film "Georg," like the Quentin section of Faulkner's novel, deals with the experiences of a young man of excruciating sensitivity teetering on the brink of insanity. It records the man's struggle between his desire to escape from reality and his wish as an artist to record reality. This struggle is poignantly represented by the flashes of blank film — a kind of cinematic incoherence.

Mr. Kaye is clearly not yet the artist Faulkner was, nevertheless, "Georg" is in many ways a very promising film and deserved a more thoughtful reception that it received here Monday night.

Sincerely yours,
Alicia Reckford

Mixed Dormitory Hasn't Worked

By DEMONT ROSEMAN

A medium-sized eastern university embarked on a daring "experiment" with some of its upperclass male and female students about three years ago.

It was to be a venture in "community living."

The main features were (1) desegregation of the sexes in a dormitory; (2) allowing groups of six boys or six girls to live in suites on the same floor; and (3) self-regulation without adult proctors or supervisors as usually found in dormitories.

In an academic lecture at the UNC Psychiatric Center, the visiting speaker said the experiment grew out of an impression that "dormitory living as commonly practiced in universities does not emotionally prepare students for living independently in a heterosexual world after graduation.

"It was felt," he added, "that segregating the sexes in different dormitories tended to result in a mutual view that was incomplete, competitive and almost solely sexual."

Four Assumptions

The speaker — a psychiatrist — said the drastic change in dormitory life was based on four assumptions:

—Most students in the "community living" dormitory would be mature enough to become even more mature while living there.

—The special problem of "a minior group of immature students" would be solved by participating in activities with the more mature students.

—The freedom permitted by the program would lead the maturing student "to assume responsibilities with respect to himself, his suite and the total dormitory community" (through an effective student government).

—The entire dean's staff would work with the students on details required "to put life and stability into the program."

After three years, have these basic assumptions been realized?

An effective student government has failed to materialize. "In fact," the audience here was told, "students are elected to the judicial board who pledge to shut their eyes and mind their own business."

Little sense of overall community living has developed. Each group of suitemates has tended to be unconcerned with the total dormitory community.

Plans Changed

Unfortunately, some parts of the original plan had to be altered at the outset.

A rule was hastily imposed against any mixing of the sexes in bedrooms.

Another rule eliminated the original idea of randomly mixing the sexes on the same floor. A sandwich arrangement placed males and females on alternate floors.

And, finally, faculty members were invited to move into the dormitory apartments "without any delineated role in regard to the students."

These changes in the experiment were described as reflecting the anxiety of those who fostered the plan. "The ambivalence was easily communicated to the students," the psychiatrist said.

What behavior resulted from the experiment?

The experimental dormitory "is the source of chronic, repetitive controversy about the bedroom rule, which almost no one takes seriously, not even the people who proclaimed it."

Instead of maturing, many students in the dormitory have demonstrated regressive behavior.

Vandalism

Numerous acts of vandalism have occurred. Aggressive as well as sexual behavior seems to be stimulated in the setting.

The visiting speaker said that one tragedy of the experiment is that it had no built-in measure of its effects "nor was there any sincere effort to study its evolution."

"We still do not know the validity of the hypothesis which initiated the experiment," he said.

Psychiatrist serving the university's student population admitted to "a skewed view" of the results because only those students with troubles sought their help.

In summarizing three years of the experiment, the speaker said, "We can't say anything knowledgeable about its postive humanizing effects, and we are unable to generalize with confidence from the disturbing effects in the sample we have seen."

Concert Features Electronic Music

The Sunday evening concert of the Festival of Contemporary Music, sponsored here next week by the Phi Mu Alpha Fraternity, features Emerson Meyers of Catholic University in a demonstration of techniques in Electronic Music.

He will lecture at 8 p.m. March 27 in Hill Hall.

Meyers will discuss and illustrate, via recordings and slide projections, the history, present situation and predictions for the future of magnetic tape music using electronically generated sounds, sounds from musical instruments, or based upon ideas derived from musique concrete.

He will show types of scores used by composers in the medium and pictures of laboratory apparatus. Purposes and sounds generated by various types of laboratory equipment will be discussed and demonstrated.

Meyers will present portions of various types of electronic music to illustrate potentials of the medium and its uses at present.

Meyers is professor music at the School of Music in The Catholic University of America. As a pianist, he has given many solo recitals, chamber music concerts and has appeared with orchestras in this country and in Belgium. He has composed works for solo instruments, voice, chorus, chamber music and orchestra which have won prizes and been performed here and in Europe.

In his present position, he teaches piano, conducts seminars in the piano works of Beethoven and Brahms and gives courses in contemporary music and electronic music.

Meyers became interested on electronic music while on a Fulbright music research grant in Belgium in 1956. Since that time he has visited major centers in Paris, Cologne, Munich, Brussels, Toronto and New York. He designed and installed the ever expanding electronic music laboratory at the Catholic University which was the first of such laboratories to be created on the Eastern Seaboard section south New York.

In conjunction with the University's productions of "St. Joan," "Medea," "Waiting for Godot," and the "Bald Soprano," Meyers has created special music in conjunction with the Speech and Drama Department.

WILLIAM E. RIGGIN, JR.

Students Selected To Study Abroad

Two UNC students will travel to West Germany this fall as Goettingen Exchange Scholars.

Sylvia Anne Wall, a senior from Albemarle, and William E. Riggin, Jr., a Raleigh sophomore, will spend the 1966-67 school year studying in Germany. The $1,600 scholarships also provide for travel in Europe during vacations.

Two sophomores, Barry S. Armour of Philadelphia and William W. Tomford of Memphis, were chosen as first and second alternates respectively.

The International Students' Board of Student Government conducts the 12 - year old Exchange program. Two German students also come to UNC each year. Ullrich Wesche and Gerhard Duecker are the present scholars in Chapel Hill.

Miss Wall, a French major, was co - chairman of this year's Toronto Exchange program. She was initiated into the Order of the Valkyries this past fall. She says she plans to return to UNC in the fall of 1967 to do graduate work in French.

Riggin, a Morehead Scholar, is a German major with plans to enter medicine. He also sings in the UNC chorus and with the Madrigal Singers. He says he intends to study science and German at Goettingen.

Shakespeare Scholar Here

A noted Shakespearean scholar will give two public lectures March 24-25 on campuses here and at Duke University.

The cooperative Program in the Humanities will sponsor these appearances of Dr. Geoffrey Bullough of King's College, the University of London.

Bullough will discuss "Shakespeare's Use of His Sources" at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Green Room of East Duke Building on the Duke campus.

"Law and Justice in Shakespeare" will be his topic at 4 p.m. Friday in Room 103, Bingham Hall, on the UNC campus.

Bullough is a professor of English language and literature at King's College. His major publications include "Philosophical Poems of Henry More," "The Oxford Book of Seventeenth Century Verse," "The Trend of Modern Poetry," "Poems and Dramas of Fulke Grevill, Lord Brooke," and "Mirror of Minds."

This summer, his sixth volume of "Narrative and Dramatic Sources of Shakespeare" will be published.

Bullough has traveled widely, giving lectures for the British Council and by invitation from universities in Europe, India, Persia and Turkey, East Africa and South Africa.

WUNC HIGHLIGHTS

SCIENCE AND NATURE — 2:00 p.m. — "Systems of Weights and Measures" Dr. E. A. Brecht, former Dean of the School of Pharmacy, discusses the metric systems of weights and measures, contrasting it with other such systems.

GREAT DECISIONS: 1966 — 8:00 p.m. — "Latin America" This program examines the internal problems of Latin American countries, which have been swept in a surge of activity that is changing the way of life on all levels of society. In conversation with U. S. Senator Robert F. Kennedy (d-N. Y.), series host David Schoenbrun discusses U. S. hopes for inter - American unity through the Alliance for Progress and the Organization of American States.

FORTY-FIVE YEARS WITH FITZPATRICK — 8:30 p.m. — "Preview" This is the first of sixteen programs featuring editorial cartoons by the Pulitzer prize winning cartoonist cartoons for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch covered periods in history such as Prohibition, the Depression of 1929, the New Deal years, World War II and the Korean War — from 1913 to 1958.

MEN IN BLACK — 9:00 p. m. — Produced by Rediffusion Television Ltd. of London, a partner in INTERTEL (the International Television Federation), this hour-long documentary is concerned with relationships between the clergy and the more than three million Catholics in Ireland, the only English-speaking Catholic country, and with criticism made against the Catholic Church — that there is an intellectual gulf between laity and clergy, that the clergy is out of real touch with modern times and becoming a "social elite."

JAZZ CASUAL — 10:00 p.m. —"Woody Herman and the Swingin' Herd" Demonstrating how a rehearsal session works, Woody Herman and his "Swingin' Herd" ready their rendition of a new tune by Bill Holman.

If communications were good enough you could stay in the sack all day

Moving your body around is highly inefficient.

If communications were perfect, you would never have to. Of course, you would still have to get exercise. But that's your problem.

We want to make it easier for you to contact people, learn, get information, attend lectures, and hold meetings.

We developed Picturephone* service so you can see as well as talk when you call. And be seen, too. We introduced Tele-Lecture service (two-way amplified phone calls) to let you hear lecturers in distant locations. And so you could ask them questions no matter how far away they were.

Right now, many students can dial from their dormitories to a language lab. Soon a student will be able to dial into a computer thousands of miles away to get information for his courses.

Depending on the nature of the information, he might get his answer back audibly, printed on a teletypewriter, as a video image, or a facsimile print.

Some of these services are available now. Others are being tested.

For the next week or so, better get a move on.

ERNIE McCRARY, EDITOR

How To Win The World

As musical shows go, it was entertaining enough.

But somehow, it wasn't morally re-arming.

The Sing Out '66 performance in Carmichael Auditorium Monday lived up to its advance notices—it was wholesome, unconcealed, all-American propaganda by rhythm.

Every song was a message, every message was a sermon.

The point of it all apparently is to straighten out this morally degenerate world and set it on the path away from destruction. "If you're a nice guy, everybody else will be nice guy, too," the Sing Outers seemed to be saying.

No single word could describe the content of the show. It had a little of everything—Sunday school theology, country and western music, opera, original compositions, American Indian and Oriental dances, hot drum numbers, camp ground testimony.

The DTH finds the Sing Out message intellectually offensive. It takes considerable gall to suggest to university students, or anyone else for that matter, that the adoption of moral absolutes of purity, honesty, love and unselfishness will alone solve the problems of the world.

Even the least perceptive of minds ought to be able to see that, unfortunately, things just aren't that simple.

Some of the songs, and most of the between-song sermonettes, were offensive because they were so blantantly directed at grammar school mentality and emotions.

Any good actor knows that a cardinal sin of the profession is over-acting.

Sorry, Sing Out. We're for God, country and flag, too, but you laid it on a bit too thick.

Put It In The Round File

It wouldn't be a best-seller, but a Daily Tar Heel editor could write a book about the mail he receives.

The name of the paper finds its way onto some pretty strange mailing lists, ranging from the Sierra Club Magainze (published by a conservation group) to the American Civil Liberties Union (which always wants contributions.)

Normally prepared for anything, the editor was, however, somewhat surprised when he opened a large envelope last week and a 127-page book dropped out—New Program of the Communist Party U.S.A.—A Draft.

Could it be that somebody up in party headquarters in New York had seen a copy of a DTH editorial which defended the right of a Communist to speak on campus, and had mistaken it for an indication that the DTH had "joined the cause?"

Far from it. An enclosed letter explained that the draft, written by Gus Hall, was being sent to editors of 700 college newspapers and "we would appreciate the observations of yourself and other students before the final document is written."

It certainly was thoughtful of them to ask, but it is doubtful that they really want to hear the DTH's suggestions about what the Communist Party ought to do. They wouldn't do it, anyway.

And to prove that Communist public relations men are sitting in ivory towers up on West 26th Street, they included this paragraph in the letter:

"This also raises the possibility of a Communist speaker coming to your campus—and possibly under the auspices of your publication or some other institution or campus organization—to speak on the Program and to answer any and all questions as to the Communist viewpoint. Surely this is in keeping with the pursuit of knowledge and intellectual advancement. We are prepared to provide authoritative and capable Communist speakers for campus meetings of students and faculty."

Yeah, send your speakers on down. We have a sidewalk reserved for them in Chapel Hill.

Nevertheless, the editor wishes to express his sincerest thanks to the CP for sending the book. After reading most of it, he found the perfect use for it.

There was a big hole in the bottom of his trash can.

It needed to be plugged.

It has been.

Contradictions Haunt Conservatives

Russell Baker once defined the "New Conservatism" as "a political philosophy born under the conjunction of Arizona, Yale, and Adam Smith; it holds that the United States must get tougher with the Communists and expand its influence around the world while cutting the budget, dismantling the Federal government, and bringing the boys home, thus turning a tide of events that has been running against the country since the last Federalist Administration."

Between the lines of this pointed statement can be found an example of the unrealistic and contradictory thinking which is so evident in the conservative, and eserate conservatives and the right-wingers,

There will always be a place for the moderate conservatives who want to wait and be 150 per cent sure of what the government is doing before it makes the slightest change in the precious status quo. They act as useful instruments to restrain or delay the forces of impulsivism. However, I am concerned with the more - than - moderate conservatives and the rigth - wingers, who view change as something suspicious and to be feared, and who view humanitarianism as part of some gigantic conspiratorial plot.

It is not necessary for me to question whether or not conservatism is open - minded, as I did for liberalism last week. As a rule, strong conservatism is so resistent to even the thought of change, that to discuss whether or not it even considers itself open - minded would be ludicrous.

Paradoxically, the same conservatives who have to be dragged kicking and screaming into glum resignation whenever an important change is made, eventually come to accept the new situation and begin their fighting anew when it is threatened with change.

Is it sensible to fear change for its own sake? Even if some feel that "this is the best of all possible worlds," is it so perfect that no improvements can ever be made on it?

We can ask if forceful conservatism is realistic in its thinking. A political philosophy must be realistic or its contribution to society will have no lasting value. We could start by wondering about the realism of suspecting all progressive change.

Of what value is the non - constructive obstructionism that goes beyond the bounds of the useful restraining of whims? Is it realistic to believe that all progress is somehow inherently bad? We might also ask:

Is it realistic to suppose that the U. S. Consitution is so crystal clear and so permanently perfect in its original context, that in something like 700 words there is the answer to every question that may arise in generations to come without the need for fresh interpretations?

Is it realistic to decry the growth of the national government "at the expense of the states", but to ignore the fact that on the state level the state governments are growing in power at the expense of the counties and the towns, which proves that the aggregation of power at the top is an inevitable modern phenomenon?

Is it realistic to believe that the kind of government which we enioy is possible in places like Southeast Asia, where there is widespread ignorance and illiteracy, two factors that make democracy impossible there?

(Because of this, we can't be fighting for freedom or democracy in South Viet Nam. What we are fighting for is the independence of that country so that it will have the potential to eventually develop into a recognizable free and representative country. If we do not fight and win the war, this potential will be wiped out and Viet Nam will never develop into a free state.)

Russell Baker's definition of conservatism includes goals that have actually been proposed by the followers of that philosophy. It is obvious that there is much contradiction in their plans. How can you expand our influence while cutting down the size of the national government? How can you take all the forceful actions proposed and still reduce the Federal Budget?

Other contradictions can be found. How can you be for human rights and yet be reluctant to enforce laws guaranteeing them? How can you stand for government based on the Constitution, yet be suspicious of people exercising their First Amendment right of free speech, and to decline the right to speak to people invoking the protection of the Fifth Amendment which is part of the Constitution and thus presumably they have a right to use?

How can you be for "constitutional government" and to declare illegal the use of the Fifth Amendment which is part of it? These and the above are by no means the only examples of contradiction in the conservative mind, but they serve to illustrate the nature of it.

For real fun and excitement, let us consider briefly the extreme right wing, as epitomized by such groups as the John Birch Society, without whose constant vigilance the United States would surely have fallen to atheistic communism eons ago.

These are the advocates of the "100% red-blooded American" (whatever that is) and who are suspicious of anything in the least "foreign" (while failing to consider the fact that fully one-sixth of the men who drew up the U. S. Constitution were of foreign birth).

These are the groups who were alert enough to sound the alarm in 1960 that the Pope was waiting in a submarine in the Potomac River for John F. Kennedy to be elected President of the United States so that he could take over the country.

These are the folks whose policy statements sound like the titles of editorials in the New York Daily News (actual sample: "Don't Just Stand There, Start Shooting"). They are the ones who get emotional about "States' rights," and fail to realize that a state is an institution established by people, and that states don't have rights (only authority)—only people have rights.

They are the ones who equate communism with socialism, socialism with the welfare state, the welfare state with social legislation, social legislation with liberalism, and then declare that liberals (whose worst crime may be softheadedness) must be purged from the country before they destroy it.

They are the ones whose bible is the Constitution, but who are ignorant of almost every aspect of it in regard to what the government can or cannot do, and what provisions and guarantees it makes regarding civil rights and liberties.

They are the paranoids who see conspiracy from every quarter, traitors everywhere (in government and out), and danger in anything that didn't exist before 1930. Based on letters to U. S. Senators by these superpatriots, former New York Senator Kenneth Keating in 1963 drew up a list of the terrible dangers to our national security which these citizens were deeply concerned about.

"And so, now, to the list of subversive individuals, institutions, and ideas, which presently included the United Nations, the income tax, the Chief Justice of the United States, the Girl Scouts of America, flouridation of the water supply, the last four (now five) Presidents of the United States, beatniks, Harvard University, civil rights demonstrations, expenditures for mental health, the Arms Control and Disarament Agency, coffee houses, every Secretary of State since William Jennings Bryan, professors of anthropology, back-door spending, metro government, Jews, Time magazine, the Council on Foreign Relations, firearms registration, the Protestant clergy, the two United States Senators from New York plus between 77 and 83 of their colleagues, and proposals for Federal aid to mass transportation—to this list of Communist-inspired persons and ideas we must now add, merciful heavens, American folk music. And who knows what lies ahead?"

These Right Wingers are the ones about whom a book could be written, entitled, "None Dare Call It Reason."

Campus Ministers Express Skepticism Concerning MRA

Moral Re-Armament crusaders, who visited UNC Monday, claim they are promoting greater religiosity, but campus religious leaders of three major faiths are very skeptical about MRA's purposes and goals.

Rev. Bill Coats, Episcopalian pastor, said this week. "From what I know of MRA, I would say it's simplistic . . . MRA attempts to paint the world in absolute colors.

"MRA people aren't very clear about what they mean or want. I'm not sure exactly what they're discussing when they talk about a 'God-controlled' world.

"I always worry about people with four or five absolutes," Coats said, referring to MRA's saying that honesty, love, purity and unselfishness are all that is needed to improve the world. "Eventually, words like honesty' may wear off.

"Also," he declared, "I think MRA is of an evangelical nature — the way these people tell their audience how many followers they have and what famous people are involved. I believe MRA is using a Madison Avenue approach."

Father Francis Murphy said: "MRA may have some worthy objectives . . . The difficulty is that they may not always agree with Catholic techniques . . . "We don't believe Catholics have to go outside their church for advice or support on the means of knowing or observing a moral code.

"In our church," Father Murphy continued, "we have our own structure for observing the laws of morality. "We don't know what (groups outside the Catholic church) would do; they might, for example, come out for abortion, euthanasia or contraceptive practices of which the church disapproves.

"They might water down certain concepts we hold as Christians so that the principles of morality might be weakened rather than strengthened."

Rabbi Howard Rabinowitz of the Hillel Foundation said: "My knowledge of this organization is limited, but after discussing it with other campus chaplains at our meeting last week. I believe that the groups of MRA are doubtful their doctrines specious. It's kind of a pseduo - religious crusade.

"What disturbs most of the chapalins is that the University is promoting this crusade instead of letting the regular campus religious organizations have the attention.

"MRA claims they're a religious group, but I see (their singing) as merely entertainment . . . like Johnny Mathis.

"I am somewhat disturbed by the Buchman quote," said Rabinowitz, discussing a statement made 30 years ago by MRA's founder indicating pro - Nazi sympathies. "That makes the organization suspect. Why should the University promote them if they have this type of background?"

Norman Gustaveson of the YMCA told the DTH: "I have talked with members of this group for the past 15 years; and, after listening to the people at Graham Memorial (part of the MRA group which visited the UNC campus), I am just as unclear as ever as to what they stand for.

"When I was talking with one member of the group, the leader cut the conversation short," said Gustaveson. "When you talk to people in this idealistic movements, it's very difficult to know their stands.

"But they're not subsersive. The people involved are very committted."

Referring to "Which Way America?"—a song sung by the MRA performers — he said: "They sing that, but then they don't tell you which way. Lyndon Johnson has a way. Barry Goldwater has a way. And Al Capone? He was for motherhood."

Gustaveson stated that merely saying America should have a purpose is "very ambiguous . . . innocuous."

The question, he said, is: "What's this purpose?"

"Another thing that concerns me," he declared, "is Schick (the razor company) supplying funds for the Sing - Out . . . I don't want to appear prejudiced, but I'm suspicious when MRA is backed by a company that has contributed to the John Birch Society."

My own opinion of the MRA?

Need I say anything?

Experimental Film

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Re: The panel discussion over the three experimental films last Monday night.

Anyone who is acquainted with Faulkner's "The Sound and The Fury" is aware that the portrayal of the abnormal mind is a valid artistic device.

The film "Georg," like the Quentin section of Faulkner's novel, deals with the experiences of a young man of excruciating sensitivity teetering on the brink of insanity. It records the man's struggle between his desire to escape from reality and his wish as an artist to record reality. This struggle is poignantly represented by the flashes of blank film — a kind of cinematic incoherence.

Mr. Kaye is clearly not yet the artist Faulkner was, nevertheless, "Georg" is in many ways a very promising film and deserved a more thoughtful reception that it received here Monday night.

Sincerely yours,
Alicia Reckford

Mixed Dormitory Hasn't Worked

By DEMONT ROSEMAN

A medium-sized eastern university embarked on a daring "experiment" with some of its upperclass male and female students about three years ago.

It was to be a venture in "community living."

The main features were (1) desegregation of the sexes in a dormitory; (2) allowing groups of six boys or six girls to live in suites on the same floor; and (3) self-regulation without adult proctors or supervisors as usually found in dormitories.

In an academic lecture at the UNC Psychiatric Center, the visiting speaker said the experiment grew out of an impression that "dormitory living as commonly practiced in universities does not emotionally prepare students for living independently in a heterosexual world after graduation.

"It was felt," he added, "that segregating the sexes in different dormitories tended to result in a mutual view that was incomplete, competitive and almost solely sexual."

Four Assumptions

The speaker — a psychiatrist — said the drastic change in dormitory life was based on four assumptions:

—Most students in the "community living" dormitory would be mature enough to become even more mature while living there.

—The special problem of "a minior group of immature students" would be solved by participating in activities with the more mature students.

—The freedom permitted by the program would lead the maturing student "to assume responsibilities with respect to himself, his suite and the total dormitory community" (through an effective student government).

—The entire dean's staff would work with the students on details required "to put life and stability into the program."

After three years, have these basic assumptions been realized?

An effective student government has failed to materialize. "In fact," the audience here was told, "students are elected to the judicial board who pledge to shut their eyes and mind their own business."

Little sense of overall community living has developed. Each group of suitemates has tended to be unconcerned with the total dormitory community.

Plans Changed

Unfortunately, some parts of the original plan had to be altered at the outset.

A rule was hastily imposed against any mixing of the sexes in bedrooms.

Another rule eliminated the original idea of randomly mixing the sexes on the same floor. A sandwich arrangement placed males and females on alternate floors.

And, finally, faculty members were invited to move into the dormitory apartments "without any delineated role in regard to the students."

These changes in the experiment were described as reflecting the anxiety of those who fostered the plan. "The ambivalence was easily communicated to the students," the psychiatrist said.

What behavior resulted from the experiment?

The experimental dormitory "is the source of chronic, repetitive controversy about the bedroom rule, which almost no one takes seriously, not even the people who proclaimed it."

Instead of maturing, many students in the dormitory have demonstrated regressive behavior.

Vandalism

Numerous acts of vandalism have occurred. Aggressive as well as sexual behavior seems to be stimulated in the setting.

The visiting speaker said that one tragedy of the experiment is that it had no built-in measure of its effects "nor was there any sincere effort to study its evolution."

"We still do not know the validity of the hypothesis which initiated the experiment," he said.

Psychiatrist serving the university's student population admitted to "a skewed view" of the results because only those students with troubles sought their help.

In summarizing three years of the experiment, the speaker said, "We can't say anything knowledgeable about its postive humanizing effects, and we are unable to generalize with confidence from the disturbing effects in the sample we have seen."

Concert Features Electronic Music

The Sunday evening concert of the Festival of Contemporary Music, sponsored here next week by the Phi Mu Alpha Fraternity, features Emerson Meyers of Catholic University in a demonstration of techniques in Electronic Music.

He will lecture at 8 p.m. March 27 in Hill Hall.

Meyers will discuss and illustrate, via recordings and slide projections, the history, present situation and predictions for the future of magnetic tape music using electronically generated sounds, sounds from musical instruments, or based upon ideas derived from musique concrete.

He will show types of scores used by composers in the medium and pictures of laboratory apparatus. Purposes and sounds generated by various types of laboratory equipment will be discussed and demonstrated.

Meyers will present portions of various types of electronic music to illustrate potentials of the medium and its uses at present.

Meyers is professor music at the School of Music in The Catholic University of America. As a pianist, he has given many solo recitals, chamber music concerts and has appeared with orchestras in this country and in Belgium. He has composed works for solo instruments, voice, chorus, chamber music and orchestra which have won prizes and been performed here and in Europe.

In his present position, he teaches piano, conducts seminars in the piano works of Beethoven and Brahms and gives courses in contemporary music and electronic music.

Meyers became interested on electronic music while on a Fulbright music research grant in Belgium in 1956. Since that time he has visited major centers in Paris, Cologne, Munich, Brussels, Toronto and New York. He designed and installed the ever expanding electronic music laboratory at the Catholic University which was the first of such laboratories to be created on the Eastern Seaboard section south New York.

In conjunction with the University's productions of "St. Joan," "Medea," "Waiting for Godot," and the "Bald Soprano," Meyers has created special music in conjunction with the Speech and Drama Department.

WUNC HIGHLIGHTS

SCIENCE AND NATURE — 2:00 p.m. — "Systems of Weights and Measures" Dr. E. A. Brecht, former Dean of the School of Pharmacy, discusses the metric systems of weights and measures, contrasting it with other such systems.

GREAT DECISIONS: 1966 — 8:00 p.m. — "Latin America" This program examines the internal problems of Latin American countries, which have been swept in a surge of activity that is changing the way of life on all levels of society. In conversation with U. S. Senator Robert F. Kennedy (d-N. Y.), series host David Schoenbrun discusses U. S. hopes for inter - American unity through the Alliance for Progress and the Organization of American States.

FORTY-FIVE YEARS WITH FITZPATRICK — 8:30 p.m. — "Preview" This is the first of sixteen programs featuring editorial cartoons by the Pulitzer prize winning cartoonist cartoons for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch covered periods in history such as Prohibition, the Depression of 1929, the New Deal years, World War II and the Korean War — from 1913 to 1958.

MEN IN BLACK — 9:00 p. m. — Produced by Rediffusion Television Ltd. of London, a partner in INTERTEL (the International Television Federation), this hour-long documentary is concerned with relationships between the clergy and the more than three million Catholics in Ireland, the only English-speaking Catholic country, and with criticism made against the Catholic Church — that there is an intellectual gulf between laity and clergy, that the clergy is out of real touch with modern times and becoming a "social elite."

JAZZ CASUAL — 10:00 p.m. —"Woody Herman and the Swingin' Herd" Demonstrating how a rehearsal session works, Woody Herman and his "Swingin' Herd" ready their rendition of a new tune by Bill Holman.

Students Selected To Study Abroad

Two UNC students will travel to West Germany this fall as Goettingen Exchange Scholars.

Sylvia Anne Wall, a senior from Albemarle, and William E. Riggin, Jr., a Raleigh sophomore, will spend the 1966-67 school year studying in Germany. The $1,600 scholarships also provide for travel in Europe during vacations.

Two sophomores, Barry S. Armour of Philadelphia and William W. Tomford of Memphis, were chosen as first and second alternates respectively.

The International Students' Board of Student Government conducts the 12 - year old Exchange program. Two German students also come to UNC each year. Ullrich Wesche and Gerhard Duecker are the present scholars in Chapel Hill.

Miss Wall, a French major, was co - chairman of this year's Toronto Exchange program. She was initiated into the Order of the Valkyries this past fall. She says she plans to return to UNC in the fall of 1967 to do graduate work in French.

Riggin, a Morehead Scholar, is a German major with plans to enter medicine. He also sings in the UNC chorus and with the Madrigal Singers. He says he intends to study science and German at Goettingen.

Shakespeare Scholar Here

A noted Shakespearean scholar will give two public lectures March 24-25 on campuses here and at Duke University.

The cooperative Program in the Humanities will sponsor these appearances of Dr. Geoffrey Bullough of King's College, the University of London.

Bullough will discuss "Shakespeare's Use of His Sources" at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Green Room of East Duke Building on the Duke campus.

"Law and Justice in Shakespeare" will be his topic at 4 p.m. Friday in Room 103, Bingham Hall, on the UNC campus.

Bullough is a professor of English language and literature at King's College. His major publications include "Philosophical Poems of Henry More," "The Oxford Book of Seventeenth Century Verse," "The Trend of Modern Poetry," "Poems and Dramas of Fulke Grevill, Lord Brooke," and "Mirror of Minds."

This summer, his sixth volume of "Narrative and Dramatic Sources of Shakespeare" will be published.

Bullough has traveled widely, giving lectures for the British Council and by invitation from universities in Europe, India, Persia and Turkey, East Africa and South Africa.

If communications were good enough you could stay in the sack all day

Moving your body around is highly inefficient.

If communications were perfect, you would never have to. Of course, you would still have to get exercise. But that's your problem.

We want to make it easier for you to contact people, learn, get information, attend lectures, and hold meetings.

We developed Picturephone* service so you can see as well as talk when you call. And be seen, too. We introduced Tele-Lecture service (two-way amplified phone calls) to let you hear lecturers in distant locations. And so you could ask them questions no matter how far away they were.

Right now, many students can dial from their dormitories to a language lab. Soon a student will be able to dial into a computer thousands of miles away to get information for his courses.

Depending on the nature of the information, he might get his answer back audibly, printed on a teletypewriter, as a video image, or a facsimile print.

Some of these services are available now. Others are being tested.

For the next week or so, better get a move on.

Smasher Sites Submitted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The great atom smasher derby narrowed yesterday. A scientific panel picked six spots in six states as suitable sites for a $375 - billion accelerator, world's largest, to probe nature's innermost secrets.

They are, in alphabetical order:

Ann Arbor, Mich.; Brookhaven National Laboratory at Upton, Long Island, N. Y.; Denver, Colo.; Madison, Wis.; the Sierra foothills 20 miles east of Sacramento, Calif., and South Barrington (or Weston) near Chicago, Ill.

Disappointed were folks residing near about 100 other sites which had been plugged by boosters in one of history's grandest lobbying campaigns.

It will now be up to the Atomic Energy Commission to pick the winner from among the six. Or, if it dares to brave the wrath of the favored half dozen, it could go outside their ranks for its selection. The recommendations of the panel of the National Academy of Sciences are not binding.

The project is such as to be a tremendous boon to any community, in money and prestige. Besides the $375 billion initial cost for construction and equipment, it will require at least $60 million a year to operate.

The heart of the giant undertaking will be an accelerator, nearly a mile in diameter, producing beams of protons with energies of 200 billion electron volts (BEV). This is more than six times the energy of particles produced by any existing accelerator.

Racng at speeds approaching that of light, and guided in their path by instruments of exquisite precision, these protons will smash into atoms. The result, it is hoped, will be bright new light on the inner workings and composition of fundamental matter, and perhaps on the mysteries of life and the universe.

The practical effects on medicine and space travel, to name only two fields, are incalculable.

Near the accelerator will be an elite "City of Brains" — 2,400 resident scientists, not counting their families, plus visiting high energy physicists, engineers and mathematicians.

One jilted community had hopefully mentioned that it had a splendid ballet class to interest the scientists' daughters. Another, Haverhill, Mass., hung welcome banners across its main streets when the site committee came looking.

The panel weighted many considerations in picking sites. One was available land area: the facilities may include storage rings for protons, as large as the main ring. Required is a minimum of 3,000 acres, in a rectangular shape.

Needed also are soils that are highly uniform and rather elastic, so the giant machine will not sink unevenly.

"Risks of catastrophic seismic disturbances and subsidence due to overpumping of ground water or oil, or mining, are considered unacceptable," the panel said.

Some of the points mentioned in favor of the six sites were:

Ann Arbor — proximity of the science - strong University of Michigan; the Detroit Airport is near; large lakes moderate the climate, a factor which helps hold down construction costs.

Brookhaven — an AEC laboratory here already is working on high energy physics. Adquate electric power is available. Many Northeastern universities are accessible.

Denver — terrain is rolling, but excavation could be done cheaply. The city is attractive and growing. The Universities of Colorado and Denver are near.

South Barrington — only 30 minutes drive from O'Hare Field.

Valachi Transferred To Federal Prison

MILAN, MICH., (AP) — Joseph Valachi, the man who broke the blood oath of secrecy of the Cosa Nostra, yesterday was brought to the federal prison here, which the government hopes will be his final home.

Senior Warden Paul P. Sartwell said "Yes, we do have him here."

Sartwell said Valachi arrived at nearby Willow Run Airport at 12:30 p.m. (EST). Mi- about 35 miles southwest of Detroit.

"We had Valachi inside the prison by 1 p.m.," Sartwell said. "We have taken the necessary precautions to insure his safekeeping while he is here. We have him in a maximum security unit."

Valachi's custodians hope he will be safe from any revenge of the organized crime syndicate whose oath of secrecy he broke in 1963 by testifying before Congressional investigators.

U. S. Marshals took Valachi from his private cell in the death house at the District of Columbia Jail — where he has been held since September, 1963 — and took him to Detroit on a government plane often used for transferring federal prisons.

From the plane, the 61-year-old convicted murderer and narcotics peddler under sentence to life imprisonment was driven to the Federal Correctional Institution at Milan, a Detroit suburb.

$13 Million Viet Nam Bill Gets Thumping Senate OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 87 to 2 yesterday to give the administration an extra $13.1 billion to fight the war in Viet Nam.

Passage of the appropriation bill was accomplished by demands from Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., for a stepping up of power to "bring this war to a close."

Russell, Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said present tactics may require 10 or 12 years to bring the Viet Cong to their knees and "the American people are goint to be very unhappy about it" unless the Communists are forced to the peace table soon.

Sens. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., and Hugh Scott, R-Pa. joined Russell in demanding that the North Viet Nam port of Haiphong be closed by bombing, mining or blockading.

Voting against the bill on the final roll call were Sen. Ernest Gruening, D-Alaska, who protested against an escalating war and "the increasing slaughter" of Americans and South Vietnamese and Sen. Wayne Morse D-Ore. who frequently joins Gruening in criticizing U. S. foreign policy.

The measure won House passage by a 389-3 vote last week but it must be returned there for action to Senate amendments limiting the Defense Secretary's authority to transfer funds in support of South Vietnamese and other allied forces.

Most of the $13135719000 in the bill was requested by President Johnson to provide more men and firepower for the Viet Nam war but it also includes $415 million in economic aid.

There was no argument between the House and Senate over the amount of funds. The money is for the current fiscal year ending June 30.

Earthquakes Shake China

TOKYO (AP) — Four earthquakes, one of great intensity, shook north China yesterday apparently not far from the city of Singtai, hit hard by two earth shocks this month. Seismologists in Moscow recorded it as one of the strongest quakes in history.

The shock waves rolled northward to Peking, sending people fleeing into the streets, Japanese correspondents in the Red Chinese capital reported.

In far away Africa, new earth shocks hit in Western Uganda blocking with rocks the only access road to Kampala, the capital. An earthquake Sunday killed at least 79 persons, said reports to Kampala.

Five smaller earthquakes struck around Yugoslavia's Bosnian capital of Sarajevo but no damage was reported.

North Carolina News Roundup

Research Triangle Left Out

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's Research Triangle may still be considered for location of a $375 million atom smasher but the Tar Heel site was not one of six recommended for serious studies yesterday by the National Academy of Sciences.

The Research Triangle was one of 85 sites listed as semi-finalists in the competition for the giant facility, and Gov. Dan Moore expressed the hope Tuesday that it still would be considered by the Atomic Energy Commission.

"We regret very much that North Carolina is not included in the six proposed sites," Moore said.

"We feel," he continued in a brief statement, "that North Carolina has everything to offer needed for this installation and we are hopeful . . . the Atomic Energy Commission when making up the final selection will consider the North Carolina site."

Textile Union Will Continue

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Union officials said yesterday that as a result of a National Labor Relations Board ruling they will continue efforts to organize workers at the J. P. Stevens and Co. plants in North and South Carolina.

A spokesman for the company, meanwhile, said in a statement issued in Greenville, S. C., that Stevens workers have decisively voted against the union. But, the statement said, "all of this is beyond understanding of the union and the labor board."

In Washington, the NLRB ruled that the textile chain was guilty of "flagrant unlawfulness" in an antiunion campaign. The company was ordered to reinstate 71 workers with back pay plus interest and read to its some 40,000 employes in North Carolina and South Carolina a pledge to cease unfair labor practices.

The board, however, rejected a request from the Textile Workers Union, AFL-CIO, that the company be ordered to bargain with it. The union initiated the charges as a result of efforts or organize Stevens workers in the two states.

Stevens and the TWUA and the Industrial Union Department, AFL-CIO have indicated they will appeal the ruling to the federal courts.

Johnson Sends De Gaulle 'Polite' Note On NATO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson administration gave France a new and more complete reply yesterday to President Charles de Gaulle's proposals for breaking France away from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The note, handed to Ambassador Charles Lucet by Undersecretary of State George Ball, is understood to have emphasized politely but firmly the resolution of the United States and 13 other NATO allies to carry on an integrated defense of Western Europe without France if necessary.

De Gaulle in a message to President Johnson March 7 outlined his plans for withdrawing French forces from NATO control and establishing French sovereignty over United States and other NATO bases in France or forcing the withdrawal of those bases. The understanding is that in fact the bases and NATO military headquarters will be forced out of France.

Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen returned from Paris last week for consultations and reported to President Johnson, participating in drafting of a detailed U. S. response De Gaulle's plans.

De Gaulle served notice on the United States and other allies that his plans were not negotiable but that the consequences were negotiable.

Time Change Bill Passed By Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed yesterday legislation designed to bring uniformity in Daylight Saving Time throughout the nation.

The Senate generally accepted the version of the bill passed by the House last week. But, at the strong insistence of the two Missouri senators, it tacked on an amendment to permit Daylight Time in part of a state.

The result was to send the measure back to the House a second time for consideration of this one amendment.

The House version of the bill would provide that, starting in 1967, Daylight Saving would be in effect from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October.

The bill would require uniform observance throughout the nation, except that a state legislature could exempt the entire state from daylight time. As passed by the House, the bill would not permit division within a state.

The Senate amended it to permit a state legislature to divide a state into not more than two parts, with one on Daylight Saving and one on standard Time.

The bill was passed in that form by voice vote and sent back to the House.

Soviets Reject U. S. Bid To Ban N-Weapon Spread

U. S. bid for a world - wide treaty banning the spread of nuclear weapons was rejected out of hand by the Soviet Union yesterday.

Soviet delegates Semyon K. Tsarapkin turned thumbs down on a revised American draft treaty presented to the 17-nation disarmament conference by U. S. Negotiator Adrian S. Fisher.

The new American plan was designed mainly to allay Soviet fears that West Germany may gain control over atomic weapons in the envisaged Western nuclear force. Tsarapkin frequently has accused the United States of seeking a non-proliferation agreement merely to legalize nuclear sharing by the Bonn government.

The new draft treaty text does not provide any substantial change from the previous American plan repeatedly rejected by Tsarapkin as unacceptable. It is reworded to include some of the expressions contained in the rival Soviet draft treaty and spell out in greater detail the nuclear powers' undertaking to retain full control over their nuclear arms within a military alliance.

ATTENTION: PRESIDENTS

The Graham Memorial Acfivity Board would like to invite all interested persons to interview for the chairmanships of the Graham Memorial Committees. The sign-up sheets will be posted in GM on March 23, 1966, and interviews will be held in the afternoons of March 28 through April 1, 1966. We would sincerely urge all responsible persons to try for these positions of importance. Thank you very much for your cooperation.

Yale Downs Tar Heels 8-5 In Lacrosse Season Opener

By DRUMMOND BELL
DTH Sports Writer

Opening - game jitters and a polished Yale squad spelled defeat for Coach Cony Steele's pre-season nationally ranked lacrosse team Monday. The Tar Heels could not mount an effective attack against the Elis and lost 8-5 before a large partisan crowd on Navy Field.

Carolina lost the services of All-American Jeff Parker late in the first period, but even before his injury, the stickmen could not get organized to mount a sustained drive.

Throughout the contest Carolina was plagued by not executing the basic fundamentals of the game. They were beaten to the ball, won but two face-offs, threw many stray passes, and could not scoop the ball off the ground nearly as well as their opposition.

There is no doubt that these mistakes can be attributed to the first game of the season. However, Yale was well-drilled and set up offensive picks to which the Carolina defense had a hard time adjusting. They passed well and are definitely a threat for the Ivy League crown.

Yale drew first blood in the opening period as Bruce Corbridge evaded the Carolina defense and threw the ball past unprotected goalie Harvey Stanley.

At 4:19 of the first period, thirty seconds after the first score, attackman Rick McCarthy of Yale quick-sticked a Corbridge pass from behind the cage into the Tar Heel net. Again, the failure to plug up the middle resulted in a goal.

Carolina began to loosen up in the second period, and at 1:40 Dan Howe came in from the left and stung the nets for the Heels' first score.

However, Yale came back at 8:09 of the period on Rick McCarthy's second score of the game. At the end of the first half the score was 3-1, Yale.

The beginning of the second half resembled much of the first half after Yale Captain Mac Bradford broke through the middle of the Carolina defense and decked Stanley with fine stickwork to give Yale a three-goal advantage.

However, the Carolina suddenly caught fire. At 6:13 of the third period the stickmen began their comeback. Pete Williams from twenty feet shot a hard one bouncer into the upper left of the Yale goal. Three minutes later midfielder Bob Morrison of Carolina took a pass from teammate Dan Howe and shot from the left. The ball deflected off a defender and into the cage. Carolina had come within one goal of tying the score, 4-3.

Yale didn't let up and at 0:30 of the last period, Bradford registered his second goal of the game to give Yale a more comfortable margin of two goals. But the Bulldogs didn't hang on to this margin for long.

At 1:25 Bill Bicksler brought the stickmen to within one again as he gunned the gall into the upper right after a scramble in front.

Carolina couldn't keep the pressure on in the Yale defensive zone. Yale retaliated at 4:40. Tom Preston, at attack, widened the gap to 6-4. Then, Bradford scored his third goal of the game thirty seconds later.

The Heels didn't slack off. A beautiful pass from Jake Hubbard, who moved up from midfield to attack to replace Parker, gave Pete Williams his second goal of the game and the team's last.

Carolina could not score for the remainder of the game. Yale's McCarthy completed his 'hat trick' late in the fourth quarter to put the game on ice for Yale and spoil Carolina's hopes for an opening win.

Carolina plays Cornell April 1 at Chapel Hill. They have two weeks to work on their mistakes, and Jeff Parker hopefully has time to recover from his knee injury.

There is no doubt that they will work hard since they still haven't lost the ACC and even with this disappointing loss, they are capable of beating the likes of Virginia and Maryland.

Dolphins Leave For NCAA Meet

By BILL HASS

Five members of the Carolina swimming team leave today for Colorado Springs to participate in the NCAA swimming championships at the Air Force Academy this weekend.

Phil Riker, Pete Worthen, Rick Forum, Gay Stratten and Jay Scattergood are the Dolphins who will represent UNC in the meet. Coach Pat Earey is already in Colorado, having left yesterday.

Hopes are high that Carolina will give a good account of themselves. The Dolphins finished fourth two weeks ago in the Eastern Seaboard championships behind Yale, Army and Navy. In the process they beat out ACC rival Maryland.

Riker won both the 100 and 200 butterfly in the Eastern meet and he will be bidding for national titles in both events. The 1964 Olympian is probably UNC's best individual chance for a championship. He is classed with the best in the country, and those are the ones he will be swimming against.

Pete Worthen won the 50 freestyle in the Eastern Seaboard and will be going for a national title there. Because it is so short, the 50 free is an unpredictable race and anything can happen.

Stratten will enter the 100 and 200 backstroke events and Forum will swim in the 100 breaststroke.

Both the 400 individual medley and 400 freestyle relay teams should do well. The medley relay team broke the school record when it finished third in the Eastern meet. The freestyle relay team was sixth.

To qualify for the NCAA meet, a swimmer must post a time equal to or better than the one required. He can do this at any time during the year. This way the best swimmers in the country gather at one place to determine the best man in each event.

Maryland and North Carolina State will have several boys in the running in many of the events.

ANOTHER G.M. SHOW BIZ QUIZ

And a-way we go!

   b. MARCH 29, JUST BEFORE YA'LL GO HOME, SO BALL IT UP, CAROLINA!
   c. WITH ROGER MILLER (Yeah, huzza-huzza; give 'em one for the old gipper!)

Sebastian

Hi. My name is Sebastian. Not Lord Sebastiar or even Mr. Sebastian. No fancy tricks and nothing up my sleeve. Just me. Plain old simple me.

My friends call me "Sibi."

Well friends, I'm really nervous. You see this is my first column. I've never written for so many papers before. And I cringe when I here that I will be read by millions of sports fans this morning.

Well, when you picked up your newspaper and you saw my name at the top of all this print you probably asked who in the world is this guy. So I guess an introduction is in order.

Now I'm what horrible people call a bookworm. I'm not a great athlete like my predecessor, Fauntleroy, I don't have bulging muscles. I don't have any trophies in my den.

To tell you the truth I hate sports. I've never gone to an athletic event. Never intend to. Sure I've heard of Blicky Dantle and Dogi Darrow, but that's about as far as it goes. I can't tell you who won the world series because I've never been to a football game in my life.

Sports are trivial and crude. I prefer to visit oak-paneled libraries and read great thoughts set down by great minds.

Well, last week I was leaving the library downtown and some caped crusader came up to me.

"I'm Ed Freakley," he introduced himself. "I happen to have this Freudian hatred for a man named Fauntleroy. Maybe you've read him. He's arrogant, wealthy, cocky and obnoxious. Well, I've gotten him to promise to quit the newspaper business. I made him predict Duke over Kentucky in his column. Then I forced him to promise that if he were wrong, and obviously he would be, he'd give up his job to Sebastian.

"I've been leafing through phone books for people with that name. But everyone of the Sebastians I've talked to said that they couldn't possibly fill the shoes of what they call "that great Faunts." Besides, they were bigger than me and could put up a fight.

"Well, you're kind of a mousey little guy aren't you? Come with me."

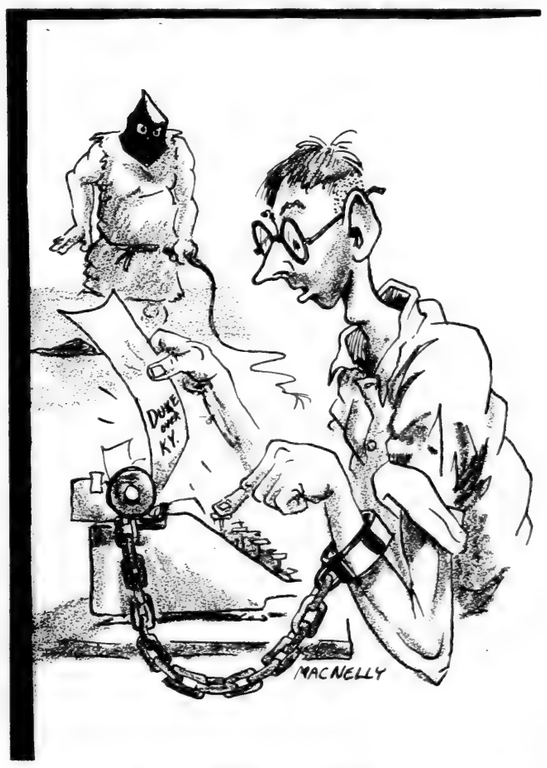
So he grabbed me and chained me to a typewriter. He ordered me to write a column despite my protest.

Really friends, I'm not the man for this job.

I just want someone to rescue me from this newspaper office. Let me go back to the bookshelves where I belong. PLEASE!

Lock up this Freakley. Publicly expose him so that this man Fauntleroy can come back to his job.

Somebody help me. Oh dear, I think I'm going to . . .cry.



Carolina Nine Meets Springfield College

By SANDY TREADWELL
DTH Sports Writer

The Tar Heels open their home baseball season this afternoon at 3 against Springfield College on Emerson Field.

The Tar Heels lost their first game of the season to East Carolina College in Greenville by a score of 5-3.

Springfield played the Pirates on Wednesday and easily beat them 7-1.

Springfield's head coach Archie Allen is the current president of the Collegiate Baseball Coaches Association. And he has been sent to several foreign countries to promote the game.

Allens' teams generally rank high among the ball clubs in their district 1 league. This year promises to be one of the brightest in several years.

Springfield has nine lettermen returning from a team which posted a 10-11-1 record last year.

The leading hitter on the club is Bob Murphy a senior who roams the territory at shortstop. Murphy hit .345 last year with 14 RBIs.

Don Fredricks, a senior outfielder, had 8 of Springfields' 38 stolen bases.

Dave Bennett will play third base. Bennett is 6'4" and weighs in at 200 pounds. He played quarterback for Springfield this fall and earned honorable mention on the All-America polls.

Springfield has an experienced team returning from last year, but Murphy is the only letterman who has hit over the .300 mark in college ball.

Allen has 11 sophomores adding depth to his club. They were the stars of a freshman team which won 10 games and lost only 3.

One of Springfields' three top pitchers will work the mound against the Tar Heels today. They are Carl Bosellman 5-1 with a 1.13 ERA, Bill Steuich, 1-0, and sophomore Bob DeMond

Tar Heel Coach Walter Rabb summed up the Springfield team by saying, "They are an exceptional base stealing and defensive ball club."

Coach Rabb will start the same team he fielded against East Carolina. Senior Beattie Leonard will be the Tar Heel's starting pitcher.

THE TAR HEELS' STARTING 9
pitcher: Beattie Leonard catcher: John Shaw
first base: Danny Talbott second base: Butch Watts third base: L. E. Sawyer shortstop: Bruce Bolick left field: Bob Hume center field: Charlie Carr right field: Bob Bonczek

Spring Sports Pace Murals

By BILL HASS
DTH Sports Writer

Spring has sprung and the intramural department is really getting into the mood these days. Competition will be held in four sports this week — basketball, soccer, softball and badminton.

Tonight will see four fraternity division basketball games, all crucial ones for the teams involved.

Phi Delt Blue meets the Sig Ep Bisons and Sigma Nu A plays ATO I at 7 p.m. in second - round tournament games. At 8 o'clock, KA Blue I meets Zete I and DKE Blue tangles with Chi Psi Red in quarterfinal contests.

At 8 p.m. Law II Blue plays Law Blue I in the graduate division tournament. There's another game tonight at 7 in this division involving three teams. Law III White, the Navy Neseps and the Med I Mooses are all tied for a spot in the tournament.

The three will flip coins and the odd team will play tomorrow night. The other two meet tonight and the winner will play the third team Wednesday.

Confused? Well, hopefully it will all be cleared up by Wednesday night.

Also on Wednesday, the residence hall tournament gets under way with Battle-Vance-Pettigrew playing the Craige C Alkaceltics and the Graham Bells colliding with the Connor Animals at 7 p.m. At 8 o'clock, the Mangum Mugs test the Teague Trojans and Ehringhaus B mxes it up with the Morrison C Cavaliers.

The soccer tournament is coming along slowly. Wednesday Delta Sig meets the Town Old Timers at 4 p.m. in a second round game. The winner will meet the Peacocks on Friday. St. A Blue plays Chi Psi at 5 p.m. Wednesday in a semifinal game, with the winner advancing to the finals.

after the second World War," the Communist claimed. "There were some people who left during the war becuase they were taken by the Germans . . . and they were afraid to return because they did not participate in the struggle against Germany."

The world Communist movement "will win in the U. S.," he said, "but it will come from yourselfs."

Mike Krug Jr., from South Orange, N. J., said after hearing Alexandrov's speech: "It showed some of the falsities of Communism. He was unable to answer certain questions in a way which I thought would be necessary."

Another student said "he sort of bore out everthing that was expected. You ask him a question and he sort of ducks around it. He just gives the line, the same old party line."

Both morning classes listening to the Russian gave him a round of applause after he spoke. The classes were Dr. Joel Schwatrz's political science class on the Soviet government. He spoke to a student - faculty colloquium in the afternoon.

The last known Communist to speak here was Nikolai D. Turkatento, acting manager of the Soviet News Agency Tass. He spoke to the Carolina Forum, Dec. 6, 1962, on "Dissemination of News in the Soviet Union."

Some other suspected or so-called Communists who have spoken at Carolina were:

—Sergei Striganov, the Soviet Charge D'Affaires in Washington. March 18, 1958 to the Carolina Symposium.

—Richard Crowder and Harold Rasp, called Communists because they supported Robert Williams, NAACP official who joined Castro in Cuba. August 14, 1962 to the Chapel Hill Progressive Labor Club.

—John Gates, editor of the Communist Daily Worker, spoke to the Carolina Forum and the Chapel Hill Communist Party. He spoke off campus.

—Carl Braden, speaking for the NAACP May 17, last year, he was denied speaking privleges under the speaker ban law. He had invoked the Fifth Amendment before the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1958.

—Junius Scales, a convicted Communist, spoke Nov. 6, 1947 in Memorial Hall.

—Earl Bowder, head of the American Communist Party, spoke in Memorial Hall March 5, 1938 to the Carolina Political Union.

THE VIRGINIANS, Mercury recording artists, will appear in GM Lounge Friday at 8 p.m. The group made up of, from left, Danny Shepard, Bill Swofford and Bob Hinkle, perform a nightclub act of folk-rock music. The group toured Canada last summer. The first record for the group will be released soon. The concert Friday in free and opened to the public.

5 UNC Students Among 13 To Intern In Washington

Five UNC students are among 13 students from North Carolina colleges and universities who have been appointed summer congressoional interns.

The 13 will work as staff assistants to U. S. Senators and Representatives in Washington, D. C. Each will receive a $750 stipend.

The 13 interns were selected in statewide competition on the basis of academic ability and leadership potential. They will spend 10 weeks in Washington.

Six of the interns are Sorth Carolinians. They are Michael Andrew of McLeansville, student at Wake Forest; William Bullock of Washington, N. C., UNC; Clarence Hardy of Edenton, North Carolina College; Charles O. Matthews II of Winston - Salem, Davidson; Anne White of Raleigh and Mary Baluss of Fayetteville; both students at Duke.

Of the seven out-of-state students, four are enrolled. They are Richard Carson of Melrose Park, Ill.; Saadia Greenberg and Peter Hartjens of Washington, D. C., and Eric Van Loon of Nashville, Tenn.

All are either undergraduate or postgraduate students of political science.

According to Prof. Donald R Matthews, director of the N.C Center for Education in Politics, purpose of the program is "to provide an opportunity for extraordinarily capable students to supplement their reading and classroom instruction in American government and politics."

ATO's Lonely For Idol

All right! You don't really want that 3-foot black idol. It's probably really getting on your nerves by this time — a 20 to 30 lb. chunk of black carved wood staring at you, looking like it just escaped from Kon-Tiki.

So, why don't you return it to Sam Robinson. It means a great deal to him. Anyway it means $65 to him if he doesn't return it to the merchant he borrowed it from for ATO rush.

Seriously, if you have it, please return it. If you wish to remain anonymous, leave it at the Information Desk in GM, or call Robinson at 968-2251.

Things have come to a pretty poor pass when people don't make their own idols and turn to stealing someone else's!

Profs To Debate US's Asia Policy

Dr. Frank Trager of New York University and Dr. Alden Lind of the UNC Department of Political Science will debate U. S. Southeast Asia policy tomorrow night at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall.

"Can Southeast Asia be neutralized without its subsequent domination by Communist China" will be the topic of the debate, which is sponsored by the Di-Phi Senate.

Trager is currently serving as Professor of International Affairs at NYU.

He is the author of "Marxism in Southeast Asia" and other books on Asian affairs.

Trager debated Dr. Hans Morgenthau of Chicago University nearly a month ago, and the text of the debate was printed in the magazine section of the New York Times last week.

Lind, who is serving as an assistant professor here, recently completed his graduate work at the University of Oregon.

The format of the debate will include a lengthy question and answer period in which the audience is encouraged to participate.

Di-Phi President John Greenbacker urged all interested students and faculty members yesterday to attend the meeting. A special faculty section will be reserved in the hall.

"At a time in which Southeast Asian policy is debated daily on the front pages of our newspapers, a debate of this issue by two knowledgeable scholars should be of interest to everyone," Greenbacker said.

Chugging Rules For Tomorrow

Graham Memorial is sponsoring a contest to see who can drink a quart of cider the fastest. The "chug-a-lugging" will be held in front of GM tomorrow from 4-6 p.m.

Below are the rules governing the contest.

1. All entrants must sign up on the entry sheet before entering.
2. The object is speed — the person to chug the fastest quart of cider wins.
3. Chugging shall mean consumption (drinking), and all of the cider must be consumed before the clock stops.
4. Time will be kept by the judges, and the judges decisions are final.
5. The clock will start when the container touches the entrant's lips and stop only when the container is lowered to the table.
6. Any spillage of cider from the container disqualifies the entrant.
7. Men and women may enter. There will be first, second and third prizes for both men and women.
8. The Chugging must take place in the ring set up by the GM Activities Board, and all chugging must be of cider provided by GM in the containers provided by GM.
9. Only one person may chug at a time, unless decided otherwise by the judges and GM.
10. GM and the judges reserve the rights to disqualify any disorderly chugger.

Judge Refuses Whiskey Say

CHARLOTTE (AP) — It is illegal to possess whisky in North Carolina except in your home or in transporting it there, a Recorder Court's judge said Tuesday in Charlotte.

Judge William T. Grist expressed the opinion in hearing evidence in a case against Georgia McLain of Charlotte, who was convicted of liquor law violations.

When asked if this ruling would outlaw the practice in Charlotte of taking liquor into restaurants to mix drinks, Judge Grist said

"This was not the question before me today, and I wouldn't want to give an opinion on 'brown bagging' unless the question was before me."

Campus Events

The Carolina Political Union is holding membership interviews this week in Roland Parker I. Interviews today will be from 2-4 p.m. and 6-9 p.m. Sign up at GM Information desk for a time and complete the application form before the interview.

John Davis Hatch will lecture on American drawings at 4 p.m. in room 115 in the Ackland Art Center.

The Murdoch Committee will meet at 2 p.m. in front of the Y. All students interested in working with mentally retarded children at the Murdoch Center are invited to meet also.

Freshman Women's Orientation Counselor selection will be today, tomorrow, and Friday. Interviews today will be from 5-8 p.m. If interested sign up at the Information Desk at GM and fill out an application blank which should be brought to the interview.

Interviews for YMCA officers from 3-5 upstairs in room 203-A of the Y Building. All those interested in applying for president, vice president, secretary or treasurer should come by the YMCA offices and sign up for an interview.

"Three Comedies by W. C. Fields" will be shown at 9 and 11 in The Gallery Coffee Shop of the Wesley Foundation.

Beginner's folk dance class meets at the Presbyterian Student Center from 7-9 p.m. Admission free. Folk dancing from 8-11 p.m. at the Center.

Interviews will be held for chairmanships of committees on the Graham Memorial Activities Board on March 18-April 1. Sign up at GM Information Desk.

Tickets for the Ford Caravan of Music, starring Roger Miller, are on sale now at GM all day and at Chase Cafeteria from 5-7 p.m. They cost $1 for students and $1.50 for general public.

Sigma Nu will sponsor a car wash Friday afternoon from 2-5 p.m. behind the Sigma Nu House. Pick up and delivery service. Cost is $1.50 per car.

The GM Roger Miller Chug-A-Lug contest will be held Thursday in front of GM from 4-6 p.m. Prizes will be given to men and women chuggers.

The Di-Phi Senate will meet in executive session tonight at 7:30 on the third floor of New West. Members are urged to bring in their back dues.

Thomas Taking DTH Editorship After Vacation

By ANDY MYERS
DTH Staff Writer

Fred Thomas, editor - elect of The Daily Tar Heel, said yesterday he plans to take over the newspaper after the spring break.

His first issue will be April 13, the second day after vacation.

"This spring I hope to make good on campaign promises for better coverage of our minor sports, using two sports pages as often as necessary," Thomas said.

Thomas is a sophomore from Concord. He defeated Alan Banov, a junior from Charleston, S. C., and Ray Linville, a senior from Winston - Salem.

Thomas polled 2,564 votes, 444 more than Banov and Linville received together. Banov got 1,323 and Linville 797.

"Let me express my gratitude to the many people who worked tirelessly for me in my campaign, and to the voters who have expressed their confidence in me," Thomas said.

Commenting about this plans for the DTH, he proposed more complete campus news coverage.

"Reporters . . . will work closely with the MRC, the WRC, the Greek system, and student government," he said.

"I want to have less space devoted to state, national, and international news, using a Nut - shell' roundup instead of the full wire page that is presently being used."

Banov yesterday said he was composing a letter of congratulations to Thomas. Linville was not available for commnt.

Banov said Thomas "waged a very energetic fight. I was most surprised that he won a majority the first time, and I had no idea that I would do as poorly as I did."

He added, "I feel that my end of the campaign was fair, and through my contacts I know that Linville's was too."

More sports photographs and better minor sports coverage will be added this spring, Thomas said.

"I plan to make an investigation of many campus issues that have been lying dormant this year," he said, "such as judicial reform, and proposed changes in women's rules, and to look into plans and problems of the residence college system and fraternities."

"I want the Tar Heel to be a more exciting newspaper which will offer insight more than personal feelings."

Brame, Schwab Picked To Head Senior Class

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Jim Brame and Nelson Schwab were elected Tuesday to lead the senior class next year.

Brame won the presidency over Rick Crowder and Schwab won over Jerry Houle in the vice presidency.

Other senior class office winners included Alice Doomer for secretary, Jody Wright, treasurer, and Martha Menefee, social chairman.

The first presidential runoff election since 1958 will be conducted Tuesday.

Bob Powell, student party, gained a plurality of 281 votes in Tuesday's election but was unable to gain the necessary majority vote to win the presidency of the student body over Teddy O'Toole, University Party and Sonny Pepper, Independent.

No run - off was necessary in the vice presidential race or in the race for editor of The Daily Tar Heel. Bill Purdy, UP, won the vice presidency over Don Wilson, SP, by an overwhelming majority of nearly 700 votes.

Fred Thomas carried the majority necessary to win the editorship of the DTH. He secured a margin of 444 with a total of 2,564 votes. Alan Banov placed second with 1,323 votes and Ray Linville had 797 votes.

Presidential candidates Powell and O'Toole said yesterday they will work even harder this week than they did during the first campaign to win Tuesday.

Powell said he hoped the graduate students will turnout in larger numbers in Tuesday's run-off election. "They have a very important stake in the academic parts of the platform and in the relation of the University to the state.

"There were several areas of the dormitory districts I didn't cover completely for the first election," he said. "I plan to get there this week and back to see those I saw before.

Independent presidential candidate Sonny Pepper told the DTH yesterday he would definitely endorse one of the candidates in the run - off election.

"I will issue a full statement tomorrow (Thursday) telling who I'm endorsing and why," Pepper said.

"As soon as I'm finished with the work of getting all the residence colleges established with contitutions and representative governments and their funds released, I intend to go the way of all old politicians. They don't die — they just don't get enough votes."

Legislators elected in Tuesday's election included: MD-I, Dick Capps, Juan Carvajal, Roberts Crowder, Bill Gordon and Haywood Smith; MD - II Steve Hockfield, Myles Eastwood, David Keil and Dave Crockett; MD-III, Hank Hankins, Rick Miller, Steve Salmony and Ed Wilson; Md-IV, Jay Jacobson and Randy Worth; Md-VI, Steve Jolly and Tim MCKeithan; Md-VII, Tommy Cannon, Joe Dietz and George Crischbaum; MD-VIII, Sandy Hobgood and MD-X, Noel Dunivant, Larry Richter and Ben White. Md-XI, Charlie Mercer, Chase Saunders and Bob Shepparc; MD-XII, Dick Levy, Frank Longest, Lacy Reeves and Eric Van Loon.

In the women's districts: WD-I, Jan Wuehrmann, Rene Clark, Marion Johnson and Holly Williams; WD-II, Ann Brownlee and Birch Lipford; WD-III, Julie Jones and Carrie Rouse; WD-IV, Anne Belcher and Elena Codispoti; WD-V, Marie Harriss and Linda Bernasek; WD-VI, Pam Neilson.

Pepper's 940 Big Question

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Th votes Sonny Pepper secured in Tuesday's election are big questions today.

A News Analysis

Where they go in the run-off election next Tuesday will probably determine who will be the next president of the student body.

Pepper said he plans to issue a full statement of endorsement today for one of the candidates with his reasons for the endorsement. Candidates and party officials alike yesterday were concerned over the more than 900 votes Pepper obtained.

UP Chairman Neil Thomas said yesterday, "We're very very confident we'll win Tuesday. But it will take a lot of hard work and cooperation of many people." He said he planned to talk to Pepper last night.

It is strongly suspected within the ranks of the UP that Pepper is not going to throw his support to Teddy O'Toole.

One of the "high UP officials, who is known to think of himself as a manipulator," said Tuesday night that he was going to try and get to Pepper so "he will keep his mouth shut."

Thomas said he felt Pepper did extremely well in the election considering he had campaigned only four days. He carried 20 per cent of the total vote, most of it coming from the fraternity districts where there was only a light vote recorded.

Pepper said he feels there will only be light turnout for the run-off election. However, officials of both parties said they feel there will be a heavy turnout.

The campaign for the run-off will not be extravagant because each party has been allotted only $16.33 in campaign funds. That will mean that it will be mainly a door-to-door campaign with Powell and O'Toole concentrating on Pepper's votes and at the same time trying to get some other voters out that didn't cast ballots in the first election.

In other aspects of Tuesday's election, Fred Thomas came on strong in the last 25 per cent of the ballots to be counted and won the editorship of the DTH.

Thomas' big surprise was that South Campus residents came through in a big way.

A $9 Hamburger... You Kidding Me?

By LYTT STAMPS
DTH Staff Writer

Would you pay $9 for a dinner at Hardy's? How about $5.25 for a topless bathing suit "for your mother who needs to get out into the sun"?

These are but two of the many "bargains" which were bought at Tuesday night's Campus Chest Auction.

Mac Brown was the purchaser of the dinner at Hardy's in what started out to be a simple bid for three dinners given by Chi Psi.

The highest bidder was to eat at the Villa Tempesta, the next bidder at La Pizza and the third highest at Hardy's.

Brown was overbid by Rege Anders who will eat at La Pizza for $12 and Bill Herring who dines at the Villa Tempesta for $12.50.

Kent Hogan bought one of the three topless bathing suits for his mother. Two other suits were sold for $6.

Danny Talbott's jersey and a football were sold to Hugh Stevens at $15.50 for "a little boy who thinks Talbott is the greatest football play in the world."

Jim Minor paid $5 for William Geer's "bull stamp." He wanted it because he had heard so much about it.

Over $400 was collected for Campus Chest at the auction.

Articles sold were donated by residence hall and colleges, fraternities and sororities, local merchants and faculty.

Before the auction, 19 girls modeled fashions from The Fireside. Although several bathing suits were shown, no one was brave enough to model a topless suit.

MRA Questions Hostile

Moral Re-Armament, Inc., producer of "Sing-Out '66," held a meeting in Gerrard Hall at 10:30 a.m. yesterday to recruit members.

Olympic Rowing Champ John Sayers presided over the meeting. He said MRA offers the United States a new chance to project a new image abroad.

About 50 students attended the session. Many of their questions were openly hostile.

At one point Sayers was asked if it was right to force MRA's ideas on the world.

"If it gets to the point," Sayers replied, "where MRA has to force its views, then it is no longer effective."

After the question and answer session, MRA presented a movie by Peter Howard, who died last year. Howard was MRA's second leader. He took over after Frank Buchman died in 1961.

Tanner Nominations

Nominations for the Tanner Award are due by March 31. It is primarily for freshman and sophomore course teachers who exhibit inspirational teaching. This year any student may nominate a teacher. Nominations should be given to Wright Doyle.

Editor Needed

The Publications Board will hold interviews for editor and business manager of the Carolina Quarterly and business manager of the Course Evaluation Booklet today and next Thursday.

Pub Board Chairman Hugh Blackwell said critics of this year's Quarterly are invited to participate. He said past experience on its staff is not necessary.

The board will meet at 3:30 p.m. in the Grail Room and interviews will start at 4.

Blackwell may be reached at 968-9215 for questions. He said he would refer anyone interested in working on any campus publication to the appropriate persons.

He said negotiations are being made to reprint old editions of the Quarterly.

Still Recruiting

Today — Maryland National Bank; Royal-Globe Insurance Co. (summer jobs for junior math majors); Sagner, Inc.; Ingersoll-Rand Co.; Springs Cotton Mills; Camp Becker-in-the Berkshires; American Red Cross.

Vandervoort's of St. Louis, Mo., is looking for coeds interested in summer work and training in fashion, sales, merchandising and modeling. If you are interested, contact the Placement Office, Gardner Hall.

Trager Vs. Lind Tonite In Di-Phi Senate Debate

"Can Southeast Asia be neutralized without its subsequent domination by Communist China" will be the query in a special debate between two professors tonight at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall.

Dr. Frank Trager of New York University will speak for the negative and Alden Lind of UND will speak for the affirmative in the debate, sponsored by the Di-Phi Senate.

Trager, author of "Marxism in Southeast Asia," is currently serving as professor of international affairs at NYU.

Lind is an assistant professor in the UNC Department of Political Science.

A recent debate between Trager and Dr. Hans Morganthau of the University of Chicago on the extent of Chinese Communist aggressiveness was written up in last week's magazine section of the "New York Times" by veteran correspondent Max Frankel.

The principal speakers will be given between 20 and 30 minutes each for introductory remarks, and 10 to 15 minutes each for cross-examination.

Di - Phi President John Greenbacker urged all interested students and faculty members to attend the meeting.

Homosexuality Discussion Here

A panel discussion on "Criminal Laws Relating to Sexual Deviation" will be held at 4 p.m. today in the Law School court room.

The panelists will be Lee Bounds, director of the N. C. Prisons Dept.; Robinson Everette, Duke law professor; Allen H. Gwyn, Superior Court Judge; Dr. Myron Liptzin, UNC instructor of psychiatry; Daniel Pollit, UNC law professor; Norman Pomrenke, assistant director of the Institute of Government; and Rev. Harry Smith, Presbyterian student minister.

The discussion will deal primarily with homosexuality and the duty of the state with regard to laws on public and private morality. The discussion is open to the public.

DTH Article May Bring Book Thief To Justice

By STEVE LACKEY
DTH Staff Writer

One more person is about to be caught for stealing textbooks and reselling them at the Book Exchange.

Booketeria manager Herbert Watson said that around 15 people had visited the store to look for their stolen books since The Daily Tar Heel ran an article on the subject Tuesday.

At least one of these students found his missing text. At this time the Book Ex is tracing the name of the person who sold the book.

Students who are caught selling the books are tried by the Honor Council. Sentences have ranged from probation to suspension.

The procedure for locating stolen books is simply to go to the Booketeria, report that your text is missing and look for it on the shelves. The Book Ex identifies the seller after you find the book.

The Intimate Bookshop follows a similar procedure for handling missing books.

Manager Walter Kuralt said yesterday that if a student finds his books on the shelves they are returned to him at the Intimate's expense.

The student signs a statement swearing that he will turn the person who sold his book in to the Honor Council. At the Intimate the name of the seller must match the name on his ID card before it will be bought.

Only 5 Victory Village Houses To Be Torn Down Next Year

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

Only five Victory Village partments — rather than the announced 19 — will be torn down within the next year, UNC Business Manager J. A. Branch announced yesterday.

He also said the vacant apartments on Mason Farm Road near Pittsboro Road will not be rented to students. They are to be turned over to the departments of pharmacology and toxicology.

Branch said he "didn't have the slightest idea when these apartments will be used." They have been vacant since Sept., 1964. Meanwhile, the waiting list for married student's housing is growing longer.

James Wadsworth, director of housing, was pleased that fewer houses were to be demolished.

"It is a happy and fortunat circumstance," he said. "I'm glad the planned building will not require as much space as we thought it would."

Branch said those students notified earlier that they would have to move by June have been re - notified about the change in plans.

Victory Village was erected in 1946 to accommodate the influx of GI's returning from WW II. The Village is now home for 252 students and their families. It will be torn down eventually to accommodate the constantly expanding health affairs complex.

Branch said earlier that a request for 300 additional permanent units will go before the general assembly in 1967.

The Case For Open Trials

THIRD IN A SERIES

The Honor System is suffering.

To a shocking number of students, it is as vital as knowledge of marriage customs in Borneo.

One new rule would greatly change that. It would literally stop every student who contemplates cheating or violating any other code offense dead in his tracks. He would be aware of his responsibilities under the Honor System in a way now unknown at UNC.

How?

Have open trials.

The present statutes concerning open trials are so ambiguous that no one knows just what is expected of the judiciary, the defendants or the press.

* * *

Article VI, Section 1, of the Student Judicial Procedure says:

"A public hearing shall be defined as one at which two reporters designated by the official campus newspaper are present. Such a public hearing shall occur unless the accused student requests a closed hearing."

Former Men's Honor Council Chairman Van MacNair said a "public hearing" is the same as a "public trial."

Article XI,, Section 1, of the same document, however says:

"All matters involving cases in which accused students do not request a public hearing shall be secret except for brief summaries of these cases which shall be released by the chairman of the councils . . . The accused student may release information concerning his case at his own discretion."

The Student Constitution, in Article II, Section 7-I, reflects the second statement from the Judicial Procedure statutes. It says:

"The right of public trial, which shall be defined as meaning the presence of no more than two representatives of the student newspaper within the chambers of the judicial body during a particular case, (it a right of the accused). Only people signing a written release may be mentioned in resulting publicity. Unless a defendant requests a public trial, the proceedings shall be kept secret, except for such information as the defendant may disclose at his discretion."

This year two students have requested open tirals. They were covered by DTH reporters. The name of one student has been used in connection with his conviction of a code offense. His written permission was obtained beforehand.

After a staff discussion early in the year it was decided that the DTH would print no accounts of a trial which it is not allowed to cover firsthand. Trial coverage is a very tricky kind of news for any newspaper and demands the presence of a reporter in the court if the paper is to be responsible for what it prints.

No newspaper editor in his right mind would accept and print accounts of trials written by the judges themselves. Yet this is apparently what the student judiciary expects of the DTH under existing rules. The potential for abuse of this system is so great that a change in procedure is an immediate necessity.

We must have open trials.

What would be the effect of this change?

The number of Honor Code and Campus Code violations would decrease phenomenally. Anonymity gives the lawbreakers a blanket of security which must be stripped away if we are really serious about wanting a meaningful Honor System.

An experiment conducted by an education professor at North Texas State College last year lends support to this belief.

The professor walked into his class one day, announced that he had discovered a cheater, pointed her out and ordered her out of the room. The astonished students watched as she hurriedly left.

He asked the students if they thought he had done the wrong thing. All agreed that he had.

Then he told them it had all been planned and he was just testing their reaction. He had them write a paragraph about it, and most of them said such treatment was too cruel and rude.

But they agreed that open exposure would "eliminate or reduce cheating."

That reaction should be just a valid on the UNC campus as it was at North Texas State.

An open trial—even one where the defendant's name is kept secret— is desirable on the grounds that it also protects the student from railroad "justice." Some defendants claim they have been under pressure to "be humble" before the councils and to cooperate in other cases "for your own good." As stated in an earlier editorial, members of the judiciary themselves admit some cases are approached with a "guilty until proven innocent" attitude. Such abuses are not likely to occur with a reporter present.

Honor Council decisions are not to be taken lightly. They affect a student's academic career—can even delay or end it.

It is time we stopped handling these trials as games in a cozy little world of secrecy, and started handling them with the same respect and care given to "real" courts.

Work Of Sing Out '66 Causes Mixed Feelings

Like hundreds of other Tar Heels, this writer watched the performance of "Sing Out '66" on Monday evening. The program had all the patriotic melody of a Fourth of July celebration, the harmonious vigor of the "Mitch Miller Show", and the obvious dedication of the Navy Choir.

This was a cosmopolitan group of 130 from all over the country and from around the world. A lively melody and original lyrics made the program entertaining regardless of one's feeling toward the group or its ideas.

This writer has mixed feelings about the work of Sing - Out 66". (This is to be distinguished from my negative view of its parent group, MRA — a rather freakish neo - religion seeking to impose moral armaments that our society has rightfully discarded.)

Positively, I think "Sing - Out '66" gives a positive view of the conservative and traditional sector of American Youth. These multi - national, multi - racial young men and women are innocuous, clean - cut and vigorous youth.

From reading part of their literature, "Modernizing America," it is commendable to see that they are concerned about the same problems that other activists are concerned with — Viet Nam, world peace, poverty, civil rights and the American character. This is commendable.

Far too many Americans pretend that these are not problems. Rightly, the youth of "Sing Out '66" see these problems and the spark of their imagination, ignites the imaginations of those audiences who have usually heard American lies and distortion in monotonous rhertoric. Now, they hear in lively melody.

Of my missed emotions, my most settled conviction is that "Sing Out '66" (and MRA) is, to say the least, a profile of misguided idealism and concern. In their zeal to concern themselves with a better America, they naively accept as guides some of the very trappings that peril us today.

In downgrading the peacenik, the street demonstrator and the radical on the left, they fail to note that no nation has ever sung itself straight, nor do they realize that this nation and all nations need liberal reform action to stay the evil hand of tyranny, poverty, disease, and war. Moral character and national disorganization are mutually exclusive concepts.

The activists of the left realize this and are willing to stand clear of the stifling tradition and archaic moralisms to build a new way of life in the shape of the modern world and a new world based on the realities of our day. In other words, the antagonists of this mightist movement ask if there anything to "re-arm" or must we build a "re-formed" society.

Questions have been raised about who finances this group and what political orientation it has. Charges have been made that it is rightwing oriented and financed by "conservative sugardaddies." Evidence tends to support this charge

In a larger sense, it really doesn't matter. Listening to their program and reading their literature convinces me that theirs is not a plausible evaluation of our dilemma nor is their solution the answer to our problem. The tragedy is that the strength, energy and devotion which these 130 youth have could be so misguided from the realities that their efforts could be hardly more than entertaining.

A year with the Peace Corps and VISTA or the development of world law could rearm the nation and the world in a lasting and effective way that doesn't wear off when the band stops playing or when the rapid beat of a partriotic heart subsides to normal.

Their ideals are impractible and their goals are not defined. This is the opposite to the youth movement on the left. In this country, the liberal youth movements, from SNCC to NSA, capture the imagaintion and the leadership of our day. Having made their ideals more practical and their goals less remote, we can see in the Peace Corps, in the civil rights movement and in young churchmen a positivism that others can see, can draw hope from and can move progressively and successfully toward.

LETTERS

The Daily Tar Heel welcomes letters to the editor on any subject, particularly on matters of local or University interest. Letters must be typed, double-spaced and must include the name and address of the author or authors. Names will not be omitted in publication. Letters should be limited to about 250-300 words. The DTH reserves the right to edit for length or libel. Longer letters will be considered for "The Student Speaks" if they are of sufficient interest. However, the DTH reserves the right to use contributed materials as it sees fit.

Singers Aren't All They Say

After telling several thousand UNC students to live clean-cut, decent, God-approved lives, at least one group of Moral Re-Armament crusaders returned to their quarters and began cussing with a vileness equalling that of any beatnik, or, indeed, any Army drillmaster.

I know this for a fact, having followed members of the "Sing Out" cast back to where they spent the night.

Entering one of the rooms, I heard the self-proclaimed models of the "Go-Go" morality using words that cannot be printed on these pages.

And the casualness with which the obscenities were exchanged indicated they are nothing new to the so-called advocates of absolute purity.

Admittedly, not all of the 15 persons in the room engaged in the sins that they attribute to beatniks and anti-war demonstrators, but no one attempted to silence this filth until it became known I was a member of the press.

Then the clean-living youngsters stopped wallowing in their beds, making faces at each other and speaking the language of the john.

They stopped because they knew these activities would hurt the sacred image of American youth — especially their own.

* * *

Interviews conducted with the crusaders at Carmichael and in the field house left me just as confused as ever as to MRA's goals and purposes. All that matters is to live by the four absolutes (honesty, purity, love and unselfishness), the crusaders declared, and, of course, to fight, fight, fight communism. Even to the extent of supporting laws like the speaker ban, many said.

Allan Stormont, a student from London, had an opinion shared by an impressive number of his colleagues: "The speaker ban could be abolished, (but only) if young Americans could have an ideology superior to communism." That ideology? Moral Re-Armament, naturally.

Dave Garcia, an affable high school senior from New Mexico, had trouble facing the full ramifications of MRA's "God-controlled fascist dictatorship" concept.

Asked if he thinks God is really a dictator, Garcia replied: "I sure do."

I next asked him who explains the dictator's commands.

"Everyone should interpret these commands for himself according to his conscience," Garcia replied.

"Fine," I said. "But what about the beatniks who insist that God tells them to demonstrate against U. S. Viet Nam policy?"

"Then," said Garcia, "I can only say that the beatniks have a very extraordinary conscience."

In other words, it looks as if it's not entirely up to the individual to determine God's word — at least, when the individual goes against accepted political beliefs. (In case any MRA members are reading this, let me say I personally support a strong U. S. Viet Nam stand.)

And speaking of politics — the MRA may not be so apolitical after all. Alan Wann, from Hawaii, quickly rattled off the names of several important Republicans who had spoken to MRA gatherings at the group's Michigan indoctrination center, but he couldn't name one Democratic speaker. Neither could the three or four other "Sing Out" participants whom I asked to recall Democrats who had addressed the 100 per cent American youth. Maybe Democrats did appear at the indoctrination center, but they must not have been very prominent if the MRA members had Rouble even coming up with their names.

Eager to prove that MRA follows its holy obligation of Sticking to the Middle of the Road, one member solemnly pleaded with me:

"Have you ever seen an arrow go straight — going neither to the right nor the left? This is our political philosophy."

Dating habits? Garcia said he knew of nobody on the tour who attended the Indoctrination center last summer who has dated since then.

One MRA member explained: "The movement is my entire life. I cannot afford to take time out from it to look for girls. And when I get married, my wife and I shall both devote our lives to the movement." MRA crusaders apparently have little trouble avoiding sexual immorality once they join the group — they are simply too busy attempting to Change the World.

But morals offenses lead the list of sins the crusaders claimed they had before they joined MRA. Next among the persons I interviewed came cheating in school — which, they insisted, is non-existent among MRA students. After cheating came a group of miscellaneous sins — stealing library books, not paying traffic fines, etc.

MRA members, however, didn't join "Sing Out" merely to repent for their wrong-doings, real and imagined. Jimmy Graves, a college sophomore from Knoxville, Tenn., said "glamor" was one of the main reasons he joined. Another reason was perhaps more closely associated with the group's fervent desire to atone; "I got a great feeling about the sacrifices I would have to make," declared Graves.

Yes — the MRA performers have undoubtedly made their share of sacrifices. Undoubtedly, they try to be sincere and have honorable intentions. But if this group, with its fierce fanaticism, really represents God, Mother and Flag, let me become an atheist, "free sex" advocate and traitor.

Letter To The Editor

History Of MRA

Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

There has been some reaction to the appearance of the Sing Out '66 group, due to their connection with Moral Re-Armament, and the following comments may porve interesting in this connection.

The era of the Great Depression, when Moral Re-Armament began to be noisy, was not exactly conducive to much confidence in human progress or the improvement of society by liberal means. The hue and cry of many a religious group of the day was just the sort of "back to virtue, decency, and commitment to absolute principles" for which Moral Re-Armament stood.

There was a wide-spread conviction that a return to grass-roots conservatism and Victorian puritanism would save the collective soul of the sinful state. This was a time for veneration of heroes, strong men who could show the way out, who exemplified transcendent goals of moral perfection.

Christian hymn-books bristled at this time with quasi-fascist songs, as "These Things Shall Be — a Loftier Race," "Marching with the Heroes," "Hail the Hero Workers," and "God Send Us Men Whose Aim 'Twill Be," which contains the interesting verse: "God send us men with hearts ablaze, All truth to love, all wrong to hate; These are the patriots nations need, These are the bulwarks of the state."

A Gospel tract of the time which condemned smoking as degenerate and a modern perversion cited Benito Mussolini as a hero of the day whose strength of character was visible in his abstaining from smoking. (Incidentally, this tract is at the present time being distributed seriously, in reprint form, by the Pilgrim Tract Society of Randleman, N.C.!)

Nor can one overlook the vast popularity (during this era), of Bruce Barton's book. "The Man Nobody Knows," the thesis of which was that Jesus was not the meek one of Christianity, but the prototype of the All-American rugged individualist, in Barton's amazing words, "a born executive."

If there is a moral to this it is that heroes can readily become dictators and a cure for the world's ills possibly worse than the sicknesses. In times of national disappointment and frustration, it is easy to turn to the false security of impossible absolutes, but it is my own conviction that true morality depends finally on respect for the rights and dignity of everyday, ordinary persons, in the very contingent existence of an open society.

Yours sincerely,
R. Robert Basham, Jr.,
Graduate Student, Dept. of Philosophy

Order Of Valkyries Taps Eleven For Membership

Black - hooded figures with burning candles and tolling gong stalked the women's residence halls and called forth eight undergraduate women and three honoraries to membership in the Order of Valkyries, the highest women's honorary organization on campus, in pre-dawn ceremonies this morning.

Tapped were Ellen Beattie Allen, Lyon, Miss.; Alice Kellogg Gann, Atlanta; Linda Yvonne Harrison, La Grange; Mary Elizabeth Haverstock, Roanoke Rapids; Jerri Thomasine Meser, Raleigh; Anne Greylin T. Reeves, Huntingdon Valley, Pa.; Carol Ann Shaffer, Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Larry S. McDevitt, Mrs. Mabel Brittain, and Mrs. Graham Ramsay were tapped as honoraries.

Valkyries, whose membership is limited to two per cent of the women student body, replaced Alpha Kappa Gamma in 1941. The order corresponds to the highest men's honorary, Order of the Golden Fleece.

Women students are selected on a basis of their ideals of scholarship, leadership, character and service.

Citations read as follows:

MISS ALLEN . . . "One whose varied areas of contribution have included Student Government, the University Party, Residence hall leadership and academic excellence. Her warm personality, sincere interest in others, dedicated service and personal diligence have earned for her the deep respect of the University and the love of its students."

MISS GANN . . . "One who as President of East Cobb Dormitory and Secretary of the Women's Residence Council, has exhibited a high degree of competency, dependability, and quiet strength. In her work on the WRC Rules Committee, as in everything that she does, Miss Gann has shown true individuality and loyalty to her convictions.

"Miss Gann has also demonstrated unusual ability and interest in her academic field of English through her participation in the Honors Program."

MISS HARRISON . . . "One who has served the University with sincere dedication and without regard to personal recognition. Miss Harrison has been an exemplary member of the Women's Attorney General Staff, president of her nursing class, a member of Sigma Theta Tau, and a member of the Carolina Forum.

"She has shown true concern for the welfare of those with whom she works and lives, and has earned the highest respect of all who know her."

MISS HAVERSTOCK . . . "One who has diligently served as President of her dormitory and as Vice Chairman of Women's Residence Council, constantly demonstrating her endless devotion to serving the women students of the University.

"With sensitivity, initiative, and an attitude of cooperation, Miss Haversotck has met the challenge of revising women's rules, consistently keeping in mind the welfare of the University women. Her excellent performance and high ideals will serve as guides to future students."

MISS MOSER . . . "One who as President of the Carolina Women's Council has strived to bring about a more meaningful and happy life for dormitory women. She is commended for her contributions to the Ad Hoc Committee on the Residence College System, to the Chancellor's Day Committee, to the Women's Honor Council as clerk, and to her nursing class and profession. Her warm and friendly manner have endeared her to many."

MISS PEACOCK . . . "One whose performances with the Carolina Playmakers has brought much enjoyment to the University and to the Chapel Hill area. Her many hours of work both on the stage and behind the scenes have contributed to the success of the Playmakers' productions.

"Miss Peacock's dedication to the field of dramatics coupled with the charm and warmth of her personality has gained her the love and respect of her colleagues."

MISS REEVES . . . "One who is commended for her outstanding and superior execution of the poisition of Women's Attorney General. Miss Reeves has exhibited dedication, efficiency, and firmness tempered with understanding and gentleness.

"As a member of the Ad Hoc Committee on Judicial Reform, she represented women students with conviction, demonstrated her strong concern for and belief in the Honor System, and gained the genuine respect and friendship of fellow students, faculty members and administrators. Miss Reeves will long be remembered as a credit to her alma mater."

MISS SHAFFER . . . "One who trhough extensive participation in campus activities and superb organizational abilities has been an invaluable member of the University community. Her enthusiasm and willingness to work have enabled her to be an outstanding coordinator of freshmen women.

"These qualities have, in addition, been carried over into her academic field of Nursing, her membership on Women's Residence Council, and her sorority life, as an active Pan Hellenic representative. Miss Shaffer is a dynamic member of any group in which she participates, serving as an inspiration to her fellow students."

MRS. BRITTAIN . . . "One who has served the University for almost ten years as an outstanding housemother to several thousand women students. Mrs. Brittain has demonstrated a generous devotion and interest in her dormitory residents — giving both of her time and of herself in order to create for each a real and warm home. She is one to whom many have turned in times of trouble and for whom many feel a genuine love and respect."

MRS. McDEVITT . . . "One who is known for her sensitivity to the feelings of others and her sincere interest in students. Mrs. McDevitt, as assistant to the Dean of Women, has given encouragement to Women's Orientation, strength to Panhellenic, and has been a friend to all who meet her. Her personal warmth and enthusiasms for any task make her one to be loved and admired."

MRS. RAMSAY . . . "One who is an inspiration to all who know her. As hostess of Whitehead Hall, she is responsible for the rare fraternal spirit which prevades her dormitory, and has earned the unqualified devotion of countless students.

"Mrs. Ramsay, an integral part of campus life, worked with the Playmakers, served as secretary in three separate University departments, and now contributes willingly to numerous administrative committees with enthusiasm and fairness. Her character teaches by example, for she is gifted with a unique understanding of people."

The new tapees join 18 other members of the honorary organization. They are Penny Scovil of Raleigh, Kathy Cauble of Hickory, Madeline Gray of Charlotte, Muff Gibson of Chapel Hill, Eunice Milton of Marianna, Fla., Diana Foote of Chapel Hill, Sherry O'Donnell of Anandale, Va., Susan Gretz of Hendersonville, Sue Guerry of Durham, Mary Susan Kirk of Raleigh, Miriam Lane of Durham, Leith Merrow of Alexandria, Va., Elizabeth Taylor of Chapel Hill, Mary Gray Teague of Fayetteville, Sylvia Wall of Albemarle, Camilla Walters of Greensboro, David Wilborn of Raleigh, and Joan Woodworth of St. Petersburg, Fla.

China Blasts Soviets In Letter

Communist Rift Worsens

TOKYO (AP) — Peking loosed a new blast at Moscow yesterday, accusing the Soviet Union of plotting with the United States to encircle China and to sell out the Vietnamese people. The Chinese denounced Russian "dirty Deals," "tricks," and "Chauvinism."

In a letter to Moscow broadcast by Radio Peking, the Chinese rejected an invitation to the Soviet Communist Party Congress in Moscow Tuesday in terms so harsh as to seem to bring the two nations closer to an open split. Albania, Peking's only ally in Europe, also bruskly declined to go to Moscow.

The Chinese said the Russians distributed an Anti - Chinese letter to world Communist parties recently and asked: "In these circumstances, how can the Chinese Communist Party, which you look upon as an enemy, be expected to attend your Congress."

The Russian letter, as published in West Germany this week, accused the Chinese of trying to involve the Soviet Union in a war with the United States, of stirring up incidents on the Russian border, and blocking Soviet arms aid to North Viet Nam. The Russians said the Chinese had rejected united action to resist the United States in Viet Nam.

Peking answered with this counterblast:

"Despite the tricks you have been playing to deceive people, you are pursuing U.S. —Soviet collaboration for the domination of the world with your whole heart and soul.

"In mouthing a few words against U. S. imperialism and in making a show of supporting anti-imperialist struggles, you are conducting only minor attacks on U. S. imperialism while rendering it major help. . .

"Your clamor for 'united action' especially on the Viet Nam question, is nothing but a trap for the purpose of deceiving the Soviet people and the revolutionary people of the world.

"You have all along been acting in coordination with the United States in its plot for peace talks, vainly attempting to sell out the struggle of the Vietnamese people against U.S. aggression . .. and to drag the Viet Nam question into the orbit of Soviet - U. S. collaboration."

Charging Moscow with working with the United States "in a whole series of dirty deals inside and outside the united nations," Peking declared:

"In close coordination with the counterrevolutionary 'global strategy' of U. S. imperialism, you are now actively trying to build a ring of encirclement around Socialist China."

The Chinese then referred specificially to the "Anti-Chinese letter to other parties," that Peking said was circulated about the time the Russians were inviting the Chinese Feb. 24 to the Congress.

"You wantonly villified the Chinese Communist Party as being "bellicose' and 'pseudo-revolutionary,' as 'refusing to oppose imperialism' and 'encouraging U. S. imperialist aggression,' and as being guilty of 'adventurism,' 'splittism,' 'Trotskyism,' 'nationalism,' 'great power chauvinism,' 'dogmatism,' " the Chinese declared.

These charges, together with one that "China has been encroaching on Soviet territory," all show that the Soviet invitation to the Moscow Congress "is merely a gesture and is sent with ulterior motives," the Chinese said.

Analysis Of Red Rift

MOSCOW (AP)—Angry words from Peking yesterday showed how bitterly irreconcilable the dispute between China and the Soviet Union has become.

Essentially, the Peking blast changed little in the two great Communist powers' relationship, but it could have an effect on other Communist parties caught in the titans' struggle for leadership of the Red world.

The angry words explained China's reasons for rejecting an invitation to the Congress of the Soviet Communist Party, opening next Tuesday.

The new situation was created for other world Communist parties which received invitations to the Congress. By attending, they will in effect take a stand on the Soviet side in the Moscow-Peking dispute. Most outside the Chinese camp followers are expected to attend.

There has been much speculation in the past two years since the dispute degenerated into public name-calling that it would lead to a former split of the Communist world.

The Soviet Party Congress could now be interpreted as forcing a split on the issue of other parties attending.

But the Soviet attitude in the recent past would appear to rule this out.

Repeated Soviet statements, while criticizing China, have ended with appeals for unity and optimistic expressions that differences can be overcome. This has given the Kremlin an air of being above arguing with errant children.

In the absence of information from the secret councils of Soviet Communism, most outsiders here think this Kremlin attitude is likely to be maintained at the Congress.

It is possible that the Soviet collective leadership will choose to denounce the Chinese. But with the Chinese absent the chance of an explosive confrontation is eliminated.

Thus any formal split seems just now to depend more on Peking that Moscow, if the Russians maintain their attitude of hoping for unity.

The Chinese said last year there can be no unity unless the Soviet leadership abjectly admits its errors—in effect surrenders completely to Chinese policy.

Alpinists Continue Assault On Mt. Eiger For Harlin

KLEINE SCHEIDEGG, SWITZERLAND, (AP) — A death - defying club of Mt. Eiger's north wall entered its final dramatic phase yesterday with German Alpinist Joerg Lehne reported 600 feet below the summit.

As a thick cloud shrouded the upper part of the triangular mountain, Lehne was leading a determined party of 10 men vying to scale it in the name of their dead colleague, American John Harlin.

When last seen by a powerful telescope set up in the Kleine Scheidegg Pass, Lehne was working feverishly on a steep, overhanging rock, hammering in nails and moving up fairly fast.

His position was pinpointed as only 600 feet below the 14,000 - foot summit whose mile-high precipice has been a challenge to hundreds of alpinists. Harlin, who died Tuesday, was the 26th victim of the mountain.

Some 300 feet below Lehne was another alpinist, believed to be German. The rest of the party of six Germans, one Briton and one American was working its way up a glacier known as "The Spider," where the advance camp has been set up.

Those watching the climb from below had the impression that the climbers were taking more risks than before, working more feverishly as if wanting to "get it over with."

They dubbed the ascent the "John Harlin Expedition" — a three - nation venture to reach the summit over the "Direttissima" route. No one has done it before, alpinists preferring an easier zig - zag ascent.

Congress Sends Viet Nam Money Bill To President

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House accepted a technical Senate amendment to assure Congressional scrutiny of Pentagon spending and sent to President Johnson yesterday an emergency $13.1 billion appropriation to help finance the Viet Nam War.

The House had originally passed the bill last week and the second approval was by voice vote without discussion except for a brief explanation of the amendment. The Senate had passed the bill 87 to Tuesday.

The money total, exactly what Johnson requested, is to provide extra funds to pay for the stepped - up pace of the fighting during the remaining 3 1-2 months of the fiscal year which ends June 30.

The amendment would limit Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's authority to transfer funds in support of South Vietnamese and other allied troops. It limits to the current fiscal year his broad authority to lump together numerous military expenses as was done during World War II and the Korean conflict.

The House had approved the authority as well as for the larfunds as well as for the larger appropriation being considered for the next fiscal year The Senators who sponsored the amendment said, however, that the authority probably will be written into the bigger money bill but it will enable Congressional committees to retain regular checks on Pentagon spending and activities.

Viet Nam Students Protest American Support Of Ky

SAIGON (AP) — Student demonstrators in Hue and Da Nang criticized the United States yesterday for its support of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's military government. They contended the American backing of Ky a revival of civilian rule.

"Is this a conspiracy to sell Viet Nam to the Communists?" demanded one of many leaflets handed out at a gathering of 2,000 in Da Nang, the site of a strategic air base and U. S. Marine headquarters 380 miles northeast of Saigon.

Banners of similar import marked an antigovernment rally of 10,000 around the municipal hall in Hue, the old imperial capital 40 miles farther north. Hue was the springboard of the Buddhist - led uprising that toppled President Ngo Dinh Diem's regime in 1963.

But not all the banners were critical. Others read: "We thank our American friends for helping us fight the Viet Cong."

U. S. Marines fignting the Viet Cong found 100 more enemy bodies buried at the scene of the leathernecks' battle Monday with two Communist battalions near the village of Phon Dinh, 70 miles south of Da Nang. This boosted to 358 the announced Communist dead from a four - day drive called Operation Texas.

Other Marines closed out Operation Oregon, a sweep on the northern flank of the main force. They said they killed 99 and captured eight.

North Carolina News Roundup

Brownbagging To Be Outlawed?

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina has a drinking problem.

It isn't that the folks in the Tar Heel state are hitting the bottle too hard or too often. Its just a legal entanglement over when and where to take a nip.

For years North Carolina has operated under a county option, state liquor store system. In the "wet counties" you can get a beer in a tavern and a bottle of booze at the state-operated liquor store. In the dry counties you can't get anything stronger than root beer or buttermilk unless you know the local bootlegger.

All of North Carolina is off-limits for mixed drinks served across the bar.

For just as long as the law has existed, North Carolinians who like mixed drinks have done one of two things—joined a private club or practiced "brownbagging."

"Brownbagging" means you by a bottle at the liquor store, place it in a brown paper bag and tote it with you to the restaurant or lounge. You can order ice, mix, and a glass. With a bit of effort you pour from the brown bag and have your pre-dinner cocktail.

But suddenly, this way of life is being threatened in North Carolina.

Judge William T. Grist of Charlotte ruled Tuesday that it is illegal for anyone to possess whisky except in his home or in the transportation of it from the state liquor store to your abode.

The ruling, if upheld by the State Supreme court, would outlaw hundreds of private and bottle clubs in the state.

It could affect the country clubs where liquor is served and some even predict great damage to the tourist trade, especially along the sandy beaches of the Atlantic Ocean.

Grist expressed the opinion in a case against Georgia McLain of Charlotte, convicted of liquor law violations for operating a bottle club. The judge said he wasn't acutally ruling on "brownbagging," but wanted the case to go to the state's high court for a final solution.

Just as confused as the average North Carolina drinker are officials of the State Alcoholic Board of Control.

Director Ray Brady said, "We are caught in something of a gray zone on the matter of consumption of alcoholic beverages in private clubs. Much of the time, and especially now, we don't know where we stand.

"This whole thing is confusing," said Brady.

Police Chief John S. Hord said yesterday he will seek a clarifying ruling on the state's liquor laws before any wholesale raids are made on private clubs in the Charlotte area.

"As things stand right now," said Hord, "we're not going to run out here and raid every club in town. This is a question that needs clearing up."

Three Mental Patients Escape

RALEIGH (AP)—A search was under way yesterday for three criminals, none considered dangerous, who escaped from the Dorothea Dix Hospital near Raleigh.

The escapees were identified as:

Archie Scott, 31, serving 25-30 years for second degree murder. He entered State Prison in March, 1952, and was transferred to Dorotha Dix in May, 1964, for treatment of advanced arthritis. Treatment for the disease was not available at Central Prison.
